Four hundred and eighty more pages of paid advertising have appeared in Motion Picture News to date this year than in its nearest competitor.

Why?

Simply because advertising managers, who look well before they spend, know that the News

Reaches the largest consumer circulation

Brings the quickest results and

Is the acknowledged leader in its field.

The News Alone Covers the Field

VOL. XXIV No. 20 Entered as Second Class Matter, October 13, 1913, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879 PRICE 20 CENTS

THE big WARNER BROTHERS release "Why Girls Leave Home" is unusually good, and it will carry an unusual amount of poster advertising of an unusual kind. For instance, there will be two twenty-four sheets, one of which is reproduced above. The other one is of the teaser variety and reads:—Do You Know "Why Girls Leave Home?"

Of course the reason why the posters are so good is quite simple. They are RITCHEY posters.

WILLIAM S. HART in "WHITE OAK"

A Paramount Picture

By William S. Hart. Adapted for the screen by Bennet Musson. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Photographed by Joe August, A. S. C.
A William S. Hart Production

WHEN you see Hart swim the Mississippi and rescue the heroine—when you see him lick a tribe of Indians—go to jail for a crime he didn't commit—escape with the aid of his dog and ride breakneck through the desert to save the caravan —when you see all this and lots more—you'll say:

It's the greatest western picture ever made!

Moving Picture World says: "This two-reel Mermaid Comedy featuring Lloyd Hamilton and distributed by Educational is reminiscent of 'Easy Street.' Chaplin's favorite policeman has the principal part opposite Hamilton. The picture is pure burlesque on the life of a loafer, and has many laughable incidents, chief among them being where Hamilton sends business to a girl selling foot remedies by the simple method of hammering people's feet."

LOIS WEBER

Never made a picture that did not have a box-office angle—a live, big exploitation theme.

"The Blot" hits 'em square between the eyes with the question, "Is the greatest BLOT on American life the begrudging, starvation treatment of our teachers?"

The smashing turmoil of real drama backs up these exploitation possibilities.

Motion Picture News said, "a splendid example of Lois Weber's powers."

Wid's Daily pronounced it "splendid human interest."

"Chic" Sale Scores a Real Hit

CHARLES SALE, otherwise Chic Sale of vaudeville, is the newest and best recruit to the screen's actors of importance and he has succeeded in the Exceptional Picture, "His Nibs," in contriving a charming novelty that is as clean as a hound's tooth and as downright funny as anything that has featured its way into our view for a long time.

Portraying seven roles in one picture and doing them all well is a feat, but better than that is the sum total of the feature's effect upon an audience. At the Hotel Astor showing this effect was to provoke hearty laughter in waves that rose high and it was demonstrated that Mr. Sale in "His Nibs" is splendid entertainment. Arthur Hoerl's titling is so splendid in its humor that we call your especial attention to it. Alexander Beyfuss has demonstrated his showmanship and insured for himself and his associates of the Exceptional organization a feature picture that will make money for exhibitors and give to their audiences a most satisfying feast of fun. We look for more of Mr. Sale—we need him on the screen.

Dear Mr. Hirsh:-

After viewing Snowy Baker in "THE SHADOW OF LIGHTNING RIDGE" I wish to state to you, and Big Boy Williams in "THE JACK RIDER" I wish to state to you, without reserve, that these western pictures are without doubt the best I have ever seen. I am particularly pleased with this acquisition because they are high-class in every respect and the punch and swift action from beginning to end. I have no reason to doubt that the remainder of the subjects will be up to that standard because I have your word for it and I have always found a man of your word.

I am addressing these lines to you because I know an expression heretofore you always were a man of your word. of this sort is very often an incentive to continue good work.

Thanking you for the courtesies shown me and assuring you of my sincerest wishes for your continued success, I am

Very truly yours,

"QUO VADIS" IS IN AGAIN AND A HIT

Playing As Dollar Attraction, Revival Cleans Up

The re-releases of "Quo Vadis" at high prices as percentage attractions in legitimate theatres are proving somewhat sensational. Fred Warren is issuing numerous companies, and is now playing runs in Philadelphia, Washington, Rochester and other cities. The gross has run beyond the five-figure mark each week in each town, it is reported, and Warren is organizing to send the prints broadcast through the entire country, with a huge reissue to exhibitors thereafter.

Already he is asking more for the re-issues than for the original showings. The film is playing at $1 top, and exhibitors are clamoring for it in the territory where it is being shown as a special, whereas two months ago a general circular to the trade, offering it for second release, brought not even a lukewarm response.

A Dollar Top!

"QUO VADIS"

Playing at a DOLLAR TOP, "Quo Vadis" has just splintered records at the National, Washington, D. C. Arrayed against it—at fifty-five top—were the strongest features that could be culled from current screen attractions.

Triumphal runs in a score of big cities are being planned by Klaw & Erlanger as a result of the phenomenal showing in the Nation's Capital.

Showmen recognize the possibilities in George Kleine's revival of the famous classic; showmen everywhere are cashing those possibilities into profits.

Add One More

Now Goldwyn adds "Doubling for Romeo" to a list of pictures that are acknowledged record-breakers.

One of the greatest comedies of all time. Without question the most original, "Doubling for Romeo" is the talk of every city where it has played.

It has opened to sensational business in four of the most important exhibition centers of the United States.

In Los Angeles at Miller's Theatre, "Doubling for Romeo" is breaking the house record. The admission price is one dollar.

In Chicago it is doing wonders at the Roosevelt.

In Cincinnati it is going great guns at The Capitol.

And in New York at the world's largest theatre, The Capitol, it is doing one of the most phenomenal weeks that this great theatre has ever done...

What They Said In Los Angeles

Record: One of the most screamingly funny comedies of recent years. "Doubling for Romeo" is a truly enjoyable picture, which no one with a sense of humor should miss.

Times: "Doubling for Romeo" is a complete knockout. Not only is it a hilariously funny comedy, but Rogers completely finds himself in it. He is whimsical, funny, sad by turns and in addition does some athletic stuff that rivals Doug Fairbanks.

Examiner: "The funniest thing that Rogers has done" was the unanimous comment last night.

Express: Mr. Rogers has, in the parlance of the theatre, a fat part, and extracts the last juicy drop of fun from it.

Herald: The role fits Rogers superbly. Every time he comes into a scene there is a shout of laughter "Doubling for Romeo" is one of the best comedies ever filmed

WATCH
The Biggest Name

to a Record List

The crowds are laughing, applauding and congratulating.

The reviewers are writing more superlatives in their reviews than they have written in six months ...

"Doubling for Romeo" is a big hit. Will Rogers has pulled the surprise picture of the year ... a comedy in which every scene comes with a jolt unexpected.

"Doubling for Romeo" is not only the biggest laugh-puller in a long, long while. It is a spectacular picture.

There are great scenes in this picture, wonderful settings with clamoring mobs...

There is a duel that grips you and startles you....

Add "Doubling for Romeo" to a record list —a list that includes "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead."

There are more coming! "Poverty of Riches!" "The Sin Flood!"

What They Said In New York

Globe: Will Rogers, Elmer Rice and Will Shakespeare divide the honors in the cleverest comedy of this or many other seasons.

Times: "Doubling for Romeo" is about the most hilarious thing Mr. Rogers has ever done.

World: A thoroughly giggly and at times boisterously laughable picture.

Telegraph: Practically every title carries a laugh .... the "Romeo and Juliet" episodes amount to a triumph.

Journal: You will have the time of your life watching this one

Mail: One of the cleverest and most amusing satires on the motion picture industry that has been produced in many a day.

Herald: Combination of Rogers and Shakespeare as irresistible as a certain widely advertised talcum powder

Mr. William Fox presents another of his Special Super-Features, starring

WILLIAM FARNUM

In a photodrama of tremendous human interest

The World.

"Circulation Books Open to All."

NEW YORK, MONDAY, AUGUST 15, 1921

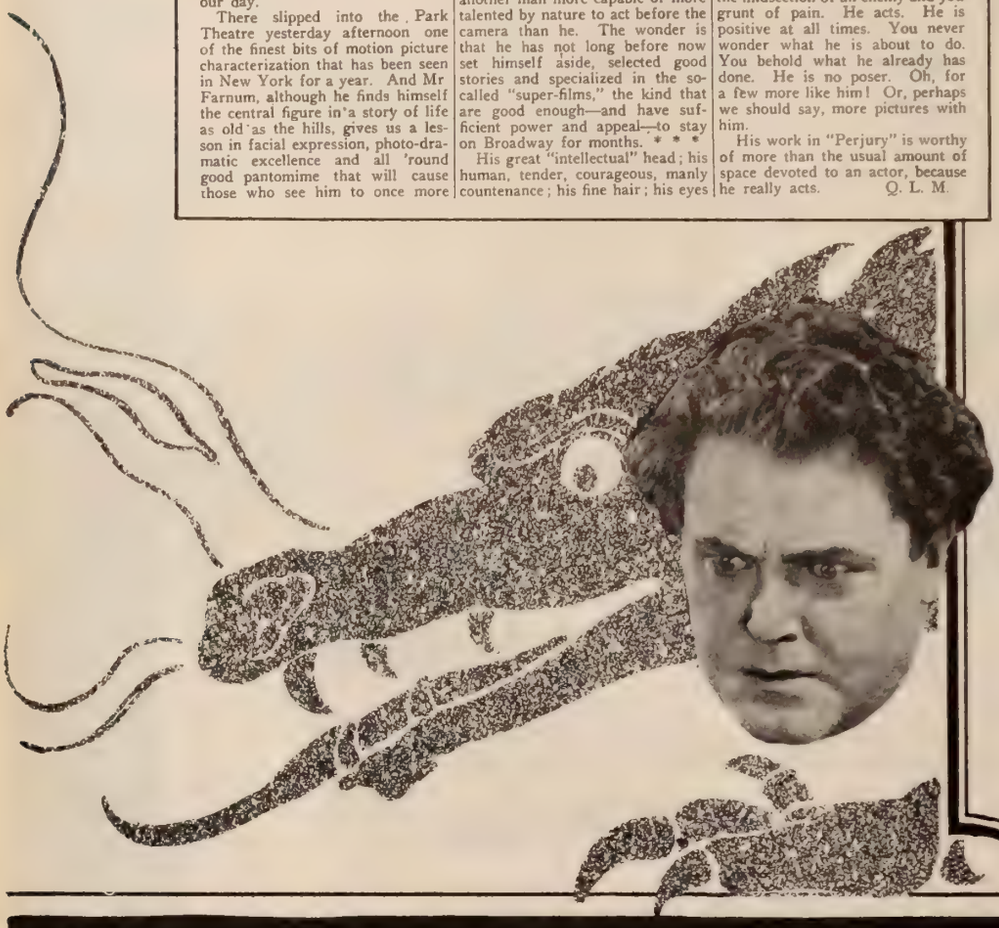
Five little minutes of William Farnum on the cinema screen lends more dignity to the art of the photoplay than five months of the usual silly prattle of most of the slick-haired toddle-top demons of our day.



There slipped into the Park Theatre yesterday afternoon one of the finest bits of motion picture characterization that has been seen in New York for a year. And Mr Farnum, although he finds himself the central figure in a story of life as old as the hills, gives us a lesson in facial expression, photo-dramatic excellence and all 'round good pantomime that will cause those who see him to once more take heart and renew hope that the picture play is not going to the dogs. * * *

The really worth while part of "Perjury" is the acting of Mr. Farnum. In America there is not another man more capable or more talented by nature to act before the camera than he. The wonder is that he has not long before now set himself aside, selected good stories and specialized in the so-called "super-films," the kind that are good enough—and have sufficient power and appeal—to stay on Broadway for months. * * *

His great "intellectual" head; his human, tender, courageous, manly countenance; his fine hair; his eyes that speak to the lens; his lion-like frame; his neatness and his grace. He has them all.

He caresses his baby-girl, and you wonder if it isn't really his own. He sinks that huge fist into the midsection of an enemy and you grunt of pain. He acts. He is positive at all times. You never wonder what he is about to do. You behold what he already has done. He is no poser. Oh, for a few more like him! Or, perhaps we should say, more pictures with him.

His work in "Perjury" is worthy of more than the usual amount of space devoted to an actor, because he really acts. Q. L. M.

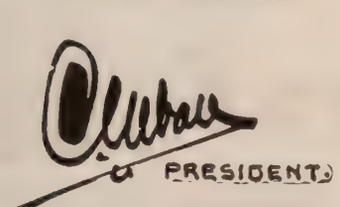
"The Four Seasons"

From the Exhibitors Trade Review, October 15, 1921.



THE FOUR SEASONS.—A four-reel Urban Popular Classic-Kineto novelty. With the assistance of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society, Charles Urban has given to the screen four reels of impressively scientific and instructive entertainment. It makes its appeal to every member of the family and the sort of educational subject that every mother and father will want every member of the household to see. Beautifully put together the four reels are a succession of charming nature with a tinge of novelty and colorful magnetism that makes it easily one of the most remarkable educational-entertainment subjects ever reflected on the silver sheet. A reel is devoted to the picturization of the beauty of each of the four seasons. There are animals that make you marvel, wonder and hold you aghast. It all seems so beautiful and wonderful. Here is one screen offering that need fear no one and justifies the use of superlatives. It is Nature picturized in all its glory. It is Life itself—the life of the animal and the human being who looks on in wonderment. Photographically, it is a gem. The Four Seasons is remarkable because it accomplishes what many have branded impossible — makes pleasing entertainment of a subject that heretofore has been restricted to the four walls of the schoolroom.

Motion Picture News

The Businesslike Course

IN the Saturday Evening Post of October 15th (our apologies to Sam Bullock for advertising this publication) is a remarkable article on "Europe in Transition."

The author, Isaac F. Marcosson, points out that Europe today with "neither war nor peace" (to quote Trotsky's famous phrase) is worse off than Europe at war.

And the trouble, says Mr. Marcosson, is due to "petty politics," "passing the buck," "passion and prejudice," "self-interest," "self-importance," "animosity," "demagogueism," etc.

In other words to plain hatred, aroused and maintained between states that must be economically interdependent, and for no other reason than the glorification of the individual state or some leader within the individual state.

A deplorable situation indeed; and every American will have to pay and pay well for the business stagnation that must result from this great discord.

In reading this potent article the writer was struck, time and again, with points of remarkable similarity between the economic chaos of Europe and the economic discord within the motion picture industry.

We have, in this industry, three economic divisions, the exhibitor, distributor and producer of pictures. Each division is utterly dependent upon another. One can't subsist without the other. The prosperity of each is dependent upon the prosperity of the other. The three, for the good of each must work together. From every standpoint of sound business sense and experience they cry aloud for cooperation—for "tolerant and intelligent cooperation."

There will always be trouble between the buyer and the seller. There always has been since business began. So, there will always be trouble between the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor of pictures.

But any and all of these troubles can be settled by half a dozen business men sitting around a table. Certainly no hullaballoo is needed.

In our business we never take this direct, sensible course; or at least we never take it until we have rushed into print with columns and columns of charges and counter charges. So keen, in fact, is the rush for publicity that one is forced to believe that publicity is the main object sought, that the desire is to foment discord, not to deal justice, or arrive at peace.

A fight is a good thing once in a while—though, Heaven knows, this business at present doesn't want and can't stand much more fighting. But since we are a business family, very much in need of financial support on the one hand, and on the other very much in need of public sympathy and understanding let's fight, if fight we must, with the windows closed.

The reformers want nothing better than to know that the divisions of this industry, which together make its strength, are divided against each other with constant quarrelling. Such evidence of weakness is an open invitation to them to attack.

So with the politicians.

As for the banker—

This business, right now, isn't enjoying the best of terms. The situation isn't serious and it shouldn't be discouraging. We simply have gone through abnormal times, and we haven't liquidated as yet. Ahead of us is probably a full year during which we will have to trim our sails to fit the reconstruction period of the business world at large.

What we need most today as an industry is cash.

The producer today is heavily committed. The exhibitor who made heavy profits during the war period, reinvested, in most every instance, that money. We are, as an entire industry, investment poor. There is but one thing that can be relied upon to pull us out and that is bank credit.

Think this over Mr. business man—producer and exhibitor alike and see if it isn't true that here is our common and basic problem.

Consider, then, the banker.

Do you think he will want to loan on your exhibitor investment, or on your producer investment, if these two common business partners are in rival camps shooting shrapnel at each other?

You will both ask him to loan on the money-making power of pictures. But he knows, any school-boy knows, that no product makes money when the maker and retailer of it are at war.

He will look for, he will insist upon, nothing short of "tolerant and intelligent cooperation" between the commercial branches of this business. Just that! Nothing more nor less.

"Animosity," says Mr. Marcosson, speaking of economic Europe, has become one of the principal by-products of self-determination. It is meat and drink to the demagogue but it has stifled commerce.

We don't want demagogues in this industry. We do want good business.

Let's put the emergency brake on this "fighting stuff"—and build good business.

Through tolerant and intelligent cooperation.

First National's "Get Together" Meeting

Advisory Board of Franchise Holders to Aid Functioning of Organization

By William A. Johnston

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The First National "Get-Together" meeting was brought to a close today. The finishing touch on the delegates' work of co-operation was the adoption of a constructive measure designed for perfecting the functioning of the organization. It was decided to form an advisory board of franchise holders in every territory in the United States and Canada, whose purpose will be to work with the original franchise holders and exchanges on all matters concerning the relation of the franchise holders and the exchanges. The Board members will be elected by the franchise holders of the territories. In all matters which it is found necessary to refer to the home office, the Board will make a preliminary investigation and report the basis on which their decision could be made speedily. President Leiber and Mr. Schwalbe approved of the proposal, which was made by the California delegate, and which was later approved by the meeting.

At the closing session, C. C. Griffin, of California, introduced a resolution of confidence in the officers and executive committee of First National, which was adapted with enthusiasm by the delegates. Mr. Griffin declared his absolute faith in the fairness and ability of the executives and pledged them his hearty support.

Harding Wires Greetings to First National

THE following telegram from President Harding was received at the second day's session of the Associated First National "Get Together" meeting in Chicago, and read before the convention:

"White House,
"October 24th, 1921.

"Please accept my good wishes for your industry and the enterprising people who have created and developed it into one of the wonderful commercial and artistic creations of our time. You will serve the country well if you shall maintain a high and constantly higher standard of the work you are carrying on. Your opportunities for true public service rank with the very greatest.

"WARREN G. HARDING."

THE lobby of the big Drake Hotel, Chicago, began to fill Sunday with delegations arriving from all sections of this country and Canada to attend the Associated First National Franchise holders convention. Over 200 are in attendance including 120 delegates. Every state seems represented. It is probably the largest strictly business meeting held thus far in the history of the industry. The delegates are well representative of the country's exhibiting interests. All in all a very heavy investment is represented. There is considerable tension in the air, and naturally so. An exhibitors cooperative enterprise, and a large one is on trial, an enterprise which started with a country-wide group of large theatre holders and which now, through sub-franchises embraces some thirty-five hundred picture houses. The co-operative principle is involved. It remains to be seen whether or not this principle can be made operative under the plan laid down for it by the Associated First National.

To judge from the talk in the lobby, and delegates are expressing themselves freely, the issue is exhibiting values and rentals. The point most commonly raised, in the broad question of high rentals, is whether or not the exhibitor should be compelled to take the poor picture to get the good one. This has for years been a prime point of discussion; it has come to the top now however with a new emphasis because the exhibitor knows full well that the flush times are over and the public is shopping, as never before. Most every exhibitor reports that the exceptionally good picture makes money. He does not object to the high rentals put upon these few pictures alone but to rentals on mediocre pictures and the fact that by the terms of his contract he must take the low weeks with the high.

The executive committee of Associated First National went into executive session Sunday afternoon. On Monday a large luncheon was served and immediately following the first session opened. Because of the fact that this is a stockholders meeting with transactions of confidential business, all, other than regularly elected delegates are excluded from the meetings.

Results in Passing of Constructive Measures

More Than 200 Delegates Attend Meeting; Tension Disappears

President Lieber in his address of welcome to the delegates, declared with emphasis that the meeting had been called, not for the purpose of having the delegates listen to a series of prepared addresses by executives of the organization, but to give franchise holders, through their delegates, a thorough opportunity to express themselves, to present their criticisms and suggestions, and to give the men whom they had elected to manage their affairs, the benefit of their individual viewpoints on all matters affecting the welfare and betterment of First National as an exhibitor distributing organization.

Doctor George Kelb, of Norwood, Ohio, made a brief reply to Mr. Lieber and the executive committee on behalf of the delegates, declaring the meeting the healthiest and most constructive thing that could possibly have happened, because it afforded the franchise holders, through their delegates, an opportunity of understanding the First National idea and the First National plan which the majority had only been able to obtain in an imperfect and fragmentary manner. He felt confident, he said, that the complaints and criticisms would disappear when such an understanding was arrived at.

The plan worked out by the executive committee for holding of sectional meetings of the delegates as a preliminary to the general sessions of Tuesday and Wednesday was then announced by President Lieber. For the purpose of expediting matters and speeding up the general meetings, the delegates were divided into seven sectional groups—Atlantic, Middle Eastern, South Eastern, Middle Western, Western, North Western and Pacific.

The territory included in the several sections was as follows: Atlantic Section—New York, New Jersey, New England, Toronto; Middle Eastern Section—Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland; North Eastern Section—Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee; North Western Section—Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Central Canada; Middle Western Section—Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Missouri, Arkansas; South Eastern Section—Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina, Virginia, Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Oklahoma; Pacific Section—Colorado, Utah, Nevada, California, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico.

The tension that marked to some degree the opening of the convention disappeared after the first day, and Tuesday evidenced harmony everywhere. The seven sectional groups held meetings all Monday afternoon and evidently all misunderstandings and contentions were satisfactorily ironed away. The reports of these meetings were heard by the entire convention on Tuesday, but early in the day it was already clearly evident that the "get-together" convention of the Associated First National franchise holders has fully lived up to its chosen name—had, in fact, exceeded the most sanguine hopes of the minds back of the co-operative idea.

The scope and breadth of the "Get Together" was indicated by the subjects for discussion during the various sessions, which were as follows: "Past—Present—

High Lights in J. D. Williams' Address to Delegates

"THE producing and exhibiting branches of our industry are the most vital. I do not believe that any branch should control the industry to the detriment of the others.

"We have finally crystallized our ideals and policies under three general principles. (1) Exhibitor Independence and the protection of our theatre investments. (2) Exhibitor Distribution. We cannot, we dare not, allow a middleman to take control of the business for acting as messenger and carrier between studio and theatre. (3) Independent Production financed by our box offices. We recognize the imperative need for fostering independent production if our business is to continue in popular favor.

"First National does not want to become a trust. We do not want a monopoly of any kind in this business. Our object should be to serve between three and four thousand non-competitive members in the United States and Canada with the best productions money can buy at a cost allowing a fair profit.

"We must be willing to share with them (independent producers) the profits of our common industry.

"Our future—and it can be as successful as you wish to make it—depends upon one great big, all embracing factor, and that is the loyalty and support you give your organization and its officers."

In all more than two hundred delegates, representing practically every state in the Union, were in attendance at the meetings at the Drake Hotel

Iowa Exhibitors Convene in Des Moines

Over 100 Members in Attendance; Plans Laid to Fight Sunday-Closing Restrictions

WITH over one-hundred motion-picture theatre-owners of the state in attendance, the Iowa exhibitors organization concluded its convention at the Hotel Chamberlain, Des Moines, Ia., on Thursday of last week, October 20th, after two days of active and enthusiastic business sessions. Messages were received from many absent members of the exhibitors' organization, assuring the officers of their fullest support and co-operation in promoting the objects and policies of the association. The panel of officers elected at the convention comprises the following: J. C. Duncan, Plaza theatre, Sioux City, president; Tom Brown, Strand theatre, Iowa City, vice-pres.; M. Tournier, Star theatre, Mason City, treasurer; and E. Metzger, Strand theatre, Creston, secretary.

The executive committee, elected, consists of Dr. J. C. Pence, Lyric theatre, Columbus Junction; H. S. Earll, Star theatre, Davenport; Alexander Frank, Garden Theatre, Waterloo; W. M. Waterhouse, Hildreth Opera House, Charles City; A. J. De Bold, Strand and Palace theatres, Cedar Rapids; Geo. Cruzen, Rivola Theatre, Oskaloosa; B. I. Van Dyke, Royal theatre, Des Moines; C. C. Peregrine, American theatre, Corning; Ben Harding, Liberty theatre, Council Bluffs; Wm. Johnson, Rialto theatre, Ft. Dodge; and Philip Schlumberger, Opera House, Denison.

Affiliation with the Motion Theatre Owners of America was formally established by the Iowa exhibitors under the name of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa. Another important tie-up to advance mutual exhibitor interests was the selection of the Iowa members for the joint board of control of the Nebraska and Iowa state organizations. This joint board of control was proposed and adopted at the recent convention of the Nebraska exhibitors in Omaha. The Iowa members chosen for this joint committee are as follows: Morey Cohn, Strand theatre, Council Bluffs; Ben Harding, Liberty theater, Council Bluffs; and L. B. Seymour, Rex theatre, Glenwood.

Another important question which occupied the attention of the exhibitors was the fight on Sunday-closing restrictions. Legal council was employed to represent the association in three such battles now being conducted in different parts of the state. The most urgent of these cases exists in Grinnell, Ia., where a keen fight has been waged at the expense of the individual exhibitor of that city.

The following resolutions were adopted by the convention:

An appeal urging every Iowa Congressman to use his influence to secure the repeal of the film rental tax.

A vote of thanks tendered to A. R. Pramer, a member of the national executive committee, for his untiring efforts in promoting the work of organizing the state body.

An endorsement of the purposes and efforts of the public welfare department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America under the direction of Dr. Francis Holley.

Approval of the plan, recently adopted by the Nebraska exhibitors' convention, to establish a joint board of control for the purpose of co-ordinating the efforts of the two state organizations in problems of mutual interest. (The Iowa members selected for this committee were named above.)

A protest against and condemnation of all producers engaged in the exhibition of pictures in direct competition with the independent exhibitors.

Plans were adopted to promote the growth of the state organization and steps taken to launch immediately an intensive campaign to enroll every motion-picture theatre-owner of the state as an active member of the association.

On Wednesday evening, October 19th, the attending exhibitors were the guests of the local Des Moines and Omaha film men at a reception at the Hotel Chamberlain.

The opening meeting was attended by all the film men of the city, and the expressions of opinion made at this session were taken to forecast a spirit of harmony in all activities for the future.

The grievance committee, elected, consists of: Tom Brown, Strand theatre, Iowa City; Ed. Weggner, Lyric theatre, Valley Junction; and Harry Hiersteiner, Family theatre, Des Moines.

The ways and means committee comprises Philip A. Schlumberger, Opera House, Denison; Alexander Frank, Waterloo, Garden theatre; J. C. Duncan, Plaza theatre, Sioux City; and William Waterhouse, Hildreth Opera House, Charles City, Iowa.

Parent-Teachers Body Meets Exhibitors

Much Done to Promote Civic Understanding by Conference in Indianapolis

MUCH to cement the valuable friendship between exhibitors and members of the Indiana Parent-Teachers Association and the Indiana Board of Photoplay Indorsers was accomplished last week in joint sessions of the associations, at which prominent men of the industry appeared in Indianapolis.

Photoplay men praised the work of the Indiana Board of Photoplay Indorsers, which through local indorsing bodies attempts to feel the public pulse and let the exhibitors know what kind of pictures the public wants, as opposed to the censorship idea; while prominent women in both associations told the members, gathered from all parts of the state, that the old idea that exhibitors are bent upon showing evil pictures and should be muzzled at every opportunity is obsolete and injurious to the public itself, in that through censorship the public sometimes is deprived of the opportunity of visualizing great masterpieces of literature.

Dr. Samuel Atkinson came from New York as the personal representative of William A. Brady who had been invited to speak from the viewpoint of the national producers body. Both he and Frank Rembusch, head of the Rembusch string of theaters in Indiana, who spoke from the standpoint of the exhibitor, were warmly received. Tributes to the honesty and proper public spirit of the exhibitors and producers of today was paid by Mrs. Hence Orme, president of the parent-teachers association and Mrs. David Ross, president of the state indorsers.

The mutual expressions of good will were a continuation of a unique situation which exists in Indiana. So thoroughly are the club women of the state convinced that affirmative rather than negative criticism is more helpful in ridding the country of bad pictures that when half a dozen censorship bills were proposed and one nearly passed by the 1921 state legislature that they formed in Indianapolis one of the most powerful lobbies of the year and battled shoulder to shoulder with the exhibitors. The result was that censorship finally was decisively defeated, and sentiment against it sown in such a large measure that it is somewhat unlikely that the bugaboo will rear its head again for some time.

In addition to advancing the indorsement rather than censorship idea before the parent-teacher members and indorsers in Indianapolis, Mrs. Ross also spoke in the same vein before the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Muncie during the week, gaining wider appreciation of the work than ever before.

Threatened Strike Will Fail to Cripple Picture Industry

Nat'l Ass'n Arranges Traffic Scheme: Rothacker Prepared for Tie-Up

ALTHOUGH at the present writing the railroad strike cloud appears to be dispersing and the entire situation has taken on a brighter hue, the National Association, the various Film Boards of Trades and the Rothacker Film Company are prepared for the worst. If the strike should come—and the "if" seems to be assuming larger proportions with each day's strike news—the producers would still get their prints from the laboratories, and the exhibitors their pictures from exchanges. This now seems assured.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has effected, in record time, a complete and effective nation-wide traffic organization to insure the uninterrupted forwarding of film shipments and accessories in event of the strike; exhibitors within a radius of one hundred miles from Chicago are promised, by the Chicago Film Board of Trade, regular delivery of film by motor truck; in Buffalo the F. I. L. M. Club will utilize areoplanes; and Watterson H. Rothacker will also use the air route to transport First National negatives from Coast and New York studios to the Chicago laboratory of the Rothaker Film Company.

With traffic managers in every key center mobilizing all available transportation facilities, relay stations established and pick-up systems worked out to cover every zone in the country, a delivery service, thorough in every detail, has been effected by the National Association in rapid-fire order which will prevent any serious interruption in the film industry. No time was lost by the National Association in preparing against a tie-up when word was received that the trainmen would start their walkout on Sunday, October 30th.

William A. Brady, President of the Association, immediately telephoned from Atlantic City to Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary of the organization, requesting that a meeting of the Transportation Committee be called and on Tuesday, October 18th, the Committee, composed of representatives of each producer and distributor member of the National Association and of the general division, were hurriedly called together by Secretary Elliott. Their meeting was presided over by P. H. Stilson, Chairman of the Committee. After a thorough analysis of the situation telegrams were dispatched to every exchange managers organization in the country Tuesday night asking them to meet immediately, choose a traffic manager, list their emergency transportation facilities and report the information to the headquarters of the National Association at 1520 Broadway. On Wednesday these meetings were held throughout the country and telegrams began to flood in, giving vital information relative to available emergency transit service in each territory. All this information was immediately tabulated at the National Association headquarters, interlocking transit systems were charted out for through shipments, and the field corps of traffic managers instructed as to the method of relaying shipments from one territory to another.

The Chicago Film Board of Trade has engaged H. O. McDonald, formerly general traffic manager of the Wells Fargo Express Company, to act as transportation manager, and already he has completed charts of the territory showing the best truck routes and necessary stopping points within a radius of one hundred to one hundred and fifty miles from Chicago, and has also made arrangements for trucks which will handle film.

The Chicago central district depot will be established at 806 S. Wabash Avenue, which will be the central point of call for trucks, which will radiate in all directions throughout the state, dropping film at depots to be established along their routes and at key centers, at which points exhibitors can obtain film without trouble or delay.

The Film Board of Trade transportation committee includes Chairman R. C. Seery, of First National; Joseph Friedman, of Celebrated; Clyde Eckhart, of Fox; I. R. Lesserman, of Universal, and W. C. Brimmer, of Vitagraph.

Lieut. Ralph C. Diggins, Rothacker Film Company staff aviator, who pilots for industrial bird's-eye views, is all set to take to the air with film shipments when Mr. Rothacker says the word. Lieut. Diggins says that by operating relays a Coast negative can be delivered at Chicago in twenty-four hours. Without relaying and with time off the trip can be made in thirty-six hours. Aerial transportation New York to Chicago is comparatively simple.

When it first became apparent that the railroad men might mean business, Mr. Rothacker began negotiating with Forrest J. Alvin, general manager of the United States Motor Truck Company, for the automotive delivery of prints. In case the emergency warrants truck delivery of Rothacker prints, Mr. Alvin would come to Chicago personally to direct the U. S. truck forces. Under his plan "trunk line" trucks loaded with prints would depart in all directions.

John Kimberly, manager of the Vitagraph Buffalo exchange, has been appointed chairman of the transportation committee of the Buffalo F. I. L. M. club, and he has completed plans for the delivery via motor truck, airplane and automobile of films to all parts of the big Buffalo territory.

Arrangements are being made for delivery of films by airplane to Hammondsport, where there is a Curtiss landing field. There the films will be picked up by salesmen in automobiles.

Recent Incorporations in State of New York

APPROXIMATELY $400,000 represented the capitalization of motion picture companies incorporating in New York State during the past week, this amount showing a slight increase over the week previous. The concerns, with the amount of capitalization and directors, include:

Out-of-the-Ink-Well Films, Inc., $50,000; Max Fleischer, William Ferguson, Charles W. Lucas, New York. Sona Realty and Construction Co., $10,000; Solomon Schwartz, Nathan T. and Joseph Schwartz, Brooklyn. Wray Physioc Productions, Inc., $20,000; Isaiah F. Cummings, Yonkers; Terese Vaughey, Jersey City; Fred W. Nellie, Staten Island. Belmont Theatre Corporation, $75,000; Richard G. Herndon, Ralph W. Kerbe, Minnie Horowitz, New York. A-G-S Theatres, Inc., $20,000; C. M. Conway, R. W. Richter, A. P. Kaufman, New York. Laff-O-Graph Films Corporation, $15,000; Selem Dushey, James Judiche, Isaac N. Weber, Brooklyn. Bertan Pictures, $200,000; Charles Hollender, Mathilde R. Hartmann, Paul Munter, New York City.

Exhibitor to Make Public Stockholders in Company

Frank W. Fisher, operating some ten picture houses in Illinois and Wisconsin, including the Majestic at Madison, has announced that he will try to make his patrons stockholders in the theatres they attend.

The Fisher Paramount Theatres, with capital stock of $200,000 in 20,000 common shares at $10 each, has been organized. Mr. Fisher retains the control of the new enterprize, putting approximately $50,000 worth of stock on the market. Considerable stock has already been sold to Madison patrons of the Majestic.

Woody Attends Opening of Chicago Theatre

In response to a telegramatic invitation from Balaban and Katz, J. S. Woody, General Manager of Realart, went to Chicago to attend the opening of their new Chicago Theatre, which took place on Wednesday, October 26th.

Chaplin Inclined to More Serious Roles

Alternating, 50-50, Between Comedy and Drama His Ideal, He Tells Diners

CHARLES CHAPLIN, on the occasion of a dinner tendered him by the Associated First National Pictures at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, October 21st, gave voice to some very interesting opinions. Among other things he declared that he had a leaning towards more serious drama in the future and stated that his ideal lay in an alternation of both comedy and drama, say in the ratio proportion of fifty-fifty. He declared he might, for the nonce lay aside his famous shoes but only to return to them in a following production.

Mr. Chaplin expressed it to be his hope to continue business through First National after his present contract with that organization expires and furthermore expressed the wish that the theatres affiliated with the First National system would continue to do business with him.

Regarding the use and abuse of subtitles, Mr. Chaplin stated that in his opinion the question of more or fewer subtitles was unimportant in that while one picture might be excellent through the absence of interlarded words, another might be equally excellent with them. It was all a matter of the particular picture, he thought.

Asked, in connection with his recent visit to Europe, his opinion as to the relative merits of American and European productions, Mr. Chaplin believed that there was much to learn mutually on both sides of the Atlantic.

"American stars and producers," he said, "must look to their laurels. The Germans take their work very seriously. They think something important can be made out of the films, though they are not doing it for propaganda purposes. The Swedish are also doing some capable picture producing.

"In Europe they recognize that we are ahead of them in photography and other technical details of film production, but they believe that they excel us in story value. They consider that the American psychology is too obvious, and that audiences here have to have made-to-order stories that are sweetly sentimental without touching on real life.

"They say we have too many bedroom farces and they're tired of our sex plays. I agree with them. What we want is more of the subtlety which they say we ought to have. Original stories written especially for the screen will, I think, be the salvation of the American producer."

Mr. Chaplin paid a high compliment to the artistry and personality of Pola Negri whom it had fallen to the lot of First National to introduce to the American screen public and whom he had met abroad. Yet while he had had the pleasure of meeting that star and other screen luminaries over there, Mr. Chaplin pointed out he had but little time to visit theatres.

Mr. Chaplin stated that he still preferred to write his own stories rather than to make over plots "translated" from books and expressed his intention of continuing in that preference.

The speaker delighted his audience with the ready wit and sparkling repartee with which he met a barrage of questions laid down upon him by the newspaper representatives present and a spirit of humor and good fellowship pervaded the gathering in consequence.

In addition to Mr. Williams other speakers who paid tribute to Mr. Chaplin as an artist and as a man included, H. O. Schwalbe, Arthur James, P. C. Skours, Dr. Gianninni, Frank Vreeland, J. Dannenberg, James Dean and Nathan Burkhan.

Others present were: Wm. A. Johnston, Motion Picture News; Messrs Boynton and Sohn, Exhibitors Trade Review; John Spargo, Exhibitors Herald; Loella Parsons, Morning Telegraph; Carlyle Robinson and James Grainger of Mr. Chaplin's executive staff, W. Morgan, W. E. Mulligan and Horace Judge of First National and members of the newspaper press.

Mr. Chaplin left New York for the Coast, Sunday October 23 planning a stop off in Chicago where Associated First National was in "Get-Together" Convention and would, it was stated, if possible attend the opening of the Balaban and Katz, First National franchise holders' New Chicago Theatre.

Asks Exhibitors to Adopt Special Measures for Observance of Armistice Day

A STATEMENT addressed to the motion picture theatre owners of America by President Sydney S. Cohen, of the M. P. T. O. of A., recommends the adoption of special measures in connection with the celebration of Armistice Day. The statement, which is entirely advisory in character, follows:

"By appropriate proclamation, Hon. Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, has decreed that on Armistice Day, Friday, November 11, 1921, the people of the country follow certain lines of conduct which will enable all to co-operate in spirit with the ceremonies associated with the burial of an unknown American soldier in the Memorial Amphitheatre of the National Cemetery at Arlington, Virginia.

"As theatre owners, having a direct and constant communication with the American public, I feel that we should do everything in our power to entirely cooperate with President Harding and other officials in making this observance of Armistice Day measure up in every way to their highest expectations. Such action on our part will be but another open evidence of our sincerity in our already established lines of co-operation with the President and other Government officials in carrying forward essential programs through our Department of Public Service now established at Washington. We have pledged the motion picture screens of the nation to President Harding in the furtherance of public work of every character. He has cheerfully accepted this tender of helpful co-operation and has commended our purpose and patriotic spirit in this relation to all Government officials and the people of the United States generally.

"I, therefore, feel assured that in this connection our co-operation will be cheerfully given in carrying forward this very patriotic project in the observance of this great international holiday.

"In accordance with this program, we request that you exhibit slides in your theatre for several days previous to Armistice Day, calling attention to the President's proclamation, the special ceremonial at Arlington Cemetery and the two minutes of silent prayer between 12 noon and 12:02 P. M., which he has made a part of the nationwide observance.

"We especially urge that you display the national colors at half-mast on Armistice Day from sunrise to sunset and that patriotic music in the form of an overture feature your performance.

"Army and navy officers and other public men and women will aid in this work. Your personal judgment will, of course lead you to the right line of action."

Indiana Exhibitors Hold Annual Convention

Election of officers and plans to hold the organization intact so as to be in readiness for any great piece of work which comes before the exhibitors of the state was the chief business discussed at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, set for Oct. 26 at the Hotel Severin in Indianapolis. The association was active in fund raising and anti-censorship campaigns this year.

Would Require Permit for All Song or Dance Acts

An ordinance prohibiting any song, dance, act or other like performance in motion picture theatres in Kansas City without obtaining a permit from the board of public welfare was introduced in the lower house of the council last week by Alderman John P. O'Neill. The measure was referred to the conference committee.

The purposes of the ordinance, as explained, is to prohibit "anything immoral, obscene or detrimental to the public good" from being given in a motion picture theatre in Kansas City.

Fox Film to Celebrate Ninth Anniversary

"Anniversary Week," January 29 to February 4 Elaborate Plans Being Made

THE Fox Film Corporation is now preparing for a world-wide celebration of the ninth anniversary of its establishment. The celebration will be staged during the week of January 29 to February 4, which will be known as "Anniversary Week." The point aimed at in this Fox Anniversary Week is to have every theatre, at home and abroad, which has ever shown a Fox picture, present a series of Fox productions from January 29 to February 4, inclusive, and to bring into line as many other houses as possible. The full list of Fox releases, including features, comedies, animated cartoons, and the Fox News reels is to be made available for the situation. A statement which was issued from the Fox Film home-office during the week in connection with the anniversary celebration, follows:

"An important milestone will be reached by Fox Film Corporation at the close of next January. The corporation then will be nine years old. And certainly big for its age. A birthday celebration is being arranged, has had a birthday party approaching in size this jubilee affair as already outlined, it is not a matter of record. Like Fox Films, it will circle the earth. Two hemispheres, and every continent thereon, will participate in the doings. "Fox Anniversary Week" is the label the big celebration will bear in every land.

"For this world-wide celebration all Fox branch managers even now are at work, bending every effort toward making it a "howling" success. The earliest reports from the twenty-seven branch offices in the United States and the half-dozen in Canada contain a sufficient number of contract arrangements, Fox officials say, to indicate that the exhibitors will make it unanimous.

"Certain it is that, on an occasion of this sort, exhibiors are not likely to forget or overlook the fact that William Fox more than once has stood as a bulwark between them and monopoly seekers who aimed to destroy their independence—to enslave them or drive them out of business. Especially do they recall his long up-hill but successful fight, begun in 1908, against the General Film Company and the Motion Picture Patents Company—a battle which resulted in keeping the business open and free to competition.

"Of special interest to exhibitors in the current year's Fox output are the super-specials, the general release of all of which will be preceded by runs in New York City and a number of which have already had their Broadway careers. Included in release before the close of 1921 are "Over the Hill," "A Virgin Paradise," "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "Thunderclap," "Shame," "Perjury," "Footfalls," "The Last Trail," and "Queen of Sheba."

"Exhibitors probably will not have to be reminded that in the matter of these specials Fox set a pace that certain others have been forced to follow. He determined to release these big features direct to the exhibitor instead of sending out "road companies." The decision caused a sudden change of plan by others engaged in similar enterprises. Here again the pioneer spirit was in evidence—to the manifest financial benefit of the showmen of the country.

"Bearing in mind the great box office advantage accruing from this generous policy on the part of William Fox, it is expected that exhibitors everywhere will help put over this Fox Anniversary Week celebration with a bang.

"Vast quantities of banners, posters and other accessories are bing provided for distribution by the exchanges. The entire Fox personnel appears to be on its toes to put over the big birthday party in a manner worthy of the Fox record in screen achievement.

"Beginning January 29th and continuing to the night of February 4th "Fox Anniversary Week" will be flashed in electric lights from hosts of Theatre fronts in the United States, Canada, Latin America, Great Britain, and the continents of Europe, Asia, Africa and Australasia."

A. M. P. A. to Hold "Installation Ball" Nov. 7

THE Associated Motion Picture Advertisers have hit upon the scheme of holding an "Installation Ball" for the purpose of celebrating the induction of the new officers recently elected. The affair will take place in New York on Monday evening, November 7, at the Cafe Boulevard, Broadway and Forty-first street, the place where the A. M. P. A. holds its regular weekly luncheons.

This means that C. L. Yearsley, the new president; Jerome Beatty, the new vice-president; Victor M. Shapiro, the re-elected treasurer, and Thomas G. Wiley, the new secretary, not forgetting the members of the board of directors, will be made to feel the importance of their responsibilities by a celebration the like of which never before has been attempted by this thriving organization of advertising and publicity men.

Film Conference in Winnipeg Is Well Attended

Three hundred persons attended the conference and re-union of moving picture exhibitors and representatives of film exchanges which was held in Winnipeg, Manitoba, on Thursday, October 20, under the auspices of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, the chief object of the event being to stimulate a proposed organization of all exhibitors in the Canadian West into one body.

One of the features of the convention was the luncheon which was held in Manitoba Hall with President R. Kershaw of the Manitoba association as chairman. Among those at the head table were Mayor Parnell, Vera Gordon, Johnny Hines, Ralph Thorpe, Mr. McGrath of the Provincial labor bureau and others. Mayor Parnell declared that he looked upon moving pictures as a great educative factor and expressed the belief that pictures made a greater impression upon people than any other medium. The other speakers included Vera Gordon, Johnny Hines, Mr. McGrath, George Graham, a well-known local exhibitor, and Ted Hardcastle, representing the exchange managers. The orchestra of the Lyceum Theatre provided appropriate music.

Favorable Action by Senate on Repeal of Film Rental Tax Expected This Week

ACCORDING to advices from the headquarters of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, everything points to a favorable reception by the Senate of the recommendation of its Finance Committee to repeal the 5 per cent film rental tax. Action by the Senate on the measure is expected this week. In the event that the Senate upholds the recommendation of its Finance-Committee, the final fate of the 5 per cent film rental repeal will rest in the hands of ten men—five Senators and five Congressmen, comprising the Senate and House Conference Committee.

These men are: Senators Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, Reed Smoot of Utah, Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, Furnifold M. Simmons of North Carolina and Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island; Congressmen Joseph W. Fordney of Michigan, Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, William R. Green of Iowa, John N. Garner of Texas and William A. Oldfield of Arkansas.

The House conferees will determine whether or not the Senate Finance Committee amendments to the Revenue Bill, if adopted by the Senate, are acceptable to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives. Any unacceptable amendments will immediately become subject matter for discussion between the joint groups of conferees and all points at issue must be ironed out and agreed upon before the measure is returned to the House for final passage.

Saul E. Rogers, chairman of the Taxation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, urges that every possible effort should be immediately made by representative men of the industry to convince the Senate and House conferees that the rental tax repeal is essential to the welfare of the entire motion picture business, and that without such relief it is going to be an almost impossible task for the industry to work back to normalcy.

Affiliated Acts for Film Interests on Coast

The first public action taken by the affiliated Picture Interests, Inc., in behalf of the film interests of the West coast, is a letter mailed out under date of October fifteen at the order of the board of directors and signed by Secretary Ted Taylor.

In the past, the industry on the West Coast has been made the goat of a number of local personal enterprises, and it is the intention of men of the industry that in the future the people of the industry will benefit as the result of these enterprises instead of the personal promoters. It is because of this reason that the letter of October 15th was mailed. There is no intimation that the proposed enterprise referred to in the letter is unworthy in any sense. The letter in full is as follows:

"Your attention is directed to the fact that the so-called 'First Annual Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry' is a private enterprise of the 'Ethical Motion Picture Society of America.'

"This enterprise has not been endorsed by the Affiliated Picture Interests, an organization comprising individuals and all associations connected with the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in California authorized to represent the industry in matters of common interest, under which head come fairs, expositions, entertainments, etc.

"So far as we know the 'Ethical Motion Picture Society' is therefore acting only for itself. It has made no satisfactory explanation concerning the objects, scope, and proposed use of profits of its proposed 'motion picture exposition' to the board of directors of the Affiliated Picture Interests of California, and it therefore does not have the co-operation of the united factors of the motion picture industry."

Los Angeles Theatres to Have Musician Strike

The Musicians' Union of Los Angeles called all its members out of downtown theatres this week. The walk-out is to take place at the end of the week in each theatre. The theatre owners had given notice of a ten per cent reduction from the present wage scale which was $54.50 for seven six-hour days, with ninety minutes rest time.

On October 4th the Los Angeles Theatres' Association notified the Union that they would not make a contract but that each theatre manager would regulate his working conditions. When the Unions demanded a contract the theatres refused to sign and the Union agreed to remain at the old scale pending the settlement of the contract issue.

This is the second strike for Los Angeles theatres in the past two months. In September the stage hands demanded a six day week at the same scale as then paid for seven. The theatres refused and the Unions walking out were replaced by Union men who were out of work from the previous strike at the studios.

Names Committee to Investigate First National

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America's headquarters announces that the committee has been selected which will undertake the task of investigating the present management of Associated First National Pictures in the name of the M. P. T. O. of A. The committee members are announced as follows:

John Manheimer, New York, Chairman Board of Directors, Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce; W. D. Burford, Aurora, Ill., Board of Directors, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, Pa., Executive Committee, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Easton, Pa.; L. J. Ditmar, Louisville, Ky., President Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky, and A. J. Kleist, Pontiac, Mich., Board of Directors, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan.

The statement from the M. P. T. O. of A. continues as follows:

"The committee fully realizes the seriousness and magnitude of its undertaking, in view of the numerous and serious complaints of members of our national organizations who are sub-franchise holders of Associated First National Pictures, as well as from exhibitors who are trading with that company in territories where there are no sub-franchise holders."

Labor Interests Institute Suit Against Censors

Dwight Thatcher Harris, chairman of the Kansas State Board of Motion Picture Review, has been summoned to Topeka, Kans., to confer with Attorney General Richard J. Hopkins concerning a pending suit against the board. Robert Blackstone, representing labor interests, has served notice of a damage suit for $5,000, following the condemnation of a film entitled, "Contrast," exploiting labor interest.

Missouri Ass'n Addresses Exhibs on Vital Issues

In a bulletin addressed to the exhibitors of the state of Missouri, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri announces that meetings are being arranged for in every district for the purpose of submitting important questions for the consideration and action of the exhibitors in the various districts. The bulletin urges upon all theatre owners of the state the need for attendance at these meetings and the immediate carrying out of the recommendations made by the individual exhibitors of the state.

The following matters are to be presented for consideration: Repeal of admission tax and of the 5 per cent film rental tax; correction of Copyright law to remove the inequitable music tax; present blue-law situation; complaints as to local conditions such as town tax on amusement tickets; and lastly, the establishment of a public service department in the different counties.

Exhibitors are urged to take concerted action with the other theatre owners of their districts in urging their Congressmen to secure the repeal of the admission tax and the film rental tax. Individual action is also recommended in winning Congressmen to the side of repealing the music tax by supporting the Lambert Bill now before Congress. It is also announced that a music service bureau is to be established to serve all theatre-owners who apply for the service with non-taxable music.

Plans to establish local public service departments and to fight any blue-law restrictions already in force or impending are also to be discussed.

Theatre Test Vote Shows Censorship Opposition

A test vote taken by Howard Frankel, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Columbus, O., was sufficient to reveal to him that the patrons of his theatre, at least, were overwhelmingly opposed to censorship on the screen.

The test at the Majestic was made during the week that Paramount's "The Woman God Changed" was shown. The Ohio board of censors had cut one of the scenes of the picture and Mr. Frankel, in advertising the attraction announced to the public that such action had been taken.

The balloting continued throughout the week. The result showed that the people were against censorship approximately three to one.

Mother of Nat Rothstein of Equity, Dies

On October 21st Mrs. Rothstein, mother of Nat Rothstein, of Equity Pictures, died in her Los Angeles home after an illness extending over a period of three years. The funeral services were held in Los Angeles on October 23rd. Mr. Rothstein visited the Coast recently and spent his vacation with his mother.

Trade Faces Future in Optimistic Mood

REPORTS received at the News office during the week indicate that the trade in general is looking forward optimistically to the future and the rapid resumption of healthy business conditions in all sections of the country. A statement from L. M. Miller, president of the Southwestern Amusement Company of Wichita, Kan., reflects the general tenor of the prevailing opinions in many quarters. He warns that it is high time that everyone connected with the industry realizes that the past few years have been abnormal and cannot be accepted as a criterion of sound business conditions. He declares it to be his opinion that compared with the business done several years ago when times were normal the alleged "slump" of the past few months has been grossly exaggerated.

While the words of Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Strand, do not strike as highly an optimistic note as those of Mr. Miller's still the outlook is painted as most promising, and the screen is upheld as an effective medium to combat the spirit of depression resultant from the wide-spread unemployment.

"Ye have experienced no such thing as a 'summer slump.' The talk we heard during the past summer and early fall season concerning the 'summer slump' is simply irresponsible discussion by those who know nothing of what they are speaking or of the motion picture business in general."

This sentiment was voiced by L. M. Miller, president of the Southwestern Amusement Company of Wichita. Mr. Miller's company owns the Palace Theatre, a First National franchise holder, the Regent Theatre, and the Princess Theatre.

The viewpoint of this Kansas theatre head on the situation should bequite valuable to the theatre owner, for it probably will set some of them to thinking along new lines.

"Compare your business for the last six months, with the same six months last year or the same six months two years or three years ago. What do you see? You probably don't see much of a 'summer slump' in those periods. Because those years were abnormal years. From the standpoint of the theatre man, more perhaps, than any other business man, the war years and the years immediately following the war are admitted to be not average years," said the Wichita man.

"The truth is that we are just getting off our high war perch and getting down to real brass tacks of steady, everyday, go-and-get-it business tactics, if we only knew it. That's the trouble. Some of us don't know it. Some of us haven't that faculty of perception which permits the cognizance of salient, important facts, tendency, and features of the times until they are gone and we look back and see what we couldn't see at the time.

"The sooner the exhibitor forgets all this talk about the 'summer slump' or any seasonal slump, and gets down to business and digs in, and works like he meant it, the better for him, and for his business and for the entire industry.

"This is an important time in the life of the average theatre and the average theatre owner, inasmuch as the changing conditions of the business world are prone to affect the theatre even more than ordinary institutions. He should set himself to realize conditions as they are and not as he suspects them to be or has been told that they are. Consequently, the danger in the false talk of seasonal slumping in the summer just past.

"The theory of seasonal slump is wrong, since the conditions on which the arguments of the slumpers are predicted appear to be fallable. For instance the very conditions of the seasons and weathers which those who argue for the seasonal slump advance may be used with impunity to defeat them.

"There is a peculiar psychology about the business which operates rather disastrously in the case of the theatre owner who believes in the doctrine of seasonal slumps. Too often such owners believe the slump is coming and then are willing to sit down and see their receipts dwindle on the theory that it's inevitable, rather than getting out and working in an effort to prove the fallacy of the belief. Such a psychology as this is dangerous to the theatre operator. Its tendency is toward the killing of all initiative and punch he might have. He ought not be content to sit by, hopeless, under the illusion that 'it can't be helped.'"

"Theatre men should make the best of real conditions, rather than struggle along under wrong theories.

"It is my opinion that those who talk of the summer slump are basing their arguments on the wrong theory. The war-days boom caused many persons to think along lines with war conditions as bases. The war days were simply the result of unusual conditions and business became inflated to a large degree. Now business may have fallen off from its level of those days. It simply means it is getting back to a sane and normal basis once more and it does not mean that business is rotten and going to the dogs.

"We are not particularly alarmed over conditions," says Mr. Miller, and his business dealings and actions bear out the statement. All the houses in which he is interested are going after business at a great rate and a man who would start a several-hundred-thousand dollar show house at this time with a similar house under process of construction at the same time in the same city does not appear to be a man who was suffering from chilled pedal extremities as to the general conditions in the show business."

Another angle of the industrial "slump" is supplied by Edward L. Hyman, managing-director of the Strand Theatre, Brooklyn. He believes that one of the most effective weapons to combat unemployment and the resultant depression is the screen and recommends that the programs of the picture theatre play up the cheerful and humorous in life rather than the tragic and melancholy. Mr. Hyman says:

"The Unemployment Conference could have achieved no more laudatory thing than to have called upon the motion picture industry to supplant woe with smiles in every programme made up for showing in a motion picture house," believes Mr. Hyman, who contends that worry of the individual caused by pessimistic business reports when allowed to become chronic only hasten depression inasmuch as the individual loses courage and hangs onto his money because of a fear he will need it badly later.

"Everytime a motion picture manager makes a patron laugh this fall and winter he is striking a blow that will eventually down the bogie, depression," insists Mr. Hyman. "I am not an advocate of the Polyanna scheme of life, yet when the motion picture acts as an agency to remove either real or fancied troubles of the individual through a smile or a laugh I feel that the manager is not only making his own business better but will send the smiling patron away with less gloom and more push in his or her system.

"It seems to me that in trying to picture realism producers are not called upon to linger so much upon the tragedy, irony and vexations of life," said Mr. Hyman. "It always seemed to me that there is an equal measure of happiness in life, and that the motion picture screen was the proper place to exploit that cheerful equal half, especially at a time when encouragement rather than discouragement is needed to stimulate a sick country.

"An unemployed man or woman distressed because work seems only a memory with jobs a thing of the past won't find anything to further depress them in the Brooklyn Mark Strand, if I can help it," declared Mr. Hyman. "I'd a darn sight rather send that unemployed person out with a new determination to land something, for there is much more of a chance of his coming back to the Brooklyn Mark Strand for if he lands a job he will naturally have the money to give him the amusement he needs. In my opinion the public now needs an overdose of cheerful screen entertainment. Too many are staying away from the theatre now because they are becoming accustomed to being gloomy."

Balaban and Katz Open Chicago Theatre

THE great doors of the Chicago theatre, acclaimed as "the largest, most beautiful and artistic wonder theatre of the world," were opened to the public on Wednesday, October 26th.

This theatre, dazzling in its amazing architecture and interior beauty, is the latest contribution of Balaban and Katz's beautification of their city. It has a seating capacity of five thousand and was completed after two years of work at a cost of $4,000,000.

A huge crowd clamoring to get in when the doors were formally unlocked by Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago Plan Commission, who acted as master of ceremonies. Mr. Wacker declared that the theatre was the most artistic building now in Chicago. A large number of the leaders of the motion picture industry were guests of Balaban and Katz at the opening, and magnificent floral tributes from friends throughout the country crowded the lobby and foyer. It was necessary to close entrance doors and cease selling tickets early in the evening.

The Chicago theatre is built on an "L" shaped site and the State Street property is used exclusively for a lobby. This lobby, or grand foyer, has beautiful marble walls relieved with ivories and gold decorations and runs back ninety-six feet. Monster marble columns support the promenades and an inspiring circular marble staircase rises at the extreme end and runs upward several stories. The ceiling is in the form of a single dome of great beauty. The foyer rises five stories in height.

The auditorium itself is impressive. It is built in amphitheatre form—that is, it is wider than it is long—and is divided into three floors, the main floor, mezzanine and balcony. An innovation in theatre construction are the boxes running up by the sides of the balcony floor to the topmost part of the theatre.

The architecture and the decorations are of the Louis XIV period, and, like Balaban & Katz's famous Tivoli, have been inspired by the magnificent Chateau de Versailles.

The stage of the Chicago is one of the largest in the country, measuring from end to end 170 feet, and has a proscenium opening of 70 feet, with a depth of 35 feet. It is fully equipped, possessing all lighting and theatrical devices.

The opening feature picture was "The Sign on the Door," by Channing Pollock, featuring Norma Talmadge, and a Buster Keaton comedy had a place on the program.

Sunday-Opening Fight Won at Saulte Ste. Marie

The great "White Way" at Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich., will be lighted again next Sunday, and the moving picture houses will be open once more after two weeks of oblivion caused by the Ministerial Association's clamping down the lid.

The defect has been found in the old Sunday Blue Laws, the prosecuting attorney's office announces, and as a result joy reigns supreme in the camp of the theatre men, while the ministers have practically given up the fight.

The Soo has been closed to motion pictures on Sunday for several years, and three weeks ago when the proprietors of the theatres opened up, the ministers launched an opposition movement. This resulted in the closing of the house for the last two Sundays.

Elmer Pearson on Tour of Pathe Branch Offices

ELMER PEARSON, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., left New York on Tuesday, October 18th, for his first tour of Pathe branch exchanges since receiving the appointment which advanced him from the post of director of exchanges. The itinerary of Mr. Pearson's tour includes the chief distributing centres for the Middle and Western States.

Before leaving Mr. Pearson said that he wished to assure exhibitors that, in the event of transportation disturbances now threatened Pathe Exchange had taken measures to sustain prompt deliveries.

In and Out of Town

J. S. Woody was one of the many who attended the opening of the "Chicago Theatre" in the Lakeside city.

C. O. D. Blanchfield arrived from the Coast this week, bringing prints of some Westerns.

Sidney R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, F. P. Lasky and Henry Salisbury are hunting in the Maine Woods.

Cecil B. DeMille has tentatively reserved accommodations on the Patria, sailing Oct. 31, and will spend a two months vacation in Europe and Northern Africa.

Admission Prices Lowered

Admission prices have been reduced in two theatres in Watertown, N. Y. The reduction is about five cents per person. The houses are the Palace and the Antique.

Louisiana Ass'n to Meet

The Independent Motion Picture Theatre owners of Louisiana will meet at New Orleans on Monday and Tuesday, November 14th and 15th.

14,000 circulars on Motion Picture News' Booking Guide are being mailed out.

Watch for yours!

Cobb Advises Churches to Try Exhibiting

Chairman George H. Cobb, of the New York State Motion Picture Commission in an interview during a recent visit to his home town of Watertown, made the suggestion that churches in small towns unite and purchase the local theatre, where it is found that pictures of an objectionable sort are being shown. This suggestion on the part of Mr. Cobb was prompted by a letter which he had previously received from the ministers in a small town in the state, objecting to the pictures shown at the local house.

The experiment had met with success in another section of the state, he said. The plan kept the young people in their home town nights, instead of seeking amusement in the city. In addition to that, Mr. Cobb said, the experiment has returned a small profit to the churches.

Melville A. Shaurer, F. P. Lasky Manager, Marries

On Saturday, October 22, at Pelham, N. Y., Melville A. Shauer, manager of the advertising accessories department, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and son of Assistant Treasurer Emil E. Shauer, married Miss Miriam Brady, of Pelham.

Mr. Shauer was the honored guest at a luncheon given by Eugene J. Zukor at the Hotel Commodore on Thursday, October 20, and which was attended by twenty of the former's business associates.

Byron Bailey to Manage Scranton Theatre

Byron D. Bailey has resigned as manager of W. S. Butterfield's Regent Theatre in Flint, Mich., to assume the management of Charles H. Miles' new million dollar theatre in Scranton, Pennsylvania. Mr. Bailey is a former newspaper man of Pennsylvania, but has been active in theatricals for the past five years.

$3,000,000 Merger Being Considered in St. Louis

PLANS for the merger of theatres valued at $3,000,000 owned by the Skouras Brothers and the City Wide Amusement Company houses in St. Louis, Mo., are under consideration, it was learned during the week. It was stated that $5,000,000 in new capital would be put into the enterprises.

Conferences looking to a merger of the houses have been under way for several weeks. Samuel Hamburg, Jr., president of the City Wide Amusement Company; Leo Rassieur, Jr., of the law firm of Rassieur, Kammerer & Rassieur, a large stockholder in Skouras Brothers' Enterprises, and W. Arthur Stickney, of A. G. Edwards & Sons, brokers, participated in the negotiations.

The production end of the consolidation will be under the direction of Jimmie and Eddie Carrier, who have been in the same capacity since the City Wide Amusement Company absorbed the Famous Players Missouri houses in St. Louis.

Loew to Visit Coast

Marcus Loew will leave for Los Angeles early next week on another tour of inspection of the Metro Studios. He will also open his new State, Los Angeles.

Elaborate Plans for Exposition at Charlotte

THE Charlotte Chamber of Commerce has thrown the full weight of its influence back of the Southern Motion Picture Exposition, which will be held in Charlotte for four days, beginning November 29. This organization is actively assisting in numerous ways in the task of developing this exposition, and also is arranging to provide several elaborate entertainment features for those attending.

That the Southern Motion Picture Exposition, to be held in the City Auditorium, is receiving wide attention from all branches of the motion picture industry is evidenced by the number of letters being received daily by General Secretary Herbert C. Wales at Charlotte. Inquiries are coming in from producers and distributors alike, as well as from manufacturers of theatre supplies and accessories.

Griffith Seeks to Exclude Aeroplane Sightseers

The rights of motion-picture sets to survive without strange cameras playing upon them from aeroplanes, will be involved in a ruling which D. W. Griffith, Inc., will ask of the Federal authorities in an action now being drawn by Atty. A. H. T. Banzhaf.

The proceedings will be directed against the United States Government. It will seek a definite ruling of the rights of federal cameramen riding in army aeroplanes to fly over private property for the purpose of sightseeing or taking photographs. The action is occasioned by the visits of aeroplanes to the D. W. Griffith studios in Mamaroneck. For his production of "The Two Orphans" Mr. Griffith created a French city with twelve streets, at a cost in excess of $100,000. Visitors by land or water are denied access, so sightseeing by air became a popular custom, it is alleged.

Changes in Louisville Exchange Field Announced

Important changes in the organization of Associated First National Exchange of Kentucky and Tennessee and the Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville have been announced by that company.

Lee L. Goldberg has found it necessary to resign as manager of the Associated First National Exchange to devote himself to the Big Feature Rights Corporation.

Paul Krieger, formerly manager of the Fox Film Exchange at Washington and Cincinnati, has been appointed successor to Mr. Goldberg as Associated First National Manager. Leo Katz has also joined the organization.

Indiana Parent Teachers Meeting

censorship," declared Dr. Atkinson in his talk at the opening business session of the parent-teacher association. "Censorship, whether in education, literature, press or motion pictures. Anything that forbids us, shackles, unslaves us is wrong. Legalized motion picture censorship is not helping you or us in this age."

Censorship is wrong and impractical in principle, declared Mr. Rembusch because it is impossible to get boards to agree and because it is destructive, in that it takes away and adds nothing. One of the most unfortunate effects of censorship is that it puts motion pictures in politics, something which the entire industry has fought shy of, said the exhibitor.

Mr. Rembusch also thanked the indorsers for the work they are doing and declared it particularly valuable from the exhibitors standpoint because it demonstrates the belief on the part of women that the industry really is glad to listen to popular demand and exerts every effort to give the public the wholesome, profitable entertainment it desires.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

Roderick Ross, who has been at his home in Chicago for some weeks looking after his various film interests, will leave in a short time for Florida where he will spend most of the winter.

Watterson R. Rothacker is planning to leave for the west coast within a few days where he will visit the Aller-Rothacker laboratories at Los Angeles.

H. B. Franks, owner of the Lyric theatre at Rock Falls, Illinois, is erecting a new three hundred seat house at that city. He plans to make it thoroughly up-to-date and modern in every respect. Work is being rushed and the opening is planned for shortly after the first of the year.

E. J. Brewer has closed his Brewer Opera House at Shabbona, Illinois, indefinitely, due to poor farming conditions, his house being entirely dependent upon the rural patronage.

Sterling Township High School at Sterling, Illinois, has arranged to run educational and some theatrical films for the benefit of the scholars, their parents and friends. "Old Kentucky" will be the first amusement picture to be shown.

Ira Furman, Goldwyn auditor, who has been making an audit at the Chicago office, has completed his work and left for the Minneapolis exchange. Mr. Furman praised the efficiency of the Chicago exchange under Manager Cecil Maberry and states that it is one of the best managed he has been called upon to inspect.

A. Teitel, expert film renovator, has just completed the work of polishing up and cleaning the prints of "Over the Hill" for the Fox Exchange.

General Manager Elmer Pearson, of Pathe, has appointed H. O. Martin, who has been manager of Pathe at Pittsburgh, Chicago manager with jurisdiction over Cook County, J. S. Gillick, formerly assistant manager at Chicago, manager for Illinois and Indiana territory, and T. G. Myers, assistant manager to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Mr. Gillick. The change in the organization giving one manager charge of Chicago and Cook County and another the Illinois and Indiana territory, is to conform with the new sales policy.

W. A. Aschman was in Chicago this week in the interests of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures, which he controls for Wisconsin and Minnesota, and announced that he was also going in with Ben Beadell on handling the pictures in Illinois, and that the first releases in this state will be made at an early date. Mr. Aschman reports the pictures going over big in Minnesota territory and that prospects are excellent for a big business in both Wisconsin and Illinois.

One of the interesting announcements of the week is the formation of a partnership between J. L. Friedman and Jack Grauman, the latter of whom will have full charge of the Wisconsin territory for Celebrated, and already has made plans for the opening of an office in Milwaukee. Messrs. Friedman and Grauman have been friends for many years and Mr. Grauman will have the full product of Celebrated, and with that the cooperation of Federated. Mr. Grauman brings to his new post a reputation for ability, integrity and experience, coupled with a wide acquaintance among Wisconsin exhibitors, which peculiarly qualifies him to organize an exchange and build up a splendid business in the territory served by the Milwaukee office.

The directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois met in Chicago last week and made preliminary plans for the Fall convention of that organization. The convention probably will be held in Springfield and the date will be fixed at a time so that Sidney Cohen, president of the national organization, and General Counsel Walker can be present and address the delegates.

The sales force of Universal's Chicago exchange tendered Maurice Hellman a farewell luncheon at the Blackstone Hotel last Saturday.

Mr. Helman is severing his connection with the Chicago exchange of Universal after nearly fifteen years spent in the service of Universal, and the strong regard in which he is held by the personnel was evidenced by the talks made at the luncheon at the Blackstone.

Earlier in the day a meeting of the entire Universal staff was held at the company headquarters and Mr. Hellman presented with a magnificent diamond and platinum scarf pin.

Those present at the luncheon included: Herman Stern, district manager; I. Leserman, exchange manager; Louis Laemmle, manager of sales promotion; L. W. Alexander, new manager, department of short products; A. Platsman, auditor; J. P. Denton, correspondence; W. A. Hyliand, service manager; W. L. Hill, publicity manager; B. Eisenberg, manager, booking department and salesmen F. O. Nielson, R. W. Funk, J. E. Armgardt, S. Decker, Carl Leserman, D. Rosenthal, R. Fox, Benny Edelman, Lippton Astrachan, J. J. Sampson, T. Schlanger, Jack St. Clair and Ray Murray of Exhibitors' Herald and L. H. Mason of the News.

Manager Sidney Goldman, of the F. B. Warren Corporation, has put two new salesmen to work, both being well known in the territory and popular with exhibitors. They are M. J. Stone and R. G. Kapp.

Salesman Harry Phillips, known as one of the star producers of the Chicago territory, is now connected with Universal Film Exchange and will cover city territory for Manager Leserman.

John Cohen is back with Reelcraft after working for other companies for some months and Manager Harthill has assigned him to his old territory.

Manager Ben Reingold, of Goldwyn's Milwaukee exchange, was visiting Cecil Mayberry at Goldwyn's Chicago headquarters this week and reports that "The Old Nest" is one of the greatest box office successes ever released in the Wisconsin territory, thirteen prints being working at the same time in Milwaukee. During the run of this feature at the Arcade and Colonial on the 17th, 18th and 19th of the month, Mr. Reingold reports that the crowds were forced to wait for more than an hour before securing admission to the theatres, so great was the line-up.

Morton A. Levy has arrived in Chicago to specialize on the sales of Fox's big, super features. Mr Levy comes from Washington, D C., where he was associated formerly with Associated Producers and Robertson-Cole as manager of their Washington exchanges. Division Manager Clayton Sheehan, of Fox, has left for the east after closing contracts for Fox service with Fitzpatrick & McElroy.

M. P. Fitzpatrick, widely known to Illinois local film circles as a veteran of Essanay, is now traveling Illinois for Associated Exhibitors.

Lester Wurtzburg has been added to the sales staff of Robertson-Cole's Chicago exchange and will cover country territory. Mr. Wurtzburg is a nephew of the Ascher brothers.

"Over the Hill," the big Fox special, which has proved such a splendid box office attraction in Chicago, opens at the Oliver theatre at South Bend, Indiana, on October 17th. Ralph Holmes will handle the exploitation of the "Over the Hill" road company.

J. V. Grice has completed plans for remodeling his building at Watseka, Illinois, now used as a billiard hall, into a five hundred and thirty seat motion picture theatre, and work is to start at once. According to advance information, his decorations and equipment will be up to date in every respect and the new theatre will be a very attractive small town house

Ira G. Furman, traveling auditor for Goldwyn, has left Chicago after spending two weeks at the Chicago office putting his O. K. on the system in use in the Windy City. Edwin Justin Mayer passed through on his way to the coast where he will join the editorial department at the Goldwyn Studios, working in conjunction with Ralph Block.

It is again rumored that the Gumbiner interests will erect a million dollar vaudeville and motion picture theatre at the southwest corner of Sheridan Road and Lawrence avenue. Abraham Gumbiner has leased one hundred by one hundred and forty feet of property at that point for ninety-nine years from Mrs. Annie G. Dawson, at an annual rental of twelve thousand five hundred dollars a year net for the term, and has an option to buy the land within fifteen years for two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. No architect has yet been engaged by Mr. Gumbiner to draw plans for the theatre.

Capacity House Views "Conflict" Premier

"CONFLICT," Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewell production, had its premier presentation last Sunday night in the Central theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh street, and was acclaimed as one of the most thrilling and forceful pictures of the year. Accompanied by a musical setting which emphasized the tenseness of its mystery phases and which galloped with the suspense of its heralded log-jam rescue scenes, the picture made an impression upon its audience far more striking than anything ever before done by Miss Dean.

The biggest crowd which has stormed the Central theatre since it was turned into a moving picture house was on hand Sunday night. The house was sold out long before the box office line had dwindled.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FIRST NATIONAL

Bits of Life—
Well received. Drew splendidly. A real acomplishment. (East.)

The cast in this picture attracted a capacity business all week. (Middle West.)

One Arabian Night—

Good picture on which we had fine business. (West.)

Wedding Bells—

Very good picture. Business about average. (Middle West.)

The Cup of Life—
High class picture which went over well at this house. (Middle West.)

Not much of a picture, but it drew the crowds, and was held over for a second week. (Middle West.)

A Midnight Bell—
A peach of an attraction with everything in its favor to pack houses. Good audience picture. One that creates mouth-to-mouth advertising. Tremendous crowds, part due to personal appearance of Ben Turpin. (Middle West.)

The Ten Dollar Raise—
Good picture that didn't do much business because opposition was too strong. (Middle West.)

The Invisible Fear—
Just fair. Anita Stewart doesn't draw very well for me, any more. (Middle West.)

Mother O' Mine—
Good box office attraction. Big business, however, must be attributed to opening of house and appearance of dozen film stars in person. (East.)

The Sign on the Door—
Went fairly well. (East.)

The Idle Class—
Second week of run did not hold up any too well. (West.)

The fame of the author, the title and the star are head lined in this display on "Our Mutual Friend" playing a premiere at Olune's Broadway, Los Angeles.

Peaceful Valley—
Not such a wonderful picture, and it drew about average business. (West.)

The Serenade—
Very improbable picture, fairly well acted. About an average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Cappy Ricks—
Splendid Meighan feature full of action and humor, which went over big at this house. Played to fine business for week. (Middle West.)

Good production and well cast throughout. High class show that did a consistently good business all week. (Middle West.)

Good picture, very well liked on the whole. Only unfavorable comment from women, apparently based on roughness of fighting scenes. (Middle West.)

Footlights—
From box office standpoint, the best thing Elsie Ferguson has done. Great feminine appeal, and business was excellent. (Middle West.)

Three Word Brand—
Good Hart picture. Very good business. (East.)

Good picture with more than usual business. (West.)

Wealth—
Ethel Clayton has a steady following here. Good business for week's run. (Middle West.)

The Golem—
Excellent acting and photograph, a good story, and fine background effects, make this one of the greatest films of the year from an artistic standpoit. Also drew big crowds. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Invisible Power—
Good title on which to base advertising. Picture pretty good. Business only so-so. (Middle West.)

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—
Held for third week. (East.)

One of the greatest films ever seen here. Drew to capacity houses at $2.50 top price, and has been held for a second week. (Middle West.)

The Infamous Miss Revel—
Very good. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

Camille—

UNITED ARTISTS

The Three Musketeers—
The only thing that prevented this picture from breaking box office records was its length. Capacity business all week. (East.)

Unanimously approved. Best thing Doug has done. Whirlwind box office success for me. (Middle West.)

Fair business. Second week of show and this is not a two week town. (Middle West.)

On its second week and still going great. (Middle West.)

Everybody likes it. It's quite the social thing to say you've seen it and it's always discussed at luncheons, dinners and bridge parties. Universally praised and well attended even during its fourth consecutive week. (Middle West.)

Two weeks to good business. Audiences liked pictures. (West.)

Way Down East—
Broke all house records for a two-weeks' run, at 44 cents top price, playing in opposition to such pictures as "Camille," "The Golem" and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." (Middle West.)

REALART

The Case of Becky—
Went across nicely. (East.)

Mediocre picture. Business fair. (East.)

Her Sturdy Oak—
Flapper crowd all strong for this, and business was good for a three-day run. (Middle West.)

Good picture, fair business. (Middle West.)

One Wild Week—
Just the kind of picture patrons of this theatre like. Business excellent. (East.)

Such a Little Queen—
Nothing very deep, but pleasing. The average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Poor Dear Margaret Kirby—
Elaine Hammerstein popular but this picture not so well received on account of so much sick room stuff. Fair business. (Middle West.)

The Fighter—
Good picture, good attendance considering transportation difficulties. (Middle West.)

Handcuffs or Kisses—
Name drew, and Elaine Hammerstein's work is gaining her a good following. Nice little production. (Middle West.)

Who Am I?—
Wonderful picture. Just great. Went over at my house in fine shape. Big box office value. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

No Woman Knows—
The picture did more business than any previous production in several weeks. (Middle West.)

Dangerous Love—
A real thriller and fine for down town transient house. Opened to big Sunday business. (Middle West.)

Go Straight—
A fine picture which brought good business. (West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

The Foolish Age—
Doris May pleased our patrons in this clever comedy and business was as good as could be expected. (Middle West.)

Good picture. Star, however, not strong enough for new house out of down town section. (East.)

A good and different comedy. Business good. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Without Benefit of Clergy—
Pretty fair. Receipts average. (East.)

Rider of the King Log—
Good melodrama. Business only fair. (East.)

I Do—
This picture went over great and is a sure-fire box office attraction. Pleased immensely. (Middle West.)

FOX

Queen of Sheba—
First week of indefinite run. Went over big. (West.)

The Big Town Roundup—
Good picture, fair business. (Middle West.)

To a Finish—
Picture and business both very good. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

The Son of Wallingford—
A good production. And had good business on it. (West.)

A fair picture and poor business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Ace of Hearts—
A fine feature, which seemed to please my patrons. Good box office value. (West.)

Poor business. Patrons did not seem to like the theme of this production. (East.)

HODKINSON

The Face of the World—
A good picture which did a good business in a week's run. (Middle West.)

WARREN

Quo Vadis—
Two weeks to good business and pleased audiences. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Man and Woman—
From a box office view, this picture surpasses all expectations. Sunday attendance broke all records for past ten months. (East.)

Here is a reproduction from one of those big three color Tacoma ads. in which "The Sign on the Door" was cleverly sold to patrons of the Rialto theatre.

Showing the stage setting and characters appearing in "In a Persian Garden," staged as a prologue number for "One Arabian Night" at the Brooklyn Mark Strand engagement

Brooklyn Mark Strand Celebrates Second Birthday

The Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre recently celebrated its second birthday and Managing Director Edward L. Hyman presented an attractive bill in honor of the event.

Among the numbers was a musical surprise under the title of "In a Persian Garden," serving as a prologue to the feature picture "One Arabian Night."

The scene was a Persian garden, with the dome of a Persian temple showing in the background and a fountain in the foreground. The walk through the garden was flanked on either side by real poplar trees and in the foreground were beds of real poppies. There were two Persian settees draped with brightly colored robes and cushions.

The first number of "In a Persian Garden" was "Come Fill the Cup and in the Fire of Spring," by the Mark Strand Mixed Quartette. Then Eldora Stanford, soprano, sung "Each Morn a Thousand Roses Bring, You Say." This was followed by "A Book of Verses Underneath the Bough," interpreted by Dorothy Bell, soprano, and George Dale, tenor. Then came "Ah Moon of My Delight that Knows No Wane," by George Dale, tenor, followed by "Alas! That Spring Should Vanish With the Rose," by the Mixed Quartette. The finale was a Pantomime by the Serova Dancers.

Plath Pulls Novel Stunt for "Wedding Bells"

For "Wedding Bells" Hugo Plath, of the Gem Theatre, Palestine, Texas, had a small church, the bride, the bridegroom, the preacher, best man and bridesmaids, as well as an auto labelled "just married," in his lobby which attracted unusual attention. The light in the church flashed on and off.

"Snow Blind" Lobby Decorations Find Favor

An artistic bit of lobby exploitation was used recently by the Latchin theatre, Brattleboro, Vt., for the engagement of "Snowblind."

The manager of the Latchin had his house artist paint a poster redolent of the atmosphere of the Great Northwest which is such an integral part of the picture. The painted poster was about four by ten and was attractively displayed in the lobby where passersby would see it.

It represented a snow scene, with a lonely log hut in the foreground, snow-laden pine trees leading up a ravine in the background to snowy hills. The title of the picture was run obliquely across the poster near the top, in letters that seemed to be formed of snowflakes. It aroused much comment.

Doorknob Tags Work Perfectly for "Sign on the Door"

Evansville, Ind., awoke one morning to find its doorknobs tagged. Big round cards bearing the words "The Sign on the Door" were hanging on every door knob.

Evansville wondered and began to talk. Everyone knew it was some sort of an advertisement, but no one could tell what was being advertised. Therefore, when Manager B. F. Brentlinger, of the Victory Theatre, Evansville, blazoned forth in ads in newspapers with "The Sign on the Door," everyone was psychologically prepared to be interested.

He had 10,000 of the door cards printed and Boy Scouts were employed at modest wages to distribute them between 4 and 6 o'clock in the morning before the city awoke.

Ideas Worth Borrowing

Sporting Goods Store Dresses "Big Game" Window

During the run of "Gig Game" at the Strand theatre, Minneapolis, a local sporting goods store was induced to cooperate in dressing up a catchy window display for the feature.

The window showed the interior of a cabin, in which was everything from bear pelts to poker chips, from snowshoes and rifles to thermos bottles and cartridge belts. A big twenty-two by twenty-eight lobby still decorated the wall. In the right side of the window was a card reading, "When hunting BIG GAME use Warner's hunting equipment. When seeing BIG GAME go to the Strand Theatre." Another card, bearing three smaller lobby stills and reading matter similar in effect, was placed in the left hand side of the window.

Howard Theatre, Atlanta Presents Elaborate Prologue

For "The Affairs of Anatol," at the Howard theatre, Atlanta, recently, Managing Director Enrico Leide arranged a prologue that was beautiful and in thorough keeping with the picture itself.

The episode of the Green Fan Cafe was chosen as the base of the prologue. The stage set, when the curtain first rose, was the usual hectic cafe arrangement—the center of the dance floor being most in evidence, with just a table on either side to indicate the cafe arrangement. At the back of the stage was a huge green fan.

As the curtain rose the voice of a woman was heard, singing.

Then two popular young Atlanta people, very prominent in Atlanta society and pupils of a famous dancing teacher, danced on, offering an original and specially arranged dance number, which was very well received.

As the dance ended, the big green fan at the back of the stage closed, to reveal a tableau. The lights on the dancers died off, and the spot was centered on another young girl, clad in the typical "Follis costume," all in white, who was "blowing bubbles," balloons, painted in pastel colors, which the girl balanced and played with in a joyous, carefree manner.

The song which was sung throughout this little act was the "Merry Widow Waltz-Song," and the spirit of it was maintained throughout the prologue, which was beautifully staged and represented a considerable expense. But Managing Director Leide feels that the results obtained were in fine proportion to the expense incurred.

Sidewalk Quartette for "Old Oaken Bucket"

Manager Frauenthal, of the Keith Prospect, one of Brooklyn's leading theatres, went after "The Old Oaken Bucket" with a stunt that costs little, but that will work with equal success in small city or metropolis. For a week before the showing of the feature in his house Manager Frauenthal had a quartet at work on the principal streets of the borough. Choosing a likely corner, the quartet would stop and then burst forth into the melody "The Old Oaken Bucket." About the time the crowd that gathered expected the hat to be passed the quartet would unfold banners announcing the coming of the feature to the Prospect. "The manager who wants to try this stunt," declared the Keith manager, "doesn't have to get expensive singers. I called my boys a 'sidewalk' quartet, but any theatre can get the same pulling results out of what we used to know in the good old days as a 'barroom quartet.'"

Ottawa Newspapers Held Local Theatres

For the week of October 17, there was an interesting hook-up of newspapers and moving picture theatres for the exploitation of film features in Ottawa, Ontario. The Ottawa Journal published a combination page, consisting of the theatre's display and linked-up advertisements of local merchants for the presentation of "No Woman Knows" at the Allen's Regent theatre. At the same time, the Ottawa Citizen, the other local daily, published a combination page for "Experience" which was shown at Loew's Ottawa theatre.

Carroll Builds Lobby Front at Small Expense

Manager Carroll of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., attracted a lot of extra business with the lobby display he built for his showing of "Through the Back Door."

The brick wall shown by the cut was of painted beaver board. The flowers were hand painted roses.

Lobby designed by J. C. Stille, manager of the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore., for the engagement of "The Last of the Mohicans"

Want Ad Section Helps to Sell Pictures

Every insertion of a want ad in the Saturday Twin Falls (Idaho) Daily Times brought the advertiser a free ticket to the Idaho theatre, where "The Frontier of Stars" was playing. This tie-up was arranged by Rick Ricketson, Paramount exploiteer from the Salt Lake City exchange.

This tie-up, carrying daily news stories for five days, cost the Idaho nothing more than the tickets. According to recent estimates a free ticket brings one and a half paid admissions, proving a profitable investment. Want ads are one of the three commodities a newspaper has to sell. When a theatre helps push the newspaper's wares the paper usually comes back strong for the theatre.

Brooklyn Mark Strand Headlines Victor Herbert

The Brooklyn Mark Strand made much capital out of the appearance of Victor Herbert as guest conductor even to the extent of mailing announcements to those well-known people of Brooklyn who take an active interest in music and social affairs generally. The students of the many musical schools were also notified and the programme arranged by Mr. Herbert placed before them.

Phonograph stores boosted Victor Herbert records during the week in display windows and advertising space thus tying-up the Brooklyn Strand with Mr. Herbert.

Mr. Hyman augmented the symphony orchestra to forty pieces and played up the appearance of Mr. Herbert and this fact in both newspaper and billboard space.

Mangan's Prologue Stresses Mechanical Effects

An original prologue for "Dangerous Curve Ahead" under the title of "Imagination" was a feature of the recent engagement of the above mentioned picture at the Allen theatre, Montreal.

The number was staged by Managing Director Francis A. Mangan and was so arranged that the suggestion of a huge locomotive rushing out into the audience was given.

In staging the illusion no scenery was used except a black drop and three lights.

Mr. Mangan describes his prologue as follows:

"To get the results required an iris shutter is used on a locomotive headlight to give it the appearance of coming in the distance, and as it appears to rush nearer and nearer the pilot lights of the engine come into view through the use of dimmers on two lamps of 500 watts each. The sound of the locomotive bell and whistle in conjunction with the crunch of the clanking trucks carry the audience right into the feeling that they are in the way of an oncoming train, but as the imaginative engine seemingly comes to a full stop, with the accompanying sounds of escaping steam and the exhaust of the air brakes, a red lantern is waved and the title 'Dangerous Curve Ahead' is flashed on the scrimm curtain covering the front of the stage. It is here the realization dawns on the onlooker that it is but a well arranged and carefully thought out introduction to the feature picture, 'Dangerous Curve Ahead,' the effect brought forth rounds of applause and received much favorable comment.

St. Pierre Presents Interesting "Anatol" Prologue

The accompanying picture shows the prologue staged by Manager Louis St. Pierre of the Majestic theatre, Madison, for "The Affairs of Anatol." The setting consisted of dark blue drop in the rear, small oval mirrors on invisible threads hanging in the front. A big green fan front slowly opened showing the bubble cascade out of which the dancer came. Toy ballons were used to represent a bubble. The bubble cascade was made by using a tub of soap suds and connecting it to a pipe which was fed by a compressed air tire filler in the garage next door. For both the prologue and other exploitation Mr. St. Pierre had the co-operation of Dan Roche, Paramount exploiteer.

Hyman's Presentation Great Aid to "I Accuse

For the showing of "I Accuse" at tl Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Managi Director Edward L. Hyman staged both prologue and postlude in which music numbers and scenic and lighting effec were used to excellent effect.

The prologue was in adherence wit the war theme of the play, the stage s being a trench, a wide range of no-man land and shell riddled trees in the distanc Front stage was occupied by the trenc quarters of a group of French soldier who were members of the Mark Stran Male Quartette.

Opening revealed the scene in soft nigl light with the soldiers at rest singin Robert's French war ballad "Madelon. As the quartette completed the song a artillery duel with crashing cannon an bursting shell effect started. Fire fror bursting shell apparently showered th stage and red strips set down in the rea of the set and the use of lights from th booth gave the evening battle scene color ings.

With the dying down of the "cannonad ing" Leonard Samoloff, operatic teno sprang atop the trench with the Frenc emblem and sang the "Marseillaise." H stood over a glass trap illuminated witl two 1000 watt lamps. A fan spread th folds of the French tri-color in his arms.

During the last act of "I Accuse" i synchronization with the theme, Edga Kiefer, baritone, from off stage, sang Dix' "The Trumpeter" with appropriate trum pet effects from the orchestra with light out all over the house. This musical num ber came as the forces were being mobil ized. During the heat of the battle actio as a lull came in the fighting, Walte Smith, basso, sang "In Flander's Fields.' During one of the more sombre scenes i the picture Henry Moeller, tenor, wa heard in O'Hara's "There Is No Death.' In the happy finale scenes, A. De Maria cellist, played Saint-Saen's "The Swan.'

Riesenfeld Prepares Extravagant Number

New York Criterion "Peter Ibbetson" Prologue Artistic Creation

AT the Criterion theatre, New York, where "Peter Ibbetson" or "Forever" as the picture is to be called outside of New York, is the feature attraction for an indefinite engagement, Managing Director Hugo Riesenfeld has prepared a supplemental program which is pronounced the most elaborate of his career and presents two distinctly different moods—one, the prologue to "Peter Ibbetson," being a charming garden party dominated by the spirit of a hundred years ago, the other a brilliant transformation forest scene which changes from warmest autumn to silvery winter in the flash of an eye. Musically, the two numbers are brilliant creations, the works of great composers being woven into dance and ensemble works in an artistic manner that would be a credit to the great interpreters.

The prologue, which was staged and arranged by Josiah Zuro for Mr. Riesenfeld, opens with a minuet to the music by Alexander Charles Lecocq lead by Paul Oscard, ballet master of the Riesenfeld theaters, and Vera Myers. The Criterion Ensemble of picked voices also appears in this bit, the costuming and settings being of the colorful early nineteenth century, the days of crinolines and checked suits. A gavotte follows the minuet—the music being from Tschaikowsky's "Pique Dame"—Miriam Lax, soprano; Beatrice F. Wightwick, alto; the ensemble and ballet appearing in the charming number. Then follows a Shepherd's Dance by Edward German with ensemble and ballet, the entire company joining in the finale—"La Bergerie," an 18th Century melody being sung by George Richardson, baritone.

The opening number of the Criterion program, entitled "The Enchanted Forest," is a brilliant piece of staging, dance and music, laid in the days of the Druids. The settings are first autumnal, then become instantly winter. There are eight soloists in "The Enchanted Forest," a soprano soloist, Eva Sobel, soprano, and the Criterion ensemble of picked voices. When the curtain rises there is a woodland scene. It is autumn and the trees are rich in color, fallen leaves covering the ground and the rocks. At the rear stands a shrine about which are a group of priestesses. The orchestra plays Saint-Saens' "Djanerie," while Vera Myers, a high priestess, officiates at the sacred fire. The music ends and Eva Sobel, soprano, sings an aria from Delibes "Lakme," and, as this selection draws to a close, two priestesses lead the high priestess from her shrine and dance to a duet from the same opera sung by the women's chorus. Four nymphs enter and begin a wild dance in the hope of drawing the high priestess' attention from the shrine. It is a dashing piece of choreography set to the music of Glazounov's "Automne et Hiver," followed immediately by the entrance of Oscard as the forest prince. The first spring of the forest prince fascinates the high priestess and when he begins a stirring dance to the music of Delibes' "La Source," draws her from her sacred fire at the shrine. She joins in a whirling dance with the forest prince—there is a crash and golden autumn has gone to be replaced with winter. Snow bears down the branches of the trees, there is snow on the ground and ice covers the rocks. Even the brown costumes have turned to silver white and the wigs seem touched with snow. The settings were designed by Nicholas DeLipsky, the young Russian artist who has solved the secret of mingling pigments and lights in such a way that one painted canvas holds another scene through the changing of the color of the lights.

The two stage numbers at the Criterion mark a new high standard in musicianship and staging—creations which rival the best productions of the Broadway theatres.

Robson Improves an Old One

William N. Robson, Paramount exploiteer from Pittsburgh, improved the hidden word stunt in co-operative newspaper ads, when "The Affairs of Anatol" played at the Palace theatre, Tarentum, Pa.

Manager William L. Brown, was sold on the idea of making the ads pay the merchants as well as the theatre and when he was asked to make a donation of a hundred tickets, he raised the ante to three hundred and told Robson to go to it.

Robson did better than single or double trucks. He approached every advertiser in the Valley Daily News and asked to write their ads. He arranged the letters and the reading matter so that enough P's, A's, R's, A's, M's, O's, U's, N's, T's, were found to spell Paramount once or twice. The person finding the word the greatest number of times in any one ad received three tickets to "The Affairs of Anatol"; the person finding the second number, two tickets; third greatest, one ticket. This meant six admissions to every merchant.

Every boy and girl who could enter the contest with a straight face did so, and some people bought the paper and got out their pad and pencil surreptitiously. The interest was universal.

Another stunt arranged for the 12-star picture was an impersonation contest among youngster's 12 years old. The tots best impersonating one of the twelve "Anatol" stars were price winners of cash prizes of $5, $3 and $2. The contest was a feature of the Allegheny Valley Chamber of Commerce exhibit, and every newspaper in-and-around the section endorsed it.

"Doll Show" for "Broken Doll" Showing

The accompanying cut shows some of the dolls received as admissions to a special showing of "A Broken Doll" when this picture played the Palace theatre, Hamilton, O.

Managing Director F. S. Meyer as exploitation for "A Broken Doll" offered to admit children who would bring a broken doll to the theatre. The dolls were used as a lobby display but the main exploitation value of the stunt was the word of mouth advertising of the children who hunted far and wide for a broken doll with which to obtain admission to the theatre.

Gersdorf Adapts Home Talent Movie Idea

Phil Geradorf, manager of the Arcade theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., made use of the present local interest in picture production and the possibility that Jacksonville may become a film production center, in his exploitation campaign for "Reputation."

In co-operation with a local department store, Mr. Gersdorf made arrangements to take pictures of the fair sex who entered the store, the pictures to be shown later at the Arcade.

The promoters of the idea found no trouble in locating a cameraman and great interest was aroused in the stunt by announcing it as a method proving that Jacksonville women dress just as stylishly as the women of more metropolitan cities.

The stunt attracted much newspaper publicity. For two hours on successive days the cameramen cranked as various Jacksonville women entered or left the big store. Many of them did not know their pictures were being taken.

The resulting film was shown as an added feature of the Arcade's bill, during the run of "Reputation" and caused great comment. The theatre management voiced the opinion that hundreds of persons came to the theatre as a direct result of the local pictures. The stunt cost very little.

Tynes Has Special Showing on "Peck's Bad Boy"

A Saturday morning's children's matinee previous to the opening performance of "Peck's Bad Boy" was one of the methods used by Manager Fred N. Tynes of the Columbia theatre, Portsmouth, O., to acquaint the local fans of the merits of the Coogan feature.

Mr. Tynes also purchased a dozen Jackie Coogan dolls which were given away during the show.

Fine "Old Nest" Campaign

Davis's Novel Stunts Get Big Business For Crystal Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa

MANAGER WALTER F. DAVIS, of the Crystal theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, used an original lobby stunt as exploitation for his showing of "The Old Nest."

A local druggist installed a dressing table and supplied an atomizer, bottle of toilet water, powder boxes and powder puffs and other beautifying accessories. A card read: "If you cried, powder up. Hanson & Hanson, Druggists." Other cards advertised the different toilet articles displayed. Many women stopped to powder their noses and arrange their hair.

At another table sat a typist, with paper in typewriter ready to write letters from dictation. Stamps and envelopes were on the table; also a card reading: "Let our girl send a letter home to mother for you."

The lobby also contained a telegraph outfit, a uniformed messenger boy and a telephone. A card here read: "If your folks live out of town, wire them. If they live in town, 'phone them." Many messages were sent by both telegraph and telephone.

A six-sheet cut-out swung from the ceiling of the lobby just over the box office, with a nest effect built out of straw and wire. Under the canopy was a tree branch about five inches in diameter and eight feet long. Built in the fork of this was a nest about thirty inches in diameter, made of straw and wire. Unusual newspaper advertising, both in quality and in amount, was done.

For a prologue Mr. Davis built a fireplace about the size of a one-sheet and a cut-out of the mother's face above it. A fire effect was obtained by the use of red ribbons, colored lights and an electric fan. This was placed in the centre of the stage, and as the green plush curtains were parted just sufficiently so that every one in the house could see it, a boy ten years old sang the chorus of "My Mammy" off stage. For an encore the curtains were closed and the boy stepped out on the stage and repeated the chorus.

During the action of the drama, a soprano sang off stage "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." As the children gathered about the mother in the final few feet of "The Old Nest," the singer rendered "Home, Sweet Home." The presentation proved very effective. Business started off big and kept mounting at every performance.

Franklin Gives "Three Musketeers" Fine Presentation

With a novel prologue, Harold B. Franklin the past week succeeded in putting his audience at Shea's Hippodrome in receptive mood for the feature of the week, "The Three Musketeers."

James Parker Coombs, arrayed in colorful French court costume of the period in which the Dumas novel is laid, recited a stirring number, telling of the bravery of the "Knights of Old."

The symphony orchestra accompanied the recitation with an appropriate number. Following the prologue, "If I Were King," Adams' dainty overture, was given by the orchestra.

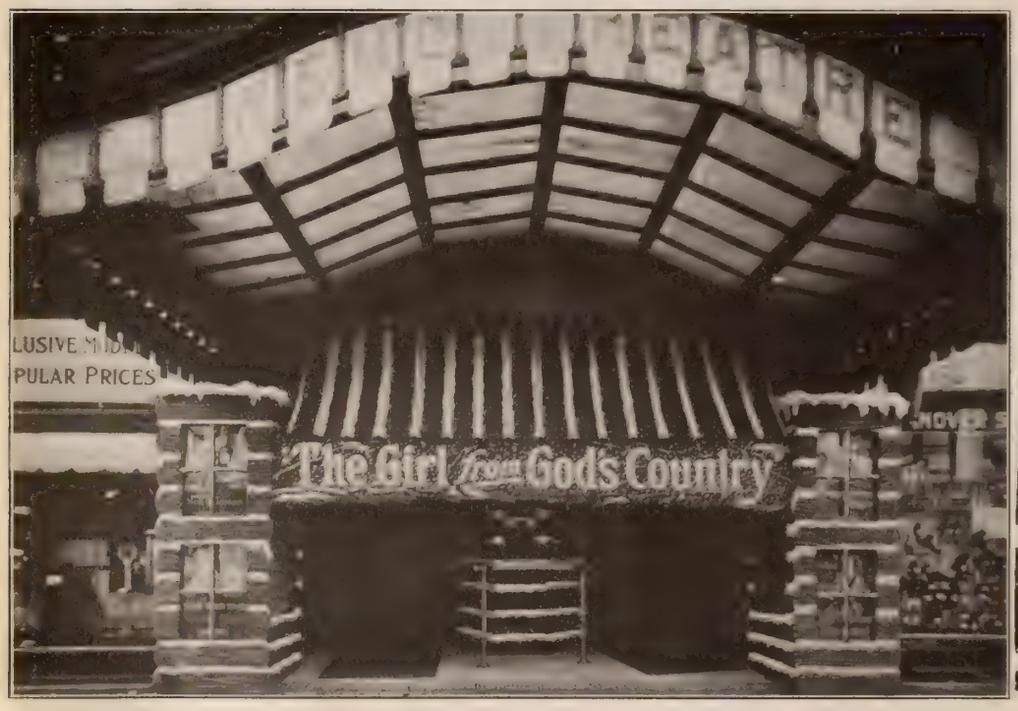
Schools Center of Exploitation Attack

Several hundred cheaply printed handbills announcing an essay contest for "Life," were distributed among the public schools in the neighborhood of the Gould theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., and brought such results that F. W. Feri, publicity director, proclaimed it the most profitable stunt ever pulled by the theatre.



The bill asked "What is your idea about "Life," and asked the school children to write 150 words on the subject. There were ten prizes, all of which were theatre passes.

The Gould theatre is a neighborhood playhouse, and William N. Robson, Paramount exploiteer, was called in to help Mr. Feri on the exploitation. They decided that the source of the word-of-mouth advertising should be the schools of the neighborhood. The kids fell for the proposition and business flourished.

Find the Key Stunt Used Once Again

Manager Kistler of the Strand theatre, Gaffney, S. C., had good results in exploiting "The Devil's Passkey" with a contest in which prizes were offered for those who found keys which had been secretly placed with local business men.

One merchant from whom Mr. Kistler had often tried to obtain window space for Strand advertising, to avoid answering the questions of the competitors in the contest who were canvassing the town, placed a big card in his window stating that he had none of the keys.

Bleich Theatre Gives Special Showing for Local Societies

A private showing for public officials, heads of educational, civic and social organizations was one of the exploitation mediums used for the engagement of "Man, Woman, Marriage," playing recently at the Bleich theatre, Owensboro, Ky.

A musical program was presented with the picture the following Thursday morning, the showing starting 10 o'clock. Of the number invited about 75 per cent attended. At the close of the picture Manager Bamberger asked for opinions on the picture. A few of the best opinions were used on slides on the screen for the week preceding the showing of the picture, and they were used the Sunday before the showing in the Sunday splash in the local papers.

For the regular showing a prologue, in which a local reader attired as a friar gave a recitation as suggested by the producers' press sheet, was staged.

Hursey Ties Up with Fair Association

Manager Hursey, now back at the Imperial theatre, Columbia, S. C., put thru one of the broadest publicity stunts ever attempted in South Carolina when he tied up with the State Fair Association. By a strong personal letter to the President of the Association, he suggested connecting his theatre publicity with their state-wide efforts, as everyone coming there for Fair Week wanted to know good theatre attractions. As a result, he received permission to place 70 three-sheets on "Experience" beside the Fair 24 sheets, with no extra cost, simply supplied the paper. As the whole state was covered this way, the thousands of Carolinas at the Fair all knew about "Experience" and immense business resulted.

Cowles Plans Big "Old Nest" Campaign

In exploiting "The Old Nest," Manager A. C. Cowles, of the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., availed himself of a red-hot political city campaign thus giving his picture publicity it could not otherwise have attained. He addressed an open letter, in the form of a quarter-page, bold type ad, to the mayor of Spartanburg, complimenting the executive upon his excellent administration, one of the achievements of which had been making the town a better place in which to live. The letter suggested that the mayor could acquire more intimate knowledge of home-making if he would avail himself of the opportunity to see "The Old Nest" at the Rex. The publication of this letter in the very midst of a seething campaign for the mayoralty proved a ten-strike for Mr. Cowles.

In his lobby display for the picture Mr. Cowles used a cozy cottage with rustic settings. In the background several oak trees provided the rural atmosphere, while in the foreground were placed real peach trees, covered with artificial blossoms that were remarkably realistic. Among the branches of the peach trees Mr. Cowles placed real birds' nests, some of which contained eggs, and amid the branches were perched small birds in natural postures. Ferns, grasses, etc., gave the display a truly rustic appearance. A bird cage containing a canary was hung on the veranda of the cottage, while roses entwined in the lattice-work and a chair on the veranda gave the cottage a home-like aspect.

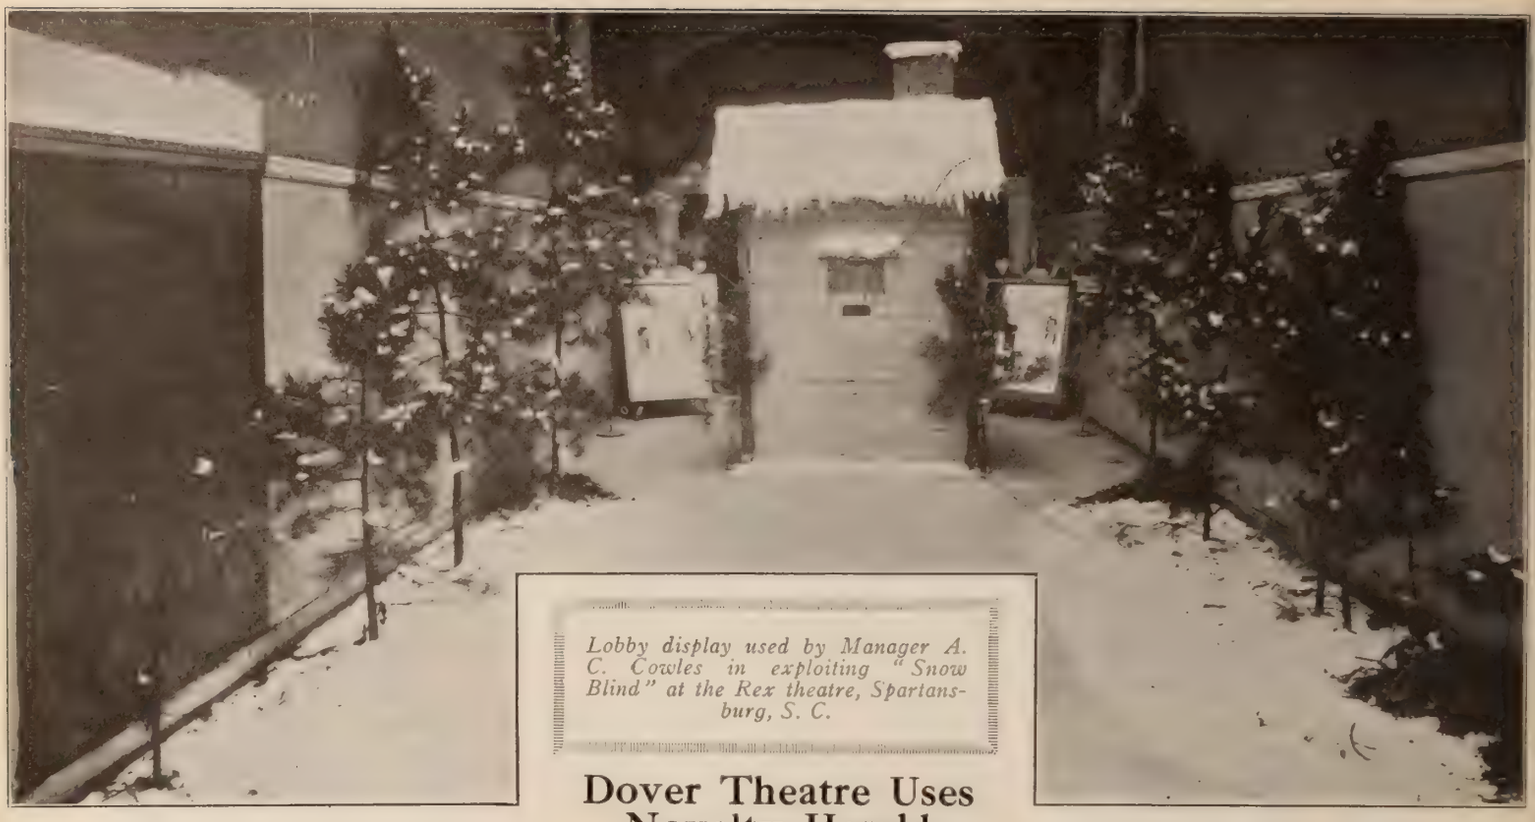
The lobby display secured a quarter-column news story in a local daily unsolicited, and "The Old Nest" made such a heart appeal to the local post of Veterans of Foreign Wars that its officers wrote a laudatory letter to the editor of a local daily on behalf of Mr. Cowles. This letter formed the inspiration for an editorial for "The Old Nest," and the seating capacity of the Rex proved incapable of accommodating the people who vied for seats.

Grauman's Prologue Another Novelty

Another of Sid Grauman's prologue numbers to be staged at the Grauman theatre, Los Angeles, was that originated for the showing of "The Case of Becky."

A novel effect was obtained by running off a part of the first reel of the photoplay, then raising the screen suddenly and cutting directly into the prologue on the stage. The setting portrayed a characteristic line of side-shows along the circus mid-way. A leather-lunged orator, who extolled the merits of each show to a stage audience of twenty or more, finally introduced "Balzamo," the hypnotist, after a juggling clown, a snake dancer and a hula dancer had displayed their abilities. "Balzamo" hypnotized a girl in the stage audience, and at the suggestion of the crowd there, compelled her to sing a popular song. The lights were lowered and at the finish "Balzamo" entered the door of a gypsy wagon on the stage. At this juncture, the screen was lowered and the picture resumed, showing the hypnotist entering a gypsy wagon, just as if he had walked into the photoplay through the wagon door from the stage.

Cowles Builds Realistic Lobby Front



One of the most realistic lobby displays yet conceived by Manager A. C. Cowles, of the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., was used in exploiting "Snow Blind." Ingenious use of ordinary salt, well pulverized, and a small quantity of mica gave Mr. Cowles two small snow-drifts, in which he placed several small pine trees. On these pines were tossed bits of cotton, upon which tiny bits of mica had been laid in order to furnish the glistening effect necessary to perfect realism.

The ticket booth was surrounded with walls of plain boards, and cotton, covered with small pieces of mica, was placed on the roof, the chimney and above the window through which the ticket seller was visible.

With electric lights beaming down upon this display at night, the effect was startlingly realistic. Spartanburg was experiencing at the time its first chilly weather, and with the sky overcast with clouds, the fake snow in front of the Rex made a big hit with the youngsters. "Snow Blind" went over big through this display, which entailed practically no expense.

Novelty Lobby Decorations Originated by Schmidt

Manager George Schmidt, of the Strand theatre, Atlanta, has recently assumed charge of the Vaudette theatre, in the same city. But he is demonstrating that he can make two theatres hum, just as easily as one.

For the week's run of "The Girl from God's Country" he arranged a lobby at the Strand thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of the picture.

Hanging near the top of the rather high lobby of the Strand was a good-sized wooden aeroplane. From this plane swung a rope-ladder, from which dangled a cut-out of Nell Shipman, the picture's star. Apparently the girl was changing from one aeroplane to another, and a tiny motor hidden in the wooden aeroplane made a most convincing noise, which served the double purpose of adding to the sincerity of the lobby, and to attract the attention of passersby.

Dover Theatre Uses Novelty Herald

Manager R. F. Woodhull of the Baker theatre, Dover, N. J., is responsible for a novelty herald stunt that set the whole town to talking. He printed five hundred cards of each of the twelve stars in "The Affairs of Anatol." He divided each card in two so that the cut went through the center of the star's face. He kept all 500 of one side but destroyed all but five of the other. Any persons mating the sides of the cards received two free tickets to the theatre. The idea was suggested and executed by Fred V. Greene, Jr., Paramount exploiter from the New York exchange.

The distribution took place in the schools and very few of the sixty possible free ticket holders failed to claim their rewards. The interest stirred up worked its way through the state to Perth Amboy, N. J., where Manager Louis Rosenblatt of the Lyceum theatre is trying the same stunt with "Experience." Greene so designed the cards that each half bore the title of the picture and the place and date of the run.

Fashion Show Presented at Dallas, Texas

With special musical setting by Don Albert, conductor of the Palace Theatre Symphony Orchestra, at Dallas, Texas, a fashion promenade recently took the place of the customary Palace prologue. An elaborate stage setting was arranged and a long runway extended back into the center of the house, on which the models paraded.

More than $400,000 worth of garments were displayed by fourteen models, beautiful of feature and form, who were specially engaged for the occasion. On Wednesday there was a special matinee for ladies only at which special creations in lingerie and other intimate bits of feminine attire were displayed. A complete bride's trousseau was also shown, together with going away gowns and habits.

The promenade and fashion bazar was a tremendous success, and most everybody in Dallas had a look in before the week ended.

Snipes Best Location in Town During World Series

Just under the electric base-ball player operated by the Loganport, Ind., Morning Press during the World's Series was a sign reading: "After the Last Man Is Out Step Into the Colonial Theatre and See a Good Paramount Picture."

This was Manager H. R. Byerly's idea of the best location in town and the sign stared a thousand people in the face every afternoon during the diamond classic in far-off New York. Oscar Kantner, Paramount exploiteer from Indianapolis, helped tie up the newspaper.

Klu Klux Teasers Work Well

Novel Exploitation for "Three Musketeers" Put Over by Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

THE Klu Klux Klan organization, which has received a lot of publicity in the last few weeks, has been used as a background for a motion picture teaser campaign with good results. The curiosity concerning this secret body helped put over the exceptionally successful stunt in Atlanta, Ga., for "The Three Musketeers," playing last week at the Howard theatre.

Atlanta being the home town of the Imperial Wizard, and other high officials of the K. K. K. and the seat of the government, quite naturally anything mysterious and seeming to point to that organization gets a lot of attention. So a clever advertising man conceived the idea of running a series of little two-line readers in the Atlanta newspapers, using the famous line, "All for one, and one for all," from Dumas' immortal work, to stir up advance interest in "The Three Musketeers." The scheme worked beyond his fondest hopes.

The slogan was set in six-point boldfaced uppercase, with the sub-line in six-point light face. The little ads were scattered throughout the paper and the copy changed daily. They ran as follows:

ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(The best rule when danger threatens)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(If it comes, let it be now)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(It is an hour for the fearless)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(For one to arrive, four must start)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(Atlanta will see the struggle)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(The foe is powerful, crafty, resourceful)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(A woman in peril must be saved)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(Ask your next friend for the clew)
ALL FOR ONE, ONE FOR ALL
(The answer is not far to seek)

Then on the tenth day the slogan "All for One, One for All," was run prominently in the display advertising announcing the coming of "The Three Musketeers."

Ballyhoo in Circus Parade Shares Honors with Elephants

"Peck's Bad Boy" was exploited in a very original manner by the manager of the A-Muse-U theatre at Clinto, Iowa.

The bally-ho was a noticeable part of the Sells-Floto circus street parade. The attention it attracted from the grown-ups as well as the kids was second to no other feature of the big parade, not even excepting the elephants and clowns. And it takes good exploitation to outshine a circus clown.

The A-Muse-U has not committed matrimony nor been divorced, but it has changed its name and henceforth will be known as the Rialto.

Announce Booking Plans for Theodora

Owing to the success of Goldwyn's screen spectacle, "Theodora" at the Astor theatre, and the demand from all parts of the country for bookings of this Italian screen offering, Goldwyn has announced the formation of a road booking department to handle the screen presentation of "Theodora" in legitimate theatres throughout the country. Goldwyn announced the engagement of Jack Welsh, for many years gneral manager of the firm of Selwyn & Co., who, by a mutual arrangement between Goldwyn and Archie Selwyn, will become general manager of the Goldwyn booking agency. Goldwyn also announced that the special engagement of William A. Page as publicity director for "Theodora," had been extended indefinitely, so that the national campaign and the exploitation of "Theodora" throughout the country will be under Mr. Page's direction.

The first act of Mr. Welsh in taking charge of the Goldwyn booking department yesterday, was to lay out routes for ten companies.

Interest in New Company

Announcement of Second National Corp. Results in Many Inquiries

CONSIDERABLE interest in motion picture circles, especially among independent exchangemen, was aroused this week by the announcement which emanated from Second National Pictures Corporation, and which conveyed to the industry in general and to the independent exchangeman in particular news of the company's formation and its avowed intention of effecting a gigantic merger of producer and distributor in a mutualized organization.

Following the release of its initial advertisement, the text of which made plain the company's purpose and policy, the Second National Fictures Corporation became the recipient of a mass of messages from motion picture people in almost every section of the country. Motion picture producers, distributors and exhibitors, it is declared were represented in the veritable barrage of mail and telegrams the content of which was chiefly divided among congratulatory messages and inquiries with respect to service.

It is interesting to note that among the many communications received by the Second National Pictures Corporation, many were from representative distributors in various sections of the country. These exchangemen, according to their messages, had been attracted by the wholesome intent of the initial advertisement, and had written to the company not alone to congratulate its officers upon the formation of such a practical distributing unit, but also, if possible, to participate in an organization in which producer and distributor would share on the basis of mutual investment and profit.

Mr. Bernard Levey Vice President and General Manager of Second National Pictures Corporation, commenting upon the deluge of messages which had been received, said among other things that the felicitations from independent exchangemen were an indication in some measure that the administrative policy announced the week before had met with a responsive chord among many film folk.

Novel Stunts Boost 'Tarzan'

Independent Exchanges Exploit Serial and Get Unusual Results

THE various exchanges which are distributing "Adventures of Tarzan" throughout the United States are backing this serial up with a diversified series of exploitation "stunts," according to Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation.

Samuel Spitzer of Reelcraft Film Exchange, Chicago, distributing the serial in Northern Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana has purchased three limousine automobiles for these three states, which have been decorated on the bodies with paintings of the various striking scenes from the production. The color scheme is green and gold. The salesmen using these cars to visit exhibitors leave the automobiles in charge of a chauffeur garbed in an ape skin and head. A live monkey is also carried in the car. The crowd which gathers in front of the theatre serves as an excellent "ballyhoo" to advertise "Adventures of Tarzan."

In Pittsburgh and its surrounding territory A. A. Weiland is exploiting the Elmo Lincoln vehicle through the use of a motion picture "stunt." A special camera man photographs the audiences entering the various theatres presenting the serial and announcement is made that the film will be shown in these same houses the following day. These movies are made from an auto decorated with advertisements of the serial and theatre. Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia, controlling "Adventures of Tarzan" for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey is exploiting this production by the use of bill posters made up as Elmo Lincoln in the character of Tarzan of the apes. In the prominent centers of Philadelphia these novel workmen post twenty-four sheets advertising the serial, attracting considerable attention from passersby.

Grace Davison to Make Personal Appearances

Grace Davison, popular star of the J. G. Pictures, will make a number of personal appearances in New York and Brooklyn in connection with the showing of her picture "Love, Hate and a Woman," an Arrow release. This is the first of a series of four pictures which are being made for Arrow and distributed in New York by I. E. Chadwick's hustling organization, the Merit Film Company.

"Judgment" Is Not a Sequel to "Deception"

MILTON C. WORK, president of World Film, is authority for the statement that his company's feature, "Judgment," was not produced as a sequel to "Deception," "Judgment!" is a production complete in itself, and it has no connection with and is in no sense a sequel to nor continuation of any other picture, states Mr. Work, in correcting the wrongful impression.

"How the impression could have been obtained that 'Judgment' is a sequel to or is in any way connected with any other picture, I am at a loss to understand," said Mr. Work recently. "It is true that some reviewers have compared 'Judgment' with 'Deception,' which is only natural as both deal with events in English history—but there the similarity ends. The pictures were made in different European localities, by different directors, with different actors. 'Deception' tells a narrative type of story which covers practically all of the events in the life of Henry VIII. 'Judgment,' on the other hand, has its scenes laid in England during the reign of Mary Tudor, and tells a dramatically plotted story of events occurring during one month only of 'Bloody Mary's' tempestuous life."

Personnel of Agency is Changed

Sidney C. Davidson announces the withdrawal of his partner Jules J. Paglin from the Paglin-Davidson Agency and the changing of the name of the agency to the Weshner-Davidson Agency. Mr. Paglin is going to New Orleans to enter the advertising business and his position will be filled by Mr. David Weshner, formerly advertising manager of the Motion Picture Post and treasurer of the Tanney Printing and Publishing Corporation.

Mr. Weshner has had five years of advertising and publicity experience. With the change in the personnel of the organization Mr. Davidson announces their intention of expansion. They recently increased their art staff and the organization is now fully equipped to render a complete service for the state right market as well as all the other branches of the industry.

An Appropriate Subject for Armistice Week

A FASCINATING reel that is of especial timeliness during Armistice Week is Kineto's "The Victory Pageants," a Kineto Review that takes in the victory's enthusiasm of London, Paris and New York.

It pictures with elaborate detail the great welcome given to the heroes who fought and helped win the war. Its completeness is particularly noteworthy; it tells the whole story of what the news reels used to give the veriest hint of.

"Victory Pageants" begins in London. It shows the statue of Admiral Nelson gazing down upon the crowds of Trafalgar Square, and then the representatives of the Allied forces passing the Admiralty Arch in the Mall.

The great London peace pageant is viewed from the top of Buckingham Palace, the Mall and Queen Victoria Memorial. Then in Paris on Bastile Day, 1919, one sees their peace pageant passing through the Arc de Triomphe down the Champs Elysees and the Place de Concorde, and then home in New York our own Victory Pageant on Fifth avenue with General Pershing again at the head of the procession.

Burr Sees Slapstick's Wane

Situation Comedies Sought by Public, Says Producer

THAT the crude slapstick comedy is slowly but surely on the wane in the public's favor is the belief of C. C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributors and producer of the Johnny Hines "Torchy" Comedies, who has just recently returned from a tour of the country during which he studied the conditions in the field as well as estimating the public demand.

"To-day," says Mr. Burr, "the average exhibitor with the exception of the very small houses, wants the clean, fast situation comedy. They no longer want the slapstick comedy that has as its only recommendation the ability of the star to make a mess with a batch of pies or to throw one another about in a vulgar manner. The public soon tired of that sort of comedy, and with the continual development of the situation comedy with an interesting story and plenty of good gags which created laughs they have turned to this finer and more cultured form of pictures."

"This change," states Burr, "in the development of the comedy, did not come out in a day. It has taken two years of hard work and effort on the part of the producers. I began two years ago to make situation comedies with Johnny Hines, to be taken from the stories by Sewell Ford. These Torchy stories had all the elements of a good amusing plot and were humorous in their situations. At that time the slapstick comedy being in vogue, it was very hard for me to get my product on the market. The exchangemen were calling for slapstick. Finally they began to see the merit of the situation comedy, and today the Torchy Comedies stand at the top of the ladder in the comedy field.

"In two years I have made Sewell Ford, Torchy Comedies and Johnny Hines household names and they are all now endeared in the hearts of the public. As a result of my faith in the public's desire for clean, fast comedies with good stories, today finds the entire comedy market turning to that field. Larry Semon, Buster Keaton and Harold Lloyd, as well as Johnny Hines, are all leaders in their field in this particular brand of comedy. Johnny Hines today stands in the same position as all the other comedy kings and his earning power and popularity equal them also.

"I am now launching the third of the series of Torchy Comedies. It is my aim to continue along the same lines in the careful selection of stories, using clean-cut gags and creating plenty of laughs. I hope also to raise the level of the situation comedy to an even higher status, so that the 'Torchy Comedies' will represent the finest and best in the comedy world today just as they have always sought to be in the past."

Many Sales Reported by Dominant

Considerable activity in sales has been evidenced in the state right market with the announcement of further sales by the Dominant Pictures Corporation. Jacques Kopfstein of Dominant has sold the rights for "Lonely Heart" and "Sunshine Harbor" to the following exchanges: "Lonely Heart" to Cosmopolitan of Boston for New England; Merit of Detroit for Michigan; First National of Dallas for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; Pierce Films of New Orleans for Louisiana and Mississippi, and "Sunshine Harbor" to Pierce Films of New Orleans for Louisianna and Mississippi.

"Message from Mars" Used by Church

Sermons in celluloid have become a fixture in the services of several of the Los Angeles churches, a recent newspaper canvass of the city reveals. Last Sunday nine of the more prominent churches in the Californian city showed motion pictures as dramatic supplements to the text.

Metro's production, "A Message from Mars," starring Bert Lytell, was exhibited in four places of worship; Plymouth Church, the First Congregational Church, the Pilgrim Church, and the Unitarian Church in Venice, near Los Angeles. It was selected for its preachment against the vice of selfishness.

Sells Country in Record Time

Warner Feature Finds Ready Buyers Among Independents

TWO outstanding features are connected with Warner Brothers latest production, "Why Girls Leave Home" produced by Harry Rapf and directed by William Nigh. More than three-fourths of the country has been sold to state-rights buyers within the short period of three weeks; over 150 first run bookings with prominent showmen have been secured and, according to report, many inquiries are being received for play dates from practically every section of the country.

These bookings are said by Warner to be due to the fact that established precedents have been smashed wherever the picture has been shown, and the pulling power of the title furnishing, as it does, an unusual opportunity for a strong publicity and exploitation campaign.

Within three weeks after Warner Brothers announced the selling of "Why Girls Leave Home," on a state rights basis more than three-fourth of the country was sold. This is declared to establish a precedent in the annals of state-righting and incidentally furnishes an insight into the magnitude of the production. Practically every theatre that has thus far played the picture has been more than satisfied with the results obtained, and it is said that the police reserves had to be called in order to quell the mobs that flocked to Poli's Palace Theatre, Hartford, Conn..

C. B. C. Makes Important Sales

Important sales were completed this week by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation on various products which that company is releasing to the state rights market.

Arrangements were consummated between that company and the Federated Film Exchange of Omaha, whereby the Omaha corporation takes over for its territory three products which are handled by C. B. C—namely, the series of two-reel Westerns, released under the name Star Ranch Westerns, "Dangerous Love," and the first eight of this season's output of the two-reel Hallroom Boys Comedies.

The Federated Film Exchange of Baltimore has also purchased rights to "Dangerous Love."

"Should a Wife Work?" Has Notable Cast

According to the veteran director, Horace G. Plimpton, a well chosen cast is said to help make "Should A Wife Work?", the problem photoplay announced by J. W. Film Corporation as one of a series of four society dramas, one of the truly worth-while pictures of the season. The story, as the title indicates, deals with one of the greatest problems facing the modern family, and to Edith Stockton, Louis Kimball, Alice Lowe and Stuart Robson fall the task of driving home some vital points.

"Miss Stockton," said Mr. Plimpton, "came well prepared for the role from a series of screen successes produced by some of the leading motion picture companies. Louis Kimball, who plays opposite Miss Stockton in this picture, has been steadily carving for himself a niche in the motion picture art's Hall of Fame, and as David Locke, the young inventor in "Should A Wife Work?" many say he has made his place secure. For several years Stuart Robson has been proving himself an actor of note and does some convincing acting in the role of the lawyer in the drama. In his characterization he is ably supported by Alice Lowe as the wife who chafes under the petty sacrifices marriage has demanded of her; the more so because of her craving for a career, for which she finally deserts her family and home. Others prominent in the cast are Walter McElwin, Elinor Curtis and Harry Mowbray."

Exhibitors Praise Kineto Prints

The Kineto Company of America is in receipt of frequent comments on the part of exhibitors who have a good word to say for the excellent quality of printing of Kineto Reviews and Charles Urban's Movie Chats.

The Kineto Company has one of the finest film laboratories in the world and it is presided over by Stanley Hollebone, whose experience in laboratory work has been gained on both sides of the Atlantic. All work on Kineto Reviews and the Movie Chats is done in the Kineto organization.

Why "His Nibs" Went to Independents

FOLLOWING the announcement of the sale of Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs" to "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc., Alexander Beyfuss, vice president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, the producer explained why this feature production was sold to the independent field, in view of the fact that it was known many of the national distributors were desirous of releasing it.

"'His Nibs' has been conceded by everyone, including the exploitation experts on every trade journal, to have absolutely unlimited exploitation opportunities," says Mr. Beyfuss. "The proper channel through which this picture may be distributed, and take full advantage of this essential quality, is the market that will give the picture individual attention. No program at this time will do it; it has remained for the independent market, in which there is a shortage of good pictures, to exploit a production to the limit of its possibilities."

Rialto Gets Rights for Funny Face Comedies

Lou Rogers, president of the Rialto Productions, Inc., has secured the world's rights on 12 Funny Face Comedies which they will market on the State Right plan. These comedies are and have been playing at the Criterion, Rialto and Rivoli theatres and are being featured by Dr. Riesenfeld.

Graphic Film Offers Three Features

Three new features are now being offered to the state right market under the banner of the Graphic Films Ivan Abrahamson's company. They include "The Fountain of Youth," "Mother Eternal" and "The Bride's Confession." They are all being prepared for state right distribution and will be released this week.

The latest feature, "The Bride's Confession," has as its star Rita Jolivet the star of Theodora, the recent Goldwyn release. "The Bride's Confession" is a striking story with a modern theme and is now being recut by Mr. Abrahamson in order to give it the desired speed.

Warner Exploiteer Aids Stanley Showing

Lon Young, the Warner Brothers' publicity and exploitation man, left last week for Philadelphia, the first stop of a three-week exploitation tour, to put over the Warner feature, "Why Girls Leave Home," for the Stanley Company of America, in many of their prominent theatres.

Mr. Young will also visit Syracuse, Buffalo and Utica and wind up his campaign in Chicago. Mr. Young was formerly on the exploitation staff of Selznick Pictures.

Deal Consummated on "Jungle Adventures"

FROM the headquarters of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager, issues a statement to the effect that the details of a contract for the distribution of Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" are being gone into as the present issue of this publication is preparing for the press.

All indications point to the successful consummation of the deal in time for the announcing of the distribution channels to be published in this issue, the facts concerning which will be found on another page.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes" Has Rapid Turnover

C. C. BURR, president of Affiliated Distributors, Inc., has announced that with the exception of two territories, negotiations for which are now pending, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," has been completely closed in point of sales. A survey of the sales campaign, as announced at the Affiliated office, shows a record as surprising in these times as it is indicative of the reception of a certain type of picture.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes," the Affiliated Distributor's feature starring Johnnny Hines, has accomplished one of the few rapid turnovers in evidence at this particular period of the industry, according to reports of C. C. Burr. With the territory already accounted for "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" has figuratively "burned 'em up" throughout the country in a record-breaking campaign that began with a contract before the picture was half finished.

Associated Closes Big Franchise Deal

Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., report the closing of a franchise for the southeastern territory of this country to M. Mitchell of the Federated Films of Atlanta. The series comprised in this sale number twenty-one pictures as follows: Five Chester Bennett productions, starring Jane Novak; Six Scott Dunlap productions, starring Mary Anderson; eight Cliff Smith productions; seven starring Pete Morrison.

In addition to these picture are included "Ghost City" and "The Wolverine," two productions of the big outdoors from well-known published books.

Further Sales Reported on "Tarzan" Serial

The sales for "Adventures of Tarzan" starring Elmo Lincoln are rapidly approaching one hundred per cent. The latest additions to the ranks of Tarzan buyers are Arthur Cohen and Al Kahn. Cohen, as vice-president and general manager of Regal Films, Limited, has purchased "Adventures of Tarzan" for the entire Canadian territory. In the United States Al Kahn, of Federated Film Exchanges of Kansas City and Omaha has bought "Adventures of Tarzan" for Western Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

Ben Wilson Busy With Arrow Productions

JACK HOXIE, Arrow's popular Western Star, has started work on the second picture of the series of six he is making for Arrow under the supervision of Ben Wilson. Neva Gerber has started work on the third of a series of society dramas to be released by Arrow.

Work on "Nan of the North," Arrow's serial, is nearing an end. The scenes are laid in Yellowstone National Park and the company is delighted with the remarkable scenes obtained.

The Ben Wilson studio at Hollywood was the locale for the recent meeting of the members of the Japanese Royal Party now visiting the states. The party, which consisted of their Imperial Highnesses Princes Asa-Akira and Hirotada, Commanding Admiral Hauroku Saito and a troupe of forty officers acting as bodyguards, came to America on the Japanese battleships Yakumo and Idzumo. A magnificent set was prepared for the royalties, and tea was served to them and members of the studio's reception committee.

Title of Hallroom Boy Comedy Is Changed

The title of the Hallroom Boys Comedy in which Sid Smith plays the part of a boxing aspirant, has been changed from "Don't Weaken!" to "Start Something!"

Production on this comedy was completed this week by Harry Cohn, the producer, and it has been received at the New York offices ready for release to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

Further Sales Reported on "Heart of North"

Another important sale was made this week on "The Heart of the North," the feature of the Canadian Northwest produced and States Righted by Joe Brandt and George H. Davis, and directed by Harry Revier.

Arrangements were consummated whereby Pearce Films, Inc., of New Orleans, take over this feature starring Roy Stewart with Louise Lovely, for the territory including Louisiana and Mississippi

Jungle Realism in Selig Serial

473 Animals Available for Export & Import Chapter Play

ONE of the great points of difference between ordinary animal serials and the new jungle episode picture Col. Wm. N. Selig is making for the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., according to a statement from that company, is that the new serial is utilizing the resources of one of the two greatest zoos in the world—the Selig Zoo.

By an actual count of the animals last week, it was learned that there were exactly four hundred and seventy-three jungle beasts available for Director Conway's use. This does not imply that every one of these animals will be used in the new Selig serial but it does give an indication of what the Export & Import Company means when it claims that their forthcoming chapter picture will be the greatest wild animal film ever produced.

Included in the above count are: fifty lions; sixty tigers; ten leopards; thirty leopard cubs; eleven giraffes; thirty-five bears; five sacred cows; a troupe of twenty-six elephants; seven spotted zebras; sixteen chimpanzees; two hundred monkeys; twenty-three wolves. In addition to this, Colonel Selig has his own alligator farm.

Because many of these animals have from time to time been loaned for various acts, Director Conway is having great success in filming unusual stunt scenes with them according to studio reports. "In previous serials," states an official of the Export & Import Film Company," the animal part of the chapter picture was made up of about half a dozen lions, three or four tigers, possibly three elephants and a half dozen monkeys. A little foliage, some 'local color' and the director thought he had a real jungle film.

"One glance at the roster of animals available for our use, in fact right on the lot where we are making the serial, is proof enough that we are going to give the exhibitor the greatest wild animal-jungle film he has ever screened."

Episodes one and two have been completed, according to telegraphic advices from the coast, and are being edited and titled. Work is almost through on episode three. The first three episodes will be shipped to New York to reach here November 1st, so fulfilling original promises made for screening the opening chapters of the new serial.

New Kineto Series Complete

First of "American Authors" Pictures Seen in N. Y.

CHARLES URBAN has just completed a series of motion pictures which is grouped under the general title of "The Great American Authors." The first is on the Strand (New York) theatre's program this week. Its subject is John Greenleaf Whittier.

The entire series comprises twelve of the foremost American authors; each reel has a different famous author as a subject. James Russell Lowell, Washington Irving, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Edgar Allan Poe are some of the dozen names in the series.

Besides their decided educational value, each of the series is interesting from the standpoint of pure entertainment. The theatre audiences gain a clear review of the life of the man they see on the screen; and they also see visualized some of the characters he has made famous.

The reel on Whittier is introduced with one of his most famout stanzas. The place of his birth in Haverhill, Mass., in 1807; "The Haunted Bridge" where he built his first log cabin; the Academy where he worked his way, first as a shoemaker, then as a teacher; the house at Amesbury, Mass., where he lived with his mother and sister.

Thus his life is pictured and his nobility portrayed, and the biography is carried clear through to his burial place at Union Cemetery in Amesbury. Then come the dramatizations of his famous characters. Both "Maud Muller" and "The Barefoot Boy" are beautifully acted in this reel on Whittier.

The entire "Great American Authors" series was directed by James A. Fitzpatrick. Mr. Fitzpatrick has specialized for years in subjects such as these. He directed "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and other pictures of similar classic calibre. He is now engaged in filming a new series for Mr. Urban to be called "Great American Statesmen." In general plan it will be like the Authors' Series.

All of the Authors' series have been edited under the personal direction of Mr. Urban. They will be released as Urban Popular Classics by the Kineto Company of America.

To Distribute "Determination"

Lee - Bradford Buy This Special in Addition to "The Atheist"

THE executive offices of the United States Moving Pictures Corporation advise that they have contracted with the firm of Lee-Bradford, 701 Seventh Avenue, to handle the distribution throughout the world for their feature productions "The Atheist" and "Determination," the latter having been in production for the past year and costing $1,000,000, it is said. The trade has long been waiting for "Determination." This production has received world wide publicity.

James W. Martin and Arthur Lee had no difficulty in closing contracts as soon as Mr. Lee had seen this remarkable production. Mr. Lee has been identified with the motion picture industry for the past 12 years, during the greater part of this time in charge of the Gaumont Company's distribution and business in this country.

F. G. Bradford has also been in the moving picture industry for the past 17 years. He is in Los Angeles at the present time. Mr. Lee was so pleased with "Determination," that he did not wait to communicate with Mr. Bradford, when he learns that they have secured what he believes to be the sensation of the season.

James W. Martin, president of the United States Moving Pictures Corporation, has secured the motion picture rights to the book entitled "The Wives of the Prophet" by Opie Reade, author of "The Kentucky Colonel," which has already been produced in pictures. Casting for this production will be started next week. The production itself should be well under way by the 10th of next month.

"Determination" will be screened for the critics and the press next week.

"Road to Arcady" Star is Beauty Queen

Howard Chandler Christie's choice as the most beautiful girl in the state of New York to represent the state as "Miss New York" in the pageant at Atlantic City recently, Virginia Lee, is the same Virginia Lee so well known to stage and motion picture audiences and the star of the first of the J. W. Film Corporation's society drama series. In "The Road to Arcady," of which Burton King was the director, her beauty is said to show to excellent advantage because of the elaborate gowns she wears in the large reception scenes, and the rich stage settings in which she plays many of her strong emotional scenes.

Special Service Section on

"The Old Oaken Bucket"

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET" is a homespun story without plot complication based on the old song of the same title, with rural atmosphere, children's pranks, heart interest and sentiment, pictorially presented. Its opening titles invite the audience to join in childhood recollections and then scenes that are real old fashioned gems of rural landscape are shown as backgrounds for episodes of incident and hokum.

The first scenes show Joseph Smiley as a successful city business man returning to the scenes of his boyhood and then dreaming over the events that transpired there many years before.

Bobby Connelly, child star of splendid reputation and especially remembered for his performance in "Humoresque" plays the principal role in the childhood episode. He is a typical country boy doing the usual country boy stunts. He fishes and swims, steals apples and his mother's pies, has his chums and boyhood enemies and his childhood sweetheart.

Another episode shows the boy and his "girl" still sweethearts, but a city rival seems to be gaining the girl's favor and the boy closes the old home, his mother having died, and goes to the city.

Years after he returns to find his former sweetheart, the country school teacher and still unmarried. He plays ball with the boys and has a general good time being young in mind if not in body, once again.

The picture was written and directed by May Tully with John La Mond as cameraman. It has been filmed principally out of doors with special care being taken to get unique and really rural locations. The length is 5000 feet.

"Old Oaken Bucket" Is a Heart Interest Picture

THE scenic settings of this picture are one of its many features. See that your exploitation makes the most of the opportunities provided by a feature of this sort, in attracting nature lovers and others who come to the theatre more to see something beautiful than for the dramatic worth of the story.

SELLING THE PICTURE TO THE PUBLIC

SELLING a picture like "The Old Oaken Bucket" is a matter of reminding people forcibly of their own almost forgotten childhood. To do this requires more than stereotyped announcements of the engagement, with players, director, etc. given out in newspaper and billboard advertising.

In the matter of newspaper advertising which is where your exploitation campaign should begin you can not do better than to adapt the trade paper advertising carried last week in the NEWS. In fact these ads can be literally used in framing your newspaper displays. Take the ad appearing on page 2215 of the Oct. 29th issue. Tear the page from the book and then begin by substituting for "I Sat in a Broadway Theatre," "A King of Wall Street" as the catch line. Then in the box where the selling talk begins with "Just on the edge of Times Square" write soomething like the following, "Who spent his childhood days in the country, sat in a Broadway theatre and watched an audience."

This will hitch up all right with the next line in the ad beginning, "Tired faces, bored faces," etc. The next sentence you will have to change to read, "he saw" instead of "I saw." Then the original selling talk will run without change down to the words, "will capture audiences" where a reference to your theatre can be substituted. Then at the bottom where the signature of the Warren Company appears place your own name cut and you are set. A high grade novel ad within the reach of any exhibitor who can get a line cut made.

Likewise the ad on page 2237 can be adapted with even less change. You can use the catch line "How Many Million Times—" and the selling talk down to "They'll love the picture." Here you can substitute "You'll" for "They'll" and "you" for "they" in this line and change the "them" and "their" in the following sentence to "you" and "your." On page 2249 is an ad that needs no changes whatever except the addition of your title line instead of the Warren Corporation.

For a listing of the other numbers on the bill for the playing dates use the "heart" space at the top of the displays.

In any reader notices you use, take the style of composition used in News ads as your guide. Make your sentences live and breathe the spirit of the country. It will probably be well to identify Bobby Connelly as the child actor of "Humoresque" in all your newspaper advertising. The balance of the cast may be given space or not just as you decide according to the popularity they may have with local fans. However it is the opinion of the writer that this picture should be sold as a production.

Giving an idea of the heart interest and rural beauty of "The Old Oaken Bucket," as told in the accompanying special service section

OUTSIDE EXPLOITATION

IT would seem probable any of the firms selling bottled water of any sort would jump at the chance of cooperating in advertising the picture and their product. Window displays in the windows of the concerns, use of such billboard space as they may have and any other advertising ad can be safely asked for.

The opportunity for stunts in this connection is also excellent. Suppose the week previous to the showing of "The Old Oaken Bucket" you arrange in the lobby of the theatre or if cold weather prohibits, in the theatre itself a scenic old fashioned well with a bucket of water which siphons from a bottle hidden from view. Get the Water Company to furnish the water and you furnish collapsible cups on which have been printed something like this: "The Blank Water Company claims its product superior to even that procurable from "The Old Oaken Bucket."

For a lobby display a reproduction of one of the old time well houses usually found where the oaken buckets were used would be suitable and effective. The well itself and the bucket of course should be a part of the display. If you were to use this display a week in advance, posters on the coming show could be placed at the bottom of the "well."

IDEAS FOR PROLOGUES

IN presenting the picture, a prologue in which the scenes of everyone's childhood is brought back in fond recollection, is advised. There are any number of original and inexpensive numbers to be improvised. Old songs should be used and children ought to have a prominent part in them.

Suppose you were to adapt the well house idea to your stage, building the "well house" as a set piece and backing it with a rural landscape and perhaps an old fashioned country farm house as a part of the canvas.

In this atmosphere, gathered around the well, let a group of children who can sing, boys and girls of all ages and diversified character (as to types and characters portrayed) render the old time songs, such as "Seeing Nellie Home," "Jingle Bells," "Just as the Sun Went Down," "Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "When You and I Were Young Maggie," "On the Banks of the Wabash," and of course the "Old Oaken Bucket."

For those who desire to present a more elaborate prologue number the following is submitted:

Provide stage setting showing an old fashioned country home parlor, dressed with hair cloth furniture, square piano, rocking chairs with "what-nots" wood stove, etc. For business described later hang a picture of George and Martha Washington on the back stage wall.

For your players select and costume types for rural people common a quarter of a century ago with the following identified for major parts: The church organist and local authority on music: the local minister, the hostess, the rural dude and cut-up, two stage rubes for speaking parts a male quartette.

With these characters, all but the hostess and the pair identified by the term "two stage rubes," on open your number with an ensemble rendition of some good old melody, leaving your curtain down until well into the first verse of the song. At the close of the song, discover your company grouped on the stage and especially at the piano. Those who are not at the piano applaud the song just ended. The singers find themselves seats about the room.

The two rubes referred to enter and are greeted by the others. They are evidently new arrivals.

Someone inquires—"Late, bean't you?

Answer—Yep. Pigs got in the clover. Zibe and me had to get 'em out. Where do we go?

Someone—Men put their things upstairs in the front room. Women downstairs in the bed room off the kitchen.

Zibe—Well, we're men ain't we Lem?

Lem—You bet. (Hostess enters and greets the two who have been looking at the pictures of George and Martha on wall.)

Zibe—Good likenesses, ain't they Lem?

Lem—You bet.

Zibe—Think her'n 's better 'n his'n don't you Lem?

Lem—You bet.

Zibe—How old was your father when he died? (To hostess.)

Hostess—That ain't a picture of pap—that's George and Martha Washington.

Zibe—Oh. (Exits with hostess and Lem.)

Preacher—Deacon Clark got a letter from his son, Will. Says he's been in the legislature for a year.

An old man—Always knew that boy wan't no good. Caught him in my musk melon patch before he was ten year old. What'd he get sent up fer? (All laugh and several whisper to him and he registers that he understands he has

Players Having Prominent Roles in the Picture

FOLLOWING is a short history of the players having prominent roles in "The Old Oaken Bucket:"

Joseph Smiley, well known as an old Vitagraph star and director plays the leading role as the man of mature years, while Kate Blancke plays the part of his grown-up sweetheart.

The boy he used to be is played by Bobby Connelly, also well known in the old Vitagraph days and recently a very great success in "Humoresque." Bobby Connelly is one of the three best known boys in America.

Paul Kelly, known to picture fans as the leading man for Mary Miles Minter and other stars and to the legitimate stage especially in Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," and more recently in "Honors Are Even," plays the youth. His childhood sweetheart is played by the very clever little Violet Axzell and his childhood sweetheart grown up to a young lady is played by Mary Beth Barnell who at present is one of the principals in the New York success, "The Music Box Revue."

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

TAMPA, FLA.

With the combined orchestras of all of Tampa's theatres as the attraction, the Musicians' Association put on a big dance recently, which was a success in every way.

The Centro Espanol de West Tampa, which means in United States, the Spanish Club of West Tampa, have inaugurated a season of motion picture shows in their Casino theatre, connected with the club. The opening attraction was "Reputation."

The Victory theatre opened their Vaudeville season last week. This theatre plays vaudeville the first four days of the week, and photoplays de luxe, the last three. Manager Cooley had to put out the S. R. O. sign every night.

E. J. Walton, owner of two theatres in Ybor City, the Rivoli and National, will build another. He has purchased the corner of 17th street and 7th avenue. Plans are being drawn for a house of large capacity.

CINCINNATI

William Fox, head of the Fox Film Corporation, entered this city as an exhibitor October 23 with a lease on the Gifts theatre on Vine street for a period of 20 to 30 weeks. Samuel Dembow, personal representative of Mr. Fox, signed a contract with McMahan and Jackson, owners of the Gifts theatre, for 20 weeks, with an option for an additional 10 weeks.

Rudolph Knoepfle, Cincinnati manager for Fox, stated that it was proposed to open with "Over the Hill." The plan is to retain this picture for seven or eight weeks and follow with eight other Fox pictures, including "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," and "The Queen of Sheba." A special orchestra will be provided for the theatre, Mr. Knoepfle said, and an admission price of 50 cents throughout the house will be universal for the period of the lease.

A new distributing company has been organized in this city to handle films made in Jerusalem. The organization is the Geographic Film Company, incorporated at Columbus, Ohio, with $100,000 capital stock, by Albert Krippendorf and James E. Holley. A local office has been opened at 138 West Seventh street.

OKLAHOMA CITY

Three men are now making Texas territory for Educational. J. G. Thornton is in East Texas; G. T. Gibson, from the Atlanta office, is traveling in West Texas; A. M. Wolf, South and Southwest Texas. C. D. Lybe is making Oklahoma out of Oklahoma City.

The Best theatre was opened at Palestine, Texas, last week to pleased capacity business, with "The Sign on the Door," a Norma Talmadge picture, as the opening bill.

According to an arrangement just completed, "The Heart of the North," the big feature of the Canadian Northwest, featuring Louise Lovely and Roy Stewart, has been purchased by the True Film Company at Dallas, Texas, which will distribute the picture in Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas territory.

The S. A. Lynch Southern Enterprise has booked "The Girl from God's Country," featuring Nell Shipman and released by F. B. Warren Corporation to play all their circuits in Oklahoma, Texas, Georgia, the Carolinas, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida.

WESTERN NEW YORK

D. Stewart Parmelee has been appointed assistant manager of the new Loew State theatre, Buffalo. Mr. Parmelee formerly owned the Majestic and Tri-It theatres.

Harry Berns, assistant manager of the Buffalo Universal exchange, has been appointed manager of the Toronto office of the same company. Jim Savage succeeds Mr. Berns at the Buffalo post.

W. C. Rowell, manager of the Buffalo Fox exchange, has resigned. Clayton Sheehan, district manager, expects to announce his successor this week.

There have been some changes in the General Theatres line up. The theatres and managers now stand as follows: Central Park, Harry Dixon; Allendale, Jim Wallingford; Circle, Herman Lorence; Star, O. T. Schroeppel; Marlowe, Jim Foss; Ellen Terry, John Stevens. Billie West will not join the company.

The Koscuiszko theatre on Broadway, near Fillmore, Buffalo, is now being operated by M. Hareski, owner of the Majestic. Pop Petrosky, who formerly managed the house, has not as yet announced his plans for the future.

Joseph Kozanowski, proprietor of the Rivoli theatre, Buffalo, is seriously ill. The Rivoli is being operated by members of the family.

Robert Harris, representing Fred Quimby, is in Buffalo signing up contracts for the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures. He is making his headquarters in the Pathe exchange.

A Get-Together Dinner Dance will soon be held in Buffalo by the F. I. L. M. Club, the Theatre Managers' Association and the western New York unit of the M. P. T. O. A.

Clara Kimball Young will appear in person at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, the week of October 30, according to announcement by Harold B. Franklin, managing director.

Charles Babcock of the Babcock theatre, Wellsville, N. Y., should feel good these days. The town board has passed an ordinance permitting the showing of motion pictures on Sunday after 2 P. M.

KANSAS CITY

No effort is being spared by Kansas exhibitors to make "Exhibitors' Days," November 2 and 3, one of the most successful events ever held in the Sunflower state. One-half the profits of each exhibitor on the above mentioned dates will go to the treasury of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas for the maintenance of the organization. A 100 per cent attendance at each of the meetings to be held in the eight congressional districts is anticipated. Special notices of the meetings have been sent to each exhibitor in Kansas by M. Van Praag, president of the state organization.

Space on the sixth floor of the Film building in Kansas City has been leased by the Hodkinson exchange and will be occupied about November 1, according to Joe Bloom, Midwest division supervisor of Hodkinson exchanges.

The Metro Pictures Corporation Kansas City branch moved into its new quarters at 1704-6 Wyandotte street last week. The new quarters are equipped in such a manner that the best of service is available to exhibitors at all times.

Lee Miller, former booker for the Kansas City Select office, has been appointed road representative for that company, while F. E. Hendon, formerly of the Dallas, Texas, office, will succeed him as booker.

B. N. Brinch, general manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was in Kansas City last week, making a tour of the exchanges and arranging the opening of several new offices in the territory.

Several new changes in the management and ownership of theatres in the Kansas City district have taken place in the last few days. The theatres and the new managers are:

Tom Henneberry, Star theatre, Nevada, Mo.; Roy Kentz, Orpheum theatre, Parsons, Kas.; R. O. Thorpe, Majestic theatre, Liberal, Kas.; C. K. Mason, Royal theatre, Newton, Kas.; F. A. Spack, Auditorium theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; E. E. Divinia, Opera House, Breckenridge, Mo.

MICHIGAN

Charles Adams, manager of the Drury Lane theatre, Detroit, is leaving to manage the Strand theatre, Toledo. He will be succeeded by Phil Charnas, former manager of the Orpheum, Benton Harbor.

Aroused because of an agitation recently caused in Grand Rapids by the board of censors there in cutting parts of a legitimate show, Furniture City citizens met last week to demand a new board to be composed of more "broad-minded citizens."

The opening of the new Tuxedo theatre, Hamilton Boulevard and Tuxedo avenue, has been postponed one week. The opening will be held Sunday, October 30. Thomas D. Ealand, former manager for Charles H. Miles' theatre, is to be general manager.

Harry Scott, manager of Associated First National, Detroit exchange, is in West Baden, Ind., for a few days' vacation. J. V. Allan is in charge during his absence.

Yeggmen blew another Detroit theatre safe last week, this time visiting the theatre of John O'Dell, staying over night after the last show and getting away with about $500.

"Over the Hill" closed a seven-weeks' run in the Fox-Washington, Saturday, October 20, and was succeeded by "Way Down East," which will run two weeks.

CLEVELAND

Motion picture exhibitors of Cleveland and the northern Ohio territory are preparing for a possible tie-up of the railroads. They have arranged with all motor truck deliveries for film transportation throughout the state. It is planned to run one line from Cleveland direct to Toledo, another from Cleveland to Columbus with relays, and a third from Cleveland to Youngstown with a relay to East Liverpool. Exhibitors are not in the least worried by threats of a railroad strike as there are enough films on hand at the main centers to keep the small towns supplied for a long time.

Elmer R. Pearson, general sales manager for Pathe, spent a day in Cleveland last week going over local matters with local manager Paul Tessier. Pearson, who was acompanied by Mrs. Pearson, was on his way to Detroit.

Max and Joe Shagrin, prominent Youngstown exhibitors, have leased the Park theatre of Youngstown, formerly a Feiber-Shea house, and will show only first-run special feature attractions.

C. R. N. Morris, popularly known as "Battleship" Morris, has returned to the selling end of the film industry after spending several years as manager of the Grand theatre, Lincoln, Illinois. Morris is with the Cleveland Fox exchange.

CANADA

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" bids fair to rival the long-distance run made in Toronto, Ontario, by "Mickey" two years ago. The Metro special played its ninth straight week starting October 24 at Loew's Winter Garden theatre and there was no indication of a let-up in patronage. The record held by "Mickey" consists of 17 straight weeks at the Grand Opera House, Toronto.

Fox's "Over the Hill" rounded out four solid weeks at Allen's downtown theatre on Saturday, October 22, after which it was followed by "Dangerous Curve Ahead" which had been held back because of the lengthened engagement of the Fox special. Advanced prices were charged by the Allens for "Over the Hill."

The official report issued by Eastern Theatres, Limited, Toronto, which operates the largest theatre of any kind in Canada, of finances for the fiscal year ending September 30, indicates what is being done in Canada with regard to the theatre business.

The report shows that the total revenue for the year was $521,021, or an average of more than $10,000 per week. The operating expenses amounted to $379,601, leaving a gross profit of $141,415. Out of this sum was deducted $81,137 for preliminary and organizing expenses, this having been the first year of the theatre depreciation on building and equipment and a certain sum for the Dominion income tax, leaving a net profit of $60,278. Dividends amounting to 7 per cent were paid on the $500,000 preferred stock, leaving a surplus of $25,278, which was carried over. The company's total assets amount to $1,769,136.

Some months ago there was considerable excitement over the decision of the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors to condemn "Way Down East" in its entirety for alleged religious and other reasons. The Griffith production was readily passed in all other Provinces of the Dominion. At this late date, the Quebec censors changed their views regarding the feature, apparently, with the result that it was presented at the Imperial theatre, Montreal, at advanced prices starting October 23.

French Actress Plays in "Leather Pushers"

Mlle. Andree Peyre, daring French aviatrix and screen actress, has been engaged for the leading feminine role in the third episode of "The Leather Pushers," the H. C. Witwer stories, which the Knickerbocker Photoplay Corporation is picturizing. She will play opposite Reginald Denny, who is being starred.

Mlle. Peyre was popular on the screen in France where she appeared with noted stars.

Biggest Theatres Book "A Man's Home"

When Manager Buck opened his new Boulevard Theatre in Baltimore, with "A Man's Home," then giving the first public exhibition of that Ralph Ince production, the volume of bookings on which the Select sales organization has been driving for the past fortnight was inaugurated.

From the list of contracts thus early assembled selection has been made by Sam E. Morris, general manager of Select in charge of distribution, to give exhibitors in various sections of the country an idea of the class and standing of first-run theatres that will show "A Man's Home." The list, as sent out from Mr. Morris' office includes:

Eugene Roth's California theatre, San Francisco, where the Selznick special will have its Pacific Coast premier.

Ascher Brothers' Roosevelt theatre, in the Chicago "Loop" and the entire Ascher Circuit of theatres.

Boston theatre, Boston, where "A Man's Home" will be introduced to the New England territory.

Frank Black's Circuit of "Down East" theatres.

Crandall's Metropolitan theatre, Washington, the entire Crandall Circuit in the National Capitol as well as in Cumberland and Martinsburg.

Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, where "A Man's Home" is to be seen for the first time in the Southwest.

Ben Apple's reopened American theatre, Troy, N. Y.; J. J. Walker's Barcli, Schenectady; J. P. Papayanako's Olympic, Watertown, N. Y.

Frank Wood's Rialto, Sioux City, and George W. Allen, Jr.'s Capitol theatre, New Bedford.

1100 Theatres Booked for Goldwyn Week

RETURNS from Goldwyn's twenty-two branch exchanges on the National Goldwyn Week bookings show that 1,100 theatres are devoting the present week to Goldwyn feature pictures exclusively.

Campaigns for "The Blot"

Des Moines and Topeka Put Over Smashing Copy With Big Results

FOUR and five full column newspaper advertising smashes signalized the opening presentations of Lois Weber's big production "The Blot" in A. H. Blank's Des Moines Theatre and the Cozy Theatre, Topeka. Both cities went after "The Blot" and billed it like a circus, using the largest newspaper copy either city had seen for months. As a result of these two aggressive handlings of one of the season's big productions record-breaking patronage resulted in both cities.

In Topeka the Cozy theatre management had a strong local asset in the fact that Helen Yoder, a Topekan beauty, had a role in Miss Weber's production and the theatre advertising carried a vigorous underline to this effect.

A. G. Stolte, of the A. H. Blank organization, put his own energetic and competent personality behind the Des Moines theatre exploitation, announcing "The Blot" as "the story of a rich man's son who discovers a new outlook on life far better than his old one." Another line sold the sincerity of the picture, calling it "a real chapter out of many lives."

News has been received by the Warren organization, distributors of the Lois Weber productions, that "The Blot" is being shown at the annual conventions of various state teachers associations being held in October or scheduled for November in various states of the Union. Similar significant attention is being given by teachers associations to Charles Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend," also released by Warren.

Keen Interest in "His Nibs"

Hundreds of Inquiries from Exhibitors About Film, Says Exceptional

EVEN prior to announcement of distribution which is made this week by Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general-manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, the exhibitor demand for "His Nibs" has been remarkable, declares a statement from the exceptional Pictures' offers.

From every section of the United States, it is stated, requests have been received from theatre managers for information as to the method of releasing this unique feature production, in which the star plays seven distinct characters for the first time in motion picture history.

As an example of these inquiries the following wire was received from the Palace Theatre, Tulsa, Oklahoma: "Advise my expense distributor His Nibs for Oklahoma."

From J. R. Linn, Crawford Theatre, Carlsbad, New Mexico, this unique message was received by Mr. Sale: "It is now my pleasure to welcome you to the screen and assure you that I will lose no time in showing my patrons 'His Nibs' which I am sure will prove a credit to you and a success to everyone interested."

One of the hundreds of letters containing such proofs of unusual interest is the following:

Wm. Gird Beecroft, the Mifflin Realty Co., Madison, Wisc., writes: "We are interested in the Chic Sale picture 'His Nibs' and shall be glad to have information on same."

Owen Moore Working on Henry Lehrman Comedy

The Selznick studios at Fort Lee, N. J., are active with production. All Summer the forces under Myron Selznick, vice-president in charge of production, were kept busy on the construction of features to fulfill the promise of "Forty from Selznick" during the coming season and there promises to be a continuation of production for an indefinite term in the future.

Just now one of the companies occupying the Selznick stages has Owen Moore as its star in creating the successor to "A Divorce of Convenience," the comedy-drama in which Moore last appeared. Henry Lehrman wrote the new piece and is directing the presentation with Myron Selznick generally supervising the details.

F. B. Warren Features on Opening Bill

THE recent opening of the beautiful new playhouse, the Boulevard, in Baltimore, found two F. B. Warren features in positions of honor on the program. To the Will Bradley feature, "Moongold," which was on the bill of the New York Criterion for six weeks, was given the honor of being the first strip of celluloid to pass through the Boulevard's projection machines. This fantasy was followed by another F. B. Warren picture, "My Barefoot Boy," one of the well known Post Nature Series.

Pathe Names Releases for Week of Oct. 30

PATHE announces its releases for the week of October 30th to be as follows:

"Pistols for Breakfast," presenting Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, and "Snub" Pollard, will introduce the second series of Harold Lloyd one-reel re-issues.

"The Spirit of the Lake" is a two-reel drama starring Tom Santschi. The cast includes Bessie Love, Ruth Stonehouse, Edward Hearn, and Tom Lingham.

"At the Risk of His Neck" is the sixth episode of "Hurricane Hutch," starring Charles Hutchison. The struggle of the hero in the rushing torrents of a flood and the thrilling slide down a rope from a railroad bridge, one hundred fifty feet high, to the mast of a passing schooner are two of the high-spots in the action.

"Fifteen Minutes" is the Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard and Marie Mosquini.

"The Cat and the Monkey" is the title of the "Aesop's Film Fables" releases.

Pathe Review No. 127 includes in its list of subjects "Snow Time in Japan"; Hy Myer's Travelaugh, "All Aboard"; a slow-motion demonstration of sprinting and hammer-throwing, "Doing It Right"; and Pathecolor views of Como, Italy, under the title of "The City of the Lake."

New Vitagraph Branch in Winnipeg

Another link in Vitagraph's long chain on exchanges seems to be attracting attention. This one is in Winnipeg, Canada. The new Vitagraph headquarters are located at Rupert Avenue and Louise Street in Winnipeg. It is one of the big ports of call for exhibitors in that entire section of Canada.

"Hail the Woman" Finished

Its Cast Makes Up the Pre-view Audience at Ince Studio Showing

THOMAS H. INCE decided that the first pre-view of "Hail the Woman," which will soon be released through First National exchanges, was to be witnessed by the members of the cast that had interpreted the drama, and not by the "regular list" of invited guests.

Thus it came about that the members of his cast gathered in the luxurious "Little Theatre" of the Ince Studios. In the cast of "Hail the Woman," Florence Vidor takes the leading part, that of "Judith Beresford," who upsets her bigoted father's philosophy that "Men and their sons come first." Miss Vidor's expressive type of beauty and emotional, powerful acting, qualify her eminently for this vital part.

Beautiful and dainty Madge Bellamy takes the part of "Nan," foriorn, betrayed and deserted girl wife. Theodore Roberts interprets the role of "Oliver Beresford," grim and uncompromising zealot. Roberts' great talent for character roles finds its logical expression in this part.

Lloyd Hughes gives an excellent characterization of weak and vacillating "David Beresford," and a faithful interpretation of the vicious, covetous character of the "odd-jobs man" is given by Tully Marshall. Gertrude Clair is a splendid type of the self-effacing, sweet Mother and Vernon Dent is in the role of bucolic and crude "Joe Hurd" who aspires to Judith's hand. As "Wyndham Gray" playwright and friend of Judith's is Edward Martindel.

Fairbanks Film in Atlanta

"Three Musketeers" Wins Praise of Critics; Capacity Business Done

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS and "The Three Musketeers" have captured Atlanta. The Howard Theatre is giving five performances daily to capacity audiences, with the lobby packed and the street lined with those who cannot get inside, while the newspaper reviews were 100 per cent favorable and gave this great film production the highest praise yet accorded it.

"'The Three Musketeers' is to motion pictures what Il Trovatore is to grand opera," declares the critic for the Atlanta Journal.

"Every person who misses seeing 'The Three Musketeers' has let slip through his fingers the opportunity of witnessing a most magnificent spectacle," says the review in the Atlanta Constitution.

"Dumas was the world's greatest writer of romantic fiction," says the criticism in the Atlanta Georgian, "and Douglas Fairbanks was born specifically that he might play the part of D'Artagnan in 'The Three Musketeers.'"

"The Three Musketeers" opened at the Howard on Monday, October 17th, at the end of a twelve days' advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign, during which the curiosity of the Atlanta public was worked up to a fever pitch, and which caused Willard Patterson to be quoted by one of the local newspaper men as saying that "The 'Musketeers' campaign was the first evidence of real showmanship anyone had ever brought to Atlanta."

"This campaign was in direct charge of a special representative from the New York office of the United Artists Corporation, who worked in close co-operation with the local United Artists manager and the theatre management.

Select Preparing for "Selznick Week"

FOR the week of November 14-20 the Select sales forces are planning a sales drive that is confidently expected will put the Selznick product on the screens of every community where moving pictures constitute a part of public entertainment. The period will be advertised as "Selznick Week" and every possible means will be adopted to inform the exhibitor and his public of the merits of Selznick attractions in fulfillment of arrangements that are being made for a national advertising and promotion campaign for the Selznick brand photoplays.

Selznick contends that the new season will benefit by a special "boost" at about that time. Everybody in the picture industry gives practice to the habit of "starting the season with a bang," and once the start is made all hands settle down to realizing on the opportunities that are immediately at hand. Not always does the "boom" for the new season extend as far as showmen would like it to continue into the weeks that follow the "grand opening."

Brunet to Aid Receive Marshal Foch

Pathe has been doubly honored through the approaching tour of this country by Marshal Foch, Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies during the great war, who is due to arrive in this country on October 29th.

Coincident with the appointment of President Paul Brunet as one of the committee of representative Americans who will meet Marshal Foch on his arrival off Quarantine, comes the announcement that James Loughborough, Salesman in the Pathe Albany office, had been selected as publicity manager of the noted French military genius's tour of America.

Hostess—Supper's pretty near ready. All the wimmen folk's is invited in the settin' room for the drawin'. Pastor, will you tell the men the rules? (Hostess and feminines exit.)

Parson—Brothers, the ladies will stand behind a sheet with only their feet,—I mean—er, the shoes showing. You gentlemen will bid for the privilege of purchasing the particular pair of shoes—I mean the particular person who is wearing the shoes, as your partner at supper. I might also say for the benefit of those who are not of our church that the money goes to help the Ladies Aid in a furtherance of their good work. Our hostess will call us when all is ready.

Pastor—Songs may come and songs may go but nothing ever written has more music in it than "The Old Oaken Bucket."

Zibe—And our quartet can sing it too by jimminy pelts.

Hostess—(At door.) All ready. (All go out except Lem.)

Hostess—(Still at door.) (Ain't you comin' Lem?

Lem—Nope. I ain't lucky. Last social I went to I paid twenty-five cents for a box that I thought was Em Casterline's and it turned out to be Josie's. They ain't no fun eatin' supper with your own sister.

(Off stage comes the voice of an auctioneer asking for bids on "this here pair of feet" and bids starting at ten cents being given.)

Suggestions for Contest

CONTESTS are popular and a suitable contest for this picture would be to offer prizes to the local amateur musicians who from memory play "The Old Oaken Bucket" in variations, especially "jazzed."

Song slides used in connection with the singing of old time numbers should go good and audience singing ought to be easy on this production.

Talmadge Feature Opens Ashville, N C. House

Announcing as its policy, "Always a good show, often a great show," the Vance theatre of Ashville, N. C., operated by the Cadison Theatre Company, Inc., Associated First National franchise holder, opened its doors on October 27th. The new theatre's first feature was "The Sign on the Door," Norma Talmadge's latest production.

F. B. Warren Trio Going Big

3 First Runs in Atlanta in One Week Are Reported

THREE first-run full-week showing simultaneously in a single city is the unique achievement of the F. B. Warren Corporation in Atlanta recently with "The Blot," "Good and Evil," and "The Girl from God's Country."

At three of the Lynch circuit houses in the Southern film capitol the Warren specials were played and featured. "The Blot" appeared at the Rialto for the full week, and here the advertising manager coined a pulling phrase, "The story of ten million mothers."

The Atlanta Strand took for its attraction from the Warren list the Nell Shipman feature, "The Girl From God's Country," and in the advertising called attention to the fact that "the feats which Lieut. Locklear was attempting to perform when killed are accomplished in this picture."

Third on the list was the Herz Film Corporation spectacle "Good and Evil," featuring the European beauty, Lucy Doraine, which was the attraction at the Forsyth.

Out in the Middle West another accomplishment worthy of notice was chalked up to the credit of the F. B. Warren organization when the two big Gustanovic houses in Cleveland, the Circle and the Strand, featured "The Girl from God's Country" for simultaneous week engagements. These bookings marked the first run of the picture in the territory and the week chosen for "day and date" engagements found Nell Shipman's adventure story billed as an attraction against the strongest of the current big specials. A "box office report" to one of the trade papers on this engagement declared, "Thrills aplenty. Well done in all particulars. Very good business at two houses simultaneously."

Keith theatres throughout Greater New York, Central New York and Northern New Jersey are now playing "The Girl from God's Country" which is "presented" by William H. Clune, the veteran Los Angeles theatre man and exhibitor. Lois Weber's production, "The Blot," has just finished a successful engagement in all the Keith metropolitan theatres.

Contracts for the Warren specials were made in behalf of the Keith organization by B. S. Moss and all the publicity and exploitation resources of the circuit were thrown behind the pictures. "The Girl from God's Country" opened at the Franklin, the big Bronx playhouse, with a lobby display that attracted attention from every section of the borough. Co-operating with the Winchester Company the theatre presented a display of rifles, fishing rods and sporting paraphernalia that chimed perfectly with the adventurous action of the picture.

Reports from the twentyodd exchange centers indicate that the F. B. Warren organization has stepped into its stride at other points with success similar to that shown above. The numerous Teacher's Conferences held in different parts of the country during October, for example, have given opportunity for unusual publicity and the securing of desirable bookings on "The Blot." The Lois Weber production, by means of its dramatic story, raises the question, "Is the greatest blot on American life our starvation treatment of the teaching profession?" Naturally the theme offers opportunities for co-operative exploitation with teacher's organizations and for direct appeal advertising.

"HurricaneHutch"Popular

Pathe Claims Charles Hutchison Thriller is Its Most Successful

THAT "Hurrican Hutch," the new Pathe serial starring Charles Hutchison, bids to be the most successful serial ever produced by Pathe is being proven daily by reports which come in regarding the chapter play's box office value, and the enormous amount of bookings secured from exhibitors who heretofore have looked on the serial as a thing of the past, announces Pathe Exchanges.

"Hurricane Hutch," states Pathe, is censor-proof, containing nothing which the most astute critic can complain of, and at the same time each episode is as replete with thrills and fast action as an entire serial of the average sort. In the second place, a splendid cast surrounds the Pathe stunt star, Lucy Fox, Warner Oland, Harry Semels, Ann Hastings, Frank Redman and Diana Deer, each lending themselves to their particular characterization. The "locations," most of them being taken at Ausable Chasm, furnish as fine a background as could be desired.

A letter received from Charles H. Bowe, manager of the Olympic theatre in Rochester, N. Y., shows the exhibitor's attitude toward the Pathe chapter play. Mr. Bowe writes:

"The serial, 'Hurricane Hutch,' which we are now playing at the Olympic theatre, has proven to be one of the best serials we have ever played, and is exceeding all expectations. It is certainly out of the ordinary and the audiences so far have told me it was the best ever. The stunts that Charles Hutchison pulls in every episode are almost unbelievable, and the audience just holds their seats and gasps in astonishment.

"It is over a year since we played a serial, as we made up our minds not to play any more continued stories, yet when we saw this great story, we concluded that we could not afford to miss this greatest of all serials, and we are delighted that we did not overlook this one best bet. Business has increased with the playing of this serial, and we hope all exhibitors looking for a money getter will not overlook Pathe's triumph."

Keith Orchestras Take to Old-Time Songs

In fifty-seven Keith houses the orchestras may now be said to be pressing the feature photoplay closely for the stellar honors. But that's because the feature, "The Old Oaken Bucket," plays right up to the musicians and gives the orchestras a chance to make the engagements the occasion for chummy intimate shows.

"An Old Time Song Week" would aptly describe the performance that results in a theatre where "The Old Oaken Bucket" is playing. May Tully's production was eagerly seized upon by the splendid musical forces maintained in the Keith houses and they utilize every possibility of the heart drama. With the title of the song as the interwoven theme the possibilities then range from "The Sidewalks of New York," to "Home Sweet Home," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "Dear Old Pal," and a host of well remembered favorites.

It is some time since picture managers have heard an entire audience join in singing but results in the Keith houses at the premiere showings of "The Old Oaken Bucket" have shown the picture's old-home appeal united with the melody of the orchestra to be an irresistible combination.

"Save the Punch for Pictures"

"WHY don't you make more artistic pictures? Why not try to elevate the screen by producing something better than just stuff with a punch in it?"

Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law" and "The Thirteenth Chair," now producing pictures for Metro at Hollywood, read these questions from a friend's letter. He smiled in triumph.

"There you have the real confirmation that motion pictures is a fine art," he said. "The highbrows are trying to knock the punch out of it. My motto is, 'Save the punch!'

"It isn't that I have any objections to experiments that will produce more artistic pictures. In point of fact I'm continually experimenting all my life.

"But when we speak of art, we have to have some agreement as to what we are after. We can't get anywhere if we're always up against Kipling's diabolic question, 'It's pretty; but is it Art?'

"The modern tendency seems to be to put outside of the classification of 'artistic' anything that makes for a dramatic 'punch.' But the greatest things in dramatic literature are jam full of punch; and that's why they live.

"There is a strong movement today, principally in Europe, to reduce everything to half-tones, to deal with the uneventful lives of people who don't matter and to call the thing a 'slice of life,' instead of drama. There are many groups of people in the United States who see in this sort of thing the only kind of 'art.' But it's not the only kind. As a matter of fact, I think it is frequently of an inferior brand. There are, of course, masterpieces written for the select few, but the greatest works of imagination appeal to the great multitudes.

"That's what I'm trying to do in my motion picture production—reach the hearts of the multitudes. I don't want decadent analyses of complicated emotions; I want stories simple as fairy tales and as full of punch as Homer or Shakespeare."

"Father Tom" Due Nov. 13

Ass'd Exhib Release Presents Tom Wise in Title Role; Has Good Cast

PLAYGOERS PICTURES announce for release through Pathe Exchange, on November 13, the five-reel feature, "Father Tom," in which Tom Wise plays the leading role. It is said that this great character actor, famous for his many stage successes, never had a part which fitted him so perfectly as the lead in this production. It was directed by John B. O'Brien. As a motion picture offering, "Father Tom" is reported splendid entertainment. It does not attempt to prove any particular moral, except that Father Tom is just a good natured old fellow with a subtle sense of humor and a heart as big as all outdoors, who makes life a bit more livable for those around him. It is set in the environment of a small town community, with its characteristic interests and problems. The story is logical in its development and the cast handles the various roles effectively. The big punch in the picture is a thrilling horse race which was taken at Saratoga last summer and is strongly appealing in its reality.

In addition to Tom Wise, the players include James Hill, May Kitson, Myra Brooks, Ray Allen, Harry Boler, Alexander Clark and Nancy Deaver.

Hammerstein Picture Awakes Discussion

The first of Elaine Hammerstein's contributions to this season's "Forty from Selznick" has awakened great controversial interest in the newspapers and created no end of discussion on the general topic of reformatories and "penology." In this Thomas Edgelow story, first printed in Young's Magazine, Miss Hammerstein enacts the role of a girl unjustly incarcerated in a girl's reformatory—and the things that are complained of in the management of such institutions are exposed.

The discussions have opened new exploitation angles for "Handcuffs or Kisses" and give opportunity for showmen to foment agitation in every community where the picture is screened.

Bebe Daniels in Samuel Merwin's Stories

Samuel Merwin, the eminent fiction writer, was responsible for the two Saturday Evening Post stories, "Saving Sisters," and "Eva on the Ice," which Douglas Doty has used as the basis of the next Bebe Daniels-Realart picture, starting next week. The production will be the sixteenth of the season.

The New York Daily Press Reviewed "Out of the Inkwell," and This Is What They Think of It

The Morning Sun says:
"OUT OF THE INKWELL" has been promoted by Hugo Reisenfeld to a place of all its own on his programs at the Rivoli, Rialto, and Criterion Theatres, and is to be a feature number of the Reisenfeld Programs.

The New York Review says:
"OUT OF THE INKWELL" now full reel feature. Hugo Reisenfeld takes Max Fleischer's cartoon for his three theatres and booked his whole output for the coming year.

The New York Evening Journal says:
Max Fleischer's gay klown, "OUT OF THE INKWELL," is novel and always humorous. This young feature deserves attention.

The Morning Telegraph says:
Max Fleischer's exceedingly clever cartoon, "OUT OF THE INKWELL," is perhaps the best he has done to date.

The New York Times says:
Max Fleischer's "OUT OF THE INKWELL" is an exceedingly clever cartoon.

"In Society" to Be November Pioneer Release

Preparations are under way by the Pioneer Film Corporation for the special release in November of "In Society," a six-reel photodrama with Edith Roberts in the leading role. Supporting Edith Roberts is a cast made up of Dick LaReno, Harry Mann, Katherine Kent, Marie Van Tassel, P. S. Pembroke and Francis McDonald. The story is melodramatic. The theme centers around the activities of a student of Sociology directed towards transforming a waif from the slums into a society belle.

The New York and Buffalo Exchanges of Pioneer Film Corporation will be the first to release "In Society" and next week screenings will take place in the Pioneer projection rooms at which time the picture will be shown to first-run houses.

June Mathis to Write Script for Nazimova

Charles Bryant, business manager for Nazimova, announces the engagement of June Mathis as scenarioist and continuity writer for Nazimova's forthcoming "repertoire film" for the United Artists.

Miss Mathis has been loaned by Metro to Mr. Bryant. She will begin work immediately on the picture version of Oscar Wilde's "Salome," and the preliminary work of adapting Ibsen's "A Doll's House," both of which are to be given on the same program in Nazimova's first picture for the United Artists.

Fox Names November Releases

Two Super-Specials to Go to Exhibitors in Coming Month

NOVEMBER releases by Fox Film Corporation include two of the twelve super-specials announced by William Fox for launching on Broadway before going to exhibitors throughout the country; feature productions starring Buck Jones, Dustin Farnum, William Russell and Shirley Mason; pictures in which Maurice Flynn, Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker are the stars; an Al St. John comedy, two Sunshine Comedies and four Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons.

The special releases are "Footfalls" and "The Last Trail." The former, which was given its opening run at the Park Theatre, Broadway at Columbus Circle, New York City, is a visualization of the story by Wilbur Daniel Steele, which was awarded the 1920 prize by the O. Henry Committee as the best short story of the year. The cast includes Tyrone Power, Estelle Taylor, Tom Douglas and Gladden James. It is a mystery story, the solution of which comes through the extremely sensitive sense of hearing developed by a blind man. Charles J. Brabin directed the production from a scenario prepared by himself. Ingenious devices give to the spectator the impression of sound and hearing on the screen, which are vital to the effective presentation of the story.

"The Last Trail" is the screen version of the novel by Zane Grey, directed by Emmett J. Flynn, director for Fox of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" and "Shame," two of the specials previously released.

The Buck Jones release for the month is "Riding With Death," in which the strenuous Fox star appears in the role of a Texas Ranger. The story is by Jacques Jaccard, who also directed the production. Betty Francisco plays the feminine lead. "The Devil Within," from a story by George Allen England, is the Dustin Farnum release. Virginia Valli plays the lead. Bernard Durning directed.

William Russell will be seen in "Desert Blossoms," a story of love and adventure with a huge government irrigation project as a background. The star enacts the role of a young civil engineer. Helen Ferguson is the heroine. The story is by Kate Corbaley. Arthur Rosson directed. The Shirley Mason picture is "Jackie," picturization of the story of a little Russian waif possessed of dancing genius, written by Countess Barcynska. It was adapted for the dainty Fox star by Dorothy Yost. Jack Ford directed. The Maurice Flynn release is the first starring vehicle of the former Yale football hero, begun soon after his promotion to stardom by William Fox. It is from a novel entitled "The Real Man," by Francis Lynde, and bears the screen title "Bucking the Line." Molly Malone plays the feminine lead. Carl Harbaugh directed.

Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker are co-starred again in "The Jolt," the story of a man's redemption through the love of his wife and the friendship of a pal. The story is by George E. Marshall, who directed the production, and Jack Strumwasser.

The Al St. John comedy is "The Happy Pest," in which the athletic comedian is said to perform some amazing as well as laughable exploits.

The Sunshine Comedies are "A Ferfect Villain" and "Love and War," and assurance is given that the standard long established has been maintained.

"White Meat," "A Messy Christmas," "Matri-Money" and "The Village Cut-Ups" are the Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons.

The list is an impressive one, giving promise of excellent entertainment for motion picture patrons.

"Morals" May Be Exploited

Realart Offers Practical Hints to Aid Exhibitors Boost Picture

SELDOM does one picture offer so many angles for effective exploitation, says Realart, in offering some practical suggestions to be used in connection with the Wm. D. Taylor production, "Morals," which is an adaptation of William J. P. Locke's novel, "The Morals of Marcus."

The locale for the opening of the story is laid in Turkey, the quaint costumes, elaborate furnishings and exquisite settings of that exotic land offering splendid material with which the showmen with initiative can work up effective exploitation stunts.

The atmosphere of the harem is particularly well adapted for stage settings. Against a neutral background of a backdrop painted with an Oriental motif, a very attractive harem scene can be fashioned. It requires but the addition of some low divans covered with soft, comfortable cushions of radiant hues; on the floor a number of rugs or Oriental design; against the walls or from the balconies may be hung other rugs or tapestries, while the remainder of the furnishings may consist of tabourets, and beautiful screens. A more elaborate setting might include a small pool.

Reclaining on the divans are a number of girls dressed in Turkish costumes, typical of the harem. In the back centre several Turkish men can be seen sitting cross-legged and smoking a hookah or narghile. Above them, with large fans, are a couple of huge negroes dressed in white, to represent the eunuchs. At a signal from one man, there enters another girl, dressed as a dancer, who proceeds to go through the gyrations peculiar to the native dancer.

Unique Set Is Used in Moreno Feature

A set unique was erected on the Vitagraph lot at Hollywood, California, this week, for use in the new Antonio Moreno feature production, "A Guilty Conscience," the scenes of which are laid in India. Director David Smith was almost lost in the maze of Hindoo coolies and picturesque characters of the Orient who crowded the street.

The production has for its theme a modern version of the story of David and Bath-Sheba.

Magazine Tie-Up Exploits "Bits of Life"

A nation-wide tie-up on "Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's latest production for First National release, has been arranged with the Warner Publications, 25 West Forty-fifth Street, New York, distributors of the widely-read magazine, "Smart Set," which published "The Man Who Heard Everything," one of the four "punch" stories in the production.

Through the co-operation of Philip C. Cody, vice-president and general manager of the magazine corporation, the news-stands in 570 of the larger cities are exploiting the picture by exhibiting posters and stills of "Bits of Life" in connection with displays of the magazine. In addition, in 2,000 other cities and towns one or more retail dealers—cigar and drug stores and other establishments which operate magazine stands have effected window-tie-ups with the local exhibitor.

Author Helps to Exploit "Man's Home"

Anna Steese Richardson, who wrote "A Man's Home," the Selznick release, in association with Edmund Breese, is in daily contact with hundreds of women who know her because of her writings and lectures on topics concerning the home. This personal contact will continue, with its nation-wide scope, during all the time "A Man's Home" is being exhibited. It is said that this is one of the few instances when an author continues to be actively interested in the exploitation of a picture after its release.

From the day Ralph Ince began directing "A Man's Home" Miss Richardson has taken a personal interest in the proceedings. Now that her story has been publicly screened and the Select organization is contracting for its exhibition Miss Richardson's interest has increased rather than lagged—with nothing to gain except a personal interest in the success of her story from both the standpoint of the showman and his public. When her association with the editorial staff of Woman's Home Companion, a publication with A. B. C. rating of 1,085,500, is considered her field for usefulness in exploiting "A Man's Home" can be appreciated.

In a letter to Myron Selznick this evidence of Miss Richardson's enthusiasm is recorded: "The officials of the Crowell Publishing Co. have given me permission to send out in letters to readers a personal message, from me about 'A Man's Home.' It is the first time such a privilege has been granted to an editor and I think it is due to the fine impression your de luxe portfolio of scenes from the photoplay made upon our directors."

Bernhardt Impressed by R-C Release

Few motion picture productions have ever made such a profound impression upon Sarah Bernhardt as did "Possession," when Louis Mercanton, the noted French producer, entertained the famous actress at a special screening of the production, which is scheduled for early release by R-C Pictures. "Possession" is based upon the widely read novel "Phroso," written in 1896 by Sir Anthony Hope.

Madame Bernhardt, unsolicited, sent a message of congratulation to R-C Pictures when she learned that the organization would distribute the film in this country.

Ernest Hilliard Engaged for "Idle Hands"

Ernest Hilliard, nephew of Robert Hilliard, the well known stage star, has been engaged to play the "heavy" in "Idle Hands," the second George Arliss picture for Distinctive Productions, Inc.

Hilliard, who has been seen in "heavy" roles in several recent screen productions, has a prominent part in "Tropical Love."

R-C Productions Win Many First Runs

Apparently recognizing the merit of R-C Pictures releases such as "The Sting of the Lash" with Pauline Frederick and "Where Lights Are Low" with Sessue Hayakawa, many of the most important first run exhibitors of the country have booked these subjects for early showings.

Among the first run theatres at which R-C subjects will be shown are: The Walnut, Louisville; Howard, Atlanta; Sam Harding's Doric and Liberty, Kansas City; California, Los Angeles and California, San Francisco; Loew's State, Sacramento; Strand, Nashville and Strand, Montgomery; Hippodrome, San Jose; Midgley's American, Oakland; Loew's State, Alhambra and Park, Cleveland; Zorn's Temple and the Alhambra, Toledo; Picture Garden and Boulevard, Baltimore; Branford, Newark; Queen Theatre, Wilmington, Del.; Ike Lipson's Family, Palace and Walnut Theatres, Cincinnati; Victory and Liberty Theatres, Providence; Jake Well's theatres in Richmond and Norfolk and others.

AN unusual tribute was paid "The Three Musketeers" by an editorial writer of the Des Moines Capital, while this picture was being shown at the Strand theatre, Des Moines, Iowa. The editorial reads in part:

"There is a great opportunity in the motion picture business to vitalize history and make events of the past really live in the present. The days gone by, with all their lure and fascination, present a challenge to the film industry.

"We believe this picture is worthy of serious comment because it demonstrates that the past can be reproduced in a delightful manner without resorting to modern dramatic tricks. We shall hope that the good work may continue. The big problem lies in the casting of characters. Mr. Fairbanks was indeed a happy choice."

Mermaid Comedy Helps Open Loew's State

"Robinson Crusoe Ltd.", the first of the new series of Mermaid Comedies being made for Educational, featuring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, was the comedy chosen for the first program at Loew's State theatre at Buffalo. The State was opened Monday, October 17.

Paramount Names Releases for Oct. 30

WILLIAM DE MILLE'S production, "After the Show," and Ethel Clayton in William D. Taylor's production, "Beyond," are the feature releases scheduled by Paramount for October 30.

The William De Mille production is an adaptation of a Saturday Evening Post story by Rita Weiman. The scenario was the joint work of Hazel McDonald and Vianna Knowlton. Three players of prominence are featured in this picture—Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Charles Ogle. In addition to these players, the cast includes Eve Sothern, Clarence Burton, Carlton King, Shannon Day, Stella Seager and Ethel Wales.

Henry Arthur Jones, the British novelist and playwright, is the author of "Beyond," which William D. Taylor produced for Paramount with Ethal Clayton in the stellar role. The scenario was written by Julia Crawford Ivers. Charles Meredith is Miss Clayton's leading man, while the supporting cast includes Fontaine La Rue, Earl Schenck, Winifred Kingston, Lillian Rich, Charles French, Spottiswoode Aitken and Herbert Fortier.

"Foolish Age" Well Received

Large List of First-Run Bookings for Doris May Film

FEW stars of the screen have received so favorable a reception as Doris May, whose first R-C Pictures starring production, "The Foolish Age," was released October 16, following prerelease screenings in several important cities.

The large number of first-run bookings obtained for "The Foolish Age" and the enthusiastic expressions of approval bestowed upon the production by exhibitors in all parts of the country, practically guarantee a career of the utmost brilliance for Miss May, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution for R-C Pictures.

Although heretofore Miss May has been seen as a co-star with Douglas McLean, her triumphant success in "The Foolish Age" is regarded by her sponsors as unquestioned evidence of her own widespread popularity and her value as an individual attraction. Henceforward she will star by herself, as exhibitors have shown their preference for productions in which Miss May alone is featured.

A most gratifying welcome was tendered to Miss May, not only in New York and environs, but on the West Coast and in theatres of the Middle West as well. The engagement of "The Foolish Age" at Barbee's Loop theatre, Chicago, was a flattering success viewed from all angles. Despite inclement weather the week's gross touched a high mark. The engagement was made a gala event, of which Mr. Barbee took personal charge. The theatre was decorated in carnival effect, with lanterns, and vari-colored bunting. Under the direction of Hunt Stromberg, who supervised the production of "The Foolish Age," together with William A. Seiter, the director, a special publicity and exploitation drive was concentrated upon Chicago and "The Foolish Age" was benefited greatly as a result. Notices of the most complimentary nature were received from the daily newspapers of Chicago, with special comment as to the skill of Miss May in the delineation of light comedy roles.

Messrs. Bingham and Cohen, who operate the Colonial theatre at Indianapolis, bestowed the highest commendation on Miss May and her starring vehicle. They were particularly impressed by the novelty of the production, and the fact that it was clean cut comedy. They predicted, moreover, that Miss May would live long and prosperously as a screen personality.

William S. Barbee, who operates the theatre of the same name in Chicago, also complimented the R-C organization upon its choice of Miss May as a star and predicted she would be a drawing card of the highest value.

W. D. Ascough, manager of the Regent theatre at Detroit, Mich., calls "The Foolish Age" one of the "snappiest pictures he ever ran." His telegram to the Home Office was most complimentary, according to Mr. Rogers.

"All of these kind expressions of approval, following as they do the compliments bestowed upon 'The Foolish Age' by trade publications and the Board of Review," said Mr. Rogers, "have shown us in unmistakable fashion that Doris May has made a tremendous success in her first R-C production. There is every reason to believe that her future subjects will be received with just as much enthusiasm. Miss May herself is at the beginning of a truly brilliant career."

Battle of Jutland for Screen

Educational to Handle British Three-Reel Subject in U. S.

THE famous Battle of Jutland, the most important naval engagement of the World War, but one which has been shrouded in much mystery up to the present, will be presented in celluloid form to the American public in the very near future. This is the information conveyed in a statement from the home-office of Educational Films Corporation. Following its premier in this country, which will be staged under the auspices of its owner, G. E. Russell of Ideal Films, Ltd., London, the picture will be handed over to Educational Films for distribution in the United States.

The picture, which is reported to be three reels in length, took a year to produce. The actual filming, however, was begun after two years of investigation conducted by British naval experts. During this period, British and German participants in the battle were interviewed and the information they gave recorded. Ships' logs and other official reports of the battle were also examined. With this mass of information at hand, the battle was reproduced before the camera with the aid of models of the ships involved in the engagement. The results are said to form a celluloid record of the great battle, which is as accurate and realistic as human care and ingenuity could possibly make it.

Following is an account of the production, as written by a British naval expert and published in one of the London dailies:

"The technical side of the new film dealing with the Battle of Jutland has already been described by our Naval Correspondent, but a word should be said as to the monumental character of the work which Sir George Aston, Mr. Bruce Woolfe, and their colleagues have undertaken. The task of collating and checking the official reports on the battle and the entries in the logs of the gunnery officers of the British and German fleets took two years, and a period of twelve months was occupied by the producer in transferring the results to a mile of celluloid film. The film show a model for every vessel which took part in the engagement, and every model had to be moved by hand in order to secure the complete film. In some of the scenes seventy ships are in movement at the same time over an area eight feet square, and the models have been moved nearly three million times in all. To secure the best results a model could never be moved more than a sixteenth of an inch at a time, and the film really consists of about 50,000 snapshots merged into one composite whole. A fortnight's work in moving models is shown in 20 seconds on the screen, and the only wonder is that those who have been responsible for the production are still alive to tell the tale. But they have their reward in the vast interest which the film has created in all parts of the world. Arrangements have already been made to show the Jutland picture in the United States, France, Belgium, Holland, and Switzerland. When the National Film Museum is formed the film will have an honored place, and we take it for granted that a copy is being deposited in the War Museum at the Crystal Palace for the sake of posterity."

Gloria Swanson Getting Texas Exteriors

Gloria Swanson and her director, Sam Wood, staged a farewell party for West Coast newspaper and magazine writers last week at the Lasky ranch before leaving for El Paso, Texas, where the remainder of the exteriors for "The Husband's" Trademark" will be made.

Richard Wayne, Stuart Holmes, Clarence Burton and a score of Mexicans furnished support for Miss Swanson in the scenes which were enacted before the writers.

U. S. Distribution of "His Nibs"

New Syndicate to Distribute Feature on Independent Market

ONE of the most important statements of the year is contained in the announcement by Alexander Beyfuss, Vice President and General Manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, that the rights for the entire United States to the Exceptional picture, Charles (Chic) Sale, in "His Nibs," has been acquired by outright purchase by "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc.. with headquarters in the Longacre Building, 42nd and Broadway, New York City, of which L. L. Hiller is President.

"His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc., has purchased the production for the independent market. Mr. Hiller was one of the first men in the industry to be identified with the independent field and has handled many of the biggest successes that have been distributed on the State Rights basis.

The price which was paid for Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs" was not announced, but it is understood that it was a record figure established mainly because of many outstanding qualities which have been conceded to this picture. The popularity of Charles (Chic) Sale, one of the greatest vaudeville performers in the country, the unique character of the theme of "His Nibs," the fact that Mr. Sale, for the first time in motion picture history, plays seven distinct parts in a feature production, the exceptional advertising and publicity campaign which has been planned and which is already in operation on this picture, and the unusual and novel exploitation possibilities of Chic Sale's first screen endeavor, were all taken into consideration in consummating the contract with "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc.

In his statement in behalf of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, Mr. Beyfuss said: "In arranging for the distribution of 'His Nibs' we merely followed directly along the lines of our announced policy. We have an exceptional star, an exceptional theme for a story, a production with exceptional exploitation possibilities and now we have entered into an agreement for exceptional distribution. Mr. Hiller, President of 'His Nibs' Syndicate, Inc., we consider an executive of the highest calibre in the independent distribution field. We are pleased to be able to place our product in his hands.

"In announcing this deal to the industry we want to take the opportunity of expressing appreciation to the exhibitors and independent buyers of the country our sincere appreciation for the wonderful manner in which they desplayed their interest in our initial product. We desire to state, and we feel this will be of particular interest to everyone of those who are anticipating acquiring "His Nibs," that the advertising and exploitation thus far conducted has been merely the beginning of a tremendous campaign which will embrace trade journals, the entire list of regional motion picture publications, and national publicity.

"In addition to this, we want to assure every exhibitor or independent buyer who shall in the future be associated with "His Nibs," that they may depend upon any and every cooperation it is in the power of the organization of Exceptional Pictures to extend to them."

In commenting upon the purchase of "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc., Mr. Hiller stated: "We acquired the rights to "His Nibs" because we realized immediately upon its initial screening that here was a production which was made to order for the independent market. In every one of its many aspects, from every angle, it presents itself as a picture unusually adapted to that field.

"From experience in the handling of many of the big State Rights successes, there are certain points which have been established and which require the consideration of any organization contemplating the acquisition of product to be distributed through that channel. "His Nibs" answers every one of the necessary qualifications emphatically in the affirmative.

"In the first place, the picture must be unusual, exceptional, away from the ordinary run of photoplays which are offered by the national distributors on their program. Secondly, the production must be able to justify exploitation and readily present possibilities for unusual angles. Here again "His Nibs" offers itself as the finest example of a picture which gives unlimited opportunities for exploiting to any degree desired."

William Christy Cabanne, directing special productions for Robertson-Cole

Cabanne Begins Work on R-C Special

With a notable cast of players, Director William Christy Cabanne began work early this week on his latest attraction for Robertson-Cole which, although as yet unnamed, is already scheduled for release early in December.

The picture, which will depict a story of New York life, is from Mr. Cabanne's own pen and included in its cast are such well known artists as Huntly Gordon, Willie ("Buster") Collier, Jr., Billy Quirk, Charlie Craig, Billie Dove, of Ziegfeld Follies fame, little Miriam Battista, Virginia Ogden, who scored such a notable success as the gossip in D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," Margaret Foster, and Doris Eaton.

A newcomer to the screen, who is also included in the cast, and who Director Cabanne regards as something in the nature of a 'find,' is the winsome Elizabeth North. whose youthful and lustrous blond beauty has already gained decided notice for its fair young owner in the Greenwich Village Follies.

Pathe Names Nov. 6th Releases

Harris Dickson Story, "Custard Nine," is Announced

PATHE announces a list of attractive short-subjects for release during the week of November 6th. Heading the schedule is "The Custard Nine," the first of two screen adaptations based on Harris Dickson's humorous stories of the Southern negro. Included also in the list are the Harold Lloyd re-issue "Just Dropped In," the "Snub" Pollard comedy, "On Location," and the Holman Day two-reeler, "Cupid, Registered Guide." The current chapter of "Hurricane Hutch" serial is "On a Dangerous Coast," which is the seventh episode of the chapter picture. "The Fox and the Goat" is the title of the November 6th release of the Aesop's Film Fables series.

"The Custard Nine" is the first of the two comedies by Harris Dickson, from his famous stories in the Saturday Evening Post, in which all colored players are featured. Harris Dickson is not the first author to recognize the comic value of the southern negro in short stories, but he is the first writer to portray them on the screen and to personally supervise the direction.

A highly laughable satire on the making of motion picture comedies is promised in the next Hal Roach comedy, "On Location," featuring "Snub" Pollard. Pollard appears as a gardener and man-of-all-work who volunteers as a screen actor. Marie Mosquini is the leading lady of the film company, Noah Young appears as the director, and George Rowe, the "wall-eyed gink," is the cameraman. Pollard is seen at his best in this offering, suddenly transforming himself into an old-time Indian fighter and leading a Custer-like attack on a horde of absurd Indian "extras."

A large bevy of West Coast beauties surround Harold Lloyd in his next re-issued one-reel comedy, "Just Dropped In." In addition, Bebe Daniels is seen in the leading feminine role. "Snub" Pollard is Lloyd's running mate and helps keep the fun going at a fast and furios rate of speed.

"Cupid, Registered Guide," is the next screen offering adapted from a story by Holman Day. In this story the well-known author has supplied a sparkling romance, comedy situations, and outdoor settings of woods and rivers in the lumber lands that refresh. Edgar Jones and Edna May Sperl are featured in the offering.

A small island off the coast of South America becomes the location for the action of "On a Dangerous Coast," episode seven of the new Pathe serial, "Hurricane Hutch," starring Charles Hutchison. A cast of players noted for their daring surround the "stunt star," including Warner Oland, Lucy Fox, Hary Semels, Frank Redman, Ann Hastings and Diana Deer. For the current episode an entire native village was built, wherein the fast-moving action takes new twists and turns.

"The Fox and the Goat" is the latest of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables" produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry.

"The Walloping Wallaroo" is the title of the latest subject by the Pathe Slow-Motion Camera included in Pathe Review No. 128 to be released November 6th, showing the comparative skill of a man and a kangaroo in a primordial boxing bout. Something new in a dancing class is presented in "Surf Dancing," showing the latest artistic recreation of Dixie buds in Daytona, Florida. "The Port of Eternal Summer" shows views of Hamilton, the principal city of Bermuda. Beautiful Pathecolor views of the world's best loved flower are presented in "The Rose and History."

Well-Known Players in Cast for "Penrod"

According to advices from the Marshall Neilan headquarters on the West Coast, Wesley Barry will have a supporting cast of high calibre as the star of Marshall Neilan's screen production of Booth Tarkington's story, "Penrod." Marjorie Daw will play the role of Margaret Schofield, Penrod's pretty sister. Johnny Harron will appear opposite Miss Daw. Tully Marshall is cast in the role of Henry Passloe Schofield, father of Penrod. George Dromgold is also signed for an important part.

Favorable Reports for "Across the Divide"

"Across the Divide," which was released by Playgoers Pictures on October 9, is receiving much favorable comment from exhibitors throughout the various exchange centers.

Rex Ballard plays the leading male role. Rosemary Theby plays opposite Mr. Ballard.

Books a Full Month of Realart Releases

J. S. WOODY, general manager of Realart, has always been a staunch advocate of the practice of exhibitors giving play-dates for pictures at the time they contract for them, contending that to do so is an economically sound principle for both exhibitor and distributor. Through the periodical sales bulletins to the branch managers, both he and Jay A. Gove, assistant general manager, have impressed upon managers and salesmen the necessity of securing play-dates from the exhibitors and the Realart Star Franchise for the current season's product carries a calendar on its reverse side which must indicate these dates before the contract is ratified.

Mr. Lester Tobias, salesman for the New York Exchange, recently turned in a contract calling for a whole month's booking. Peter Murphy, manager of the Garden theatre in Waterbury, Conn., is the Realart enthusiast, and Mr. Tobias reports that the only reason he did not book more was that there were no other Realart pictures which have not been played in that city.

Mr. Lester Adler, manager of the New York exchange, believes this to be a record booking in view of the fact that not only have actual play dates been given, but they have been arranged for consecutive days.

Marion Davies Feature to Run at Rivoli

Announcement is made by Cosmopolitan Productions of the signing of a new contract with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation whereby the latter organization will continue to distribute all of the producing company's feature pictures. First of the Cosmopolitan Productions to be released by Paramount is "Enchantment" starring Marion Davies.

"Enchantment" will be presented at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, beginning October 30th. It is Miss Davies' first picture since "Buried Treasure." Miss Davies, in "Enchantment," has the role of a society girl of the "flapper" type.

Paramount Comedy Titled "One Glorious Day"

"One Glorious Day" has been chosen as the title for the Paramount special comedy directed by James Cruze, in which Will Rogers, Lila Lee and Allan Hale have the leading roles. Considerable mystery surrounds the production and the company is working largely behind closed doors, it is said. Walter Woods adapted the picture from a story by himself and A. B. Barringer.

Metro Week Bigger Than Ever

After Canvass, Huge Success is Predicted by Metro

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro

ALTHOUGH Metro Week, set for November 20 to 27, is still a month away, the exchanges of Metro Pictures Corporation, in communications to the home office in New York, prophesy that bookings during that special period will outdistance even the remarkable response exhibitors displayed during a similar time last year.

There is no exception among the twenty-five exchanges of the distributing organization retailing word of unusual activity on the part of theatre owners and managers upon their plans for the week. It has been necessary, in most instances, to increase the personnel of the branch offices in order to man the releasing machine adequately during the stress of the extraordinary demands upon it.

Before the first inauguration of Metro Week, last year, officials of the company, following a detailed and extensive survey of the field, foretold that 7,000 motion picture houses would take advantage of the idea of running only Metro productions for one solid week. This was a production based not upon hazard but scientific inquiry into booking potentialities in every district. And it will be remembered as one of the highlights of the past film year that this estimate of 7,000 was realized two weeks before the actual advent of the week, and that when the time came for the photoplay theatres to throw upon their screens in unison their choice of the big Metro productions then at their command, expectations of the company were surpassed by a startling, and decidedly gratifying margin.

This year a second research has been made, first to determine whether or not the exhibitors who co-operated last year wished to make Metro Week annual; second, whether or not—as was agitated in 1920 by numerous showmen—the week should be lengthened to include ten days or a fortnight; and third, to obtain an approximation of the probable amount of booking.

The investigation was made several months ago, and Metro found that in hardly a single instance was any exhibitor anything but enthusiastic in his attitude toward a repetition of the event.

The very heartiness of the motion picture showmen over the premier week brought upon again the matter, which was discussed with the Metro officials last year, of making the booking period a fortnight or ten days. In concordance with the decision of 1920 that one week was sufficient and fair toward the majority, the Metro company reaffirmed its judgment of the year previous.

Bayard Veiller, directing and supervising Metro successes

By how great a measure the bookings during Metro Week of 1921 are expected to surpass those of Metro Week of 1920 may be understood when the company announces that in no instance did any of the more than 7,000 exhibitors who espoused the week last year withdraw from participation this, and that in addition to this astounding nucleus, there has been a tremendous addition to the list of new co-operators in the plan.

With such information at hand, the information which made manifest that Metro Week was not merely a booking drive but an exhibitors' profit-drive and an immensely popular one, the Metro organization has gone ahead with plans for exploiting the event to the utmost.

Will Rogers Sets N. Y. Laughing

"Doubling for Romeo" Greeted in B'way and Los Angeles

IN its two openings in New York and Los Angeles, "Doubling for Romeo" has had equal success.

"'Doubling for Romeo' is about the most hilarious thing Mr. Rogers has ever done," writes the motion picture critic of the New York Times, about the comedian's performance in his latest Goldwyn photoplay which is the second anniversary week bill at the Capitol theatre. "The picture is a broad burlesque. It is boisterous fun. Sprinkled with Mr. Rogers' observations, most of which are pointed with original wit. The embodiment of merry irreverence for movie romantics, and breathes there a man, or a woman, with soul so slushy that he cannot relish its fun?"

"Doubling for Romeo" is its star's biggest screen success and one of Goldwyn's big fifth year production, claims Goldwyn. The great Capitol theatre was jammed all day Sunday. Sylvia Breamer, Sydney Ainsworth and the other members of the cast were accorded much praise by the critics. But "Doubling for Romeo" without Will Rogers would be like "Hamlet" without the Prince and all the critics award Mr. Rogers the palm for his keen sense of comedy in its broadest and in its highest sense.

"A thoroughly giggly, at times boisterously laughable, picture play," says the reviewer on the Morning World. "The Rogers style creeps into the captions right at the start. Rich in the satire of the motion picture colony's traditions. At least once every five minutes Mr. Rogers hurls a comic brickbat at the tricks of the cinema trade."

"The satire on the movies is delicious," says the New York Herald. "As irresistible as a certain widely advertised talcum powder. A comedy that is a bright ray of hope in a world that is murky with mere motion pictures."

Telegraphic reports from Miller's theatre, Los Angeles where "Doubling for Romeo" received its first pre-release showing, state that the comedy is a knockout of unprecedented proportions. The telegram reads:

"'Doubling for Romeo' broke all three-day attendance records at Miller's theatre except one. At the opening on Thursday night, October 13, at seven o'clock it had the longest lines in the history of the theatre. They began forming at six o'clock. The house was packed for the opening show at a quarter to seven. The people at the end of the line for the first show waited for the second. Business is keeping up and it looks like a long run. Press and public think it one of the best and funniest pictures of the year."

"Hail the Woman" for Open Market

Thomas H. Ince emphasized in a statement last week that "Hail the Woman" his forthcoming special for distribution through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is to be released on the open market.

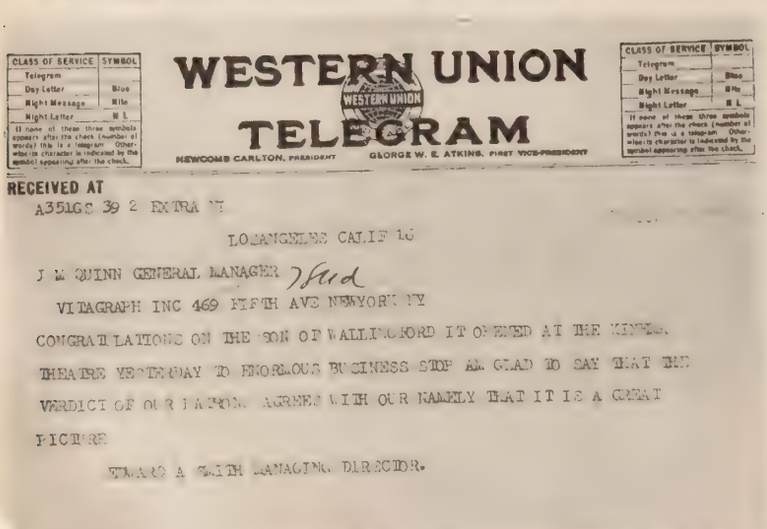
Mr. Ince has insisted that "Hail the Woman" be available for every exhibitor in the world regardless of his past or present affiliation.

"Selznick Week" Nov. 13-18

Nation Wide Sales Campaign is Prepared by Select Exchanges

BRANCH managers and salesmen in Select's thirty exchanges are declared to be on tiptoe with eagerness to make "Selznick Week," November 13-18, develop more Selznick pictures on the screens of the land than in any period since Lewis J. Selznick has been a producer. The preliminary arrangements have been completed and the decks cleared for a campaign of salesmanship that is intended to reach the manager of every screen in the United States and Canada.

Sam E. Morris, vice president in charge of distribution, declares that there has been encouraging reaction to the initial advance of the Select selling force that indicates a sucessful outcome of "Selznick Week." The picture showmen who have thus far been approached have shown a hearty interest in the Selznick product, ranging from star series to special features.



"We have been busy all Summer with production," says Mr. Morris, "and we desire to prove to theatre managers and their public that we have not been wasting our resources. We promised 'Forty from Selznick' this season and we are trying to get at least one picture on as many screens as we possibly can during 'Selznick Week' to demonstrate to showmen the caliber of production they may expect as our share of this season's pictures.

"Vera Gordon, in 'The Greatest Love'; Ralph Ince, in 'The Highest Law'; 'Red Foam,' credited with being one of Ralph Ince's best productions until he turned out 'A Man's Home'; the several Owen Moore comedies, like 'The Chicken in the Case' and 'A Divorce of Convenience'; William Faversham's 'The Sin That Was His'; and 'The Man Who Lost Himself'—all these pictures are of a character that will be 'new' until they are shown in every community where there is a screen.

"Showmen are also booking our later pictures as a result of the 'Selznick Week' drive and our newest special 'A Man's Home' is meeting with particular favor in first run theatres and in the larger communities."

"In several instances," says Mr. Morris in concluding his statement, "we will have 'Selznick Week' mean just that—for a solid week of Selznick pictures have already been contracted for by a number of managers. Surely no better picture entertainment could be devised than selections from the Selznick product with 'A Man's Home' as its feature of features."

Restaurant Opened by Fox for Employees

An up-to-date restaurant, as completely equipped as any conducted in connection with high-class New York hotels, has been opened for the benefit of the 900 or more employees at the Fox Film Corporation plant in West 55th street. Many thousands of dollars were spent in equiping the kitchen and dining room in spacious quarters on the 56th street side of the huge building.

The restaurant, as announced by William Fox, is to be conducted on a non-profit basis, the purpose being to make it simply self-supporting, or nearly so.

Demand Continues for "Jungle Adventures"

Inquiries for information regarding the method of distribution of Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," which aroused country-wide attention recently because of the unique manner in which it was exploited at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, and on account of the unusual type of production showing scenes the like of which have never before been seen by man, continue to be received in large numbers at the headquarters of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, announces that company.

Pressbooks Artistic as Well as Practical

Realart has a twofold object in altering the size and makeup of its press books, the change having gone into effect with those compiled for the present season's features. Not only does the new arrangement facilitate the exhibitor's handling of exploitation and publicity for the pictures, announces Realart, but the covers themselves are now made up so that they can be utilized as an attractiv edisplay.

"Idle Hands" Next Vehicle for Geo. Arliss

Actual work has been begun by George Arliss on his next film production, which is being made by Distinctive Productions, Inc., and will be released by the United Artists Corporation.

Mr. Arliss' new picture will be of the comedy-drama type based on Earl Derr Bigger's short story, "Idle Hands," appearing originally in the Saturday Evening Post. Associated with Mr. Arliss in this forthcoming production is Miss Doris Kenyon. The scenario of the new Arliss film was written by Forrest Halsey, and the picture is being directed by Henry Kolker.

Exhibitors Appreciate Star's Stage Success

Pathe in announcing the first of its Ernest Truex series, "Little, But Oh, My!" points out that this star has won the heart of New York by his performance in the stage success "Six Cylinder Love." That his popularity is appreciated is proven, Pathe claims, by the response received by Pathe Exchanges from exhibitors, who are anxious to learn the release date of the first of these three two-reelers.

Prize Beauty in Mermaid Comedies

Miss Joey McCreery, winner of the Thomas H. Ince beauty contest, plays the leading role in the latest all-star Educational-Mermaid Comedy, which has just been completed by Hamilton-White and which has been titled "Free and Easy."

"Virgin of Stamboul" Opens in Berlin

THE first modern American feature photoplay to be exhibited in Berlin after the recent lifting of the export film embargo, was "The Virgin of Stamboul," a Universal-Jewel picture starring Priscilla Dean, according to an announcement from Universal. "The Virgin of Stamboul" opened in the Marmor House, one of the leading film theatres of Berlin.

Summarizing the criticism accorded the feature by the German press, Universal states that it was the unusual photography in the American film which struck the German minds most forcibly. Concerning the picture, the Berlin Mittag had this to say: "The most startling part of the film is the photographical picturesque feeling of the American cameraman for continually surprising and new lines of action."

The Abenblatt said: "Here is actually shown a film which grips the masses, and from its first picture until the very last scene, is entertaining. That is to be credited, first of all, to Browning's direction, but in no small part to the cast as well. Priscilla Dean, the charming artist with eyes that speak, portrays the leading part extraordinarily well and genuinely."

Buck Jones to Star in Texas Ranger Story

"Riding with Death," a mid-November release by Fox Film Corporation, starring Buck Jones, is a story of the Texas Rangers. It was written for the screen by Jacques Jaccard, who also directed the production. There are ten important characters in the cast and many extras appear in the picture. Betty Francisco plays the feminine lead, and others in prominent roles are J. Farrell McDonald, Jack Mower, H. Von Sickle, William Gillis, William Steele, William Gettinger, Artie Ortega and Tom Medotti.

Suggesting a Way By Which Pictures May Be Financed

There is a studio in Florida equipped and ready for modern productions. Dark Stage is 60 by 60 with Cooper-Hewitts,—Hard Lights,—and several 100 Amperes spot Lights. There is also a open-air stage 50 by 142, which is one-half enclosed, and could be wholly enclosed at little cost. The two stages together could accommodate three separate companies. There are 18 dressing rooms and plenty of flats and sets and a laboratory. It is situated right in the city and cost $65,000. To a reputable producing company, that would acquire this property, the financing of its pictures or the selling of stock for this purpose would be an easy matter on account of this asset. The Owner is willing to sell for one-third cash, one-third Stock, and the balance in easy payments.

Critics Greet "Peter Ibbetson"

Reviewers Commend Translation from Stage to Screen

SELDOM, if ever states Paramount, has a motion picture been more cordially received by the newspaper critics of New York than was George Fitzmaurice's production, "Forever," which, presented under its original title, "Peter Ibbetson," opened two weeks ago at the Criterion Theatre.

The New York newspaper critics, Paramount points out, are sometimes finicky in their screen likes and dislikes, and never more so than when the subject to be reviewed has previously been presented on the stage. So when a play so popular as was John Nathan Raphael's version of George Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson" is adapted to the screen, it may be expected that the reviewers will be hyper-critical. The more remarkable, therefore, is the quantity of praise they have bestowed in this instance, says the Paramount statement.

The Evening Post noted "the poetic charm which lingers throughout the production; there are sunshine, laughter and tears which sway the audience as the picture wills." Alan Dale in the American sounded the same note when he said: "It is romantic. It is poetic and it is filled with a gentle optimism that is rarely seen on the screen." Wallace Reid's acting, he said, "was a notable achievement... few actors could have done as much with it."

The Evening Telegram said: "It is seldom that a photoplay achieves such complete transposition of the spirit of one of the lovelier works of literature as has been accomplished in 'Peter Ibbetson.'....As a development of the film director's art the play is little short of marvelous."

"See 'Peter Ibbetson,' advised the Daily News, for as the Telegraph said, "It had been given enthusiastic advance notices and hailed as a remarkable picture, and in this instance a film has lived up to all that was said about it previous to its presentation."

A screen triumph for George Fitzmaurice, its producer, "was what the Sun called it, while the Times, dwelling more at length on Mr. Fitzmaurice's achievement, said: "His scenes are gracefully composed, effectively lighted and softly toned, without sacrifice of clearness. Many of the sets of 'Peter Ibbetson' are a treat to the eyes, and some of them are dramatically expressive, too."

The Call said that here is "a moving picture that improves on the play from which it was adapted.... The charm of the settings and the perfect characterizations help to make a production which undoubtedly sets a new standard for American films." And the Mail, in the same vein, said that "it is but rarely that a novel or stage play receive just treatment when it is transferred to the silver-sheet, but 'Peter Ibbetson' is a worthy piece of work, deserving of all praise.

High Grade Houses Book Serial

"Winners of the West" Historical Serial, Sets Precedents

"WINNERS of the West," the new style Universal serial, starring Art Acord and written around the adventures of Capt. John C. Fremont during the gold rush days, continues to surprise Universal officials by the records it is setting, announces that company. In the short time it has been available for release, it has been booked in more high class houses than any serial ever made, it is asserted by Universal officials.

As an example of the ease with which Universal salesmen have been able to put the thrills-from-history serial into elite and first run houses, it is announced that the Art Acord chapter play now is running in the Village Theatre, Wilmette, Ill. This theatre is in one of Chicago's finest suburbs and was permitted in the town only upon the best of recommendations on the part of its managers, and their promises to show only pictures of the highest possible tone. No serial ever has been shown in that theatre. One was started several years ago but was ordered off the screen.

The Universal representative in that territory held a special showing of several episodes of "Winners of the West" one morning recently, at which the directors of the theatre, and representatives from the Wilmette schools and women's clubs were invited guests. There was a unanimous demand for the serial. It was booked without delay.

Another case cited by Universal in confirmation of its contention that "Winners of the West" is unique, censor-proof and highly instructive as well as entertaining, is its booking by the Girard Avenue theatre, Philadelphia. Mr. Zottman, manager of that theatre had barred serials from his screen for more than six years. It was only after he found that the public schools in his neighborhood were interested in "Winners of the West," that he considered it at all. He finally was sold on the idea of trying it out. He ran the first episode on three successive days.

"Wallingford" in Demand

Big Houses Booking Vitagraph's Film; Gets Special Presentation

THE Stanley Company has booked "The Son of Wallingford," the new Vitagraph special, for a run of an entire week at its Karlton theatre, in Philadelphia; and also for a second run in its Capitol theatre, which is in the downtown section of Philadelphia. It has also booked it for various other houses under its control, including two theatres in Atlantic City.

After the new Wallingford picture had been shown at the Kinema theatre, in Los Angeles, the management of the palatial Alhambra booked the picture for a week and this second run also played to capacity business, according to Vitagraph.

As anticipated by Vitagraph, "The Son of Wallingford," its newest special production, is proving to be a perfect mine of exploitation possibilities for exhibitors, declares a statement from Vitagraph. The many first run theatres which have presented it to appreciative houses in various parts of the country have found no difficulty in getting something out of its many exploitation angles to attract lovers of good pictures to their doors, it is stated. In many cases theatres which have not previously gone to the extent of using allegorial stage settings or tableaus are said to have departed from their general rule with this production. In other cases stage prologues have been eliminated as the film itself carries a brief prologue, and instead exhibitors have engaged a public speaker to relate to audiences how the stories of wily Wallingford have been read the world over and how, after many years Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have written this new story of Wallingford and his son Jimmy and personally directed its transfer to the screen.

Moore-Lehrman Comedy Has Fine Cast

The promise comes from the Selznick organization that the new Owen Moore comedy, being directed by its author, Henry Lehrman, at the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, N. J., will be notable for its players in support of Selznick's comedy-dramatic star. Tom Wilson and Toga Yamamoto were brought on from Los Angeles to assume two of the most important roles in Moore's support. Pauline Garon and Nita Naldi were engaged as dual leads for the supporting organization.

Feature Is Rushed to Chicago Get-Together

To fulfill his promise to show his latest production "A Bride of the Gods," at the Chicago "Get Together" meeting of Associated First National franchise holders, J. L. Frothingham, a member of the Associated Producers, will send it to Chicago by special messenger at considerable expense. The promise was given to a number of Eastern film men when they expressed a desire to see the big dramatic spectacle during the sessions, but bad weather and other unforseen difficulties for a time made it problematical whether it could be assembled and edited in time.

In order to get the print to the Chicago meeting, Director Edward Sloman accompanied the messenger part of the way, putting the finishing touches on it enroute.

Hodkinson to Open Offices

Formal Announcement of Location and Personnel to Be Made Soon

P. N. BRINCH, Manager of Exchanges for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has just returned from a tour of the Milddle West with the information that on November 1st formal announcement will be made of the locations and personnel of the twenty-four branch exchanges which that Corporation is opening to handle its own releases. W. F. Seymour, one of the organization's district supervisors, is still out in the field completing arrangements for the last few branches, and S. J. Vogel, of Vogel & Meehan, who handle the Hodkinson releases on the Pacific Coast, has spent the past week in New York, conferring with home office officials on the final details of the sweeping reorganization about to be completed in the Hodkinson Corporation.

The growth of this company has been a rapid one. In November it is celebrating its fourth anniversary, and the inauguration of its own system of branch exchanges is of especial significance at this time.

Within the past fortnight, Phil Ryan joined the Hodkinson forces, with headquaters in the Middle West territory, embracing the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, Des Moines, Oklahoma City and Minneapolis exchanges.

C. W. Albert and Thomas Greenwood have been assigned to the Chicago territory, where both have long been favorites with the exhibitors whom they have served.

A. W. Smith, Sales Manager of the Corporation says that a detailed announcement covering the personnel of the augmented sales force will be made at the time the branch exchanges are opened.

"The Iron Trail" to Be Opened on Broadway

THE first of the series of big Rex Beach productions, "The Iron Trail," produced by the Bennett Pictures Corporation and distributed by United Artists, will be accorded its premier at the New York Strand, the week beginning October 30.

The showing follows a four weeks' "teaser" poster campaign on the subway and elevated railroad stations. In its tone, the advance campaign for "The Iron Trail" was "hooked-up" to prevailing conditions of political unrest, and by innuendo the posters seem to apply in an ambiguous way to the current railroad difficulties that are attracting wide and concerted public attention.

Matt Moore Leaves for Los Angeles

Matt Moore, who has just finished playing the leading male role in "Sisters," the screen version of Kathleen Norris' popular novel made by Cosmopolitan Productions under the direction of Albert Capellani, has left New York for Los Angeles after more than two years' absence from the Coast. Mr. Moore expects to visit his mother and the other famous members of his family, Owen Moore, Tom Moore and Joe Moore. Matt Moore will return East after several weeks on the Coast.

Future Paramount Releases

26 Listed for Next 4 Months; Five Big Productions in November Group

S. R. KENT, general-manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has announced a tentative schedule of Paramount releases for the months of November, December, January and February. Twenty-six productions are listed, including specials produced by Cecil de Mille, William de Mille, George Melford, George Fitzmaurice, John S. Robertson, George Loane Tucker, Donald Crisp, William S. Hart, Penrhyn Stanlaws and the Wallace Reid-Gloria Swanson-Elliott Dexter production directed by Sam Wood; two foreign productions starring Pola Negri and star pictures in which every one of the Paramount luminaries will be seen.

The first picture to be released in November will be the George Loane Tucker production, "Ladies Must Live," in which Betty Compson is featured. This picture is an adaptation of a novel by Alice Duer Miller.

Next on the list is Donald Crisp's production, "The Bonnie Brier Bush," adapted by Margaret Turnbull from the book by Ian MacLaren and the plays by James MacArthur and Augustus Thomas and produced in London and in Scotland in the original locale of the Ian MacLaren stories. Mr. Crisp himself plays the leading male role of Lachlan Campbell, while Mary Glynne plays the role of Flora Campbell, his daughter.

Then comes George Melford's spectacular production of "The Sheik." In this picturization of Edith M. Hull's sensational novel, Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino are featured.

Following "The Sheik" comes Jack Holt in his first star picture, "The Call of the North," which was adapted by Jack Cunningham from the novel, "Conjurer's House," by Stewart Edward White. Joseph Henabery directed. Madge Bellamy is Mr. Holt's leading woman and Noah Beery, Helen Ferguson and Jack Herbert are also in the cast.

Among the November releases also is the Cosmopolitan production, "Enchantment," directed by Robert G. Vignola and starring Marion Davies. This is from an original story, "Manhandling Ethel," by Frank R. Adams.

Limehouse Reality in "Three Live Ghosts"

Genuine bits of the real London Limehouse district will be seen in the early scenes of "Three Live Ghosts," which George Fitzmaurice is now making in England for Paramount. It is expected to be interesting to Americans to see Limehouse as it really is.

"Jane Eyre" Producer Has Record as Artist

Hugo Ballin, producing director of "Jane Eyre," starring Mabel Ballin, conceded an artistic triumph, may point with pride to a record that prepared him admirably for the work to which he is now devoting himself.

Having chosen painting, and determined upon a career as an artist, Hugo Ballin first studied at Art Students' League, New York, then in Rome and Florence, Italy. He won many honors, including coveted prizes and scholarships, and in addition, having been connected with the theatre, eventually he turned to the direction of motion pictures.

Mabel Ballin, the wife of the artist and director, was also of the legitimate stage before their marriage. Her work, especially under the direction of her husband, has commanded much favorable comment, the most recent productions being "East Lynne," "The Journey's End" and "Jane Eyre."

Chas. Whittaker Back

Charles E. Whittaker, after an absence of eight months, has returned to New York. His trip abroad was an assignment for Famous Players-Lasky, in connection with productions being made starring Poli Negri. Mr. Whittaker spent most of his time in Berlin, but also divided his work to include activities in London and Paris. His plans for the future are as yet unsettled.

Great Interest Shown in S.M.P.E. Convention in Buffalo

Members Will Turn Out Strong to Hear Papers

The committee in charge of the fall convention and annual meeting of the Society Motion Picture Engineers, reports that ore than the usual interest is being own in the events this year. The convention will open on Monday morning, ctober 31, in the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, . Y. It will last four days, closing on hursday afternoon, November 3.

The papers that have been prepared ve promise of being of great value to l interested in motion picture engineerg. Some of the subjects will include xplanations of the latest developments in cture projection.

Dr. W. E. Story, Jr., has been making sts by which he has been comparing the elative efficiencies of large and small ondensers, and his talk on these tests will e valuable and interesting. Dr. Story ill also give a short talk on photometric easurements to determine the lighting of ie motion picture setting before taking ie picture.

"Industrial Mechanigraphs" will be ie subject of the paper to be read by Harry Levey of the Harry Levey Corporaon. A film demonstration will accomany Mr. Levey's talk on this subject.

L. A. Jones of the Eastman Kodak ompany will talk on the effect of studio ghting on those working under it. "Anysis of Motion" will be the subject of ie paper to be read by Charles P. Watson f Novograph Film Corporation.

A talk on the "Commercial Applicaons of the High Intensity Arc" will be given by A. D. Cameron of the General Electric Company. C. A. B. Halvorson is going to demonstrate a "Point Source of Light." One of the most interesting events on the program will be a demonstration of pictures which C. Francis Jenkins has taken with his high speed camera at the rate of 1,500 per second. A number of other valuable papers will be read, most of which have been commented upon in the past few issues of the NEWS.

As the fall convention is always the annual meeting of the society, the big event will be the election of officers. This always serves to bring out a big showing of members. Those who were unable to attend the spring convention which was held in Washington last May will undoubtedly make an effort to be at this fall convention.

A telegraphic report of the annual meeting and news of interest at the convention will appear in next week's issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Those interested in securing membership in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers can secure application blanks from A. C. Roebuck, chairman of the membership committee, care of the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564 West Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill.; A. F. Victor, secretary, 50 West Sixty-seventh Street, New York City, or from H. A. Camp, president, 5550 Raleigh street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Travis, Sherman, Texas, Reopens

The Travis theatre, recently purchased Sherman, Texas, by the Musserman interests of Paris and Corsicana, is reopened nder the new management. The theatre is been repaired, overhauled and reodeled and a $10,000 pipe organ inalled. The interior is refinished in old ory and gray with blue velvet draperies, dividual seat covers for the chairs, new ghting system and all modern improveents installed.

Rhinelander, Wis., to Have New Theatre

Ground will be broken this week for a new theatre at Rhinelander, Wis. Peter Rouman, the owner, states that he expects the house to be ready for the public by the first of the year. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of one thousand and is expected to cost $80,000.

Joseph M. Schwartzwalder has redecorated and renovated the old Cayuga theatre in Auburn, N. Y. and has reopened it under the name of the Universal.—Taylor.

New "Simplex" Sun Light High Intensity Projection Lamp

Well Known Corporation Tells of Their Latest Product

By P. R. Bassett, Illuminating Engineer, Sun Light Arc Corporation

The motion picture industry is, without doubt, the greatest light-using industry in the country and the demand of this industry for more light has been continuous and insistent with the advance of the art. There are two main departments of lighting in the motion picture industry: the producers' lighting, which consists in lighting the studios for photographing the pictures, and the exhibitors' lighting, which consists of light for projecting the pictures on the screen. The Sunlight Arc Corporation developed, several years ago, a high intensity arc lamp for motion picture studio work. This unit, which is the most powerful and actinic source of light used in the studios, has caused many revolutionary changes in picture-producing and has played a very important part in the improved studio technique and artistic photographic results so noticeable in the last few years.

The Sunlight Arc Corporation has now completed the development of another unit which bids fair to play an important part in the exhibitors' lighting. This new lamp is the result of two years of development and service tests of high intensity projector lamps. In incorporating the high intensity arc for projection purposes, it has been necessary to develop a lamp mechanism which has many radically new features that will be of extreme interest to the projectionists. The lamp is completely automatic. The manufacturers claim it is the only projector lamp about which this can be said. In order to make a projector lamp automatic, it is necessary to do more than merely maintain a constant voltage or arc length. It is necessary to have the burning tips of the electrodes automatically controlled to burn continuously in fixed positions. Not only should the arc length be constant, but the position of the arc with respect to the condenser lenses should also be fixed. The new lamp accomplishes all these functions. The complete unit is divided into two parts, one, the lamp unit, which is mounted in the lamp house (shown in Fig. 1), and two, the automatic control, which is mounted outside on the back of the lamp house, where it is more accessible and cooler. This unit is shown in Fig. 2.

Fig. 3. is an electrical diagram of the lamp and automatic control. The automatic control unit consists of a motor and two magnets with the mechanical connections for operating the lamp. The motor (C) is attached across the lamp terminals and operates on arc voltage. It supplies power for continuously rotating the positive carbon at a slow speed and also for intermittently feeding the positive and negative carbons independently whenever such feed is necessary to compensate for their burning away. Magnet (A) controls the feed of the positive carbon. Magn (B) separately controls the feed of th negative carbon. The magnet A circu is novel and very interesting. The met piece with the nose extending toward th arc flame, above the positive carbon, called the third electrode. This pie is insulated from both positive and neg tive parts of the lamp, but is connected b a lead to one terminal of magnet A. Th other terminal is connected to the positiv side of the line. The operation of th circuit is as follows: When the arc flam does not touch the nose of the third ele trode, no current flows though magnet A However, as the positive carbon burns, th crater position slowly burns back unde

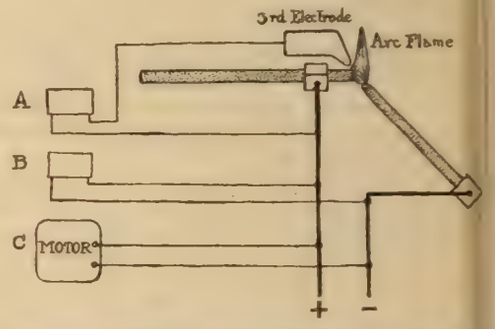

Fig. 3—Simplified electrical diagram of the automatic projection lamp

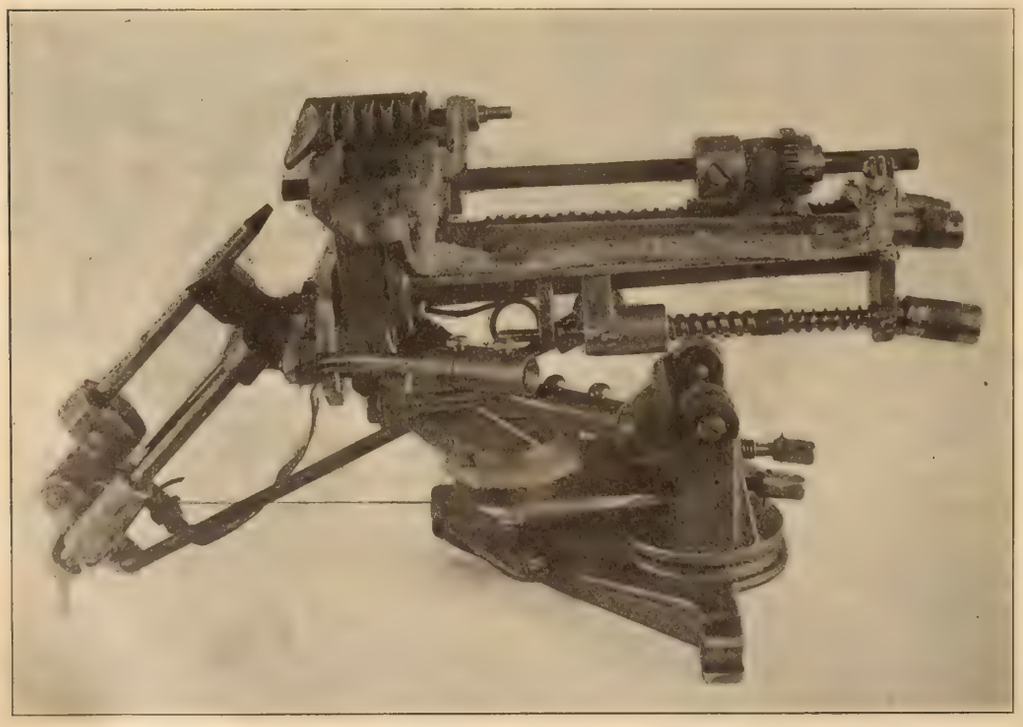

Fig. 1—The "Simplex"-Sunlight Arc High Intensity Projection Lamp

the nose of the third electrode and the ar flame moves back along with it. Finally the edge of the arc flame brushes agains the tip of the third electrode. Since th arc flame conducts current, this contac establishes a circuit, and current flow from the arc flame thru the third electrod and thru magnet A. Magnet A is s arranged that it draws a pawl into th ratchet which feeds the positive carbon As the positive carbon is fed ahead, th flame also is carried ahead until it break contact with the third electrode, thus de-energizing the magnet A and stopping th feed. This process is repeated whenever the flame touches the tip of the third electrode. The surprising part of the operation of this circuit is its reliability and its accuracy. The third electrode holds the crater of the positive carbon so accurately that it does not vary as much as one thirty-second of an inch in position during an entire run. Furthermore, it is evident that variation in burning rate of the carbon, or variations in current, have no effect in changing in the slightest degree the position of the crater.

The magnet B circuit is very simple. It is attached across the lamp terminals and therefore has the arc voltage continuously applied to it. This magnet pulls on a pawl which engages in the ratchet that feeds the negative carbon. The pull of the magnet B is normally counterbalanced by the pull of a spring in the opposite direction, so that the pawl is held in a neutral position out of engagement with the ratchet. Now, as is well known, the arc voltage depends on the arc length. Therefore, as the negative carbon is consumed, the arc length is increased. This increases the arc voltage and so increases the pull of magnet B. The pull of magnet B being, then greater than that of the opposing spring, draws the pawl into the negative feed ratchet and causes the negative carbon to be fed forward. When the arc voltage is brought back to its normal figure, magnet B is weakened and the spring draws the pawl away from the ratchet, thus stopping the feed. It is evident that the combination of circuits A and B completely controls the arc and the position of both electrodes. The negative electrode is fixed, since the control holds it at a constant distance from the positive, and as the positive crater is fixed by the third electrode, the whole arc is, therefore, located at set positions with respect to the optical system.

The automatic control unit for the High Intensity Projection Lamp

This new unit contributes two most important things to the projection art—first a source of light twice as efficient as any source used previously for projection, and secondly, it makes this source available to the projectionist in a completely automatic form, which makes it steadier and more reliable as well as twice the brightness of present projection lamps.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Simplex Sun Light Arc has been used in the Capitol Theatre for projection for a year or more.

Artificial Light Has All But Superseded Daylight in Filming Pictures

Sunlight of California no Longer an Absolute Necessity in Producing, Says Charles Eyton

California, where motion picture production is now centered, no longer has a monopoly on filming, even though the sun is brighter there. For the lighting of motion pictures nowadays is largely electrical even in Hollywood, according to Charles Eyton, general manager of Paramount's West Coast studios.

"The use of artificial light has all but superseded daylight," says Mr. Eyton. "Time was when it was considered essential to locate photoplay studios in localities where continuous sunlight was available. When California was 'discovered,' it was regarded as the ideal spot, because of the preponderance of sunny days. I do not wish to imply that this state is not now a very excellent place in which to make pictures, but the matter of daylight or sunlight is no longer the essential it was once considered.

"Take a look at any Paramount picture for example, and you will see that many of the exterior sets are actually built on stages rendered temporarily or permanently dark and that artificial illumination supplies the most effective lighting. A case in point is William De Mille, Paramount director, who for his past four productions has not been on location more than once or twice, and then only for a very short distance or time.

"Electrical experiments and experts in lighting have so developed the means of artificial illumination that tremendous sun arcs and other appliances can virtually duplicate the light of day and provide the even illumination that is necessary. Scenes can be made on dark stages, at night, at any time whatever, even the day is dark or the rain pouring.

"Thus any part of the United States can be used for picture making, providing only that the locality is within easy distance of a city where supplies can be obtained. Owing to progress in electrical illumination the motion picture industry is no longer wedded to any one district."

Winnipeg Has Another Modern House

Winnipeg, Manitoba, the Gateway City to the Canadian West, acquired still another handsome new moving picture theatre when the New Starland Theatre, Main street, was opened by Kenneth M. Leach, head of an extensive chain of moving picture houses in the West, with Ralph Miller, formerly manager of the College theatre, as manager. Mr. Leach, who is a noted horseman as well as exhibitor, is the lessee of the Starland, the owner of the fine structure being A. R. McNichol, a wealthy citizen of Winnipeg. The Starland, which replaces a former theatre of the same name on the property, is the third house in Winnipeg for the K. M. Leach chain, the others being the Lyceum and the College, the latter having been opened to the public only a few weeks ago.

The Starland, which was started last May, cost in the neighborhood of $300,000 and provides accommodation for 2,000 patrons on two floors, the balcony having 800 seats. Prominent in the preparation of the new house was Oral D. Cloakey, one of the most widely known theatre men in Canada, who is general manager of theatres for Mr. Leach and manager of the Lyceum in Winnipeg. Cloakey was formerly with Jule and J. J. Allen of Toronto, and opened the Allen theatres in Vancouver, B. C., and Cleveland, Ohio. He was originally a resident of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Cloakey designed the stage setting for the Starland and was one of the first artists to appear on the stage itself, playing a marimbaphone specialty as a musical feature of the opening programme. The crowd tendered him an ovation in recognition of his superb versatility. Incidentally, the drapings of the stage are hand-painted, being executed in oils by R. H. Van Kirk, a local artist of repute.

The foyer and stairs of the Starland are in marble and the front facade is done in cut stone with face brick of alternate colors, making a striking effect. There are two stores on each side of the entrance and a spacious billiard parlor in the basement. Special equipment comprises a $15,000 pipe organ, which was built by the Warren Company of Woodstock, Ontario, while another outstanding feature is the battery of three electric-drive Simplex projection machines in a projection room which is located just above the entrances to the orchestra floor. This position affords direct projection to the screen. The walls of the projection room are of solid concrete.

Music is provided by a novelty orchestra of six and by the big concert organ, the organist being H. St. John Naftel, formerly at the Capitol theatre, Winnipeg. The opening attraction was "A Thousand to One," starring Hobart Bosworth.

The New Starland theatre is situated on Main Street, somewhat distant from the downtown theatre section on Portage Avenue. The new house is considered one of the finest uptown moving picture theatres in Canada, outside of several new neighborhood theatres in Toronto and Montreal.—GLADISH.

Claim Perfect Projection of Stage Effects for New Machine

Many Interesting Points of Merit in Brenopticon

Abreast with the progress of the motion picture projection machines is the new Brenkert Brenopticon "Model F." With this new machine can be obtained the combination projection of lantern slides and stage effects. Lantern slides and stage effects can be shown in perfect dissolving projection, or one lantern slide and one stage effect can be simultaneously projected.

The outstanding feature of the Brenkert Brenopticon "Model F" is its excellent projection of stage effects. The large working aperature lenses take in the full opening of any standard make of stage effect — and the projected images are clearly defined and brilliantly illuminated.

Direct from the operating booth the stage effects can be projected singly or to operate in pairs. The Iris Dissolving Shutters are quickly controlled at the will of the operator and the Framing Shutters instantly set to frame the screen or stage opening.

One effect operating in upper unit can show Moving Clouds on upper half of screen or stage setting and a Moonlight Water Ripple effect operating in lower unit to show on the lower half of screen or stage setting. There are many of the stage effects that operate in pairs for producing a most novel and beautiful effect for Overtures, Holiday features, Program Introductions, etc. The Framing Shutters permit the operator to control the area covered by the stage effects, therefore projection onto the screen or drop curtain can be accomplished with wonderful effect, or where some special stage setting is used the projection of stage effects in single or pairs can be worked in, and the results add greatly to the value of the program.

Beautiful projection features are had by combining the projection of one lantern slide with one stage effect—namely—A lantern slide portraying a Winter Scene can be shown with the stage effect, Falling Snow—A Mountain Scene by lantern slide with stage effect of a Volcano, etc. Many of these combinations can be had and worked out to give the audience something new, beautiful and attractive.

The Brenkert Brenopticon Model F is the advanced type double dissolver for theatre service. Its design and construction embrace entirely new developments and features—a distinct and marked departure from the old type double dissolvers.

The projection lenses are 4 inch diameter of full working aperature—they register clearly defined images with a perfect flatness of field. These large working aperature lenses (the largest ever offered) increase the illumination with less attention of operator in maintaining exact centering of light source.

The Iris Shutters furnished are positive in operation and close light tight. The adjustment permits setting shutters for alternate opening and closing, or, for simultaneous opening and closing.

The condensers are 5-inch diameter, which increase the illumination in lantern slide projection and cover the full opening of any standard make stage effect. They are mounted in a self-centering cell with quick access for cleaning or changing.

The framing shutters are built in and produce a curtain closing shutter effect. They operate as a dowser on lantern slide projection and are used for framing the stage opening when stage effect projection is desired.

The arc lamps are built for rugged service with vertical-longitudinal and lateral adjustments of new design.

The mazda lamp equipment consists of a quickly removable socket—the base holding socket being provided with all adjustments for exact centering of light source.

The base is a one piece pedestal with rotating top. The uprights and bed are heavy steel tubes. The stand is provided with adjustments for setting at any angle of projection required and locks tight. It is rigid and free of vibration.

The Brenkert Brenopticon Model F is furnished in an equipment having 40-60-80 ampere rheostats and dual focus lenses. These dual focus lenses provide for two different sizes of projection, namely, the projection of lantern slides to fit a given size screen and for projection of stage effects to cover an area larger than the curtain or entire size of stage opening.

The combination 40-60-80 ampere rheostat is instantly controlled, which permits the operator to increase the illumination as may be required for projection of the stage effects over a large area—and the decrease in illumination on the projection of lantern slides where the greater illumination is not required.

The dual focus lenses are quickly thrown in and out.

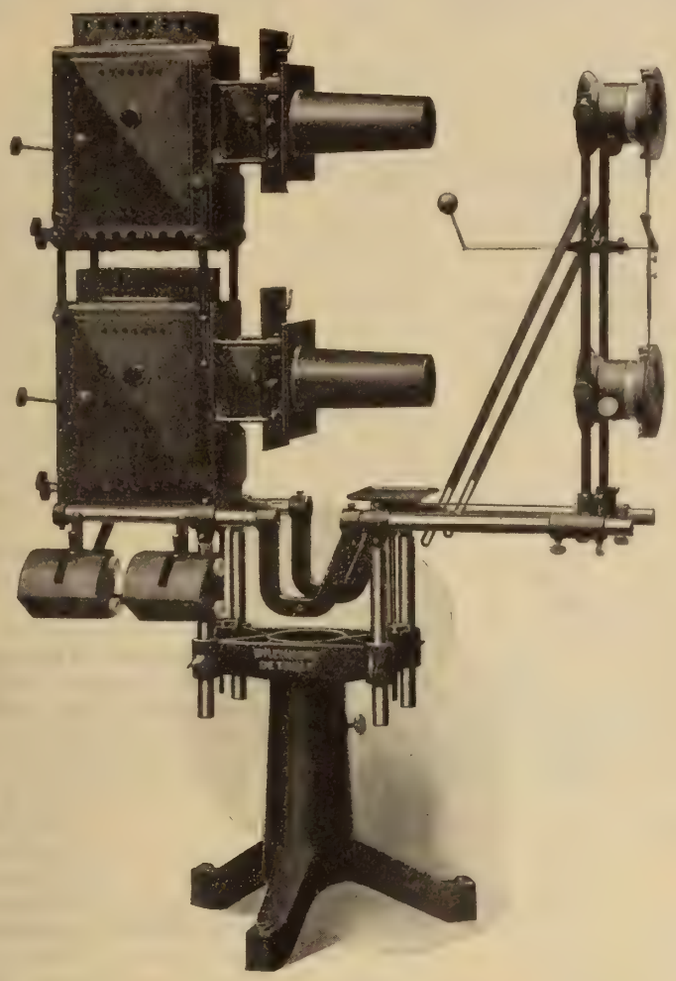
The Brenkert Brenopticon "Model F" projector renders a high class projection service in Schools, Colleges, Studios, for Professional and Advertising purposes.

The Mazda lamp equipment renders perfect projection of lantern slides at any distance up to 120 feet and at distances of 100 feet or less with stage effects. It is the ideal equipment for Schools, Colleges, Advertising and Professional requirements.

The arc lamp equipment has practically no limit in its distance of projection as it can be equipped with the 40-60-80 ampere rheostats and long focus lenses.

Start Work on Portland Theatre

Plans for the erection of a $60,000 theatre building on the half block on the east side of Third street and between Burnside and Ankeny streets in Portland, Ore., have been announced by the newly organized Union Theatre Company in connection with the completion of a deal whereby the concern took a 15-year lease on the property. The lease, it was declared, involved the payment of an aggregate of $500,000 in rentals. The lessees plan to build a two-story concrete structure with a ground floor of 100 by 200 feet. The building will be used as a theatre and also as a number of retail specialty shops.



Members of the new theatre company are Eugene Blazier, Lesser Cohen, Julius Sax and Sam Sax. It is expected to have the building completed in time for a January 1 opening. Work of erection started October 1.—Allen.

Jensen and Von Herberg Buy Another

C. S. Jensen has returned to Portland after a conference in Seattle with his partner, J. G. Von Herberg, which resulted in the purchase of the American Theatre in Butte, Mont., by the firm of Jensen and Von Herberg which operates a string of theatres throughout the northwest.

The American theatre has a seating capacity of 1,500. It will be closed for a month during which time extensive alterations and remodeling will be done. P. E. Noble, manager of the Liberty Theatre in Portland, has been sent to Butte to supervise the renovating of the American and also to temporarily manage the Rialto, another Jensen and Von Herberg first run theatre. During his absence from Portland the Liberty will be under the direction of Manager Johnson, formerly director of the Alcazar Theatre of Great Falls, Mont., one of the large houses recently acquired by Jensen and Von Herberg.—Allen.

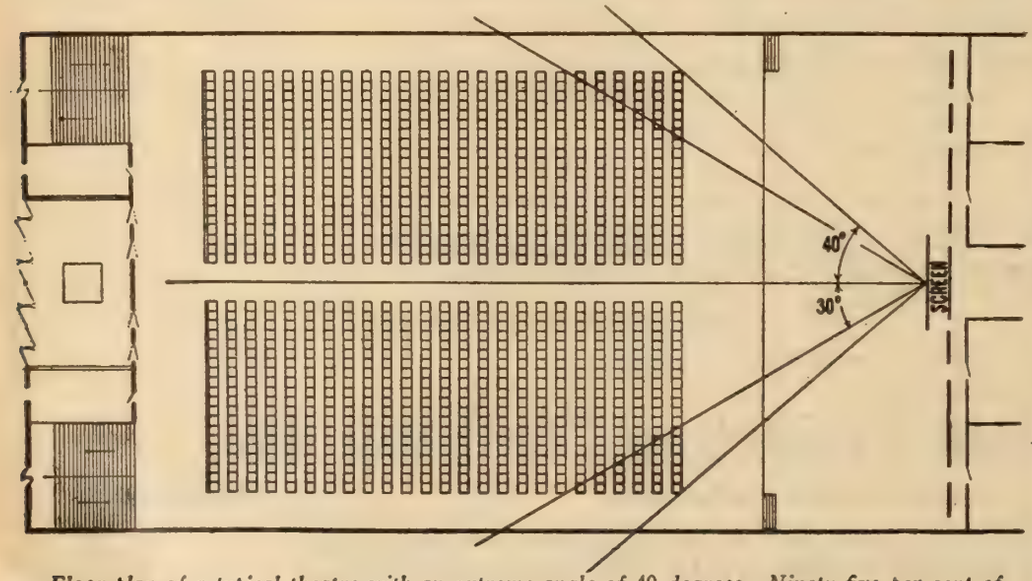
Shape of House Main Factor in Selecting Screen

Results of Tests on Different Reflecting Surfaces

Does the motion picture screen appear equally bright from all angles of view? In other words, does the screen appear too bright for persons in the centre of the theatre and not bright enough for persons at the side. This was the second phase of the problem treated in the booklet of the Eastman Kodak Company entitled "The Motion Picture Theatre, Its Interior Illumination and the Selection of the Screen." The first phase appeared in these columns in the issue of September 17.

In the tests made, nearly all the projection screens on the market were examined, and such wide differences between the many types were found that the results are being published to make it possible to choose the screen which will be suitable for the particular theatre in which it is to be used. It is found that a screen which would be satisfactory in one theatre might fail completely in another. The result of most interest to motion picture theatre owners and managers is the fact that it is now possible to select the best screen for a given theatre with scientific accuracy.



Every projection screen has its own reflection characteristics. Some reflect nearly all the light in a narrow beam giving plenty of light for persons sitting in in the centre of the theatre and almost none for those at the sides. There are other screens which appear of nearly equal brightness from any seat in the theatre. These represent extreme cases with the majority of screens occupying an intermediate position between the two. The choice of screen depends mainly upon the shape of the theatre. However, in order to determine the best screen for a given theatre, it is first necessary to determine accurately the reflecting power of the screens for all angles of view.

This the Eastman Kodak Research Laboratory has done for a number of commercial screens. Orders for samples of projection screens were placed with practically every maker whose advertisement could be located in the trade journals. A response was not obtained from all the makers. A special apparatus, a goniophotometer, was constructed for the purpose of measuring the reflecting power. A beam of light was thrown upon the sample of screen perpendicularly, thus illuminating it in very much the same manner as in the motion picture theatre. A small instrument which could be set to view the screen from any angle was used to measure the reflecting power. In this way the reflecting power of a screen could be determined when viewed perpendicularly or at angles of 5 to 70 degrees from the perpendicular. These values are given for each screen in Table IV. This table contains all the necessary data for the complete specification of the reflection characteristics of a projection screen.

Since we are interested in having the screen appear of satisfactory brightness to persons at the side of the theatre as well as in the centre, it is necessary to decide on the maximum amount that the reflecting power can fall off before the screen brightness becomes insufficent. Making use of all the existing data on the subject, the laboratory staff decided that the reflecting power for the persons sitting at the side of the theatre should never be less than one-fourth of the reflecting power for persons in the centre of the theatre. That is, with the proper screen brightness for persons in the centre of the theatre, the brightness of the screen as seen by persons at the side should never be less than one-fourth of the proper amount. If the ratio of the reflecting powers is greater than four to one, it will result in diminishing the number of good seats in the theatre. Obviously, a screen which would give excellent results in a long narrow theatre might not be suitable in a very wide theatre where the angle of view was greater.

The maximum angle of view can be determined from a floor plan of the theatre. It may be found by drawing a line connecting the most extreme seat on the side with the centre of the screen. The angle of view is then measured between this line and a line drawn through the centre of the theatre. It will sometimes be found that there are a few seats on the side which will add to the angle of the theatre considerably. If these seats are usually vacant, it may be undesirable to increase the angle for the benefit of the few persons who might occupy them. The figure will illustrate this. The required angle, counting all seats, is 40 degrees. However, 95 per cent of the seats are contained within an angle of 30 degrees. With the knowledge that these seats will not be as good, it is sometimes permissible to choose an angle which does not include them. The distortion, which no screen can correct, is often more annoying from the side of the theatre than the falling off of the screen brightness.

In selecting a screen for a motion picture theatre, the procedure should be somewhat as follows. First determine from the floor plan, the maximum angle of view. Let us suppose that this angle is found to be 30 degrees. In table II will be found a list of commercial projection screens and in the second column the maximum angle for each screen is given. It would be undesirable to use a screen for which the maximum angle is 20 degrees in a 30 degree theatre, so we may rule out the first few screens which are listed as being suitable only to an angle of 20 degrees. It will then be noticed that any of the remaining screens may be used without exceeding the angle for which they become unsatisfactory. If there were no other factors to consider, the most efficient screen would be the one which had the highest average reflecting power. The values of the average reflecting power will be found in column 3. A low reflecting power is undesirable, since it necessitates a larger electric current through the arc of the projection machine and, therefore, increases the cost of operation.

A Sturdy Floor-Covering for Theatre Lobbies—

In all weathers people come tramping through the lobby tracking dust, grit, wet, and mud from outdoors. To resist such grinding traffic, a floor-covering must possess oak-like durability.

For such service you need Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum. Built according to the strict specifications of the U. S. Navy for linoleum, this floor-covering stands even the terrific wear given the decks of our men-of-war.

That is why it stands up so remarkably under the wear-and-tear of service in theatre lobbies, foyers, interiors—wherever a sturdy floor-covering is needed. Moreover, this remarkable linoleum is sanitary, non-absorbent, silent underfoot, very easy to clean, and comparatively low in cost.

Gold-Seal Cork Carpet

Where absolutely quiet floors are desired, we suggest Gold-Seal Cork Carpet. This durable floor-covering is as silent and comfortable underfoot as a thick woven rug. A super-quiet covering for aisles, rest-rooms, etc. It is made in 6 attractive shades.

We strongly recommend that you have your Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum and Gold-Seal Cork Carpet laid by experienced layers, and according to the Gold-Seal Specifications. No matter how well linoleum or Cork Carpet is made, incorrect laying invites trouble.

Niagara Falls Has Up to Date House in the Bellevue

New Theatre Is Lavishly Equipped—Has a Capacity of 1600

Niagara Falls, N. Y., is justly proud of its magnificent new Bellevue theatre, which was opened to the public on September 1, under the management of D. H. Finke. The men who have made the Bellevue possible are George Haeberle, Frank O. Jenss, John O. Chapin, John W. Williamson and M. Aronson, a group of enterprising Niagara Falls business men.

The Bellevue is located on the east side of Main street, south of Michigan avenue. The main entrance is in the center of the building, the front portion of which is of brick, concrete and hollow tile construction. Two modern stores are placed at each side of the entrance on the ground floor, while the second floor front is given over to five offices. From the entrance a wide and handsome vestibule leads to an ornate lobby, from which one passes into the foyer of the spacious auditorium. The foyer is finished in cypress and richly carpeted. Above the foyer and rear part of the auditorium's main floor, is the balcony, entirely given over to box seats, so arranged that the occupants are given a wide sweep of the main floor and stage.

The stage, at the east end of the auditorium, is 20 feet wide and 45 feet high. Ample provision has been made for the safety of patrons, as every safeguard against fire has been employed. The projection room is one of the finest in western New York. Power's machines are used, furnished by the Becker Theatre Supply Company of Buffalo. Besides the wide main entrance there are eight fire exits from the main floor, four from the balcony and two from the stage.

Leon Lempert & Son, Inc., designed the Bellevue, and the construction was done by Wright & Kremers of Niagara Falls. The appearance of a palatial mansion has been achieved in the masterful way the decorators have enriched the interior. Throughout the house there is a harmony of color and richness. The lower portion of the walls, the dado, has a rich all-over pattern giving a rose color fabric effect. Above this the wall is panelled with fluted pilasters, the spaces thus formed being finished in ivory tones of stippled texture. These are further enriched with delicate festoons, cartouche forms, medallions and other artistic ornaments. The pilasters and molded cornice they support are enriched with touches of color and gold, a polychroming that enhances the beauty of the modeling.

The large expanse of ceiling has been broken up into a series of panels decorated with molded plaster and stenciled patterns. The dome is a soft rich blue with figures of nymphs in silhouette.

The latest improved orchestra chairs are used and every patron has an unobstructed view of the screen. The loge chairs are of reed and leather. The organ is a Wurlitzer Hope-Jones orchestral unit, installed by the Wurlitzer company. The Arnson company of Niagara Falls supplied the carpets and loge chairs. Edward Senglaup installed the heating and ventilating system. In front of the theatre is an attractive electric sign, made to display the letters of the title of the attraction a foot high. Brass rails for the loge boxes and the orchestra are from the plant of the Zero Valve and Brass company of Buffalo.

There is an attractive porte-cochère over the entrance to the Bellevue surmounted by the large electric sign, bearing at its top the name of the theatre. The opening attraction was "Mother O' Mine." For opening week Prof. Herbert Birchall played Suppe's "Light Cavalry" on the Wurlitzer organ.—Taylor.

Willimantic Theatre Leased

The Loomer Opera Huse, largest theatre at Willimantic, Conn., has been leased by John M. Hall of Boston, owner, to the Gem Theatre Company for a term of years. It is announced that the theatre, which has been closed since vacated by Hyman Schwartz of Norwich during January of the current year, will be reopened this month for motion pictures, with probability that vaudeville will be later added.—Agard.

Make Westinghouse Installation

The announcement is made by the General Supply and Repair Company of Portland, Oregon. C. L. White has pioneered 1922 with Westinghouse Motor Generator Set installations. "Bob" White, as is known in Portland, practically launched a demonstration installation of a fifty-five ampere, double arc Westinghouse Motor Generator Set, and General Supply and Repair Co. hope to follow it up by making installations all over the state.

Shape of House Factor in Selecting Screen

There are several other factors, however, of as much importance as a high reflecting power. The texture and color must also be considered in choosing a projection screen. These factors are listed in columns four and five of Table II. It is, of course, difficult to describe the color or texture in exact terms. Samples, which could be described by the same terms, may appear very different when placed side by side. Columns four and five must be considered, therefore, as giving only a general idea of the character of the surface of the screen.

The laboratory is not in a position to advise on two other factors which will influence the choice of a screen; namely, the durability and the cost. The problem, which was undertaken by the laboratory, was to determine the most satisfactory conditions of projection, regardless of their cost. It is believed, however, that improvements as suggested by this article will be soon paid for at the box office.

Tests of Miscellaneous Surfaces

After measuring the reflection characteristics of various motion picture projection screens, it was decided to examine a number of miscellaneous surfaces. It was thought that an examination of their characteristics might point the way to the manufacture of even better and more efficient screens than at present.

The results of this examination are given in Table III which is similar to Table II for the commercial projection screens. It will be noted that only two of the miscellaneous surfaces fall in the 20 degree class and the rest in the 70 degree class. The surfaces numbered 28 and 29 are quite similar and are not suited for use beyond 20 degrees. Number 28 is prepared by placing a mirror directly behind a ground glass focusing screen; while number 29 is a mirror, the first surface of which has been sand blasted.

In the 70 degree class, the surface of chalk (Magnesium Carbonate) is the most interesting. The reflecting power is high and very nearly constant out to 70 degrees. It has a pure white color and a surface which appears perfectly smooth to the eye. For this reason scientists have adopted this surface as the standard of a diffusely reflecting substance, although it would naturally be unsuited as a projection screen.

The actual values of the reflecting powers of all substances are given in Table IV for all angles of observation at which measurements were made. The reflecting power was measured by comparing the brightness of the surface being examined to that of a surface of magnesium carbonate viewed perpendicularly under the same conditions of illumination. The reflecting power of the magnesium carbonate was assumed to be 100 and the reflecting powers of the other substances referred to it.

Small Mars Theatre Well Equipped

The Mars theatre is located in the litt town of Snyder, Nebraska. Althoug there are only 1500 inhabitants fro which to draw audiences, this theatr would be a credit to any larger town. M Englebrecht, the manager, is to be co gratulated for his good judgment not onl in obtaining projection equipment that in sures clear, steady and brilliant picture but also in providing the necessary emerg ency apparatus for insuring continuou service to his patrons.

This equipment consists of two pro jectors furnished with Hallberg Continu ous Feed Arc Controllers, a Hallber motor generator and a Hallberg Econ omizer for emergencies.

Here in the use of the arc controller is a step in advance which many theatre in larger towns and cities might well take note of, for in this device is the means o holding constant arc length, thus eliminat ing sudden changes of brilliancy on the screen, which are the natural results o hand feeding.

The Auditorium is 30 feet wide by 9c feet long and seats 350 people. The screen is Minusa Gold fibre. All of the projection equipment, screen, poster frames, electrical fixtures and fans were furnished by the United Theatre Equipment Corporation.

A theatre is being erected by the Meadville Theatres Corporation at Park avenue and Chestnut street, Meadville, Pa. C. E. Schatz will be manager of the house.

Mr. S. S. CASSARD, Vice-Pres.,
NICHOLAS POWER CO.,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Cassard:

HURRAH ! HURRAH !

I just must shout it. FOR SEVENTEEN YEARS, I HAVE WANTED A PERFECT PICTURE. I HAVE IT RIGHT NOW —ON MY SCREEN AT THE OHIO THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS. The most wonderful, beautiful, amazing, enchanting, satisfying picture light imaginable. I am so pleased I want to rave over it.

IT IS A NEW EPOCH IN MOTION PICTURE BETTERMENT, AND ALL CREDIT IS TO THE NICHOLAS POWER CO., and your new model POWER'S MACHINES WITH HIGH INTENSITY LAMPS—JUST INSTALLED.

We Exhibitors have been behind the times. Directors, Photographers, Studios, have made wonderful progress in lighting effects, while we have kept on, year after year, with the same inane dim picture shadows.

YOU HAVE ADVANCED THE MOTION PICTURE ART TEN YEARS IN ONE STEP. Your new machine and lamps improve the picture in the same way that sunshine coming from behind a cloud illuminates every corner, nook and detail of a room.

EVERY THEATRE, ESPECIALLY THE LARGE THEATRES, WILL INSTALL THEM AT ONCE. ALL THEY NEED IS TO SEE THE DIFFERENCE. It is the biggest thing ever accomplished in motion picture projection. JUST WHAT WE HAVE NEEDED. I can't say enough for it.

Very cordially,
F. J. REMBUSCH ENTERPRISES,

Frank Rembusch

Young Tells of Growth of Slide Industry

How many slides do you suppose are used yearly by exhibitors to announce coming attractions? We asked the question of Moe Young of the Unique Slide Company, who is one of the largest men in that field. We were greatly surprised by his answer.

Moe Young

"Not less than two million," he replied.

Not content with that statement, "Yukee," as Mr. Young is familiarly known in the trade, came through with another surprise. He declared that many of the industry's most popular stars received their start by the song slide route at the meager salary of three dollars per day.

Song slides were the only part of the business at that early stage of the game, according to Mr. Young. The song slide was used everywhere, but started to gradually die out with the coming and growth of the motion picture. With its passing the slide producer had to look about for a new field for his wares.

With the production of feature films the slide business found a means for a new lease on life. Features needed advanced slides—and the slide manufacturer found that he had a bigger field to work in than ever.

Soon the firm that Mr. Young was with was turning out from 2,000 to 3,000 slides weekly for the motion picture business. Producers gradually increased their use of slides as advance notices of their films, so that now two million are used annually. During the war the government quickly saw the advantage of using slides as a medium for publicity work, and the firm that Mr. Moe was with turned out from 10,000 to 20,000 slides weekly for this purpose.

Mr. Young came to this country from Russia after he had finished his term of service as a lieutenant of cavalry in the Russian army. In 1898 he went to work as a professional photographer, and in 1902 he joined L. Hurstin at manufacturing song slides in New York City. From then on Mr. Young has been an important factor in the slide industry. During his twenty years in that business he claims to have handled more slides than any other individual.

Simplex Aids Charity Affair

On Friday evening, October 14, a prerelease showing of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's new super feature, "Peter Ibbetson," was given in the new beautiful ballroom of the Plaza Hotel, New York City, by the Film Mutual Benefit Bureau, an organization which throws open the homes of prominent people as locations for producers of motion pictures. The rentals for these locations being donated to the American Committee for Devastated France and Maternity Centre of New York.

The picture, which was loaned by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was projected on two Simplex projectors, donated for the occasion by the Precision Machine Company, Inc., and were in charge of projectionists from the Rialto theatre through the kindness of Mr. Riesenfeld. A. P. Lombard, of the sales division of the Precision Machine Company, Inc., personally supervised the installation details of the Simplex equipment.

A prologue, in which a number of prominent society people appeared, was directed by Mr. Riesenfeld, who also had charge of the presentation. The entire receipts of the evening will be devoted to the above causes.

Michigan Simplex Distributor Busy

Six more machines were added to th Simplex ratio in Grand Rapids, Michiga when the Consolidated Theatres, Inc., re placed other makes of projectors with si of the latest model Type "S" Moto Driven Simplex Projectors in their va rious theatres through the Michigan Mo tion Picture Supply Company of Detroit who are exclusive distributors for the va rious Simplex products in Michigan.

Two of these Simplex Projectors wer installed in the Strand theatre, a hous seating 700, and will be in charge of Jac Bogardus and Stanley Robbins, projec tionists. Perry Spencer is house manager Two also were installed in the 1200 sea Majestic theatre, and will be taken care of by Harold Fiske and Bryan Robbins, projectionists at this theatre. G. C. Ramch is manager.

While making the improvement, Claude Bright, chief projectionist for the Consolidated Theatres, Inc., saw to it that his own house was not neglected, and, of course, had two of the new Simplex Projectors installed in the Orpheum theatre, where he makes his headquarters. L. C. Wisell is the side partner of Bright at this theatre, which has a seating capacity of 1100. Harvey Arlington is manager.

Some of the other recent installations of Simplex Projectors in Michigan are: Shubert's Detroit Opera House, Detroit; Mecca theatre, Midland; Broadway theatre, Flint; Idle Hour theatre, Grand Rapids; La Veeda theatre, Detroit.

Plan Montana House

Frank Sabin of the Majestic theatre, Eureka, Mont., will soon start work on a house for that place to seat 500.

New York City.

Dear Sirs: Some time ago I ran a film here in the Gem theatre. It was a good, fine picture, but it was simply ruined by mis-frames.

By the time I had tailored the film up for the following night's program. I began to wish there was an organization to help do away with so many mis-frames. Only last night my wish came true when I received a can of films which had been inspected by one of your members of the N. A. M. L. (National Anti-Mis-frame League), and it was in excellent condition.

So I made up my mind to become a member. Please send all the details of the league and how to join.

Yours truly,
GEORGE VAN BOCKEN.

New Motorized Ticket Chopper

A brand new mechanical chopper has just been perfected by the Newman Manufacturing Co. Their patented mechanism, mounted in a mahoganized steel box, has been improved to the limit. Even the box has been changed for the better by the addition of casted corner ornaments.

Where large crowds are the rule this "motorized" mutilator will be found valuable. It leaves both hands of the operator free, and at his leisure the tickets accumulated in the hopper can be perforated.

Not long ago the Newman folks called attention to the patent granted on mechanism of their ticket chopper. They warned exhibitors to remember that the use of a chopper copied exactly from the Newman machine renders them liable to prosecution under the Federal law.

Its makers now find it possible to guarantee that their chopper will mutilate each and every ticket effectively, and yet permit of checking up, and that it will never clog, no matter how many tickets are run through at one time.

Takes Factory Course

V. S. Sukthankar, of the Norsuka Kinema Enterprise, Bombay, India, who has been in America for some time will very shortly return to his native country as sales representative of the Howell's Cine Equipment Company who hold the exclusive rights for the sale of Simplex projectors and other high grade equipment for India.

Sukthankar, who has traveled very extensively here and in Europe, has been in the Simplex factory for a number of weeks learning the construction and repairing of the Simplex projectors under the factor experts.

"The time I put in at the Simplex factory was well spent," said Sukthankar, who is keenly alive to the needs of the motion picture industry in India, and added, "from the knowledge gained I will now be in a position to render efficient service to all Simplex owners at home."

Victor Herbert Guest Conductor at Brooklyn Strand

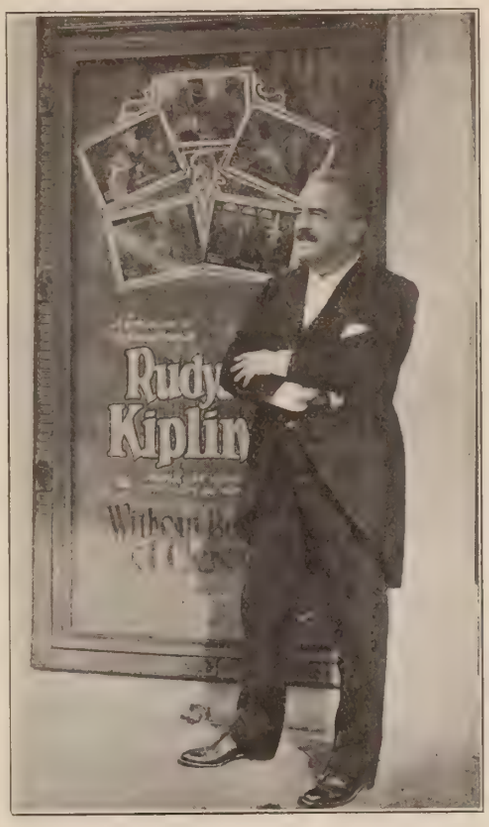
AFTER completing week engagements at Tom Moore's Rialto and the New York Mark Strand theatre, Victor Herbert is guest conductor at the Brooklyn Mark Strand for this week.

Mr. Herbert is featured and the orchestra numbers have the main spot on the bill.

The orchestral overture is "Carmen." The "Flower Song" serves as the theme for the stage presentation which had an exterior courtyard set with cut-out balcony and row of Spanish houses at left with a cut tree with tables and chairs underneath at centre front. A set garden wall and sky and foliage drop made the background. It was a typical Spanish picture at sunset with the lights in the houses coming up as the ardor of the song and dance interpretation increased.

Sonia Serova, solo dancer, opened the number with a pantomime or dance which reflected the couquettish spirit of the cigarette girl. Louis Samoloff, the lover, and a tenor, sat beneath the tree enraptured by the dancer. He pressed his courtship through the lines of the song at the conclusion of her dance.

Detroit Theatres Cooperate in Musical Event



DETROIT theatres last week had the opportunity to demonstrate in a timely and effective manner just how much they have accomplished in the musical end of program presentment. Thomas D. Moule, manager of the Adams and Madison theatres, together with more than a score of outlying houses, co-operated in the city and state-wide "music week" campaign which began Sunday, October 16, and continued through to the end of the week.

Every fraternal organization, business houses and individuals were asked to co-operate with the "music week" committees and the theatres were among the first to get in line to make the movement a huge success.

Both the Madison and Adams theatres have the largest orchestras in the Detroit section and special overtures were arranged and played by them, in appropriate settings, throughout the week.

Professor Firmin Swinnin Composes "The Theatre Organist"

FIRMIN SWINNEN, the New York Rivoli organist has composed "The Theatre Organist," an original work for the "movie-player" and dedicated it "To the Society of Theatre Organists." Book I contains five Dramatic Andantes; Book II, Dramatic Agitatos; Book III, Love Themes; Book IV, Misteriosos; Book V, Hurries. Anyone can see what is meant by these titles. Not every organist is able to improvise such music on the spur of the moment, so these short works will prove a boon to them! The composer's object is to furnish suitable music for the scenes presented on the screen and they are playable on a two or three keyboard organ. Registration is provided, and explicit directions are given as to the best way to perform certain portion. No less an authority than Hugo Riesenfeld indorsed the pieces and his letter is reprinted on the title page.

Georgia Law Taxes Grand Opera Performances

ATLANTA is likely to lose her cherished season of grand opera next spring, because of a new law which was passed by the last session of the Georgia Legislature, calling for a tax of $2,500 on every performance of grand opera in that state. The officers of the Music Festival Association, which has made it possible for Atlanta to have a week of grand opera every year, state that it is hardly likely that they will be able to overcome this handicap. Colonel William Lawson Peel, president of the Music Festival Association, who has been called "the Father of Atlanta's Opera Season," states that never yet has this season made any money for the guarantors. In fact, it is not money-making in any sense of the word. The idea is to give Atlanta something that is enjoyed by no other Southern city and something that is an intellectual achievement.

Every season a certain group of public-spirited men of vision and ideals guarantee that the expense of the opera, provided it does not pay for itself, will be met. Every season these men have put their hands in their pockets and made up a certain deficit. Last season, with a group of entirely new singers with scarcely one familiar face, and only one or two operas well known to Atlanta, was the most successful the city has yet had, and the sum required from each guarantor was very small. The officers of the Music Festival Association were elated. Their plans for next season became even more ambitious, and they were quite optimistic.

But during the last session of the legislature, somebody suggested the opera tax, and despite the most determined fight ever put up by the intellectual body of Georgia—the newspapers, the schools, colleges, music schools and conservatories, and people of education and artistic appreciation—the bill was passed.

Stanley Theatre Inaugurates Musical Festival

WITH the opening of the new Stanley theatre at Philadelphia recently, classical music in the picture houses of the Quaker City received its first big impetus.

In accordance with a carefully planned policy of the Stanley management, special musical programs have been arranged for the entire month of October.

A quartet of sterling artists has been secured to render operatic selections. This quartet gave selections from "Rigoletto," "Lucia" and "Romeo and Juliet" for the first three weeks of the Stanley's Music Festival Month and this week is presenting excerpts from "Martha."

It is very apparent that the Stanley is drawing thousands of patrons during this festival month who are attending the performances just as much to hear the music as to see the feature picture. This policy of presenting high class music in connection with the performance is arousing much genuine interest, and it is receiving the hearty endorsement of many prominent Philadelphians. The first week the operatic selection was well received; the second week there was still more interest shown, while this week genuine enthusiasm is being displayed.

Victor Herbert's Washington Engagement Great Success

TOM MOORE, Washington's pioneer exhibitor and recognized as one of the most progressive showmen of the East, again demonstrated his sagacity and foresight in program arrangement for his Rialto theatre, when he recently brought Victor Herbert, one of America's foremost living composers, to the National Capitol as Guest Conductor of the Famous Rialto Orchestra, the engagement extending over a week.

This was the eminent composer-conductor's premier appearance with the orchestra of any theatre in the country the interests of which are devoted exclusively to the presentation of motion pictures. To say he was a success is stating the fact mildly. Washington turned out en masse to greet him, his appearance resulting in one of the most delightful and profitable engagements the Rialto has ever known.

While the Rialto is known throughout the territory for the extensive scale upon which it advertises its attractions, the unsolicited publicity accorded Mr. Herbert by the newspapers of the city was remarkable, all, without exception, noting his arrival and the precedent he was setting, by lengthy advance stories, special pictures in all Sunday editions and numerous interviews during his stay.

Philadelphia Orchestra Gives Fine Program

THE symphony season in Philadelphia began Friday afternoon, October 7, with the opening concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Conductor Leopold Stokowski included in his inaugural program three fine orchestral numbers, the great D minor symphony of Cesar Franck, the entire final scene of Wagner's "Walküre," and Elgar's "Enigma" variations. The orchestra was greeted by the audience with much enthusiasm.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"The White Mouse"

(Selig-Rork Drama — Two Reels — Released Through Educational Exchanges)

Sergeant Blake .....Lewis Stone
Dr. Lawler, Ah Ming .....Wallace Beery
Erminie Rives .....Ethel Grey Terry
Sing Lu .....Willard Louis
Temple Virgin .....Bessie Wong
Mrs. Rives .....Margaret McWade
Story by James Oliver Curwood. Adapted and directed by Bertram Bracken.

THERE is no need at this late date to bestow praise upon these two-reel dramas, nor to commend the daring which brought this form of entertainment back to the screen after it had been relegated, irrevocably, most thought, by the five and six-reel feature. Audiences like the short drama as much as they enjoy a short story in a magazine. And they especially enjoy two-reelers of the quality of this Selig-Rork series. This has been proven in the past.

"The White Mouse" will be classed by most people as even better than "The Ne'er to Return Road." They will enjoy it more because of its happy ending. And they will be thrilled by the acting of an all-star cast that lives up to its name; held breathless by a continuity which is so perfect that it plays with the emotions, loosening the suspense only to tighten it again in a tense climax. It is another of James Oliver Curwood's mounted police dramas. The characters are: a girl of the north country (Ethel Grey Terry); the wounded police sergeant (Lewis Stone); a supposed doctor doing research work (Wallace Beery), and a wandering Chinaman seeking to revenge the wrong done to his tong (Willard Louis). The romance develops; the revenge motive works up, with a veil of mystery to increase the interest. In the climax Beery has his enemy powerless. He contemplates injecting the germ of hydrophobia into the arm of the sleeping man, hesitates, and decides to admit the mad wolf. Awakened by the white mouse that crawls about his face, the policeman engages in a hand to hand fight with the maddened animal. Beery dies at the hands of the Chinaman.

Nothing is lacking in the performance of any of the players. Beery's role is the most impressive and his performance especially noteworthy. The photography is excellent. "The White Mouse" is high class, and at the same time, most undeniably, it is entertainment.

"The Code of the West"

(Texas Guinan Production—State Rights)

TEXAS GUINAN, familiarly called "the female Bill Hart," certainly lives up to the song of the six-shooter in her latest opus entitled "The Code of the West." The author, Jesse J. Ormont, has conceived a likely tale—one that is punctuated with high-falutin' action and incident. He has kept his star busy registering the spirit of the West through a display of shootin' ability as well as horsemanship. If there is an obviousness about the plot, its familiarity doesn't intrude to any extent because of the compact line of action.

It is the star's duty to capture the villain, who burned the barn in order to camouflage his attempt to steal the papers, and she rides like a whooping Amazon straight in the face of danger and thrill. Accompanied by the foreman of the ranch, she encounters her brother badly wounded. And with a fine spirit of sacrifice he willingly accepts the responsibility of paying for the crime of murder. Texas and her foreman have one of the villains cornered and have their 44's raised when a bullet dispatched from another source puts the scamp out of his misery.

The result of the incident finds the hero in jail, but Texas, ever resourceful, rescues him by surprising the deputy. When the brother indicates that he will recover, the real assassin confesses and all is over. The picture is staged among backgrounds which suggest true atmosphere. It is marked for its rapid-fire action. The star and her players are "up and doing" every minute. Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Honor of Rameriz"

(Tom Santschi Drama—Pathe—Two Reels)

TOM SANTSCHI certainly finds expression in this two-reeler for a deal of complicated drama. He portrays a Latin-American residing near the Mexican border and his object is to rescue the heroine in distress and save the stolen gold. The heroine in this particular story is the wife of a geologist, who is a friend of Rameriz, and she has a difficult time repulsing a certain philanderer in his romantic designs. The villain has complicated matters by leaving a letter implicating the wife. And when the husband discovers it he is jealous with rage. But his anger does not deter Rameriz.

The Latin-American's wife has also become suspicious and her jealousy aroused, causes her to co-operate with the geologist in hunting down Rameriz. Both couples and the villain arrive at the same inn, and the complications are swept aside. The picture is uneven in its development and many of the scenes are unconvincing. However, it has the saving grace of being unduly melodramatic and the thrills will undoubtedly compensate for the flaws. Ruth Stonehouse and Bessie Love support the star.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Happy Pest"

(Al St. John Comedy-Fox)

THE authors or directors of screen comedies of late are developing a flair for thrill since the skyscraper under construction is serving as a medium for their stars. Harold Lloyd serves up thrilling moments in his latest opus. And now comes Al St. John displaying nerve and agility atop the steel or iron beams which are being jacketed about through space. It is all quite thrilling and makes one dizzy to watch the comedy antics. The spectator rather holds his breath instead of releasing it in volumes of pent-up laughter.

Al falls off a beam and is rolled out by a passing steam roller. And then the dream idea is utilized. He conjures up maidens who turn out to be hoboes whenever he gets in their immediate vicinity. And this bit of incident is followed by a theatre scene which reveals a "take-off" on "Way Down East." When the heroine packs herself off to the ice, Al follows her and rescues her just in time. This finish is quite the brightest spot in a comedy which carries about every conceivable incident imaginable. —2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Nick-of-Time Hero"

(W. S. Campbell Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

MR. CAMPBELL has marshalled his forces of boy and girl players and horse and dog actors, and turned out a fair comedy which fails to be distinguished by any real laugh-getting gags or novel situations. Because it is not as whimsical or imaginative as "The Stork's Mistake," Mr. Campbell's last effort, it suffers greatly by comparison. The comedy deals with a six-year old vamp who is rescued by a twelve year old hero, a beautiful white horse, a monkey, and a dog. An escaped tiger serves as the villain, and some scenes are good for a mild thrill.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Advance Feature Review

"A Knight of the West"

(W. B. M. Photoplays—C. O. D. Blanchfield—State Rights)

A NEW star has come over the Western horizon in the personality of Olin Francis, who indicates that he will establish a following in short order so sure is his grasp on the interpretation of the cowboy hero of the plains. A big, raw-boned fellow, quick on the trigger, at home in the saddle, he gives evidence that he knows a thing or two about portraying the accepted Western type. He possesses a personality after the same style of Jack Hoxie, and is surely husky enough to take up the burden of the most complicated sample of Western melodrama. His first effort is "A Knight of the West," a comedy-drama which sort of satirizes the popular style of cowboy story.

It is a simple tale and always obvious, but this is the only flaw. Indeed its familiarity would not be so evident and the spectator would not anticipate the actions so much but for the fact that the title writer has explained beforehand the individual characters and scenes and just what their purpose indicates. This does not take a particle of interest away from the offering, for it carries a line of action that holds the attention. The characters are varied enough and the sequences comprise enough sure-fire elements to appeal to most every patron who worships at the shrine of the Western. The plot, itself, concerns a foreman who in reality is a cattle rustler and it is the star's object to expose the villainy.

Realizing that the idea would spend itself the director has enlivened the scenes with a good sample of humor. This introduces Billy Franey, of comedy fame, enacting the part of a grotesque cowboy. And a barn dance is exploited for the sake of atmosphere. The villain, appreciating that events are turning out disastrously, kidnaps the heroine. And the subsequent scene reveals a genuine thrill as the hero rescues the girl and gives fight to the foreman. They battle all over the ground atop a high cliff, and the villain is exterminated. The bunkhouse episodes, the riding and shooting, the camp life—these are all picturesque and charged with atmosphere. It makes a first rate Western. Eva B. Heazlit is the author. Robert B. McKenzie directed. Length 5 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"CONFLICT"
(Universal)

Sure-fire Money-Getter; Vigorous and Thrilling

PRISCILLA DEAN is certainly running in luck. No sooner is she finished with "Outside the Law," and "Reputation," two outstanding melodramas which seemingly carried every element for success, and which permitted the star to assume great acting parts than she takes up "Conflict," a picture which not only carries tremendous vigor and vitality, but gives Miss Dean the chance to show a talent for thrilling adventure. Truly she takes her life in her hands on several occasions—not the least of which is a jump from a second story window, and a rescue act in a powerfully vivid log-jam.

Like "Way Down East" the picture will be chiefly remembered for its crashing climax. Like the Griffith attraction the preceding episodes offer just so much atmosphere for the overwhelming shock at the finish. It is a thrill which out-thrills any scene ever flashed with the exception of the ice-jam in "Way Down East." The crushing rush of thousands of logs sent down-stream through a bursting dam and carrying everything before them to inevitable destruction—the flashes of the unconscious figure of the hero lying prone on the floating floor of the log-swept cabin—the mad ride of the girl to reach him before the logs are sent tumbling over the swirling waterfall—the jam of logs and huts and river refuse—these build a climax which puts one in a frenzy of excitement.

You marvel at it. You wonder over the skill of the director in shaping his episodes so that they form a perfect setting for the crash of these elemental forces. One wonders if it could be staged. If the director has not timed his story action with a genuine logging scene then you are compelled to marvel over the engineering skill displayed in arranging the startling realities. And it all goes under the name of entertainment with the spectators safe, but thoroughly excited. But if you think that the big thrill—the clash of events at the climax is all, you are mistaken. The denoument is reached through a line of mysterious and dramatic adventure. The heroine is compelled to find refuge in a big, dark, clammy, foreboding house with death or some awful tragedy constantly suggested. Mysterious figures are they—one a stern, religious, unyielding uncle, the other, a brooding, smug, hypocritical she-devil whose object is to terrify the girl. She learns of a horrible secret and jumps to save herself from the murderous instincts of the vengeful cat-woman. These scenes are uncanny in their suggestion. Yes the sunshine radiates at times for the romantic element is highly dominant.

It is a stark melodrama, a bit implausible you will admit, and somewhat theatrical. Some of the events could never happen. But you forget these in the swirl of dramatic clashes. The scenery is magnificent, particularly the wooded landscapes and the maddening rush of the imprisoned waters. The conflict of the cat-woman and the girl—the conflict of the uncle and the hero who emerges triumphant—the conflict of the elements make this a superlative melodrama. The acting of Martha Mattox as the brooding, vengeful woman is a triumph of character expression. Herbert Rawlinson, Ed Conelly and L. C. Shumway round out a cast that is excellent in every way.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A startling melodrama of the logging camps—a vivid adventure story of the conflict of human beings and the elements—a picturesque and thrilling sensation of the North Woods is "Conflict," the Universal special which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Priscilla Dean as the star. It is a picture which unfolds a stark, mysterious line of action—a line of action which baffles solution but which at the same time is tinctured with romance and sentiment, and it develops a climax which is overwhelming in its crash of events. One sees the star blow up the dam and release the pent-up floods which takes thousands of logs on their rushing, maddening course down the river to inevitable destruction. The offering is finely acted and staged.

PROGRAM READER

See the stupendous, thrilling, stark melodrama, "Conflict." See Priscilla Dean in her greatest picture. See the thrill of a lifetime—the like of which has never appeared before on the screen. See the terrific fight between maddened men on the banks of the river. See the blowing up of the dam and the release of the pent-up frenzied waters which carry thousands of logs before them in their crushing course straight to inevitable destruction. See the fight for life. See the biggest melodrama of the year. A picture you won't forget. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

If you neglect getting this picture you ought to be compelled to close up your theatre and sell ice cream cones. You will play it. You cannot help yourself. So get hold of the Universal data published and go to it. Bill it as stupendous, thrilling, crashing, crushing in its dramatic force and appeal. Play up the star and cast. And put it over big in every way. But make a play about the huge thrill. Get them in—that is enough. Word of mouth will attend to the patronage afterward.

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET"
(May Tully-F. B. Warren)

A Happy Memory of Youth; Great Audience Picture

TIME turns backward in its flight in this visualization of "The Old Oaken Bucket." This sentimental ballad of yesterday, which will ever remain popular, has been used as the background for a happy memory of youth, and so faithful are the fond recollections that its appeal is irresistible. It has been no easy matter to compile these scenes and shape them into a harmonious whole, but May Tully has seemingly worked with artistic appreciation. She has collected as fine an assortment of rustic settings as have ever graced a rural photoplay.

The very fact that the backgrounds include a picturesque waterfall, a quaint farm-house, a snug swimmin' hole, a fishing pond with a truly rustic bridge as a background, an exquisite garden spot, a few cozy coves and lover's lanes indicate that Miss Tully traveled far and wide, for it is safe to assume that these strips of nature were not discovered on one location. With the eye feasting on these eloquent backgrounds, the memory of youth returns as the glorious days are lived over. Whether you have lived in the city all your life does not matter. The urbanite will visualize himself in the picture. Those who have left the country home and fireside will express an acute feeling of sentiment.

Miss Tully has brought out these scenes realistically. There is not an incident which could be called exaggerated. In order to reach the substance of the memory, she picturizes a Wall Street figure, oppressed with care and worry, desirous of living over his youth in the scenes of his childhood. And so he leaves the material world and becomes a poet for a day. A series of dissolves are employed, and the rich man emerges from maturity to become a boy again. The smile returns to his face—a smile tinctured with pathos. Once again he steals the pie from the cooling spot in the kitchen window, or he may cut his hand and bandage it so heavily that he is looked upon as the ideal hero by his chums (a true touch, but no more genuine than the others depicted). He goes in swimming with his pals, all of them naked, and is unsuccessful in hiding from his mother, and as he grows older he steals a kiss from his best girl at a picnic for two. She is provoked at him and rides home with the fresh, but affluent clerk in the bank, for his buggy is brand new and the horse is a thoroughbred. He will get even by speeding by, driving a nifty team. And he goes to the well and drinks from the moss-covered bucket.

The rich man does not neglect a single thought which brought him boyhood happiness. He discovers Mary, the girl of his youth, now the village school-marm and together they wander into the dying sunset. There is no plot. It comprises a series of episodes which, taken collectively, conquer because of their rich sentiment, charm and humor. The picture is genuine because the boys are real boys and the things they do are ever being done through the flight of time. The principals in the cast are Joseph Smiley, Violet Axzell and Bobby Connelly. May Tully directed and with E. S. Harrison wrote the scenario.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A tribute to an ever-popular song—a fancy of youthful memory in which the hand of Time is turned backward so that a dream of childhood days may be restored is "The Old Oaken Bucket." This charming song has been translated in many languages. It has become a classic. The appeal of the lyric carries such sentiment and heart interest that its suggestion as a medium of film expression will be appreciated by everyone. Consequently May Tully has fashioned a clever story around the song. A city dweller, tired of the humdrum existence of making money and worshipping at false shrines, returns to the vistas of his boyhood days and again lives over the happy memories. The old swimming hole, the stolen sweets, the picnic with his best girl, the school-days, the buggy riding, the hundred and one unforgettable memories of a bygone age are visualized and the picture tugs at the heart as a consequence. It is prettily laid among scenes of rustic charm. "The Old Oaken Bucket" will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— and ————.

PROGRAM READER

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood." How many remember the words that start this lovely song of charm and sentiment entitled "The Old Oaken Bucket?" It has become one of the classics—a song to be compared to "Swanee River" and many others. It tugs at the heart. Its simplicity, its sweet story of memories is enough to make one forget the work-a-day world and become a youth again. As a picture its appeal is irresistible. Memories of boyhood days come over an elderly figure. He has forgotten his youth in his search for wealth. But he returns to the spot of the old oaken bucket. And lives over the happy memories of youth. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture should not be hard to exploit. First you have the original song which can be resurrected and used as a prologue. A moss-covered well can be easily made of paper-mache and groups of farmer boys and girls can trip up to it and drink from the old oaken bucket. A rural setting with a courting scene would lend some significance too. Also a barn dance or a musical ensemble featuring the old time songs with "The Old Oaken Bucket" dominant. Your musical arrangement should feature the song above all others. Bill it as a sweet, wholesome, charming study of sentiment—a study poignant and quaint. Bill it as a happy memory of youthful days. You can put this over if you give it the proper thought.

"THE ACE OF HEARTS"
(Goldwyn)

Rather Depressing Story of "Reds" and Revenge

IT must be said of Gouverneur Morris' stories that they usually carry original ideas even though the author is inclined to overstep the mark in his search for novelty. His "Ace of Hearts," confined to the limitations of the short story magazine, might carry sufficient incident and dialogue to interest most any reader, and doubtless it would read quite convincing. Upon the screen, the tale is not successful in stimulating any feeling of real interest because characterization must needs be dominant.

So when a group of social reformers—fanatics would be the correct word—band together to rid the world of evil characters who have lived too long, their object takes on the color of red socialism or bolshevism or whatever you want to call it. And they appear so insignificant, their effort seems so futile, that they invite pity rather than scorn. It is a story which does not carry any marked incident, and the fact that it is single-track in character compels the plot to spend itself. It is all mapped out in advance, and though crime looms up in the offing the suspense is largely missing on this account. At the point when the fatal ace of hearts is drawn by one of the zealots the spectator loses his grip on the story because the element of romance is lending its force to rob it of its vitality. Much of the incident exploiting the reformers takes on the form of a fraternity initiation. The serious expressions of the figures, their hushed manner, their stealthy approaches, their secret plottings tend to create a fair amount of suspense.

You know for a certainty that their plot will fail because the quality of virtue must triumph. Instead of being fanatics, they are represented as quite human. And they made the mistake of admitting a prepossessing young woman into their society. Once she had asserted her romantic tendencies there was no hope that their cause would prosper. The hero returns with the lame excuse that he could not exterminate the marked evil-doer because of the close proximity of a pair of honeymooners. They were so eager for life and expression that he could not send off the fatal bomb in the restaurant in which he was employed as a waiter. Real fanatics are unmindful of any sweet sentiment. Yet Morris for the sake of adding the romantic note, and giving his story some appeal, has robbed it of its reality. And probably, fear of the censors, that they might condemn the tale as unwholesome, compelled the author to watch his step. The action drags considerably though the lapses permit Lon Chaney and the other players to reveal some colorful character studies.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A unique story of intrigue, romance and adventure is Gouverneur Morris' "Ace of Hearts," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with an excellently balanced cast headed by Lon Chaney, one of the foremost character actors of the day. The story is a wide departure from the usual screen fare since it is based upon a peculiar idea of sacrifice. A group of zealots fired with enthusiasm for their cause are banded together to rid the world of men who have lived too long. They have picked out a certain individual who, to them, represents all the mercenary characteristics of the exploiter of the poor.

The zealot who draws the ace of hearts is the lucky individual who is to rid the world of this menace. He is fired with determination—is Forrest. A waiter in a restaurant, the menace is in his power and the infernal machine is made ready to exterminate him. But the waiter has pangs of conscience when he realizes that his dastardly crime will eliminate a pair of innocent lovers. The picture builds a line of action which is exceptionally adventurous and rich with suspense. And Lon Chaney and the other members of the cast render good performances.

PROGRAM READER

A story presenting a powerful drama dealing with the aim of a fanatical group of reformers to destroy all the evildoers of the world is coming in "Ace of Hearts," the Goldwyn attraction which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a well balanced cast headed by the excellent character actor, Lon Chaney. These reformers will stop at nothing to gain their ends. Though their aims may be altruistic and noble, their methods are evil. Consequently, there arises the old question of "Does the end justify the means?" It is a fascinating story, building a line of tense drama and suspense and splendidly acted and directed.

SUGGESTIONS

You can arouse a deal of interest by bringing to the attention of your patrons the idea exploited in the Program Reader. A line of argument put forth attractively will arouse attention and excite comment. Tell that the world is filled with cranks and reformers and that the picture is timely and convincing. Play up the author as one of the leading short story writers of the day, and emphasize that Lon Chaney heads the cast. If you booked "The Penalty" or "The Miracle Man" your crowd is familiar with his talent. A novel prologue can be put over concerning the drawing of the ace of hearts—this would be in line with a scene of the play.

"THE SECRET OF THE HILLS"
(Vitagraph)

Satisfying Mystery Melodrama With Moreno as Star

VITAGRAPH is on the right track giving Antonio Moreno mystery melodramas. This star possesses a dynamic personality which calls for stories of considerable vitality. And since mystery tales embody plenty of color and action there need be no fear that he might possibly be miscast. "The Secret of the Hills" will please most any audience. It carries a satisfying vein of melodrama, though the incident which marked a previous picture, "Three Sevens," is not so abundant. The plot revolves around the recovery of a chest of buried treasure and the planting of the mystery is carefully hidden by a certain code which must needs be explained before the hero solves the puzzle.

This code is found in a book which has been stolen by a counterfeiter from a wealthy adventurer. When the hero starts upon his quest there seems to be no clue which might enable him to gather the evidence. He has rescued a girl in distress and found her uncle murdered by the treasure hunters. And since he is an American newspaper correspondent residing in London, the spectators have a chance to respond to his courage and determination. The code takes him to the country home of the adventurer and the suspense mounts when you realize that the hero is constantly watched. The house is steeped in mystery which finds expression in various trap-doors and hidden panels and what not. He locates the hidden book and pieces the code together and discovers that the treasure chest is buried in a remote cave in the Scottish highlands. Meanwhile he has made a get-away through a trap-door placed in the bottom of a huge trunk and stumbles upon a secret chamber which harbors the paraphernalia of counterfeiters.

The mystery spends itself here to be replaced by melodramatic incident concerning the unearthing of the treasure chest and a fight to hold it against the villains. The arch-plotter is exposed through a revengeful woman, and his cohorts are duly punished. The picture builds well, there being the right proportion of emphasis placed upon the mystery element throughout. The love interest intrudes occasionally, but since it has no real purpose in the plot its appearance seems unnecessary. Moreno plays his part with adequate enthusiasm and persuasion and his company is efficient. The backgrounds are suggestive and the details entirely in order. —Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Secret of the Hills," the Vitagraph feature which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Antonio Moreno, is adapted from a highly successful novel by William Garrett, an English writer. In this production the dashing Moreno assumes the role of a young American who encounters a series of amusing and exciting adventures in London and the highlands of Scotland because two beautiful eyes lead him in quest of romance.

The heroine is seemingly overwhelmed by obstacles. However, the fearless American, single-handed, sets out to best a dangerous band of criminals and solve a mystery which is exceptionally baffling. The introduction of a buried treasure and the development of a love interest give the story color and provide for many thrilling incidents which are certain to keep the spectator on the qui vive until the final fade-out. The element of suspense is particularly well developed. The picture is a clever mystery melodrama and well acted and staged.

PROGRAM READER

He was a young, but fearless American correspondent, keen for any kind of adventure. He was confronted with a baffling mystery which had to do with buried treasure. He had no clue to work upon but a secret code incorporated in a rare book. But how to secure it? This baffling mystery is unrivaled in the intensely dramatic story, "The Secret of the Hills," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring the dashing and romantic Antonio Moreno. The action is laid in London and the highlands of Scotland. Manager ———— guarantees it as a story that will hold attention with intense dramatic action, picturesque backgrounds and a unique plot of adventure.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture is the second which marks Moreno's return to the feature play. If you have played the Vitagraph serials your crowd is familiar with Moreno's work. State that it is on a par with "Three Sevens" in point of adventure and action and suspense. Describe it as a mystery melodrama which baffles solution—that it unfolds a unique line of adventure, is crammed with incident, and thrills, and is beautifully photographed around scenes which are a replica of the highlands of Scotland. Bill it as a stirring photoplay of mystery, suspense, love, romance, action and buried treasure.

"TWO MINUTES TO GO"
(First National)

Timely and Rather Interesting Football Picture

SOME one around the Ray lot has a faculty for picking stories that will be timely. "Two Minutes to Go" is a football picture, the first one in a long time and hits the first run's right in the middle of an interesting football season.

As drama, Mr. Ray's latest vehicle is quite largely a series of scenes purporting to be a small college football game, the camera alternating between the gridiron and the side lines, and another series of scenes purporting to be what college boys and girls do in the way of using up superfluous energy during the time they are not in the recitation room, especially on Halloween night. The plot consists in what complications can be evolved from having Charlie get in dutch with his girl for not owning up that he peddles milk in order to pay his way through college and from his refusing to play football and thereby eliminating his Alma Mater's chances to defeat the hated rival, without giving a reason—said reason being that he couldn't peddle milk from early morning to class time and still find hours enough in the day to appear on the football field.

However, the picture has a lot of good incident, keeps moving throughout and the football scenes are rather interesting. For this reason it will be hailed by the younger set as a hit and accepted for the most part by those who have forgotten their football days and Halloween night escapades, as a passable bit of entertainment.

The picture is not nearly so intimate as are most of Mr. Ray's vehicles. As for the football game it will take sharp eyes to identify the star when on the field. Mary Anderson is the co-ed with whom Ray is in love and Truman Van Dyke is the near heavy of the story. Lincoln Stedman has another important role as "Fatty" Ray's room mate and chum. It is announced that a number of noted footballers took part in the contest staged. Anyway the game looks sufficiently real to have been played by lads who are not novices.—Length. 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Chester Burnett.....Charles Ray
Ruth Turner.....Mary Anderson
Her Father.....Lionel Belmore
"Fatty".....Lincoln Stedman
"Angel".....Trueman Van Dyke
Football Coach.....Tom Wilson
Dean of Baker University.....Francois Dumas
Professor of Spanish.....Philip Dunham

Directed by Charles Ray.
Story by Richard Andres.

PROGRAM READER

Charles Ray, in his latest photoplay, a football story entitled "Two Minutes to Go," is the feature attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

In this picture Ray plays the part of a football star in a small college and not the least of the entertainment provided is a real football game in which the star plays the hero, winning the game for his Alma Mater in the last two minutes of play.

However, the feature is not all football and some very interesting and amusing scenes of college life, notably Halloween pranks that are played on the seniors, are shown.

In support of Mr. Ray is a fine cast including Mary Anderson as the heroine and such other well known players as Lionel Belmore, Lincoln Stedman, Tom Wilson, Trueman Van Dyke and others. The picture was directed by Mr. Ray from an original story by Richard Andres. The offering screens in five reels.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Two Minutes to Go," an exciting and amusing football story, is the latest Charlie Ray starring vehicle to be presented at the ———— theatre. The feature comes to the ———— for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

Mr. Ray plays the role of a football star who wins the championship match in the last two minutes of play after having been inspired to great deeds by a note from the only girl sitting on the side lines, telling him that all was forgiven. The picture is an interesting and amusing story of college life and among other things illustrates how exuberant youngsters cut up on Halloween night in a small college town.

The feature was directed by Mr. Ray from a story by Richard Andre. In support of the star is a strong cast of well known players. The roster includes such favorites as Mary Anderson, Lionel Belmore, Lincoln Stedman and others well known to the fans. A feature of the attraction is a realistic football game in which Mr. Ray and a number of real gridiron heroes have prominent parts.

SUGGESTIONS

If you play this picture during the football season you should have no trouble hooking up with local football heroes in presenting it. Designate certain nights for entertaining local college and high school elevens and hook up wherever you can with former college stars. Suppose you were to have all the old college players of note in your city present on some particular night. Your prologue should be of the "college room" variety with college songs, glee club numbers, etc., on the bill. You can get cooperation from the sporting goods stores in the matter of window displays and probably in fixing up a lobby. Bill the picture as a comedy and do not promise anything out of the ordinary as to story.

CATCH LINES

A novelty picture of college boys and co-eds in which football and the pranks that are a part of the college course figure extensively but not to the detriment of a pleasing little romance in which Charlie Ray is the hero and Mary Anderson the one and only girl.

Charlie Ray as the star football player of a one-horse college winning the championship game and the niftiest co-ed in the institution, all in the same afternoon.

"DOUBLING FOR ROMEO"
(Goldwyn)

Great Entertainment With Star in Ideal Role

THE personality of Will Rogers, titles contributed by the star, which are the acme of wit and appropriateness, a wealth of truly humorous incident and one of the most ingenious picture ideas ever to be used, all contribute in making "Doubling for Romeo" fine entertainment.

Rogers plays the role of a love-lorn cowboy who quits his job to "double" for various alleged picture celebrities at a Los Angeles studio in order that he may learn how to make love in movie land style, the girl of whom he is enamored being romantic and demanding some Romeo stuff before she is willing to capitulate. Burlesque scenes, showing Rogers playing parts in pictures, during which some fun is poked at movie people, up stage stars, temperamental directors, movie land cowboys, etc., provides plenty of entertainment for about three reels. Then come some scenes from "Romeo and Juliet" with Rogers playing "Romeo," the idea being to illustrate a dream Bill is having, after having read Shakespeare's romance, a copy of which he has borrowed from the local sky pilot. These scenes are burlesqued also.

The final episode shows the star adopting the wooing methods of the cave man, this style of love making having been demonstrated in one of the pictures he saw in the process of construction during his Los Angeles residency.

The picture is farce-comedy and at times burlesque and possibly those who take their photoplays seriously may not think it so funny, but for people who go to the picture theatre for entertainment, we can recommend nothing more pleasing. There are a hundred real laughs for even a hard boiled reviewer.

Sylvia Breamer is the heroine and Raymond Hatton has an important male role. However, the picture is pretty much Will Rogers from beginning to end which is as it should be. It also looks as if he had something to do with the direction. There is so much typical Rogers stuff used, to be otherwise. Someday when Rogers gets so old that he can't earn $3,000 a week, working for the Shuberts, he is going to be found wielding a megaphone. When that times comes the biggest boys in the business had better look to their laurels.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

Directed by Clarence Badger.
Written by Elmer L. Rice and Will Rogers and with quotations and scenes from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Will Rogers is presented as a cowboy who just had to learn how to make love in order to win the heart and hand of his boss's daughter, in "Doubling for Romeo," the feature picture scheduled for showing at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————.

The inimitable "Bill" quits his job as cowpuncher and gets himself a job in the movies so that he can learn how to be a Romeo and the result is one scene after another of hilarity. He "doubles" for everybody around the lot with adventures aplenty for himself in the process. Then he goes to sleep and dreams that he is playing Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet" which makes another series of extremely funny scenes.

In support of Mr. Rogers is a strong cast. Sylvia Breamer is the girl of the Golden West for whom Bill goes Romeoing and Raymond Hatton is the soda water fountain barkeep, his rival. Others who will have important roles are Sydney Ainsworth and Jimmie Rogers, the star's small son, who is a chip of the old block in every way, acting and all.

PROGRAM READER

"Doubling for Romeo" is the title of Will Rogers's latest starring vehicle which comes to the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

In "Doubling for Romeo" the rope spinning comedian plays the role of a love-lorn cowboy who must needs learn how to make love in order to win the romantic minded daughter of his boss. To accomplish this he goes to Los Angeles and starts in taking lessons from the movies. He doubles for all the heroes and villains on the lot and the result is a series of adventures that provide an unlimited amount of mirth for the picture fan.

The picture is a farce comedy vehicle for Mr. Rogers but it is one of the most original offerings of the season. Titles written by the star add not a little to the comedy provided.

The supporting cast contains such names as Sylvia Breamer, Sidney Ainsworth, Raymond Hatton and Jimmie Rogers, the star's young son, a chip of the old block when it comes to acting.

The feature is in six reels. It was directed by Clarence Badger. The material was provided by Elmer L. Rice and Mr. Rogers with parts taken from "Romeo and Juliet," reproduced in burlesque.

CATCH LINES

Can you imagine the fun when funny Bill Rogers plays the part of a love-lorn cowboy who gets a job in the movies so he can learn how to be a Romeo in order that he may woo and win the boss's daughter?

The one and only Bill Rogers in a part that was made to order. In fact, Bill and Mr. Shakespeare wrote the show.

"SURE FIRE"
(Universal)

A Snappy Little Western With Gibson Whooping It Up as Usual

THERE probably won't be much argument about "Sure Fire" being Hoot Gibson's best bet to date. If it unfolds an orthodox story with more or less hackneyed situations, at least it keeps moving with plenty of snap and vigor and the irrepressible Hoot Gibson is in there trying every minute. Give him a frolicsome colt, and one of the shooting kind—a 44 to be exact, dress him up with a huge Stetson, chaps, and all the necessary accoutrements and he will compel attention every time. Here he has a role which excites admiration and sympathy—admiration for his nonchalance and ease in and out of the saddle—sympathy for his spirit of sacrifice in saving a misguided wife from a husband's suspicions.

There won't be any trouble for anyone anticipating just how the story will develop. And suspense is forced to find expression in just how Hoot will get out of his difficulty when the posse is after him. His sweetheart has upbraided him for lacking ambition and so he proceeds to lift the old mortgage on his ranch in double-quick order. Meanwhile what of her sister, the wife of the aforementioned husband? She has encouraged a city slicker who has arranged a rendezvous to meet the woman and elope. He has stolen a snug sum from the hiding place in the old trunk, but true to type, has thought more of the money than his love affair. So it is up to Hoot to discover the plot, though he is caught leaving the house just as the husband returns from a trip. The latter finds the money gone and starts in pursuit.

There is present a group of bandits who have killed the slicker and stolen the precious wealth. It looks pretty dark for Hoot, what with the mortgage about to be foreclosed and a posse hot in pursuit. He stumbles upon the hiding place of the bandits who have kidnapped the heroine and punishes them in picturesque western style. There is no clash of fists, but a duel in the blackness of the night, and Hoot's 44 speaks volumes of business. Thus the cowboy and the young lady are found by the pursuing posse. And the husband never suspects. The slicker being exterminated, Hoot has the precious secret of the wife's infidelity locked in his heart. The picture is moving every minute and so the obviousness is quite eliminated. There is a punch that will satisfy. The exteriors are charming and picturesque, there being a wealth of colorful long shots. Molly Malone is the pretty heroine.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Ed (Hoot) Gibson is the star of the entertaining Western which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— under the title of "Sure Fire." This picture permits the colorful star a chance to revel in his customary role—that of an irrepressible cowboy—one eager for fun and excitement but who is ever ready to rescue women in distress or capture wily bandits. Gibson is noted for a quick trigger finger. Consequently the picture is aptly named. He is lacking in ambition when the story opens and his sweetheart is discouraged. But he puts aside playful moments and when the occasion arises he shows his bravery and manliness.

The picture carries a sample of lively action which is always punctuated with good suspense and scenes of picturesque appeal. And Gibson and his players play their parts with plenty of spirit and dash. "Sure Fire" is the star's best offering according to impartial audiences. It is a true and typical Western.

PROGRAM READER

"I rises to remark that I'm coming to your theatre next ———— in my all-firedest best picture, 'Sure Fire.' It sure is a hum-dinger. I always aims to please. And I figure I have a right smart story here. You will see me hitting the trail, riding and shooting and being pursued by a posse. You will see a lively and interesting picture. For I always aims to please." Thus Hoot Gibson might tell you of his newest photoplay which is undoubtedly his finest contribution. It is a picture which crackles with action and incident and is staged in picturesque settings. Come next ———— and see "Sure Fire." You will vote it a winner.

SUGGESTIONS

This fellow Gibson has a good, snappy Western here in which there is a lively sample of action and rattling good incident. So play it up as a type of picture which is certain to score with most any type of picturegoer who revels in stories of the big outdoors. Play up the title. It is snappy and means something lively. And play up Gibson who has established a good following. A cowboy quartette could be employed for a prologue or some expert with the lariat. Bill it as a comedy-drama which involves considerable riding and shooting. Play up Molly Malone who appears as leading lady.

"CINDERELLA OF THE HILLS"
(Fox)

Fair Program Offering Presenting a New Star

A NEW star has come over the Fox horizon in Barbara Bedford, who will be remembered for some appealing performances in Tourneur productions. Whether she is signed to compete with Eileen Percy and Shirley Mason cannot be determined at present, but possessing a colorful personality which indicates that she can adapt herself to any type of story, it seems reasonable to believe that it won't be difficult finding the proper medium for her. We would not select her as a Cinderella or Pollyanna type. Her work in "The Last of the Mohicans" indicates that she can portray heavier roles.

Her initial vehicle is an extremely simple offering with very little of the Cinderella touch about it in spite of the title. It revolves around the accepted theory that a father's daughter never gets along well with her new stepmother. So the picture takes on the form of a character study punctuated with flashes of conflict when the two young women develop an argument. And they have a number of wordy battles here. It is quite overdrawn in those sequences which show the father throwing over his former wife, the mother of the girl, and causing her to be sent to the insanse asylum through his fickleness, and the cruelty of the mercenary mistress. And just why the father moves away from a palatial home to take up his abode in a hut in the Ozarks will cause many to wonder.

However, the action discloses some effective touches, particularly when Miss Bedford appears on the scene. She is made up to represent a wild, impulsive, imaginative girl, and the stepmother attempts to embarrass her in front of some new-found acquaintances by calling her a witch and a disobedient creature in the same breath. Before the expected climax appears—when the spectator is made to feel that things will adjust themselves satisfactorily for the heroine—there is a sample of homespun incident which concerns a barn dance with the girl masquerading in masculine attire as the Ozark fiddler. She has not encouraged the young man who has interested himself in her. The director's idea is to emphasize her pathetic loneliness and the pathos of her life rather than stress the action. The denouement ushers in the other man and the subsequent compromise enables the father to realize that his mistress is unfaithful. The story is always obvious, but it offers appeal through the characterization of the heroine. This is because of the sympathetic touch. The exteriors might have been more suggestive of the wild and wooly Ozarks, but they are reasonably picturesque. The other players are adequate, especially Barbara La Marr Deely, who makes a very nifty vampire.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Barbara Bedford, the new Fox star, is reported as having achieved a distinct triumph in her first vehicle entitled "Cinderella of the Hills," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. Miss Bedford is the nineteen-year-old actress who appeared in a number of noteworthy pictures, among them being "The Last of the Mohicans," and her talent expressed in that offering entitled her to stardom. The story, by John Breckenridge, is of a mysterious girl of the Ozark mountains, living in fear of her stepmother.

The heroine brings down the ridicule of the mountain community upon her head by her mysterious actions. Her stepmother continually abuses her and her father seems powerless to help the mistreated victim. Eventually a young man comes to the backwoods town and takes an interest in the girl's case. She shies at him until he convinces her that he is her friend. The action develops a theme of mystery and another of love, and they are manipulated with skill. Miss Bedford gives an appealing performance as the heroine. Howard Mitchell directed.

PROGRAM READER

Barbara Bedford, who at the age of nineteen has been made a star by Fox, attained success in a little over a year's work. Those patrons who saw "The Last of the Mohicans" will remember the clever actress who portrayed the girl of the army post. Her performance sparkled with such brilliancy that she was destined to become a star. Her first vehicle is well adapted to her style, and with a strong, appealing story, this thoroughly capable actress should have no difficulty in pleasing her audience. The picture is "Cinderella of the Hills" and reveals a dramatic romance of the Ozark mountains. The picture will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

A new star always lends a good angle for exploitation. Here you have Barbara Bedford, who scintillated with such brilliancy in "The Last of the Mohicans." So announce that Fox has made her a star. She richly deserves stardom because she has exceptional ability. So play her up through a teaser campaign and through stills. Bring forth that she is only nineteen years old. Bill the picture as an absorbing drama and romance of the Ozark mountains, and tell that it is an ideal vehicle for the expression of the star's personality and talent. A prologue can feature a violin solo or a rustic barn dance with a girl disguised in masculine clothes as the fiddler. This is in line with one of the scenes of the story.

CATCH LINES

"THE MATRIMONIAL WEB"
(Vitagraph)

Alice Calhoun Has Pleasing Little Picture Here

ALICE CALHOUN gets away from stories which have featured her in light romantic roles and "The Matrimonial Web" permits her to revel in a more or less complicated tale of adventure. It is easy to say that the star shows an ability in this direction which augurs well for the future. It means that she need not be intrusted with Pollyanna roles unless she expresses a wish to interpret them. This newest essay was written especially for the star, and though it carries a pleasing line of action the author has not expended any originality upon it. The plot is simple in spite of its vein of adventurous action and one who is a steady picturegoer won't have much trouble in determining just how it will end.

The spectator discovers the star playing the part of a daughter of a revenue officer whose mission is to break up the ring trafficking in opium. The smugglers have rigged up a wireless outfit in a deserted barn on a barren island and have defied capture to such an extent that the "revenuer's" job is in jeopardy. Thus it devolves upon the girl to save her father. A counterplot concerns a youthful sub-freshman who assumes the mask of woman-hater. The barren island belongs to his father. So the smugglers hatch a scheme to compromise the daughter of an ambitious dowager so that the aforementioned woman-hater will be forced to marry her. However, the heroine overhears the plan—in fact she agrees to participate in it by frequenting the vicious dive and encouraging the chief plotter in his pet scheme. This is the only flaw in the pattern, for in reality her identity would be known to the villains.

The young hero has journeyed to the island to occupy his time in hunting or fishing and the romance comes into the picture when he meets the girl. The wireless outfit is discovered, and at the psychological moment the heroine steps into the scene when the youth's father is attempting to make him marry the other woman, who has also journeyed to the island for the sake of the compromise. The picture does not offer much suspense although there is an adequate line of action. It is not heavy or unduly complicated and the plot is recognizably real. The scenes are appropriate, there being a profusion of picturesque exteriors. The acting is in the capable hands of William Riley Hatch, Charles Mackay, Marion Barney and others. In all a satisfying program release.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Matrimonial Web" is a dramatic story of the adventures of a young girl who seeks to capture a band of smugglers and save for her father his position as chief revenue officer. The girl runs into many strange adventures, and the role requires of Miss Calhoun great strength and ability. As Helen Anderson she has the opportunity to interpret a greater dramatic role than heretofore and she rises to the occasion with true talent.

Revenue Officer Anderson fails in his task, but his daughter, in order to save the position for the man, attempts to round up the group of opium smugglers. In order to get the clue, she mixes with the frequenters of an underworld dive and poses as a member of a band of tools and succeeds in hoodwinking the denizens of the resort. She even allows herself to become compromised to save the reputation of an innocent man. She finds herself involved in a matrimonial web. The action is intensely dramatic and always adventurous. And it builds the keenest suspense. "The Matrimonial Web" will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

PROGRAM READER

She rescues her lover with a pipe. She merely grasped the bowl and pointed the stem at the smuggler, and he promptly held up his hands. Could you do as much if confronted with a similar situation? It always pays to keep one's wits on the qui vive. The picture coming to the ———— is "The Matrimonial Web" and presents an adventure story starring the pretty and talented Alice Calhoun. She captures a band of criminals single-handed, thwarts the schemes of a designing mother for her daughter, and marries a man who is afraid of girls. It was written especially for the star and gives the charming actress opportunity to display her versatility in a difficult role. Next ———— is the day.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that Alice Calhoun is seen in a more difficult role than she has essayed in the past. Bring forth that it is a highly adventurous story which is calculated to amuse and thrill your patrons. Bring forth that the girl proves herself highly resourceful—that she captures a criminal single-handed by prompting him to hold up his hands. She uses a pipe. Bill it as a story which is interesting throughout. Present stills of the star. Her name coupled with that of the director's is bound to attract attention. A musical prologue would fit in well. Your main angle is the star. Play her up for her beauty, talent, and personality.

CATCH LINES

She made a desperate criminal hold up his hands by aiming a smoking pipe at him. He mistook the stem for the barrel of a revolver. See "The Matrimonial Web," an exciting story of love and adventure with Alice Calhoun as the star.

"BLIND HEARTS"
(Asso. Pro.-First National)

Not Up to the Bosworth Standard

HOBART BOSWORTH'S name adorning a picture has meant so much in the shape of rugged action, incident and characterization, that a subject in which he is the central figure has consistently spelled sixty, seventy or eighty minutes of solid entertainment. A Bosworth picture has always carried a punch indicated with a capital P, and so compact and ever moving were the various sequences that one invariably followed the action with the keenest suspense. It is to be regretted that his latest contribution, "Blind Hearts," does not measure up to his usual standard. In the first place the idea is hopelessly orthodox and the action is draggy, although there is plenty of color and atmosphere.

However, stories of primitive people and passions must carry plot interest aside from pictorial backgrounds. And "Blind Hearts" suffers because it is burdened with old-time stock situations, the central idea being based upon the hoary theme of accumulated hate and revenge. Had a certain character revealed the secret locked up in her heart or had the revengeful hero unburdened his mind of the heavy topic which weighed upon it, the story would ring genuine, although there would be no necescity for filming it. The idea is so familiar that one can aticipate the action far in advance. You know just how the drama will develop, and when the Indian woman clears up the identity of the babies in the final reel the spectator may safely say—"I told you so."

Even though the plot is trite, the director could have developed it so that some of the sequences might ring genuine. As it stands it smacks of too much theatrical license—a note brought out when babies are born on the same day. The action begins by revealing a double wedding, and the two families live together. Larson (the character played by Bosworth) loses his wife when their baby is born. The entire substance of the story hinges upon the switching of the babies at birth by the squaw because her master Thomson wanted a son while Larson wished for a daughter. When the latter develops the same birthmark as Thomson the hero believes that his friend has proved himself false. Instead of settling the argument, he allows a feeling of suspicion to grow into an overpowering hatred. The children grow up and fall in love with one another, and in due time when the complications are cleared up the feeling of revenge is replaced by one of humility and forgiveness. There is some incident which adds a punch or two of melodrama, but for the most part the story moves slowly and with very little interest. A few of the settings are artificial. Bosworth's performance is up to requirements, but forceful actor that he is, there is a note of realism missing in his portrayal.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Blind Hearts," the Hobart Bosworth picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— is of the type which has made Bosworth the most admired portrayer of rugged, virile men roles there is on the screen. Starting in the gold fields of Alaska where he goes through thrilling adventures in a successful quest for gold, it develops into a tense dramatic story when he makes a discovery that indicates that his wife and his best friend have betrayed him.

The opening scenes are some of the most beautiful snow shots ever filmed, and the story may be called a drama of revenge, as well as love and human interest and scenic beauty and swift action, but it is as different from all the others as they are themselves. It is the same theme, but dressed up with a story filled with new twists and a dramatic ending. It is embellished with good acting, for among the cast are such well known and competent players as Wade Boteler, Irene Blackwell, Madge Bellamy, Raymond McKee and William Conklin.

PROGRAM READER

He came home from the Yukon a millionaire. A baby daughter awaited him in the arms of the bride he had left behind. She bore the birthmark of his bunkie. And so he grew to hate this man who he believed had dishonored his wife. He grew to despise his daughter. And he hated his bunkie with a hatred that burned deep in his soul. Yet happiness was to be his, greater happiness than he had ever expected could come to him. This is the substance of the vital and vivid Hobart Bosworth picture, "Blind Hearts," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a tense and dramatic story—one that the rugged Bosworth can portray better tha his rivals of the screen. In fact it is a typical Bosworth picture.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a Hobart Bosworth picture and the fact that this very capable actor is "quite supreme in the delineation of primitive roles which call for tense and rugged action is sufficient to establish a following. Make mention that the picture carries the same tense drama that has featured the other Bosworth pictures. Tell that he is in a class by himself in the portraying of rugged types. Play up that the picture carries a tense line of action of a strong man who spent twenty years planning revenge. Paint word pictures of what the audience will see—such as a ship being crushed in an ice-floe—a bare handed combat, etc. Bill Bosworth as the he-man star.

"Burn 'Em Up Barnes"

is proud to play second to an international institution like Charlie Chaplin

It is pretty nice to have a critic on a metropolitan newspaper class your picture with that of the most famous of them all, but it is better to play in the same theatres, on the same bill, share in the final applause and hope some day to reach the heights attained by the greatest comedian of all time, Charlie Chaplin.

Johnny Hines is taking his place among the foremost comedians of the screen

At Lieber's

CIRCLE THEATER

INDIANAPOLIS

The Indianapolis News says:

"Johnny Hines in 'Burn 'Em Up Barnes' is the second feature, a five reel comedy that moves at a terrific pace. Barnes is a race driver who gets mixed up with a gang of amiable tramps, who make his life interesting for him, while he rescues the heroine and thwarts the villain. The sub titles are pleasantly facetious and Johnny is as lively as ever.

On the whole this comedy is as good as 'The Idle Class'"

The star the whole world is talking about!

Now—in a modern drama!

This is no tale of dead queens and dusty loves—but a thrilling, throbbing, fascinating story of today.

The story of a woman more alluring than Cleopatra. A woman who made love an art and life a plaything—who extracted the last drop from the wine of life—and who paid for pleasure with her heart's blood.

Who but Pola Negri could play such a role? Pola Negri, the passionate, tempestuous heroine of "One Arabian Night," and "Passion"—Pola Negri, the incarnate flame of beauty?

Who in the world today has a greater drawing power than Pola Negri in a modern drama?

You know the answer—act on it!

"Will win the approval of the most captious censor!"

says the New York Sunday Telegraph

TESTIMONIAL NO 8

THE Universal Film Corporation feels that it has solved the serial censorship problem. Because of the fact that serials are patronized largely by children they have produced one which will undoubtedly win the approval of the most captious censor and at the same time delight the youngsters.

EACH episode contains two reels of the early struggles of American explorers. The California gold rush, the wagon trains crossing the country and exploring new fields, the Indian massacres; in short, all of the exciting adventures of Kit Carson and of Capt. John Charles Fremont, leader of the great trail-breaking expedition to the California gold fields, are introduced into the picture with splendid effect. Each episode is filled with daring and adventure, but is altogether wholesome and will fill young America with splendid patriotic ideals.

THERE is a hue and cry from various sources every once in a while because youngsters will go to see the motion pictures and producers will make films which are not the best sort of influence for children. "Winners of the West" answers a crying need and will be especially popular with the small boy.

ART ACORD, the popular cowboy, accomplishes some amazing riding, and the Indians of the picture supply the most fascinating sort of excitement. The youth who follows this serial is likely to be a bit more interested in his history book than heretofore. The Boy Scout is going to adore it.

My dear Mr.Traver:-

I think you are justly entitled to know that the "Three Musketeers" at the Adams Theatre, during the first week of its run, has broken all box office records for motion pictures in any house I have ever operated. I have been exhibiting extraordinary productions for several years in the city of Detroit and elsewhere but never in the history of our organization has a picture drawn the gross on its first weeks run that I have received from this production. Mr.Fairbanks and your Company are both to be congratulated on having offered to the public a film with such universal appeal.

With best wishes, I am,

GOLDWYN pictures for current release are eight good reasons why Goldwyn is the biggest name in pictures today.

Look them over. Here is a great group of money-making productions.

When you show "Poverty of Riches," your audiences are going to sit up and take notice. No more exciting theme has ever been screened. Already it is becoming one of the most talked-about pictures of the year.

Exhibitors who remember "The Branding Iron" will welcome a greater picture by the same author and director—"The Man From Lost River." Action, love interest, power and a magnificent scenic background put this wonderful picture in the class of sure-fire money-makers.

"The Night Rose," a sizzling melo-drama of Frisco's hidden haunts—"From The Ground Up," a Rupert Hughes-Tom Moore comedy—"A Poor Relation," with Will Rogers in a wonderful role—"Be My Wife," Max Linder's hilarious farce—"The Grim Comedian," a thrilling drama of stage life—

—"Pardon My French," with Vivian Martin as a piquant French maid, and sparkling titles by America's greatest humorist, Irvin S. Cobb.

A great list, and reason enough why Goldwyn is dominating the industry. And there are more coming!

Winkle"

The CRITICS ALL AGREE ON "RIP"

THE HODKINSON VERSION OF "RIP VAN WINKLE" IS A TRUE SCREEN CLASSIC

It is probable that "Rip Van Winkle" like Tennyson's brook, will go on forever. As a picture it lives again to delight the admirers of Washington Irving's memorable tale. "Rip Van Winkle" in celluloid should prove as invulnerable as Washington Irving's book.

—MORNING TELEGRAPH.

INTERESTING ADAPTATION OF SUCCESSFUL PLAY

The simplicity of Irving's tale and Jefferson's play is brought forth in scenes which conquer through their charm and fancy. It is an artistic production which should strike the public fancy.

—MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

CHARMING INTERPRETATION OF STAGE SUCCESS

Here is a perfectly joyous thing, brimful of humor, exquisite in its pathos and irresistible in its quaint charm. Hodkinson may well be proud of the honor of distributing "Rip Van Winkle" and Ward Lascelle is to be congratulated on his achievement in the notably fine screen version.

—WEEKLY FILM REVIEW.

SHOULD PLEASE THEM—OLD AND YOUNG

This picture offers an interesting photoplay, not alone for the sentiment connected with the story and the performance of Joe Jefferson's son, but also because he has succeeded nicely in making it realistic and quite as you might picture it in your imagination.

—WID'S DAILY.

THE IMMORTAL "RIP" LIVES ON THE SILVER SHEET IN PLEASING PRESENTATION

YOU SHOULD HAVE NO TROUBLE IN PUTTING THIS PICTURE OVER

This production is excellent entertainment. "Rip Van Winkle" is a character known to practically every one, and the screen version has been eagerly awaited.

—AMUSEMENTS.

THE NEW GENERATION SHOULD SEE THIS

Lovingly and reverently "Rip Van Winkle" has been transplanted to the screen. There is not an iota of the story that has been neglected in its transition. All the quaint, lovable characters are shown. Thomas Jefferson deserves the highest praise for his interpretation of the famous old character "Rip."

—THE BILLBOARD.

THE WHOLE PICTURE IS STRONGLY AND DELIGHTFULLY REMINISCENT

Thomas Jefferson's work in "Rip Van Winkle" (Hodkinson) the screen version of the play made famous by Joseph Jefferson is outstanding for its fine naturalness. The beloved character lives again for us in cinegraphic terms with all its pathos and humor.

—NATIONAL BOARD OF REVIEW.

The Saving Principle

THE "Get-together" meeting of Associated First National in Chicago was a healthful and helpful thing for the entire industry.

As stated in last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the convention, composed largely of delegates from the sub-franchise holders, opened with considerable contention and closed with complete harmony.

The contention centred around exhibition values and rental prices and policies—and undoubtedly with considerable justice from the standpoint of the sub-franchise holder.

On the other hand the executives of Associated First National took this stand before the delegates: We have here a cooperative organization; it is formed to promote your interests; we believe you will agree that the fundamental principle and purpose are right. If anything is wrong with it let's try and correct it. If the whole structure is wrong let's rebuild it. Here are all the cards on the table. What's to be done?

The meeting, in other words, was thrown wide open. The light of understanding was let in. Oratory and emotionalism in general were laid aside for calm business deliberations. And harmony ended and cemented a gathering which hopeless discord might have wrecked.

It would seem that the whole industry might harmonize in the same way.

To begin with, we are, none of us, and no branch of us, blameless.

At this same meeting the writer heard accusations against exhibitor, producer and distributor alike. The producer put himself down for a fat salary or indulged in inexcusable waste and then blamed the distributor and exhibitor because his picture didn't make money. The exhibitor did the very same thing with his salary and house expense and then blamed the rental value. The distributor lacked selling effort, or put his administrative cost too high, or both., etc., etc.

And all of these accusations are quite commonly and at least about equally true.

But each situation won't be corrected and the whole business won't get down to sane and common prosperity through the hurling back and forth of verbal and printed brickbats. We have altogether too much loose talk and printed publicity. What we need is the light of understanding, the calm business discussion that is calm because it is based on facts—and therefore gets somewhere.

The common fault of the exhibitor today is that he cannot or will not realize that the war prosperity is over. That's the trouble with the retailer in general today. He won't put his house in order to fit post-war conditions. And he's got to, as speedily as possible, whatever the effort. Business all along the line won't thrive until he does.

On the other hand some exhibition values today are outrageously and dangerously high. We know of some where the money cannot possibly be brought in for the simple, ultimate reason that the public won't pay for over-priced and under-geared attractions.

A good deal of the inflation begins with the producer who sincerely and ignorantly, or insincerely and knowingly, lets his production cost away above what it should, above what it can return in profits to distributor, exhibitor or to himself. But wherever this inflation enters—this heedless waste or diversion of good money—it must stop.

Will the "easy money" idea that permeates this business ever leave it? Will we ever realize that we've got to manufacture and sell like any other regular business? Why not?

We speak of exorbitant exhibition values as "dangerous." They are—as dangerous as dynamite.

The bedrock of this whole business is its hold on the public as a low-priced amusement.

That's the one hold we can't afford to lose. When it's gone—we're gone.

There's a mighty big and serious lesson in the government's last internal revenue report. It shows that, for the fiscal year of 1920-21, every single luxury tax (on furs, jewelry, cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, musical instruments) declined heavily while the tax from motion picture admissions went up. In other words the public curtailed their purchases of these so-called luxuries to a marked degree but they continued and even increased their purchases of motion pictures. They have come, in other words, to look upon the motion picture entertainment as a necessity. They, very evidently, class it with other necessities.

We must keep it a necessity—by keeping its price to the public low.

And the way to keep this a low-priced amusement is to cut out inflation, all along the line. Every bit of inflation, every bit of waste, is a strain upon our bulwark of safety.

M.P.T.O. Launches Public Welfare Movement

Prominent Men Address New York Meeting and Bid the Enterprise God-Speed

DEDICATING itself to the work of encouraging the production of clean, wholesome and optimistic films and pledging the screens of its exhibitor-members to the task of promoting civic and social betterment, advancing vocational training and guidance, and revivifying the spirit of Brotherly Love and the principle of the Golden Rule, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Saturday, October 29th, at the Criterion theatre, New York, formally inaugurated its newly established Department of Public Service, which will function under the direction of Dr. Francis Holley, head of the Bureau of Commercial Economics. Prominent men, including First Assistant-Secretary of Labor Henning, were on hand to voice their endorsement of the project and wish it God-speed.

The plans of the new M. P. T. O. of A. department include close co-operation with the Department of Labor and the showing at stated intervals of pictures dealing with industry, trade, commerce, agriculture, public health, sanitation, or any subject recommended by the President or any member of his cabinet. It is the plan of the new department to effect arrangements with theatres throughout the country so that ultimately every motion-picture theatre will set aside certain periods during the week, outside of regular exhibition hours, when the house will present gratis to its audience such subjects as will be recommended by the Department of Public Service. Saturday morning showings for children, during which subjects tied up with their school work will be shown, are also to be included within the scope of the present plans.

Dr. Holley acted as chairman of the conference at the Criterion theatre. He briefly stated the purpose of the new department and introduced the various speakers. The speech-making was preceded by the exhibition of a picture showing what the High School of Commerce, New York City, is doing to make its pupils physically and mentally fit.

Assistant-Secretary Henning, who came as the personal representative of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, read a lengthy address from his chief at Washington. The Secretary of Labor was unable to attend in person owing to his presence being required at a conference dealing with sudden developments in the threatening railroad strike. The Secretary of Labor's message endorsed the new movement of the M. P. T. O. of A. as one of highest importance to the national life of the people, and expressed his heartiest wishes for its success. The message emphasized the mutual understanding and respect between worker and worker and between worker and employer which would inevitably result as each saw realistically recorded on the screen the important part the others played in the field of industry and commerce.

"This morning's meeting ought to mark a new renaissance in American industrial art," declared Dr. Newell Dwight Hills, pastor of Plymouth Church, who followed Secretary Henning on the stage. Dr. Hillis declared that about six million of the people of the country confessed to illiteracy; that the United States instead of being foremost, stood ninth among the nations in the rank of literacy; that educators believed that from fifty to eighty-five per cent of all the knowledge that we possesses come through the sense of sight and that in consequence of these facts the screen, under the new movement launched by the M. P. T. O. of A., was due to play a tremendous part in educating the people of the country and elevating our educational standing among the nations of the earth.

"He serves himself best who serves others most," declared Nathan D. Williams of the National Association of Manufacturers, in endorsing the M. P. T. O.'s project. The speaker declared that there was an unfortunate tendency to solve all the problems of present-day life by legislation, when, as a matter of fact, what was needed was education and not laws. He pointed out the futility of restrictive laws as panaceas for all ills political, industrial and social. He pleaded for the ascendancy of a scheme of education in lieu of useless laws, and in this connection stressed the highly important part the screen was to play in this education program.

Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. of A., declared that the M. P. T. O. was behind its new department one hundred per cent in the work of promoting public welfare "and making our screens useful and helpful to mankind and of serving our Government. We want to enlist the sympathetic interest of our public in our work, and we hope to accomplish this purpose through the medium of the Public Service Department of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America," concluded Mr. Cohen.

Emergency Traffic Organization Made Permanent; Ready to Function at any Time

A PERMANENT emergency film traffic organization, covering the entire United States, with standing committees in each exchange territory, ready to function at a moment's notice in the event of any future interruption to railroad shipping facilities, has been established by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

This traffic organization is an outgrowth of the recent railway strike scare. It was hurriedly called into being by the National Association's Transportation Committee, P. H. Stilson, Chairman, at the request of President William A. Brady, and was thoroughly prepared to meet the threatened crisis long before the railroad brotherhoods decided to call off the walkout, which had been scheduled for October 30.

When all the danger of an immediate railway strike was removed last week, Chairman Stilson conferred with members of the Transportation Committee and with President Brady and Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott as to the advisability of continuing the nationwide traffic organization as a permanent body. It was decided that such an emergency staff in each key centre, co-ordinating with the National Association traffic head quarters in the event of any future interruption of the customary film transportation facilities would be of great benefit to the industry. All traffic managers and exchange men's organizations have accordingly been notified to keep their traffic organizations intact for future emergency.

A special bulletin has been published embodying the personnel of the traffic organization in each exchange centre and conveying instructions for shipping film accessories via emergency conveyance in the event of any future interruption to railway service. Copies of this bulletin have been forwarded to all traffic managers and to the shipping departments of all National Association company members.

S. M. P. E. Convention in Boston Next Year

Buffalo, N. Y. (Special).—Boston will be the meeting place of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers when they assemble in spring convention, 1922. This was decided at the convention and annual meeting which opened here on Monday, October 31.

The 1921 annual meeting proved to be the biggest and best held so far. Over one hundred members were present and much interest was displayed in the activities of the session.

Monday afternoon the annual election of officers was held with the following results: Lawrence C. Porter, president; George Blair, vice president; A. R. Dennington, secretary; Will C. Smith, treasurer. All were unanimously elected. The board of governors received as new members M. W. Palmer and W. R. Mott for two year terms and J. C. McNabb to fill the unexpired term of L. C. Porter.

The papers delivered were of great merit and much interest and discussion resulted.

U. S. Senate Votes to Repeal Five Per Cent Film Tax

Cost Industry $10,000,000, in 2 Years; Bill Goes to Joint Committee

THE United States Senate has voted to repeal the 5 per cent film rental tax which in two years has cost the industry more than $10,000,000.

Without the formality of a roll-call the Senators ratified the repeal amendment of a majority of their Finance Committee at 9 P. M. on Tuesday, November 1, after a day of acrimonious wrangling in which many other revenue amendments of the Finance Committee were voted down and thrown into the scrap heap.

Led by Senator Reed Smoot of Utah and a small group of the industry's Senatorial friends who worked valiantly among their fellow Senators to win support for the relief measure, the amendment was adopted without serious opposition. This decisive action by the Senate is considered to practically insure the final success of the National Association's campaign for the removal of the sales tax.

The Senate action is regarded generally as a tremendous victory for the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, whose president, William A. Brady, together with Saul E. Rogers, chairman of its Taxation Committee, and Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative, have worked for many weeks to bring about the repeal of this war time excise. In the final stages of the campaign Mr. Connolly was in constant conference with senators whose support was essential to insure the success of the repeal amendment and largely through his efforts the final tide was turned in favor of the industry's plea for taxation relief.

Senator Smoot was spokesman for the 5 per cent sales tax repeal. On the floor of the Senate he made an eloquent plea for the industry, described its business depression, due largely to excessive taxation, drew attention to the fact that many theatres were closed and pointed out that the tax repeal would be of great help to the small exhibitors throughout the country who are unable to meet existing conditions unless afforded relief in the form of this tax repeal. He said that the amendment was not intended for the relief of producers and distributors, because the tax was passed on to the exhibitors and borne entirely by them. He called attention to the facts that exhibition conditions throughout the country could not be compared to those in Washington and that while the picture theatres in the nation's capitol city were playing to large audiences, at least a third of the theatres through the country were compelled by bad business to actually close their doors. He drew a vivid word picture of conditions which had been called to his attention by leaders of the motion picture business and asked that the Senate extend to the picture industry the help that is so badly needed.

Senator David J. Walsh, of Massachusetts, did valuable work for the industry on the floor of the Senate, winning the support of many fellow members. Among others who deserve a particularly prominent place in the industry's honor role for active work in behalf of the tax repeal are Senators William M. Calder of New York; Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin; Charles L. McNary of Oregon; Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee; William P. Dillingham of Vermont and Medill McCormick of Illinois.

The revenue bill, as amended by the Senate, will next be acted upon by the Joint Conference Committee of the Senate and the House, but those who have been in close touch with the progress of this legislation in Washington say there is small likelihood that any serious snag will be encountered in the final repeal of the 5 per cent tax.

President Brady, when informed in Indianapolis of the Senate action said:

"This is splendid news. The entire industry owes a debt of gratitude to our loyal friends in the Senate who have stood staunchly by the industry in the campaign for taxation relief. The removal of this burdensome tax has been well worth working for, because it means the saving of between five and six millions of dollars a year to the exhibitors as well as the saving of a very large amount expended annually by distributors in computing and collecting the rental tax.

"To Senator Smoot, of Utah, the industry should be particularly grateful because he has led the fight for the 5 per cent tax removal. Chairman Rogers of the Taxation Committee and Jack Connolly have worked conscientiously and effectively and deserve great credit for the favorable action on this important measure."

Michigan to Vote M. P. T. O. Financial Acknowledgment

IN appreciation of the work of President Sydney S. Cohen, Senator James J. Walker and other workers for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in obtaining from the Senate Committee an assurance that the five per cent tax on film rentals would be repealed, the Michigan Motion Picture Theatre Owners has drafted a resolution calling upon every member of the association in the state to set aside the equivalent to one week's tax and send it to the national body to help carry on its legislative work.

This is the first action taken in the United States by one of the state exhibitor organizations to show its financial backing to the national body, and it is expected that others will follow their lead. Copies of the resolution are being forwarded to other state organizations and requests are being made to them for expressions of opinions.

"The exhibitors of Michigan, like every other state, have been burdened down by this tax long enough," said General Manager H. M. Richey, "and we feel that such good work on the part of the national association in putting the matter so clearly up to the Senate should not be overlooked."

Judging by the sentiment expressed in Michigan exhibitor circles, the resolution will be passed without a dissenting vote at the next meeting of the Board of Directors.

Chamber of Commerce Acts Against Carnivals

THE Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce held its regular weekly meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Tuesday afternoon of this week. The carnivals which have been staged in many parts of the city and which are said to have proved detrimental to local exhibitors were brought up for discussion. The Chamber of Commerce went on record as being opposed "to the pernicious activities of these carnivals" and has authorized the drafting of an ordinance against these carnivals to be introduced to the Board of Aldermen for their consideration and adoption. Charles O'Reilly, president of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. offered the co-operation of the state league in this matter.

Wid Gunning, head of the F. B. Warren Company, addressed the members and outlined the policies of his organization. The Chamber's co-operation was assured him in his new work and wishes expressed for his organization's success.

The Chamber also voted unanimously that its members be instructed not to obey the summons of the local Film Club to sit in at the meetings with the Film Club's Grievance Committee and that a committee be appointed to inform the Film Club that the Chamber resents such summonses to its members.

The Ball Committee reported that the demand for tickets and boxes for the dinner and ball, which will be held on December 3, 1921, at the Hotel Astor, far exceeds the supply, and revealed several of the more important arrangements made.

Brady Before Parent-Teachers' Organizatio

Pleads for Co-operation Between Such Associations and the Film Industry

WILLIAM A. BRADY, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, left Thursday (October 27th) on a trip through the Middle West to confer with prominent women's organizations in several important centers and strengthen the harmonious cooperation between such groups and the motion picture industry. His first stop was at Detroit, where on Friday, October 28th, he appeared before the Parent-Teachers Division of the Michigan State Teachers Association Convention, in session there.

The hearty cooperation of the picture industry with every Parent Teachers Association throughout the country was offered by Mr. Brady. In a dramatic defence of the motion picture, he told the several thousand assembled teachers that since the adoption of the fourteen points of picture production, there has been a noticeable improvement of the screen.

Mr. Brady's address followed a vigorous attack on the motion picture by Edwin H. Reeder, supervisor of Visual Education in the Detroit schools, who complained that murder and lust were frequently portrayed upon the screen and asked that the child be kept away from the movies—which, he said, produced a jazzy outlook upon life.

Mr. Brady called attention to the fact that the so-called "murder and lust" referred to by Mr. Reeder, figures conspicuously in the works of Shakespeare, which are taught in every school in the country.

"In Shakespeare's 'Hamlet,' the king pours the poison into a sleeping man's ear while his wife prays that it will kill him," said Mr. Brady. "Hamlet kills an old man of seventy, Polonius, crying 'A rat! a rat!' and later kills still another man.

"A publication has the right to free speech. The movie is just as much a publication as a book or newspaper. If you want to censor the movies, give us the same deal you give the newspapers and the speaking stage.

"The motion picture has a cleaner record of public achievement than any other theatrical adjunct in the United States. Since March 1st. when the moving picture men adopted their production standards, commonly referred to as 'the fourteen points,' the motion picture has greatly improved."

Mr. Brady told the teachers that legalized censorship was a failure, that eliminations and changes ordered by censor boards were frequently absurd and as evidence of the incompetency of such censorship, he told of the alterations ordered by one censor board in the screen production "Camille." In the first act the censors decreed that subtitles should show Camille as married, with the result that later in the play it placed her father in the impossible position of advising her commit bigamy. He said that the c sors in the same state had suppres "The Miracle Man" until public op ion caused them to change their mir

Mr. Brady called attention to the complishments of the motion picture d ing the war, its help in the food and erty loan campaigns, the raising of fu for starving children in Europe, the keep of the morale of the Allied for and the important part it has played combating the spirit of unrest in this co try. He drew attention also to the part picture industry is playing in the une ployment situation. In Japan, Mr. Br said, American-made pictures are co batting hatred of Americans.

In conclusion, President Brady mitted that while all motion pictures not good, the proportion of bad pictu is growing steadily less and that coope tion between the motion picture indus and Parent Teachers will lead to still f ther progress in the right direction. added that the makers of pictures not be held to the level of a child's in lect and that cooperation between public and the picture producers will complish that which censorship can ne attain—namely, a continuance of screen's development without impairm to its value as a medium of instructive tertainment.

Banks to Aid Fight on Fake Stock Promoter

Vigilance Committee of National Association Plans Concerted Action with Bankers

FAKE movie stock promoters are facing a lean winter. Some of them in fact, may spend it in jail. As a preliminary step the newly appointed Vigilance Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will confer this week with representatives of the American Bankers Association and Investment Bankers Association of America to plan a concerted drive against the get-rich-quick promoters. A meeting for this purpose will be held at the Uptown Club, 17 East 42nd Street, New York, at 12:30 P. M., Friday, November 4th. Martin J. Quigley, of Chicago, Chairman of the Vigilance Committee, will preside. The bankers will be represented by members of the Protective Committee of the American Bankers Association and the Industrial Securities Committee of the Investment Bankers Association of America.

Although the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been active for more than a year in endeavoring to rid the business of fraudulent promoters who specialize in securities of film production companies that produce neither pictures nor profits, officials of the association believe this work can be greatly strengthened by the active co-operation of the bankers. The latter have given assurances of their willingness to help—so all that remains is the adoption of a co-operative working plan and the campaign will swing into action.

"Last year the public was stung to the tune of more than fifty million dollars by fraudulent movie stock promoters," said William A. Brady, President of the National Association, yesterday. "With alluring prospectuses of sudden wealth by investment in the production of motion pictures, these sharp-shooters who operate on the outer fringe of the movie industry have gathered a golden harvest at the expense of thousands of credulous persons, most of whom will never get back a nickel of their investment.

"The retiring Vigilance Committee last year investigated companies whose combined capitalization was in excess of $250,000,000, and thwarted many flagrant attempts to victimize the public. With co-operation of the banks, our pres Vigilance Committee feels that we can the country of these Wallingfords of picture industry and save the public fr further foolhardy investment in pict enterprises which have no possible cha for success."

In addition to the members of Vigilance Committee the picture indus will be represented at Friday's meeting President Brady and P. L. Waters, Cha man of the Executive Committee of National Association of the Motion P ture Industry, whose membership co prises the producers and distributors approximately 90 per cent of all pictu made and circulated in America.

A. P. Michael Narlian, Secretary General Counsel of the Los Angeles F Board of Trade will also attend the c ference.

The members of the newly appoin Vigilance Committee are: Martin Quigley, Editor and Publisher of the Famous Players-Lasky in Wholesale Denial of Federal Charges

Says Commission Has No Jurisdiction of Matters Stated in Complaint

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION makes a wholesale denial of the charges of unlawful monopoly and restraint of trade, filed against it by the Federal Trade Commission. The principals named in the answer to the allegations of the Federal Trade Commission are: Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, The Stanley Company of America, Stanley Booking Corporation, Black New England Theatres, Inc., Southern Enterprises, Inc., Saenger Amusement Company, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules Mastbaum, Alfred S. Black, Stephen A. Lynch, and Ernest V. Richards.

Under the date of August 30th, 1921, the Federal Trade Commission filed a bill of complaint, which among other allegations charged:

"Paragraph Six: That the respondents, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, combined and conspired together and with each other to secure control of and monopolize the motion-picture industry, and to restrain, restrict and suppress competition in interstate commerce in motion-picture films."

Paragraph Ten: That the respondents caused to be incorporated the Realart Pictures Corporation, in which Famous Players-Lasky Corporation owns 5,000 shares of capital stock; and that the respondents concealed their "ownership of, and control over, the said Realart Pictures Corporation and held the same out to the trade and the general public as wholly independent and not affiliated or connected in any way with, or controlled by said respondents."

Paragraph Twelve: That having thus combined and consolidated the business of producing and distributing motion picture films in commerce by the acquisitions of Bosworth, Inc., Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., Famous Players Company and Paramount Pictures Corporation, and having affiliated with it independent producers as aforesaid respondents Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Jesse L. Lasky and Adolph Zukor, in pursuance of the conspiracy and combination described in Paragraph Six hereof, in the year 1919, entered into a comprehensive program of extending the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's activities by the acquisitions of theatres or interests therein, particularly in the Key cities, for the exhibition of motion picture films produced or controlled by them." The companies which Famous Players-Lasky are alleged to have become affiliated with in this particular are the Black New England Theatres, Inc., the Stanley Company of America, the Stanley Booking Corporation, the Saenger Amusement Company, and the Southern Enterprises, Inc.

Paragraph Thirteen: That in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy and combination Famous Players-Lasky owns or has an interest in a large number of theatres in various parts of the country, including the New York Theatre Building, the Rialto, and the Rivoli, New York; the Koplar Circuit in Missouri; and the Imperial, and Portolo, San Francisco.

"Paragraph Fourteen: That in furtherance of and as a part of the conspiracy and combination described in Paragraph Six hereof, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at its inception inaugurated a policy of acquiring and affiliating with it producers, distributors and exhibitors. This policy has been consistently adhered to, and every theatre acquired by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation restricts the market of independent producers to that extent, and the effect of this policy, and the aforesaid combinations and conspiracies by which it has been and is carried out, is that the pictures of independent producers are being kept out of a showing in theatres in many of the principal cities and towns of the United States, and the continuation of this policy will result in the elimination of all independent producers on account of their inability to secure theatres in which to exhibit their pictures."

In denying the allegations preferred by the Federal Trade Commission, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declares in part as follows:

"Now comes Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, respondent herein, and makes answer that the Federal Trade Commission has no jurisdiction of the transactions alleged in the complaint herein, and that said complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a violation of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled 'An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,' or a violation of Section 7 of an Act of Congress approved October 15, 1914, entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' or any law, the enforcement of which is entrusted to said Commission, and fails to state any charges, within the meaning of said Acts or laws, or any of them; that said Acts of Congress and each of them are indefinite, uncertain and in violation of the Constitution of the United States; and that the matters alleged in the complaint do not constitute interstate commerce; and without waiving the foregoing or any other invalidities or defects in the Commission's jurisdiction, or any errors, invalidities and defects in said Commission's complaint, and reserving to itself the benefit of all exceptions that can or may be taken in respect thereof, and denying that this proceeding is to the interest of the public, said respondent makes further answer as follows:

"Paragraph Six: It denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraph Six of the complaint, except that it admits that in the year 1916 the respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation acquired all the capital stock of Bosworth, Inc., Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., and Famous Players Film Company and thereafter, in December, 1919, merged said corporations pursuant to Section 15 of the Stock Corporation Law of the State of New York; and that it now owns all of the assets formerly of said three corporations; and it alleges that such acquisition of stock and merger were for the purpose of increasing the efficiency and the volume of production of said three corporations which were already affiliated and non-competing, in order that they might successfully compete with other producers and affiliated groups of producers which at the time were producing a sufficient number of pictures to keep an exhibitor continuously supplied with complete programs; and that by reason of the foregoing and under the state of facts then, and at all times thereafter, existing, competition was not lessened but was increased and a monopoly was not created but was prevented.

"PARAGRAPH TEN: It denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraph Ten of the complaint, except that it admits that on May 28, 1919 the respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation caused to be incorporated Realart Pictures Corporation, a Delaware corporation, having its principal office in the City and State of New York and with an authorized capital stock of 10,000 shares, without nominal or par value, of which 5,000 shares have been issued and are all owned by said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; that said Realart Pictures Corporation is engaged in booking and licensing the exhibition under copyright of motion pictures in various localities in the United States, that said Realart Pictures Corporation opened and maintained offices and exchanges separate from those of the respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"PARAGRAPH TWELVE: It denies each and every allegation contained in Paragraph Twelve of the complaint, except that it is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the relations between Stanley Company of America and Stanley Booking Corporation or as to the contracts of said

Missouri Exhibs Act for Repeal of Film Taxes

The initial step towards obtaining the support of Missouri Senators and Congressmen in effort to bring about the repeal of the admissions tax, the 5 per cent rental tax and the passage of the Lampert bill was taken at the first district meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri at St. Joseph, Mo., last week. In addition to a large attendance of exhibitors of the Fourth congressional district, many prominent speakers were present, including Mayor Elliott Marshall of St. Joseph, John Grosser, president of the city council, Charles D. Morris, editor of the St. Joseph Gazette, Representative Thomas J. Whitehead and Col. C. U. Philley of the Lyceum theatres.

Several resolutions which were adopted will be sent to Senators James A. Reed and Selden B. Spencer of Missouri. The resolutions, although similar to many others that have been adopted in this section, pertaining to music tax and blue laws, are only the fore-runners of many other yet to come and which will be sent to senators and congressmen.

Negotiating Sales of New and Century, Baltimore

Negotiations for the sale of whole or part interests in the Century and New motion-picture theatres of Baltimore are in progress between the Baltimore owners and New York theatrical interests.

It is reported that while the Century is desired by the Shuberts as an addition to their vaudeville interests, the New is being sought for by New Yorkers interested in its conversion into a musical comedy house.

The Shuberts at present hold a two-year lease upon the Academy. This lease dates from last September. In the event they acquire the Century it is said "legitimate" attractions may be run at the Academy.

Zeke Harris, representing New York interests, saw Mr. Whitehurst in this city and made an offer for the New.

Legion Preparing Victory Ball for Armistice Eve

THE Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, will be the scene of a huge ball and all-star pageant on November 10, for the benefit of disabled soldiers of the World War. This affair is under the auspices of the American Legion posts. It is the intention of the committee to initiate with this event a yearly celebration of like kind which will be a national tribue and source of income to disabled heroes.

Prominent among the guests of honor will be well-known representatives of the American stage and press to whom special invitations have been sent. The Victory Pageant, which will be held after the closing of the theatres, will be truly all-star, with a great number of stage and screen stars in prominent roles.

Hollywood Organizing Film Library Association

MOTION picture fans and members of the profession alike will hail with interest an announcement made today of the organization of the Hollywood Library Association, a $500,000 corporation, which will erect in Hollywood, in the heart of the industry, a library to be given over entirely to works pertaining to the motion picture industry. The organizers and incorporators of the new association are: Roy L. Manker, Frederick Palmer, H. E. Teter and S. M. Warmbath, officials of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, and Charles Donald Fox, all of Los Angeles. They have already entered into negotiations for a site in Hollywood of a building which will house the offices of the association, the library and reading rooms.

Stokes Resigns Treasurership of Prizma

At a meeting of the board of directors of Prizma, Incorporated, held October 19th, 1921, H. G. Stokes, vice-president and treasurer, resigned as treasurer in order to devote his time as vice-president exclusively to Prizma's increasing activities with other producers in supplying color interpolations, inserts, and art titles for feature plays. B. S. Hall, auditor of Prizma for the past year, was elected treasurer, succeeding Mr. Stokes.

Three New Loew Houses to Open Within Month

Marcus Loew will open three theatres in the next month, the State at Los Angeles in two weeks; the Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, in three weeks; and the State, in Newark, in four weeks. This is said to mark the culmination of the biggest building campaign in the history of theatricals. Mr. Loew has built and opened thirty-two theatres in the past year. All three new ones will be vaudeville and photoplay houses. Mr. Loew has gone to Los Angeles.

Los Angeles Business Ass'n Votes Against Censorship

The Purchasing Agents' Association of Los Angeles, at its last regular meeting passed a resolution, with instructions to forward same to the City Council, stating that the Association is absolutely against a policy of local censorship, as an unjust and unsound policy which would not gain the results desired.

F. P. Lasky's Reply

Stanley Booking Corporation, and except also that it admits that the respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in order to insure proper exhibition of motion pictures produced by it and to prevent the threatened exclusion of such pictures from the principal first run theatres and by an affiliated group of producers and exhibitors controlling a large number of the principal first run theatres claiming control over three thousand theatres, has acquired certain theatres in certain cities in the United States for the exhibition of motion pictures and interests in corporations operating such theatres; that said corporation has acquired 50 per cent of the capital stock of Black New England Theatres, Inc., a Delaware Corporation, leasing or owning theatres in various cities and towns in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts in which 'Paramount Pictures' and other motion pictures produced by others than said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are shown; that Stanley Company of America is a Delaware Corporation owning or leasing theatres located in various cities in eastern Pennsylvania, western New Jersey and Delaware in which 'Paramount Pictures' and other motion pictures produced by others than said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are shown; that said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation acquired $2,000,000 of the bonds issued by said Stanley Company of America; that said Stanley Company of America has acquired 15,000 shares of the common stock of said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; that respondent Famous Players-Lasky Corporation owns the stock of Southern Enterprises, Inc., a Delaware corporation with an authorized capital stock of $5,000,000; that said Southern Enterprises, Inc., purchased some of the assets formerly controlled by Stephen A. Lynch Enterprises, a corporation which owned and operated a chain of theatres in the Atlantic and Gulf States from North Carolina to Texas and in the State of Tennessee and parts of Arkansas and Oklahoma in which 'Paramount Pictures' and other motion pictures produced by others than said Famous Players-Lasky Corp. are shown; that said Stephen A. Lynch became, and now is, President and General Manager of said Southern Enterprises, Inc., which now owns and operates various theatres located in certain cities and towns of North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma in which 'Paramount Pictures' and other motion pictures produced by others than said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are shown, and acquired and owns 40 per cent of the capital stock of the Saenger Amusement Company of which Ernest V. Richards, Jr., is Vice-President and General Manager, which operates theatres in which 'Paramount Pictures' and pictures produced by others than said Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are shown; and it alleges that by reason of the foregoing and under the statement of facts then, and at all times thereafter, existing, competition was not lessened but was increased and a monopoly was not created but was prevented.

"PARAGRAPH FOURTEEN: It denies, on information and belief, each and every allegation contained in Paragraph Fourteen of the complaint."

Kansas City Exhibs Elect Officers for New Term

The following officers of the Kansas City Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association were elected for the ensuing year at a meeting last week:

William A. Shelton, Ashland theatre, president; Robert Carnie, Alamo theatre, vice-president; Archie Josephson, Victory theatre, treasurer, and A. M. Eisner, Strand theatre, secretary.

The exhibitors adopted a resolution, agreeing that the screens of Kansas City will not be open for the discussion of any commercial projects but that the exhibitors will stand ready at all times to assist the government in any way possible.

Paramount's District and Branch Mgrs. to Meet

S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has issued a call for a meeting of Paramount district and branch managers to be held at the home office, 485 Fifth Avenue, on Monday, November 14, and continuing thereafter for six days.

Mr. Kent will preside at the sessions and it is expected that twenty-five sales executives will attend.

"Wid Gunning Month" Will Usher in the New Year

Giant Sales Drive to Mark Gunning's Control of F. B. Warren Corp.

THE year 1922 will be ushered into the motion picture industry by "Wid Gunning Month." This is the announcement of the Warren Corporation of which Mr. Gunning is in control. The slogan adopted by that company is "Start the new year right—Wid Gunning Month—January 1922!" and it is this slogan which is being carried to exhibitors by the manager and salesmen of the Warren distributing organization.

Included among the features to be offered exhibitors during this booking drive will be "What Do Men Want?" Lois Weber's production, which, it is announced, will open in the Lyric theatre, New York, on November 13th.

"Wid Gunning Month" is the national response of his high-powered sales force to the announcement a few weeks ago that Mr. Gunning had assumed control of the Warren organization. Coupled with the speeding up effect of this news on the selling force is the enthusiasm created by the fact that the productions now being booked indicate that about the first of the new year the Gunning exploitation and sales machine will be setting a whirlwind pace that will be burning up the country.

"The million dollar question, 'What Do Men Want,' will be sweeping the country like wildfire by that time," wrote the Western branch manager who suggested the "Wid Gunning Month" to the home office. "The successful Los Angeles premiere of 'Our Mutual Friend' shows what we will do with this 'perfect movie.' That human box office bell ringer 'Old Oaken Bucket' has already demonstrated its cash register value and will be at the top of its stride in January. Let's take advantage of these facts and concentrate on a drive that will roll up sensational booking figures as a tribute to Wid Gunning."

The suggestion of the branch manager met with an additional impetus in the home office when it was discovered that January 30th is the birthday of Wid Gunning. So it is that "Wid Gunning Month" is definitely on the calendar and all guns are set for a month's business that will present the corporation's head with a worth-while birthday present.

"Wid Gunning Month" times perfectly with the big plans this distribution organization now has under way. Long run engagements and road show plans are now being whipped into shape on "What Do Men Want?" and "Our Mutual Friend." Within the next month both of these specials will have made their splash in the principal key cities. In this connection the exploitation department of the corporation is being expanded on a scale that will fit in with the broadside plans of the organization. Outstanding in the Exploitation Department's plans is the association with its work of a corps of the best known showmen in the country who will be prepared to put high-powered exploitation back of the road shows in key city first runs. News of the identity of these showmen can be expected to start breaking next week when it will be possible to divulge the identity of the first few of these prominent managers who have harkened to the call of Wid Gunning.

These "minute men" are backed by an enlarged home office exploitation department including in its roster specialists in advertising copy, direct mail work, newspaper tie-ups and straight bally-hoo showmanship. All of these methods of exhibitor co-operation will be brought into play on "Wid Gunning Month."

In New York, Lois Weber's "What Do Men Want?" has been already scheduled for its premiere. It will open at the Lyric theatre, on November 13th, succeeding "The Three Musketeers." Mr. Gunning states that in his opinion "What Do Men Want?" is a tremendously better film than Miss Weber's first big success "Where Are My Children?"; that it has all the power and humanness of such successes as "Shoes," "The Price of a Good Time," "Jewel" and "For Husbands Only," and that it is a bigger theme than "Hypocrites."

Mr. Gunning has made extensive plans for the exploitation of this "Million Dollar Answer To Man's Greatest Problem," and his selling and exploitation organization throughout the country has been geared to handle it in a manner that will give it a more concentrated send-off in the way of comprehensive showmanship than has ever been known before in the film industry.

A large number of prints have been forwarded to the offices of Mr. Gunning's organization, this having been necessitated by the exceptional advance bookings in many centers.

Mr. Gunning stated that he had purposely withheld this production of Miss Weber's until after other organizations had brought out their biggest specials, so that it could be launched at the heighth of the Fall season when commercial conditions were at their best.

Wire Briefs from Coast

THE Fox Studios on the Coast will greatly reduce production. Contracts with Eileen Percy. Barbara Bedford, Maurice Flynn, Johnny Walker and Edna Murphy have expired and have not been renewed. Charles (Buck) Jones will resume production in thirty days; Shirley Mason about January 1, and William Russell about February 1.

Cecil De Mille upon the completion of "Saturday Night" will leave for New York about November 27. In New York he will board the steamer Patria for Italy and will later tour Algiers, France, Switzerland, Germany, including stops at Paris, Monte Carlo and London. This is Mr. De Mille's first vacation in eight years, and he is expected to be away from studio work for about two months.

Associated Exhibitors will distribute "The Unfoldment," a six-reel George H. Kern production, with an all-star cast. Mr. Kern is at present in Los Angeles preparing for the start of his next subject.

The local Los Angeles papers announce that the city government has made a contract with Robert Brunton whereby the latter is to make a five-reel picture showing the perfection of Los Angeles' water system, hydro-electric power plants and desirable sites.

Marcus Loew, accompanied by his wife, has arrived in Los Angeles to attend the opening of his new Loew's State theatre on November 12. It has a seating capacity of 2,800. Bert Lytell's "Trip to Paradise" will be the feature of the opening program.

M.P.T.O. Dedicates Itself to Public Service

HERE is the task of public service to which the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America formally and publicly dedicated itself to at the Criterion theatre, New York, Saturday, October 29th:

"First—To encourage in every way possible the production of clean, wholesome and optimistic films.

"Second—To take an active interest in the public welfare and co-operate with our community civic and social forces, in helping to maintain a high moral standard.

"Third—To utilize our theatres and screens for the purpose of helping our boys and girls to become good citizens.

"And last—Appreciating that the very economic foundation of our existence is threatened and humbly desiring to do our part to the full measure in helping to re-establish a healthy condition on our screens a possible solution of our present problems—the revivifying of the spirit of brotherly love and the application in our everyday life of the principle of the Golden Rule.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE

Ten of the eleven technical films shown at the American mining Congress in the Chicago Coliseum were produced by the Rothacker Film Company for the United States Bureau of Mines. The Bureau is building up one of the world's largest libraries of educational movies which are loaned to schools, churches and other centers on non-theatrical exhibition.

Another feature has been added to the Roosevelt program, Ascher Brothers having put the Syncopated Symphony Orchestra on the bill in addition to the splendid symphony orchestra already occupying the pit at their big downtown house. The Syncopated musicians are garbed in pointed hats and glown costumes and during their numbers spot-lights are thrown on them.

Cecil Maberry, Chicago manager for Goldwyn, was a guest of that organization at the opening of "Theodora" at the Astor theatre, New York, Friday night, having made the trip east, especially to be present at the premier of this widely heralded picture.

Peace has been declared at La Salle, Illinois, between the theatre men and operators, electricians and stage hands, who have been on strike for the past two months, a compromise settlement having been reached. The theatres which were effected by the labor difficulties were the Colonial, Marquette, Majestic and the La Salle.

"The Three Musketeers" is scheduled to end its successful run of eight weeks at the Randolph theatre with the October 20th performances, being withdrawn to make way for "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Mary Pickford's picture which is declared by critics to be her greatest. The picture will be seen in Chicago at a price of fifty cents, although running in New York at the Apollo theatre at two dollar top. The following cablegram has been received by Aaron Jones: "I would like to do something for the amusement of the orphan children in Chicago and think they would enjoy seeing my picture, 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' Therefore you are authorized to admit them in the mornings free of all charges. Give them my love and say I hope they will enjoy it—Mary Pickford." In accordance with the wishes expressed by Mary, Jones, Linick & Schaefer are arranging for the little ones of orphan asylums, of charitable children's homes, etc., to witness this masterpiece free.

Ruth Stonehouse, familiar to all Chicagoans as a former Essanay star, was present in person at McVicker's theatre all week, beginning last Monday, where she did a classic dancing and singing act. Kathleen Williams has been added to the list of film stars that Aaron J. Jones has coralled for personal appearances at his theatres and she will be at the Rialto theatre the week of October 24th. Al Jennings will be on McVicker's bill the same week.

Clara Kimball Young's second series of personal appearances at Ascher theatres within a few weeks was a triumph for this popular star and unusually large crowds flocked to the Roosevelt and some of Ascher's neighborhood house to see her. There can be no doubt of Miss Young's popularity with the motion picture public of Chicago after the reception given her. Ike Von Ronkel was kept busy chaperoning Miss Young during her Chicago visit and was more than pleased with the hit she made.

Charles (Chic) Sale is one of the most popular artists upon the vaudeville stage today. In practically every city he plays, he is requested by the various clubs, organizations, chambers of commerce and other public bodies to appear, either to attend banquets, or to present his vaudeville offering.

Roy Alexander has been appointed short subject manager of Universal's Chicago exchange to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of Maurice Hellman. Harry Berman and Art Smith, general sales manager of the short subject department, were in Chicago this week going over the sales plans with Mr. Alexander and Universal's Chicago officials.

Celebrated Players have arranged to distribute "Why Girls Leave Home," heralded as one of the big pictures of the year, in this territory. "The Black Panther's Cub" has been closed for a first run at the Ziegfeld theatre, according to Joe Friedman, who believes this is a big box office attraction, starring as it does Florence Reed in what is declared by reviewers to be one of the top notch pictures of the season.

Edwin Silton, general field manager of Pioneer, is occupying the manager's desk at Pioneer's Chicago exchange following the resignation of Clyde Elliott, who for some time past has been Pioneer's Chicago manager. Mr. Silton, who was formerly manager of Pioneer's Cincinnati exchange, and recently assumed the duties of field manager, will be in active charge of the Chicago office until a permanent manager is named. President A. E. Lefcroft spent several days in Chicago going over the situation with Mr. Silton and is much pleased with the outlook in the territory.

Mr. Silton has made some changes in the sales staff and E. P. Casanave, formerly of Associated Producers, covers the city; Jimmy Sense will work the south side; Jack Barry the north side, and M. A. Wienbaum, widely known in Wisconsin, will work out of Milwaukee. Charles Tyler will have charge of the Indiana territory with headquarters at Indianapolis.

Henry Peters has resigned as sales manager of Pioneer and is expected to announce his new connection within a few days.

Clyde Elliott has taken over the rights to "The Lady of the Dugout" for Illinois, Indiana and Missouri and will release the picture through Pioneer, at the same time arranging for personal appearances of Al Jennings in the principal cities of this territory.

Frank Zambrino, of Progress Pictures, has purchased the Illinois and Indiana rights to twelve, two-reel Eddy Lyons comedies and will release the first of these laugh-getters December 1st. Mr. Zambrino reports steady improvement in business and believes that the exchange, which has good pictures to offer, and salesmen who will be constantly on the job, will win out this winter.

Charles J. Schaefer, owner of the Garfield theatre, is confined to Mercy Hospital, where he occupies room 409, following an operation which he underwent last Friday. His wide circle of friends will be glad to know that he is doing well.

M. Eastburn has sold his four hundred seat Star theatre at Watseka, Ill., to F. N. Kenney. Mr. Eastburn has operated the house for eight years and made it one of the best paying small town theatres in the state. He will retire from the picture business and devote his attention to a dairy farm near Watseka, which he has recently acquired.

Manager I. Maynard Schwartz, of Educational, is proud of the first run loop bookings on his company's releases which are now running at the Roosevelt, Chicago, and Jones, Linick & Schaefer's downtown houses. Kinogram News had a place on the opening program of the Chicago and is showing at the Riviera, Central Park, and Tivoli, and all key cities in the territory are now closed, according to Mr. Schwartz.

Sales Manager Eichenlaub, of First National, is now organizing a department, which will sell comedies exclusively, the personnel of which he will announce within a few days. Among the comedies which are now being released through First National are Keaton's, Chaplin's, Sennett's and Turpin's.

W. D. Burford is in New York this week to attend the meeting of the committee appointed by President Cohen, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to investigate the present management of Associated First National pictures. Mr. Burford is one of the directors of the Picture Theatre Owners' national organization.

Si Griever, of Griever Productions, has been building up a formidable list of feature releases for the Illinois and Indiana territory, some of the latest pictures he has purchased being, "Heart of the North," in six reels, from Joe Brandt; "Judgment," a six-reel World Production; "Bali the Unknown," a five reel Prizma; "Every Woman's Problem," with Mrs. Wallace Reid; forty-four two reel comedies from Rialto Productions, twelve two reel Wetwer Comedies, four features and Phillip Gubl Comedies from Irving Lesser, "Whispering Women," a Clark Cornelius feature and eight five reel Cornelius Westerns. Mr. Griever is getting ready to open an Indianapolis office to take care of the Indiana territory on these and his other releases at an early date.

President E. H. Hammons, of Educational Films, Inc., was a Chicago visitor last week and while here expressed himself as optimistic over the outlook for theatre business in the central west. He believes that indications are that steady improvement will be in order throughout the Winter.

Sam Gold, of Gold Advertising Company, has removed his headquarters from the temporary office at 118 N. La Salle street, to the Hearst Building, 326 W. Madison street. He intends to devote his organization exclusively to catering to the motion picture business and other closely allied lines.

A short picture produced by the Rothacker Film Company played an important part in the recent Salvation Army Fund Drive. The picture featured by Olga Menn, a singer, was directed by Jean Freac and photographed by Verne Blakely Charles Geis, camera man for Rothacker's Practical Picture Division, has completed a picture for the Holt Manufacturing Company visualizing the part the tractor plays in Illinois road building.

Harry Lorch, assistant manager of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange has been promoted to be manager of Goldwyn's Omaha branch, and has left for that city to assume his new duties. He will be succeeded at the Chicago office by Ben Reingold, who has been manager of the Milwaukee exchange, and who made a very successful record there.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Under the Lash—
Very good picture—receipts fair. (East.)

Big business due perhaps to quality of supporting numbers. (West.)

The Great Impersonation—
Good drawing card because it's a good picture based on widely known and well liked book. Business was a little better than average. (Middle West.)

This sure is a big picture, great in entertainment and box office value. (East.)

Footlights—
One of Miss Ferguson's best features which drew good business for week. (Middle West.)

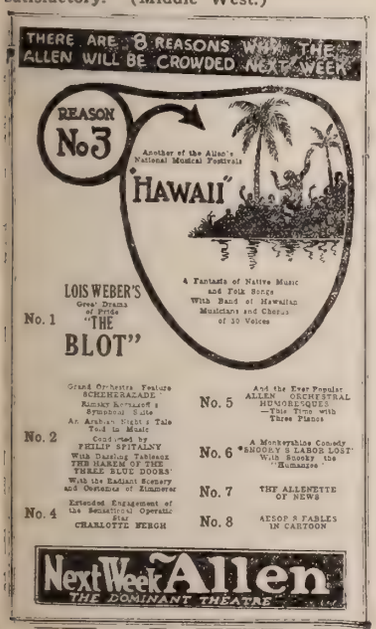
A very fine picture. (Middle West.)

Beyond—
Pleased greatly. Receipts dandy. (East.)

The Affairs of Anatol—
Fifth week held up good. (West.)

Three Word Brand—
Fairly good, both as to entertainment and box office. (West.)

The Great Moment—
We had average business while playing this one. (Middle West.)



The Love Special—
Brought just about the usual business. (Middle West.)

Paying the Piper—

The Hell Diggers—
Just ordinary for Reid. Women liked it. Good business. (Middle West.)

After the Show—
Not a particularly original plot, but splendidly acted. Better than average business. (Middle West.)

Canpy Ricks—
Good picture, pretty good business, satisfactory. (Middle West.)

One of a novel series of display ads, self-explanatory which S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Allen Theatre, Cleveland, O., used recently.

GOLDWYN

Doubling for Romeo—
We regard this as funniest picture ever screened. Played to excellent business and pleased our patrons. (Middle West.)

Better than most of Rogers' recent efforts. The sub-titles are the best that have been seen here for many months. Good for plenty of laughs. Excellent business on this picture. (Middle West.)

The Old Nest—
First class. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

Wonderful photoplay. Went over big, with the aid of lobby display, window display, newspaper advertising and billboards. A huge success. (West.)

Beating the Game—
Good picture, poor business. Reason—do not know. (Middle West.)

The Man From Lost River—
Really a clean, wholesome picture. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

The Concert—

Dangerous Curves Ahead—
Very well thought of. Receipts good. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Woman's Place—
The usual Constance Talmadge comedy —very breezy and fast moving. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Constance Talmadge about the same as ever in this picture. Business about average. (Middle West.)

One Arabian Night—
The picture received liberal publicity and played to a crowded house all week. (Middle West.)

Seats were at a premium during the presentation of this well-liked production. (East.)

Invisible Fear—
A mediocre feature, bringing the usual box office receipts. (East.)

The Sign on the Door—
I consider this a very fine picture as far as quality is concerned. We had good business on it. (West.)

Bits of Life—
Fine. A treat to everyone. No one should miss it. These were some of the comments heard on the opening night. Big business for this worth while production. (Middle West.)

Peck's Bad Boy—
Jackie Coogan is splendid. Only a mediocre production, and not a big drawing card at our house. (Middle West.)

The Idle Class—
Opinions divided. Some liked it immensely. Others didn't. Local critics declared it a masterpiece. Coupled with a big feature, it did big business. (Middle West.)

Her Social Value—
Just fair. Not destined to add many to Katherine MacDonald's admirers, but seemed to please her old ones well enough. (Middle West.)

Terrible continuity, with poor spots drawn out and strong part soft-pedaled. Receipts good. (East.)

Mother O' Mine—
Splendid picture. Did fine business. (Middle West.)

Two Minutes to Go—
Poor picture, business fair. (Middle West.)

METRO

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—
Business satisfactory and holding over to second week good. Special exploitation stunts, none unusual. (Middle West.)

Closed third and final week here with good receipts. (East.)

There Are No Villains—
Viola Dana's personality put it over. Business fairly good. (Middle West.)

A Trip to Paradise—
Very good picture, one that brought good business. (West.)

Camille—
Played two weeks to fair business. (West.)

FOX

Over the Hill—
Artistically, this picture is rather crude, but the acting is good. One of the best box office attractions of the year, at a 50 cent uniform price. (Middle West.)

The Night Horseman—
Capacity business. Picture up to usual Mix standard. (East.)

A Virgin Paradise—
As a native of this section Pearl White always draws good. Large attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Queen of Sheba—
Three weeks run went over big. (West.)

REALART

Room and Board—
Splendid picture which did a good business all week. (Middle West.)

The Speed Girl—
Very fine feature which drew good business at all performances. (West.)

Everything for Sale—
A well filled house all week. The star is popular here. (Middle West.)

The Little Clown—
A fairly good production, with less than the usual business. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

No Woman Knows—
Played to good audiences a second week. (Middle West.)

High Heels—
Only fair business and pleased the same. (West.)

The Fox—
Best business since last spring. Excellent production.

R-C PICTURES

The Foolish Age—
Wonderful—broke all house records. Had to run a special midnight show on opening night. Biggest audience picture of the year. Can't praise it too highly. (Middle West.)

Shams of Society—
Unusually fine picture, with suspense right up to the finish. Audience applauded. Business better than it has been. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Way Down East—
Fine business for second run. One of Griffith's best. (Middle West.)

Fine production, but as it played here all last summer as a road show, it did not draw heavily on a return engagement. (Middle West.)

Disraeli—
Went over the heads of patrons, failed to do even business and was pulled off in middle of week run. Those who did see it liked it immensely. (East.)

Very fine feature with good business. (West.)

Dream Street—
Return engagement went only fair. (West.)

Little Lord Fauntleroy—
Mary Pickford at her best in this splendid feature which went over big during first week of its run at this house. (Middle West.)

Mary Pickford's greatest. A box office triumph. (Middle West.)

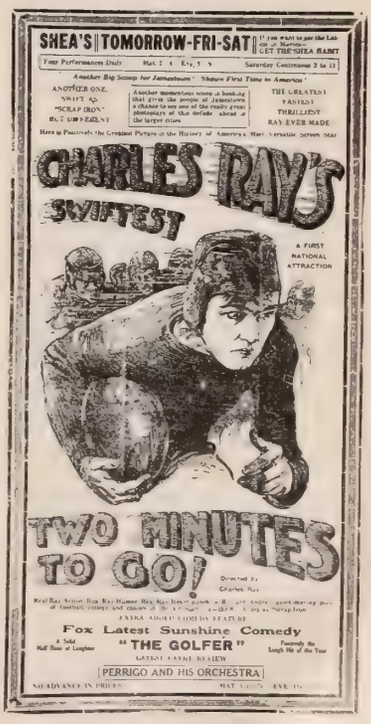
EQUITY

Charge It—
Fair box office receipts recorded for a week run. An average picture. (East.)

HODKINSON

Pilgrims of the Night—
A high class feature which played to fair business. (Middle West.)

ARROW



God's Country and the Law—
A strong picture which offers excellent exploitation opportunities and went over good for week. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

Why Girls Leave Home—
Contrary to the general opinion, I do not like this title—it does not appeal to the highest class of patronage. Business, however, was fair. (Middle West.)

WARREN

Our Mutual Friend—
A very fine picture which brought more than the usual business. (West.)

A short half page on "Two Minutes to Go," using principally press book material, is what Shea's theatre, Jamestown, N. Y., bought in local papers to play up a premiere showing.

Thorough Campaign for "Over the Hill"

Ruben and Finkelstein, Minneapolis, Neglect No Exploitation Opportunities

AN exploitation campaign which embodied almost every publicity method known to showmanship, and which was proportionately fruitful in its results was recently developed and executed in connection with the showing of "Over the Hill" by Messrs. Ruben and Finkelstein, operators of the Lyric and New Garrick theatres, at Minneapolis and St. Paul respectively, with the assistance of a William Fox representative.

To begin with, a three-day teaser campaign was inaugurated in each city's daily newspaper. The advertisements consisted of a series of twenty one-inch displays. These were followed by larger displays and were concluded with a special lay-out of portraits of Mary Carr. In light of these portraits Mrs. Carr was posed as famous women of American history.

Concurrent with the newspaper advertising, it was arranged with a large number of meat markets in the two cities to wrap all their commodities in "Over the Hill" heralds, which were supplied to them. In this way more than 15,000 herald-wrappers were distributed.

It was also arranged with several of the prominent dairies to attach to their milk bottles for an entire week stickers which proclaimed the advent of the production. In addition a mailing list of nearly 2000 names was put to work.

Following this auspicious inaugural, invitations were dispatched to a number of Minneapolis' most prominent club and society women, educators, ministers and civic betterment workers, asking them to attend a private review of the feature. More than 100 of the city's most influential residents responded, and some were so impressed that they offered written testimonials as to the moral value of the film. These were subsequently used to advantage in further newspaper publicity.

On the trail of the private showing came a free show to the newsboys of St. Paul. This contest absorbed more than its period of nine days. It terminated with the awarding of prizes which in themselves were further "boosts" for the picture. They consisted of copies of Will Carleton's poems, from which "Over the Hill" was derived, and a large number of passes to the theatres where the picture was showing.

Then, to round out the entire exploitation plan, arrangements were made with the singer and leaders of cabaret orchestras in both Minneapolis and St. Paul to play the song which bore the same name as the picture. Whenever the song was rendered a large display-card was exhibited announcing that the production was showing at the Lyric and New Garrick theatres.

It evoked many columns of favorable comment on the part of the newspapers and tended to arouse universally favorable sentiment on the part of the public.

The window display angle came next, and pretentious designs were installed in many of the two cities' most conspicuous localities. Tie-ups were effected with sheet music and phonograph record stores, where the song "Over the Hill" was being offered for sale. A complete set of the nine Johnston pictures of Mary Carr, embracing the eight American heroine poses, were placed in the most conspicuous show-case of the largest department store in Minneapolis.

The next step in the campaign was a newspaper contest.

Lobby decorations for "Peaceful Valley" which Guy Oglietti of the Liberty theatre, Reynoldsville, Va., designed for his showing of the above mentioned picture

"Three Musketeers" exploitation put over by J. D. Johnson for the Minneapolis showing of this picture at the Auditorium, as told in the accompanying story

Patterson Decorates for "When Lights Are Low"

Manager Willard C. Patterson, of the Criterion theatre, Atlanta, played "When Lights Are Low" recently, with an appropriate musical setting, and plenty of atmosphere in the lobby.

All the advertising matter was hand-drawn—a dull buff background with the letters arranged Chinese fashion, in green and black. Stoufer, the "poster-man" of the Criterion, who has been associated with Manager Patterson for years, is an artist of the first water, as these signs proved again. Long, narrow cards, lettered from top to bottom, instead of lengthwise, hid the lobby-frames at the sides of the theatre. A cut-out of Sessue Hayakawa occupied the front of the lobby.

A score or more Chinese lanterns, which come in a bewildering variety of sizes and shapes, were hung about the lobby and when lighted at night the lobby was very attractive.

A special musical score, incorporating some very weird and some beautiful Chinese music had been arranged for the picture by David Love, musical director of both the Criterion and the Metropolitan theatres, was not the least part of the picture's success.

Attractive Window Displays Secured for "Old Nest"

In exploiting "The Old Nest," playing recently at the Park theatre, Roanoke, Va., a number of attractive window displays were obtained in prominent local windows and in addition, elaborate lobby decorations were conceived and executed.

Hanging from the marquise of the theatre were half a dozen or more birds' nests. Sitting in a chair on a raised dais in the centre of the lobby entrance was the cut-out figure of a motherly-appearing woman. Large banners were placed on top of the marquise, on all three sides, carrying just the title of the picture. Enlargements, stills and posters were used freely.

Johnston Puts Over "Three Musketeers"

J. L. Johnston, formerly Paramount exploiteer at Los Angeles, now managing the Minneapolis Auditorium, has recently put "The Three Musketeers" over to a two weeks' run with the aid of newspaper tie-ups and special stunts.

The eighteen girl ushers at the Auditorium were costumed in musketeer uniforms, as were the doormen and other help, so that the patrons "got" the musketeer atmosphere as soon as they entered the house. An elaborate scenic prologue was not attempted, the management depending on the employee's dress and a short recitation entitled "The Three Musketeers," by Arthus Bouvier, to place the audience in the right atmosphere.

One of the special stunts used by Mr. Johnston was to send nine of his ushers out on the streets in uniform to sell the Minneapolis Daily News. To carry out "The Three Musketeers" idea the girls traveled in groups of three and wore a banner on their backs advertising the picture. The News tied up liberally with space and pictures of the girls selling the papers.

Calvert Stages Novelty Prologue Number

For the showing of "The Cup of Life" at the Capitol theatre, St. Paul, Minn. Managing Director L. V. Calvert originated an atmospheric prologue that added not a little to the patrons' interest in the picture.

A transparency set in a large picture frame immediately back of the picture screen was the basis of the prologue. Incandescents and spots were employed to obtain the following effects:

The scene opened with dark blue sky dark red light in window and door of Chinese house at right. At about thirty seconds the sky and back of gate, etc., started up in reds, violets, pinks, etc., until the scene was brought to full noonday. The flowers, wistaria, etc., on the front were brought out by side foots and overhead lighting.

The music for this setting was "Hindu Prayer," by Irene Berge, featuring English horn solo by Walter Bastian and Capitol Symphony Orchestra. This number was then used as a theme for the entire picture.

The entire affair was very effective and proved very successful.

Elmira, N.Y., Theatre Gets Mercantile Cooperation

In a fifty-fifty tie-up arranged by Paramount Exploiteer, Harry Royster and George Tooker, manager of the Regent theatre, Elmira, N. Y., with one of Elmira's leading department stores, a cut of Gloria Swanson appeared in the store's newspaper displays during the week, "The Affairs of Anatol" was playing at the Regent.

In payment for the newspaper space accorded the Regent attraction, Manager Tooker displayed some of the department store's silks in the theatre promenade.

Make Big Splurge on Premiere Showing

Playing a premiere in a medium sized city when properly exploited is something that is sure to draw a lot of extra business. Robert C. Harming, manager of Shea's Opera House, Jamestown, N. Y., booked "Two Minutes to Go" for the same week as the New York Strand showing and the Opera House announced the engagement in a half page ad. headed by a catch line which read "Another Big Scoop for Jamestown: First Time Shown in America."

While not literally true it was near enough to serve the purpose so far as advertising purposes are concerned and the result of the smash was an excellent run.

Bellingham, Wash., Theatre Originates Prologue

The Cafe of the Green Fan, which is such a spicy part of "The Affairs of Anatol," was reproduced with certain economical revisions, for the prologue of the picture when it played at the American Theatre, Bellingham, Wash.

The youngster in the foreground of the accompanying illustration, is nine years old. He is a clever little dancer and appears with his sister, aged nine, who happened to be making a change when this photograph was shot. There is a Spanish dancer in the rear. Leading the orchestra is a "wild-woman" made up like Polly Moran. The suggestions for this prologue were taken from a Paramount still.

A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, who is something of a musical and dramatic authority, helped Manager Fred B. Walton state this effective introduction to his program.

Lobby display used by Manager A. C. Cowles in exploiting "Dangerous Curve Ahead" at the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C.

"Dangerous Curve" Lobby Novel Idea

Two large boulders, so located as to enable a curved road to be laid between them, formed the central idea of the exploitation of "Dangerous Curve Ahead" at the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C. White gravel scattered along the lobby of the theatre composed the roadway, and two tiny automobiles about to meet each other, yet obscured from each other's view, added emphasis to the "dangerous curve" theme of the lobby display. Small bits of shrubbery advantageously placed along the miniature highway gave the entire scene a rural atmosphere.

Along each side of the long lobby Manager A. C. Cowles placed three snow-white posts, each bearing the inscription: "LOVE'S HIGHWAY." Four scarlet circular signs bearing white letters setting forth the name of the picture exploited also assisted in filling out the display.

Coupled with intelligent newspaper advertising, this display proved one of the most result-getting exploitations Manager Cowles has conceived.

Newsboys Work for "Dinty" Once Again

Manager Gillen of the Strand theatre, Binghamton, got a lot of valuable free publicity in his home town newspapers when he arranged a special showing of 'Dinty" for the newsboys of the city. The carriers were invited to a Saturday morning presentation beginning at 11 o'clock. By arrangement with the Binghamton Press and the Morning Sun the boys were able to see the picture free. It was some party. Not a newsboy in Binghamton or surrounding district was missing. The theatre party was a huge success and the boys were enthusiastic over the show. Before the show the boys paraded through the principal downtown streets. The Binghamton Press and Morning Sun devoted columns to the party on the day of the event. You can't buy this kind of publicity, said Manager Gillen.

Minneapolis News Aids Blue Mouse Stunt

The Blue Mouse theatre of Minneapolis and the Minneapolis Daily News put over a contest recently for the showing of "Why Girls Leave Home" at the Blue Mouse that was instrumental in awakening wide interest in the picture. In display ads and in text the News announced that $50 in cash would be paid to the persons who would write in 200 words answers to the question "Why girls leave home?"

There were thirteen prizes, varying in amounts from $25 for the first prize to $1 each for ten third prizes. The contest was conducted in advance of the showing of the picture and was in no way directly identified with the showing. The results, however, were immediate when the feature was announced as a coming attraction at the Blue Mouse.

Martin Leaves No Stone Unturned at Winnipeg

Live wire exploitation originated by "Bill" Martin, exploitation representative of Capitol Film, Ltd., of Winnipeg, Canada, put over "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" at the Winnipeg Lyceum theatre, in fine shape.

Johnny Hines, star of the picture was in the city and Martin arranged with the local Cadillac agency to allow Hines to use a car for exploitation purposes, the machine bearing a sign that advertised the picture and the Cadillac Company.

A "human spider" who had scored a hit the week previous was paired off with Mr. Hines and some free publicity secured in the newspapers.

Mr. Hines was the guest of the Winnipeg Kiwanis Club and more front page publicity was forthcoming from this event.

Martin used the "lost and found" columns of the Winnipeg papers for some teaser ads that got a lot of attention and made an excellent tie-up with a local sporting club when he arranged for the last page of the program used at a big event staged by the club during the week "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" was playing at the Lyceum.

The ad used read: "Johnny Hines says he'll take on all comers, champions or near champs, regardless of weight, size or color, providing he gets a lead of two blocks, but the main idea is to see Johnny Hines in person at the Lyceum."

The stunt pleased the the fight fans and it produced fine results at a small expense. Manager J. J. Raymond of the Lyceum co-operated with Mr. Martin in exploiting the picture.

Extravagant Ballet Number Presented at New York Capitol

Alexander Oumansky, ballet-master at the New York Capitol theatre, exceeded his own usual high standard of choreographic spectacles for the second anniversary week program at the Capitol by producing "Scherezade," one of the most popular ballets of the dance devotees.

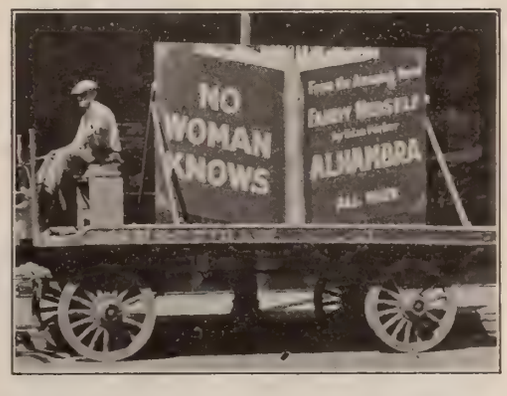
This masterpiece of music and motion calls for a cast of thirty dancers and pantomimists. Mr. Oumansky augmented his ballet forces to the required number and with a scenic setting as striking and faithful as any ever used in any opera presentation, staged the difficult and exacting numbers so well that the production as a whole without doubt sets a new standard for motion picture theatre choreography.

"Scherezade" marks approximately the one hundredth ballet that the indefatigable ballet-director has staged at the Capitol. Week in and week out for the past two years, Oumansky has conceived and arranged new dances every Sunday. His tireless energy may be ascribed to his veteran training and experience with the foremost ballets of the world.

"Moth and the Flame" Prologue for "Anatol"

The accompanying illustration shows the prologue for "The Affairs of Anatol" at the New theatre, Baltimore, John D. Howard, Paramount exploiteer, and E. V. Cupero, director of the New theatre orchestra co-operated in the arrangements.

The back drop represents a huge web and at the side of the stage is a large candle-stick about four feet high. A singer dressed in a black evening gown with red plume in her hair stands so that her head comes directly in the center of the web as she sings the old favorite song "The Moth and Flame," a little child, dressed to suggest a moth, dances about the candle-stick. The climax comes at the end of the selection when the dancer prostrates herself at the base of the candle-holder."



This cut is explained by the accompanying story concerning the prologue for "The Affairs of Annatol" presented at the New theatre, Baltimore

This inexpensive lobby front on "Through the Back Door" was used by the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C.

House on Wheels Advertises Picture

To exploit "Why Girls Leave Home," Emil Groth, manager of B. S. Moss' Coliseum theatre, New York, had a house built on a flivver which toured the neighborhood prior to and during the run of the picture. At prominent corners the flivver would stop, and the girl would come out and hold onto the door, apparently conveying to the passersby that she was just about to leave home. After a few moments she would reenter the house and pursue the same course in other locations. This simple stunt attracted unusual attention.

Float used to advertise "No Woman Knows" at the Alhambra theatre, Toledo, O., as told in the story on this page

Novel Street Stunt for "No Woman Knows"

Joe Mayer, Universal exploiteer, attracted great attention in Toledo, O., recently with his street stunt for "No Woman Knows," playing at the Alhambra theatre. He had an immense cut-out of a book mounted on a large truck and carried through the streets during the week preceding the showing.

On the cut-out were the display lines in huge white letters: "'No Woman Knows,' from the amazing novel, 'Fanny Herself,' by Edna Ferber, Alhambra—All Week."

In addition to this stunt, Mayer's exploitation consisted of widespread teaser posters and a cumulative teaser and regular newspaper ad campaign.

This Exhibitor Publishes Own Newspaper

One of the gamest fights in movie history is that of Noble Peterson, manager of the Lincoln theatre, Delta, Utah, against his local newspaper. The rural Horace Greeley read somewhere that movies were wrong, that they were a superficial form of entertainment, and that they should be driven out of existence. He dipped his pen in vitriol and went after the exhibitor. He denied Mr. Peterson advertising space, and was quickly squeezing the latter's business to death. In fact the Lincoln only played three nights a week.

Peterson decided to ruin the editor's little game. Together with Rick Ricketson, Paramount exploiter from Salt Lake City, they founded a four-page paper, "The Delta Booster." They sold 26 ads and $10 an ad which more than paid for the publication. The business men were so pleased that they asked Ricketson and Peterson to confer with them. They insured enough ads to beat their former record. A local printer bid for the job and will handle it at $100 per issue, with the advertising revenue far exceeding that. The paper will be devoted exclusively to lively theatrical news and already has a circulation of 1,000. Everybody is happy but the editor. Peterson has redecorated his house and is now playing seven days a week.

Private Screening Fine Publicity for "One Arabian Night"

"One Arabian Night" was given a constructive exploitation campaign during its recent run at the Walnut theatre, Cincinnati.

Manager I. Libson, manager of the Walnut, arranged for a special screening during the week previous to the showing. Invitations were sent to about 100 prominent men and women of Cincinnati, including members of the faculty of the University of Cincinnati, club women, society leaders, artists, and newspaper critics. This special screening held at one of Mr. Libson's big theatres, received liberal newspaper comment in addition to the reviews given by the critics.

Window display tie-ups and carefully prepared newspaper ads. were an important part of the campaign.

Fictional Characters Interest Bingampton, N. Y., Fans

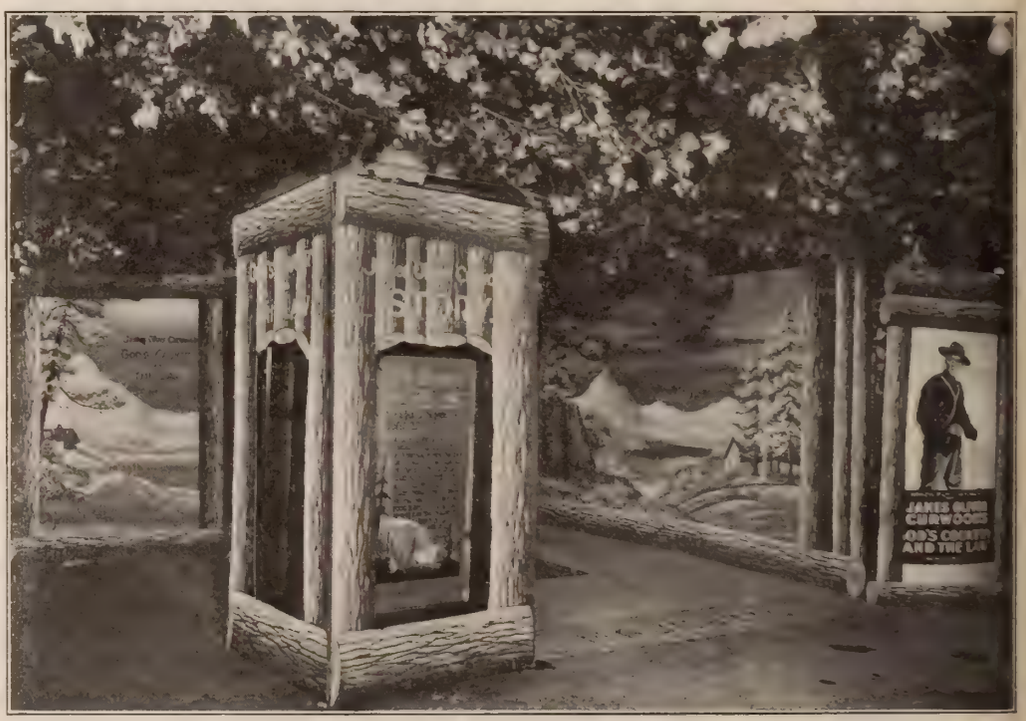
"Betty and Billy Bingo" were two fictitional personages which Paramount Exploiteer Harry Royster and Manager D. Cohen of the Strand theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., invented for use in writing advertising copy for a double tie-up truck on "Experience."

"Billy and Betty" were quoted in each of seventeen ads secured from local merchants. They served to make the selling talk used novel and gave the ads a personal touch that was effective in exciting reader interest.

Weld Tries Out Lobby Prologue

The accompanying cut illustrates the lobby exploitation which Arthur E. Weld, manager of the Strand theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, used during his showing of "Through the Back Door."

This "back door" scene, while having little real relation to the picture, was the means of atracting a lot of attention to the engagement of Mary's picture.



Teaser Ads Used for "Why Girls Leave Home" Campaign

Beginning with some carefully placed teaser advertising, Manager Willard Patterson, of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, put over "Why Girls Leave Home" with fine effect.

The campaign began one week prior to the opening date of the picture by single column ads, addressed to various city officials and newspaper men, in each of the three papers. The ads read "Buford Goodwin, Ward Green, Mayor Key, Chief Beavers—Do YOU Know Why Girls Leave Home?" Well-known ministers, political reformers, police officials and so on, were addressed in this way. The ad very carefully did not appear anywhere near the movie page, and created considerable comment.

On Tuesday, when the papers were full of the Ku Klux probe and investigations, an ad two inches long and two columns wide appeared in prominent parts of all three daily papers, reading "Why Probe the Ku Klux? Investigate Why Girls Leave Home."

On Thursday, an ad two columns wide and three inches long appeared, headed by a big question-mark, and reading "If you would like to know "Why Girls Leave Home" step up to 122 Peachtree Street, tomorrow." 122 Peachtree Street proved to be a very exclusive men's wear shop, and in the window was a pair of trousers with a sign pinned on them, reading, simply, "Why Girls Leave Home." This ad ran Friday and Saturday also, and on Sunday a quarter page ad in all three Sunday papers tied up the teaser stuff with the picture.

Chicago Exploitation Misses No Bets

"The Foolish Age" Gets Thorough Campaign at Barbee's Loop, Chicago

MANY were the exploitation ideas put to work for "The Foolish Age" when this picture played Barbee's Loop theatre, Chicago.

Managing Director W. S. Barbee began his campaign with well planned newspaper displays and also originated a lobby display which converted the Barbee entrance into a veritable carnival of color.

Colored bunting, silk streamers, colored lanterns, various novelty cut-outs, balloons, pennants, etc., were used in profusion. A jazz band concealed within the lobby played popular melodies. Other attractive attention stunts were found in the shape of hand lettered cards and cut-outs of Doris May.

The newspaper displays were novel in their appeal and were directed at various public officials and leading stage favorites playing in Chicago.

The amusement pages of the Chicago papers carried many stories and attractive layouts on the feature.

The Chicago American co-operated with a contest asking its readers to submit their answers to the query: "Which Age Is The Foolish Age? Is It Sixteen or Sixty?" etc. No prizes were offered. Photoplay Editor Rob Reel liked the idea of running the column daily to arouse discussion among the "fans," believing the idea to be sufficiently bright and entertaining to get results minus the customary awards. An avalanche of letters reached the American, and were published during the engagement.

A special drive to interest school children brought satisfactory results. Ten thousand complimentary tickets, admitting children free when accompanied by one adult or more, were distributed at seven Chicago grade schools. The tickets were good for Tuesday, Thursday and Friday matinees only. W. S. Barbee reports a substantial increase in matinee business for the days named. Special College and Club nights also were introduced to catch the attention of the younger patrons. A tie-up with a song publishing house brought a song plugger to the theatre to sing "Just Like a Rainbow" and other appropriate popular numbers.

One of the most effective "freak" stunts was put over through the co-operation of the Chicago Daily Post and its newsies. "Dunce" or "Foolish Age" paper hats, with the advertisement of the picture printed in large type thereon, were worn by the Post newsboys with corners on the loop. The sight of the kids with the high hats aroused interest with the public, incidentally resulting in greater sales for the daily Post.

Another "freak" stunt was the dropping of several hundred balloons from a 'steen-story office building, to the center of fashionable Michigan Boulevard. On each balloon was tied a complimentary ticket to Barbee's theatre. The Chicago Herald-Examiner liked the idea of a special performance for disabled war veterans and announced and conducted the affair.

The "traveling trailer" idea also got over big in Chicago. Through the co-operation of two State Street stores, a screen was placed in a window behind which was stationed a miniature projection machine, flashing scene and title trailers from "The Foolish Age." Crowds of curious and entertained persons surrounded the window each night.

McCormick's Novel Display Ads

S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Allen theatre, Cleveland, in advertising a recent bill at the Allen, has hit on what purports to be a new idea.

The plan seems to have many advantages in that through using it every number on the program gets its share of selling talk instead of just a listing or formal announcement of title.

Mr. McCormick began his week's newspaper display campaign with ads as shown in the accompanying cut in which he listed eight reasons why Cleveland fans would be interested in the Allen program for this particular week.

The first display as shown in ad. No. 1 gave over its selling message to "The Blot," the feature picture on the bill. The second ad is self explanatory and the third also.

There were eight special ads in all and while each one carried a message for the whole bill, on the other hand they specialized on one particular item. The result was all that Mr. McCormick expected. It brought big business. As a novelty, at least, the plan should be carried out by every exhibitor playing a picture for a full week.

Irwin Arranges Attractive Display

For "Bucking the Tiger," when that picture played a three day engagement at the Forsyth Theatre, Atlanta, Manager C. W. Irwin arranged a very good special lobby.

In the center of the lobby, which is a rather big one, was a large square box. Fastened to this block, and in front of it, is a pasteboard roulette wheel, in green red, black and white. This wheel was constantly turning, serving to attract attention merely by its motion. The colors were numbered from one to eight, and in the center of this wheel was a cut-out of the star's head and in the lower left-hand corner of the wheel was an arrow pointing to the numbers on the wheel, as it whirled.

In addition to this lobby, Mr. Irwin used a "float" composed of a one-ton Ford truck on which was a cage the full size of the truck. In this was a very ferocious looking cut-out, mounted, of a tiger (borrowed from a circus poster).

Cooley's Lobby Display Brings 'Em In

Using The Affairs of Anatol and The Old Nest as the attractions, C. D. Cooley, General Manager of the Consolidated Amusement Co., hung up a record for both money and attendance for any one week in Tampa, Fla., at his beautiful Victory theatre.

After reviewing The Old Nest Mr. Cooley dictated the wording for some signs which were displayed in the lobby during the showing. The signs were lettered in the Old English style, three of them reading, "Ye Who Love Mother, Enter Here and Worship," "Ye Who Have Forgotten Mother, Enter Here and Think," and "All Ye Children of Mothers, Come Ye Hither, For We Have a Tale to Tell Ye."

The lobby was decorated with a set piece of scenery of a bay window, an oil lamp and a cut-out of Mother at the window, a tree with an old last year's bird nest in its branches, Spanish moss and trailing vines. In the center of the lobby was a large table, upon which was a Western Union electric sign, a telegraph instrument connected with the main office, a young lady operator and two messenger boys who were there to assist those who followed the sign suggestion to "Wire Mother Now, Don't Wait to Write."

In the window of the main office of the Western Union was a large card reading, "This is Old Nest Week, Wire Mother, Don't Wait to Write." In the windows of the leading Department Stores were cards with well-worded appeals.

This is one of S. Barrett McCormick's novel displays, explained by the accompanying story relative to Mr. McCormick's recent campaign in which "eight reasons" were given why Cleveland residents should attend the Allen theatre

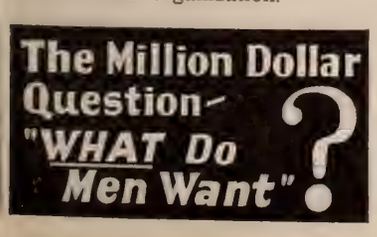
TERRITORIAL SALES AND PURCHASES

In the Independent Field

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Pola Negri Feature for State Right Market

JESSE A. LEVINSON, formerly associated with the Universal, has announced his entry into the State Rights distribution field. Mr. Levinson resigned from that firm for the purpose of organizing his own concern, which will deal exclusively in the distribution of high-class feature productions in the independent market.



Mr. Levinson has announced his initial independent release, "The Polish Dancer," starring nationally famous Pola Negri.

In substantiation of his contention that a star of the calibre of Pola Negri in a production such as "The Polish Dancer" would be a feature that would be quickly absorbed in the State Right market, Mr. Levinson advises that twenty-five per cent of the territory on same was snapped up even before a public announcement was made of its distribution in the independent market.

Service Department for Tarzan Serial

Weiss Brothers announced this week the establishment of a special service department, under the direction of Bert Ennis, director of publicity and advertising for "Adventures of Tarzan" Serial Sales Corporation. The purpose of this new department will be to assist the exchanges distributing "Adventures of Tarzan" in the matter of stunts and special exploitation.

A system has been established whereby each exchange forwards photographs and details of unique or novel advertising used in connection with this serial. Information regarding this advertising is immediately passed on by letter or wire to the other state distributors. In addition to this service, a weekly letter is sent to each exchange giving them the details of stunts devised by the exploitation department of the serial organization.

Selling Aid for Serial

Stunt Scenes Make Up Reel to Sell "Adventures of Tarzan"

IN line with the service which Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation has been extending to all exchanges distributing this Elmo Lincoln serial, announcement is made that an unusual sales help has been prepared. This has taken the form of a "Stunt Reel" composed of every climax in the serial from Episodes 1 to 15.

Embodied in these climaxes are countless stunts performed by Elmo Lincoln, the star, together with the best of the many wild animal thrills which abound throughout the entire chapter play. A few scenes of Lincoln and his leading lady, Louise Lorraine, have also been inserted in this "Stunt Reel." A special main title, written in the vein of a sales talk to exhibitors, has been prepared and appropriate sub-titles inserted throughout the entire reel. The length of this novel sales aid in film form is approximately 600 feet. The "Stunt Reel" can be displayed for the benefit of exhibitors in each exchange. In addition to this, the various salesmen will carry one of these reels for the purpose of showing the exhibitors they visit the merits of "Adventures of Tarzan" in brief form on their own screens.

It is believed to be the first time that a sales help of this kind has been prepared to assist exchanges in securing bookings for a serial. In addition to the purpose mentioned above, it is also possible for exhibitors to display this reel as an announcement trailer. This can be made possible by the addition of a few extra titles, which the exchanges are prepared to furnish their customers. The organization handling this serial states it has several other novel sales helps in preparation for the exchanges distributing "Adventures of Tarzan."

New Burton King Picture

Grace Darling Star in Third of J. W. Film's Society Drama Series

WITH Grace Darling as the star of a modern human interest story laid in the realm of New York's 'Four Hundred,' Burton King has completed an elaborately mounted picture of a special nature for the independent field, to be released by J. W. Film Corporation as number three of their recently announced Society Drama Series. The unusual title of the new Burton King production is, "For Your Daughter's Sake."

By including the new Grace Darling feature in the Society Drama Series, E. S. Manheimer is living up to his original promise to make available to independent exchanges, pictures as elaborate in production and as strong in cast as "The Road to Arcady" which introduces the series.

The story is said to be well worthy of the rich mountings used to create the atmosphere of wealth and elegance for which it calls. Grace Darling plays the role of the daughter of a family in the upper circles of society who is sacrificed by her parents for money and social position. In spite of the fact that she is in love with a rising young engineer, her careful rearing has made her so sensitive to her filial duty that she allows herself to be used by her selfish parents as their social footstool. The complications that result from her unhappy marriage and the great suffering that the parents have forced upon the child they really love, is used by the author and producer to drive home the lesson the title of the drama suggests.

Intensely dramatic situations are created which are said to give Grace Darling rare chances to rise to the heights of strong emotional acting for which she is noted, and the part also calls for gowns of the richness and style she shows to such advantage in her previous appearances.

"The Four Seasons" Adds to Theatre's Prestige

"It will be impossible for any exhibitor who plays 'The Four Seasons' not to enhance his prestige." This is Charles Urban's opinion of Kineto's four-reel subject.

"A theatre takes on the reputation of the product it handles just as surely as any store takes on the reputation of the goods it handles. "Any theatre where 'The Four Seasons' plays is bound to be a better theatre for having played it and is bound to have a better reputation after playing it. Any man or woman who sees 'The Four Seasons' is a better educated person, a more wide-awake person, for everything we see has an effect on us and 'The Four Seasons' has an effect for a great deal of good."

"Shadows of Conscience" for State Righters

AFTER showing "Shadows of Conscience" to many prominently connected with the industry, in Los Angeles, Chicago and finally New York, W. D. Russell returned from the East, October 29, to Chicago, and announced that this seven-reel super-offering will be released on the independent market shortly. His decision to place this special on the territorial right basis follows a number of very successful showings, trade and private, in which the picture has received some of the finest criticisms, both by word of mouth and via the press, ever awarded an independent production.

"Shadows of Conscience" has been characterized as "great," "big" and "real" by not one but every reviewer. Exhibitors and producers alike were free in their praise and generous in their predictions as to the picture's future.

Nation-Wide Campaign for "His Nibs"

Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, issues a statement that in conjunction with the release of Charles (Chic) Sale in "His Nibs," the first of a series of Exceptional Pictures to be made with that star, a campaign will be instituted which will be nation-wide in its scope. In accordance with the plans now under consideration a series of advertisements will be used in the trade papers and in the regional motion picture publications, and in addition, national publicity mediums will be in the schedule.

Foremost among the magazines to be used in assisting to bring the knowledge of this unique feature play to the attention of the public will be the "Saturday Evening Post," for which purpose the Patterson-Andress Company, Inc., a well-known advertising agency in New York City, has been called into consultation by Mr. Beyfuss, in the planning of the advertising copy.

"Victory Pageants" in New York Strand

"Victory Pageants," a Kineto Review which details the great home-coming parades in 1918 will play at the Strand theatre during Armistice Week.

A Gold Mine for Independents

Hiller Discusses Box Office Power of "His Nibs"

IN discussing the acquisition of the Exceptional Picture, "His Nibs," in which Charles (Chic) Sale plays seven distinct characters, for the State Rights exchanges, L. L. Hiller, president of "His Nibs Syndicate, Inc.," which purchased the United States rights and is handling the distribution on the independent market, brought forth many of the innumerable reasons why this unique attraction is certain to be money making offering both for the exchange and for every exhibitor. He said:

"Much has been written about the star, Charles (Chic) Sale; daily newspapers over the entire country as well as national magazines, have lauded the remarkable, true-to-life characterizations of this versatile young artist. Heretofore his work has been confined entirely to the legitimate and vaudeville stage, and because all his efforts have been in what is known as 'big time' the smaller communities have not had the opportunity of witnessing his artistry, although he has been widely read about and is loved by everyone in these rural sections, especially because his characters are taken from among them. 'His Nibs,' his first motion picture, will, therefore, not only be in great demand in the big cities where "Chic" is well known, but even to a greater extent in the small towns for they will now be able to see the portrayals of the 'James Whitcomb Riley of the American Stage' whom they have heard so much about.

"Another point of distinct advantage for 'His Nibs' is the fact that its theme is entirely different from anything the screen has ever seen before. The thought carried through by the deftly constructed story is so unique and unusual that in selling this production to the exhibitor an exchangeman will not be in competition with any other motion picture on the market. In other words, it will not be a question of selling the picture—because every theatre manager will immediately recognize the distinction of "His Nibs"—it will become merely the matter of arranging play dates. Here, no exhibitor will want to say: 'I have 'Bill Smith' in 'So and So,' that's just like your picture, because there is nothing he can compare with 'His Nibs.' Furthermore, the manager will be quick to grasp the opportunity of showing his patrons something different. Never in the history of motion pictures has one artist played seven distinct characters in a feature photoplay—that is the feat accomplished by "Chic" Sale in "His Nibs."

"One of the outstanding features of 'His Nibs' is its cleanliness and wholesomeness. It is a positive censor-proof production everywhere. This is a highly desirable attribute, more so at this time, perhaps, than at any other in the history of the industry. The independent buyer will point with pride to "His Nibs" as the highest example of the type of picture it is his aim to distribute."

Exceptional Pictures Corporation is cooperating with "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc., in the preparation of a complete press book, and the finest line of accessories ever presented with a State Rights offering.

Arrow's Business Is Booming

Big Independent Is Beating Its Own Sales Records

ARROW'S success in selling the great series of pictures which this corporation is distributing is breaking all the remarkable records so far achieved, states this organization. Never in the eight years' successful history of this company has such an extraordinary series of triumphs been experienced, it is reported. Independent exchanges all over the country are snapping up these pictures as fast as contracts can be prepared and signed.

"The farther West 'Arrow' pictures penetrate the more popular they are," announces the company. "The Progress Exchange, San Francisco has bought the entire series of Peter B. Kyne productions, of which one 'A Motion to Adjourn' is published; the four Grace Davison's, the first, 'Love, Hate and a Woman,' being already on exhibition, and the six Jack Hoxies', of which the first 'Barefisted' is complete.

"The same exchange has also taken the remarkable dog picture 'Kiki,' in which a clever little Pekinese so-called is the heroine.

"The Peerless Exchange of San Francisco takes the new Eddie Lyons series of two reel comedies, of which two, 'Oh! Daddy' and 'Pardon Me,' have been completed.

"Federated of San Francisco takes the 'Arrow' serial 'Thunderbolt Jack.' And so the story goes—the Independent Exchanges and exhibitors are rallying to the Independent standard; are buying 'Arrow' pictures and exhibiting 'Arrow' pictures.

"The more I travel over the country," declares Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, "the more I am gratified not merely at the strong spirit of independence among exchanges and exhibitors, but at the genuine popularity of Independent productions. My most heartfelt regret is that 'Arrow' hasn't got nearly enough pictures to satisfy the overwhelming demand which I am everywhere experiencing for them. We could sell ten times the number we have.

"Trust me—monopoly, or attempted monopoly in the motion picture business is dead—dead as a door nail; dead as a coffin nail. Quality is telling more and more. Arrow's producing units are the best in the business, because they are the graduates of the schools of hard work; knowledge and ability.

"Optimistic? More than ever. Depression is over and merit and independence are winning out."

Irving Meisel Rejoins Elk Photoplays

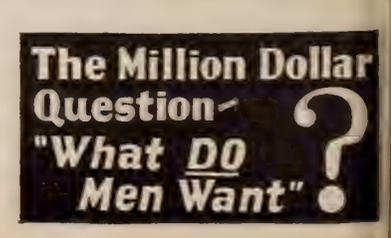
Irving Meisel, until recently a member of the Elk Photoplays, Inc., has rejoined that organization, and is looking forward to big business in the New Jersey territory.

Export and Import Close Associated Deal

THE EXPORT & IMPORT FILM CO., INC., announces the closing of a contract with the Associated Photoplays, Inc., whereby they will take over the entire foreign distribution of the latter company's product.

Included in the list of pictures which the Export & Import Company will now handle in the foreign field are: A series of pictures starring Helen Gibson, a series starring Mary Anderson, and a series of "specials" starring Jane Novak, who has been featured in several unusually successful pictures during the past year. The Jane Novak series are being produced by the Chester Bennett Productions.

Independent Company Explains Policy



Speculation as to the precise nature of the distributing plan evolved by the Second National Picture Corporation is set at rest this week in the issuance of a statement by Bernard Levey, Vice President and General Manager of the Second National Organization, in which he explains the manifold operations of the company, and emphasizes its need at the present time.

The independent field offers the best possible channels for the effective distribution of a producer's product, says Mr. Levey. To this end, it is reported the Second National Pictures Corporation is now marshalling together into a solid and practical distributing unit a group of independent distributors, who, it is asserted, will represent the backbone of the company in its desire to effect a merger between the representative producer and distributor.

"Our plan," said Mr. Levey, "is to properly apportion the division of each territory to the properly constituted exchangeman, who will in turn control the product of the Second National Pictures Corporation on a franchise basis for his specified territory. This plan is not new, but it will function in an entirely new manner."

Arrow Features Sold to Pierce of New Orleans

Announcement is made by W. Ray Johnston, Vice-President of the Arrow Film Corporation of the closing of contracts of J. Eugene Pierce of Federated Exchanges in New Orleans for the distribution of the four James Oliver Curwood Pictures and the two Ruby de Remer Productions "Luxury" and "The Way Women Love."

Hirsch Forms New Company

Photocraft Productions to Offer Big Features; Aywon to Continue

NATHAN HIRSCH, President of Aywon Film Corporation, announces this week the formation of a new company, to be known as Photocraft Productions, Inc., of which he is to be the head. It is through this company that the cream of his future special productions will be presented to the state right market. It is asserted by this company that none of the productions which they will exploit will be reconstructions or recreations but will be new and of first presentation.

Mr. Hirsch has in the past achieved notable successes, which he considers but a stepping stone to future achievements. He expects to announce in the very near future the first of the productions which will be released through his new company and promises that the initial release will include in its cast some of the best known names of the industry.

The advent of Photocraft Productions Inc. by no means rings down the curtain on Aywon Film Corporation. Aywon will continue to offer standard pictures and as Mr. Hirsch's policy is to set an ever higher level, he intends to continue this policy in both corporations.

"Peacock Alley" Premiere

Invitation Showing of Independent Mae Murray Feature in N. Y.

"PEACOCK ALLEY," the first of the series of independent Mae Murray productions, will be given its premier at the Hotel Commodore, New York, on the evening of Wednesday, November 9th. Mae Murray and Robert Z. Leonard and their entire production staff are now putting the finishing touches to "Peacock Alley" at the Mae Murray studio in New York.

The details of the presentation at the Commodore are also under the direction of Mr. Leonard. Invitations are being sent out from the Tiffany Productions offices to all the leading figures of the industry.

Among those who have been requested to be present are Lord Auckland, Mayor Hylan, Sir William Wiseman, the members of all the motion picture and theatrical associations, D. W. Griffiths, David Belasco, Adolph Zukor, P. A. Powers, J. D. Williams, Marcus Loew, Joseph M. and Nicholas M. Schenck, Hiram Abrams, Jesse Lasky, Lewis J. Selznick, Hugo Reisenfeld, Samuel Goldwyn, Edward Bowes, Messmore Kendell, S. Rothapfel and Arthur Kane, and many others, as well as a host of prominent literary lights.

"Sherlock Holmes" Pictures

Alexander Film Buys American Rights; Release First in Jan.

The Alexander Film Corporation has secured the American and Canadian distribution rights of the screen version of the Sherlock Holmes adventures by Sir Conan Doyle, now adapted to the screen. The Sherlock Holmes series made by the Stoll firm, represents, in its first shipment now in the vaults of the Alexander Film Corporation, fifteen completed subjects of two reels each, comprising the best known and striking adventures.

All the advantages in casts, appointments and elaborate direction typifies in the various stage enterprises of the Stoll concern were brought to the picturization of the Doyle tales, a feature said to be specially notable in this connection being the erection for Stoll in London of a studio built after the most modern American manner, appointed with the latest things in American lighting and other advances made in this country to bring screen adaptation to their finest interpretations of life itself.

The exteriors of the Sherlock series are said to have been taken, for the most part, at the actual scenes employed by Sir Conan Doyle in recounting the Holmes' adventures, these involving at times magnificent estates.

The Alexander Film Corporation is preparing to begin releases of their newest purchase, about January 1, next.

The first fifteen adventures secured are "The Man with the Twisted Lip," "The Beryl Coronet," "The Noble Bachelor," "The Yellow Face," "The Red-Headed League," "The Resident Patient," "A Scandal in Bohemia," "The Copper Beeches," "The Empty House," "The Tiger of San Pedro," "The Priory School," "The Solitary Cyclist," "The Devil's Foot," "A Case of Identity" and "The Dying Detective."

Kineto in School Tie-up

Students to See "Four Seasons"; Boards of Education Approve

ARRANGEMENTS are now being made with superintendents of schools and Boards of Education all over the country to have pupils of high schools and grade schools in all communities attend the theatres showing "The Four Seasons," the Urban Popular Classic and the first production of feature length issued by the Kineto Company of America.

National distribution plans are being arranged now and will be ready for announcement shortly. The educational value of "The Four Seasons" has been recognized by scores of educators who saw it here in New York and all of them recognized in it the profit the picture holds for pupils and students.

Arrangements will be made by the Kineto Company through the distributors that the theatres which play "The Four Seasons" will hold special matinees and Saturday morning performances so that school-classes can attend in a body at a special price of admission. It is not intended to have these showings conflict with the regular performances; they will be distinctly educational showings.

"The Four Seasons" is exceptional because it has great drawing power from the two most important standpoints. As a theatrical entertainment alone it has won the plaudits of scores of critics and as an educational film it has been declared to be unsurpassed. Thus it has pulling power at the box-office from two directions.

"The Four Seasons" was produced for the Kineto Company by Raymond L. Ditmars and has been prepared for exhibition under the personal direction of Charles Urban.

Further Sales Made on "Burn 'Em Up Barnes"

FURTHER reports on sale of territory by the Affiliated Distributors sales force were announced this week by C. C. Burr. "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" has been sold to the Liberty Enterprises of Omaha for Omaha and Nebraska; "Lonely Heart" to the Cosmopolitan of Boston for New England; Greiver Productions of Chicago for Northern Illinois and Indiana; Merritt Films of Detroit for Michigan.

Sales on "Burr's Novelty Review" are announced as having been sold to Fecky of the Motion Picture Corporation of Boston for New England; to Harry Charnas of the Standard Film Service of Cleveland for Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Virginia and Western Pennsylvania, and to Freedman of Chicago for Northern Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

New Advertising Plan for "I Defy!"

Selling the product direct to the consumer is one of the main elements of successful commercial advertising which to date has been more or less foreign to producers, according to Morris Kashin. What is believed to be an attempt to make a milestone in motion picture exploitation has been inaugurated with the launching of Kashin's picture "I defy." All of the advertising to date, with the exception of a series of teaser ads. in the trade journals, has been centered in daly newspapers in which the production has been tied up with holidays and topics of current importance in the minds of the readers. In addition to his trade paper campaign aimed at the industry, Kashin will continue to reach the public throughout the country direct with various teasers bearing on the film and on the daily news in the press.

Joe Farnham Has Titled 1,006 Reels

With the completing of editing and writing titles for the five-reel Maclyn Arbuckle features, "Squire Phin" and "Welcome to Our City," under special contract with the Producers Security Corporation, Joe W. "Home Life" Issue of Screen Snapshots

The "Home Life" issue of Screen Snapshots, plans for which were announced two weeks ago by Louis Lewyn and Jack Cohn, is now in process of preparation. The issue will be the next release—No. 14—on this series.

The purpose of Screen Snapshots is to show stars of the films at work and at play—real "fan" information, and this issue, which is to be a "special," will concern itself entirely with luminaries of the screen in their own homes—and will play up the home and family life of the players.

The reel will contain scenes of most of the important stars who are working both in the East and the West and will, it is said, be furnished with art titles specially fitted to the subject, and different from those on most of the Screen Snapshots issues. Great interest and enthusiasm have been expressed by Federated Exchanges in this issue, and an intensive drive will be launched to put it over big with exhibitors in all territories.

"Jungle Adventures" on State Right Market

ALEXANDER BEYFUSS, vice president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, reports the signing of contracts whereby Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" has been acquired for the United States by a corporation which, while they are not ready to announce their plans definitely, have authorized Mr. Beyfus to state that this novel feature production will be marketed on the state rights basis.

The corporation is said to be developing some radically new ideas in the methods of selling, the working out of which is being enhanced to an unusual degree because of the fact that the nature of "Jungle Adventures" permits of the institution of extraordinary plans.

In addition to authorizing Mr. Beyfuss to state that Martin Johnson's tale of romance will be disposed of on the independent market, the corporation has further requested him to announce that their plans when fully consummated will be given to the trade on the advertising pages of this publication. This statement, it is said, will be forthcoming within a very short space of time.

Ministers and Teachers View "The Blot"

More than 500 ministers and teachers attended a pre-view showing of "The Blot," Lois Weber's screen sensation which the Criterion theatre recently featured as its opening attraction. The picture was warmly received by the invited guests because it deals with the problems by which thousands of underpaid preachers and teachers are beset. "It is the best film since Fanny Hurst's 'Humoresque'" was a frequent comment.

ELECTED!

You can count on the fingers of one hand the pictures Metro, during its entire life as a distributing company, has bought in the open market.

Metro purchased so few because it found only those few to possess the exceptional qualifications to make them worthy of election of the company of Metro productions.

Exhibitors know this: that Metro will only take the best. And they know the corollary, that if Metro takes a picture, that picture is foreordained a smashing success.

Recently METRO bought

"FIGHTIN' MAD"

This production was elected to join the thirty-three previously scheduled Metro pictures for the customary Metro reason.

For the reason that it is a Big Fellow; that it breaks away from the very start like Man O' War, and races through six reels of the most astonishingly swift action ever filmed. For concert-pitch suspense, for rapidity of story-movement, abruptness of surprise, chair-gripping tensity of action, "FIGHTIN' MAD" stands alone. Do you wonder why we elected it?

Why, "FIGHTIN' MAD" just HAD to be elected!

It's a national habit about the last week in November.

We're no exception to it. We're talking turkey, too.

We're pointing out to exhibitors that we've set aside a week in which the most luscious film fowl ever raised is going to be carved.

We're urging them to engage their seats at the table now, to assure their getting their slice.

It's bound to be a good slice of profit, if you play only Metro pictures during Metro Week.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Vanda Hawley as she appears in "The Lost Charm," a Realart release

Franklin Will Remain with Talmadges

Sidney Franklin has signed a new contract with Joseph M. Schenck to alternate as director for Norma and Constance Talmadge. Mr. Franklin has just finished directing Norma Talmadge in her forthcoming First National picture, "Smilin Through."

Mr. Franklin left last Thursday for the Coast, to direct Constance Talmadge, who has already preceded him to Hollywood, in an original story by Edgar Selwyn, temporarily titled "The Divorcee."

"The Little Minister" Nearing Completion

PENRHYN STANLAWS has completed the filming of his production of Barrie's "The Little Minister," in which Betty Compson stars for Paramount, and is now well along in the work of cutting and assembling. The final scenes were made in a set representing the interior of an old Scotch castle—one of the many unusually large settings designed by Robert M. Haas for this production.

Not in a long time has a greater variety of quaint and colorful costumes been worn in a film production than those in "The Little Minister." English soldiers of the period of 1830, constables, Scotch weavers and peasantry, lords and ladies, mingle in a most picturesque medley of color and design, so far as costumes go. Miss Compson for the most part wore a most becoming gypsy garb, later appearing in a typical gown of the period.

"Our Mutual Friend" Scores

F. B. Warren Release Is Well Received by Los Angeles Audience

CLUNE'S Broadway theatre, Los Angeles, accorded "Our Mutual Friend" a warm reception when this masterful screen version of Dickens' last great novel was screened in this city. Picture fans, who were fortunate in viewing his showing of Dickens' masterpiece, after leaving the theatre were of the unanimous opinion that the famous English author were he alive today could easily walk off with the sweepstake in any modern scenario contest. The failure of the motion-picture companies to avail themselves of his story material has always been a matter of more or less bewilderment.

Dickens' novel has not been "adapted" to the screen. It was not necessary. The faithfulness to the original version and the resultant intriguing plot mark the book as perfect material for the screen as it stands. Bella Wilfers, Rogue Riderhood, young Harmon, the Boffins, Eugene Wrayburn, Jenny Wren and all the rest of those dramatically entwined characters have been portrayed by a carefully chosen cast which skilfully interprets their idiosyncrasies and gives a truly "Dickenesque" twist to the humorous situations. Excellent background and a remarkable detail in sets and costumes blend the last touch. Mary Marlin, "The Norwegian Mary Pickford," plays the roll of Bella with charming spontaneity and grace.

Elaborate Dean Picture

Universal Constructing Varied Sets to Enhance "Wild Honey"

"WILD HONEY," which will bring Priscilla Dean to the screen in a vehicle which, it is said, gives her unusual opportunities for dramatic expression, presents an intricate problem to the departments of art and scenic investiture at Universal City.

The Universal-Jewel production calls for thirty-five locations, of which twenty-seven are construction projects, principally interiors of an old manor house in England. None of these interiors is in any way simple or stereotyped in style. Each one calls for ingenuity as well as artistic ability in the work of Elmer Sheeley, art director, and Ray Van Alstyne, head of the scenic department. One interior of a manor hall is costing $3,000 to construct, without furnishing or lights, it is said.

An interesting point in these sets are the ceilings. Many people know that motion picture sets are constructed without ceilings, since the range of the camera doesn't include them. But "Wild Honey" is different. There are scores of shots, practically on every set, of heavily raftered ceilings so commonly seen in English castles. Sheeley and Van Alstyne have been hard put at times, with Wesley Ruggles, director, and Harry Thorpe, cameraman, to devise ways of photographing the ceiling as it should be without interfering with lighting arrangements.

"Wild Honey" is Lucien Hubbard's adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's novel of the same name. Noah Beery, Lloyd Whitlock, Percy Challenger, Mai Wells and Helen Raymond are the supporting principals.

Books Full Week's Run of Warren Releases

Manager W. R. Wilkerson, of the New York Exchange of the Warren Corporation, announces that the Prospect theatre operated in connection with the Prospect Hotel, Coney Island, has booked a full week's run of Warren productions, beginning October 31. Lois Weber's "The Blot" is the first on the list, with showings on October 31 and November 1. "The Girl From God's Country," "Quo Vadis," "Good and Evil," and "The Old Oaken Bucket" complete the run. Who said Billy Wilkerson hasn't been up on his toes?

Gunning to Remain in Control

Infusion of New Blood and Profit-Sharing Idea Among Plans

A SALES organization made up largely of advertising and idea men and functioning under the supervision of experienced film men is one of the objectives sought by Wid Gunning in building up the organization of which he is the head. Another very interesting and important development in Mr. Gunning's plans came to the surface in a discussion of his policies as regards the personnel of his organization. It was learned that it is his intention to remain personally in control of the organization, but to so arrange matters that the profits of the distributing corporation shall be divided among the men who actually do the work. This will include the departmental heads in the home office, the branch managers and salesmen, and even the shipping clerks and inspectors. Every worker who "keeps in step" is to have an equal opportunity, since the system of reward will be based on personal effort and results rather than upon a reward for a particular position which might apparently show results for which the individual in the position might not be personally responsible.

In explaining why he could do such an apparently philanthropical thing as to return the profits of the distribution organization to the workers of the organization, Mr. Gunning pointed out that he had gone into the distributing business primarily for the purpose of establishing a point of contact between the exhibitor and the independent producer. Mr. Gunning has been an independent producer and may, after perfecting his distributing organization, make an occasional big production. He pointed out what is certainly true, that, as he put it, he can make more money than he wants to pay income tax on from one big picture a year, providing he has a high-powered, efficient exploitation and sales machine selling his product on a seventy-thirty percentage basis.

Mr. Gunning also pointed out that the independent producer can easily make tremendously more through this method of marketing than he has ever made in the past; that the individual director can afford to work without a fancy salary if he receives a portion of the profits when films are sold through such a sales and exploitation machine, and that in the coming years it will be possible for the exhibitor and the independent producer to really come to a better and more complete cooperative harmony through the fact that there will be no elements entering into their business negotiations other than the actual maker of the film, the men who do the actual exploiting and selling, and the men who actually show the film in their theatres. In other words, the film business will be brought down to the fundamentals that are of primary importance. There will be no excessive percentage cuts, there will be no fancy salaries to those who do not earn them, and the costly waste and inefficiency will be wiped out.

Wid Gunning started something last week when he placed a page ad in Printers' Ink, a weekly publication devoted to the interests of advertising men and newspapers, calling for twenty young men who had had experience in selling advertising, preparing advertising copy and putting over ideas. The advertisement offered these young men an immediate opportunity in the film industry.

It is no secret that outsiders have always said that the film industry is hard to break into because of the presence of politics and relatives.

Naturally, there has been a flood of applications in Mr. Gunning's mail, and also a steady stream of film men and advertising men who have heard about the new method of operation adopted by Mr. Gunning, who has recently announced his activity in the distributing field.

In discussing his plans Mr. Gunning made it clear that he intends to develop in his sales organization, which is handling the product of independent producers, an organization which will be preponderantly made up of advertising and idea men, properly guided by a sufficient number of experienced film men. Mr. Gunning's argument is, that old school film men may be able to sell him, but that they are not sufficient in giving to the exhibitor the service due the exhibitor in assisting him in putting production over so that he may make money with them.

Mr. Gunning is employing more than a score of trained newspaper and advertising men who have had some theatrical experience, and also a half dozen sure-fire showmen who have proven their ability to go into any city and put a picture over in a house that has in the past been in the red ink column.

At a luncheon given by the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce at the Astor Hotel on Tuesday, November 1st, at which there was an exceptionally large attendance, which included, in addition to the New York members, many prominent out-of-town exhibitors, Mr. Gunning, who had been invited to attend, explained to the theatre men the constructive ideals which he was working out, and his remarks were greeted with the most enthusiastic endorsement.

F. B. Warren Releases Warmly Received

Recent releases of the F. B. Warren Corporation which include "The Blot," a Lois Webber production, "Our Mutual Friend," the screen version of Dicken's last great novel, "The Old Oaken Bucket," May Tully's picturization of the famous old song, and Nell Shipman's "The Girl from God's Country" have been receiving warm approval of newspaper critics throughout the country.

The Cleveland News, reviewing "The Blot," describes this great drama as "a picture with an exceptionally strong human theme." "The Girl from God's Country" recently shown at the Circle and Strand theatres in Cleveland receives a commendation which reads. "A real melodrama that everybody who enjoys real thrills will want to see."

"Our Mutual Friend" and "The Old Oaken Bucket" have also received the "O. K." of newspaper men in cities where they have been shown.

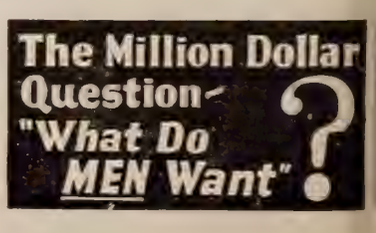
Ass'd Exhib Releases Proving Favorites

A statement from Associated Exhibitors' headquarters declares that its releases, "The Devil" and "The Road to London" are proving big favorites in many sections of the country. "The Devil" is receiving heavy exploitation, exhibitors taking fullest advantage of its possibilities for exploitation stunts and advertising.

The Bryant Washburn feature, "The Road to London," also released by Associated Exhibitors, has overcome a rather slow start, due to its release during mid-summer, and exhibitors say it is one of the most attractive offerings in which Mr. Washburn has ever appeared.

C. C. Burr to Start on New "Torchy" Comedies

Everything is in readiness at the Affiliated studios for Johnny Hines to begin production on his next two Torchy's, namely "Torchy's Luck" and "Battling Torchy." Sewell Ford, who has written the original Torchy stories, is the author of these latest productions featuring Hines.



"The wonderful time sales record made by 'Burn 'Em Up Barnes,' says C. C. Burr, "is the best kind of an incentive for us. We hope in our next Johnny Hines picture to do even better. I have always contended that slapstick could be done away with in farces, and basing my contention on this belief, we produced 'Burn 'Em Up Barnes,' which got its laughs from clean situations. The fact that this feature was the first five reel starring vehicle for Hines augurs well for his future releases. 'Burn 'Em Up Barnes' received most flattering praise at every first run house it played, and it is my intention that each following Hines feature will on merit alone be the recipient of praise equally as good."

The Affiliated studios are being whipped into shape, so that no time will be lost when Hines returns. Karl Freund is designing a new set of studio settings for the next "Torchy" comedy.

"Paste Board Crown" By Famous Actress

"The American public will continue to remember Clara Morris, the actress," said Travers Vale in a recent interview, "just as popular plays and books that have once made their mark are remembered." He was pointing out the great possibilities of a production now in the making under his direction, "The Paste Board Crown," adapted from the popular novel written by Clara Morris, being produced under the auspices of Nathan and Samerad.

"Clara Morris, you may recall," said the well-known director, "was America's foremost actress in her day. Her book, following a dramatic career, was a sensation. In 1902 she wrote 'The Paste Board Crown,' and when I was first a director of motion picture, I had aspirations to make the great story into a picture. Purchasing the rights, I held on to it, all these years, and though I have bought and sold others, I retained my favorite until now, my ambition realized, I have selected a cast I can depend upon as adequate. Each of these have individual reputations: Eleanor Woodruff, Robert Elliott, Albert Roccardi, Evelyn Greeley, Dora Mills Adams, Jane Jennings, Gladys Valerie, J. H. Gilmour, John Hopkins, and others, that will be added as I need them. In addition, I am delighted with having secured Jacques Bizeul for the camera work."

Chic Sale to Continue in Motion Pictures

ALEXANDER BEYFUSS, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, announces that Charles (Chic) Sale, is under contract with Exceptional Pictures for a long period of time and it is the present intention to produce with him in 1922 a series of two or possibly three big pictures. Many inquiries had been received asking whether Mr. Sale would continue to make picture or remain in vaudeville exclusively.

Kirkman with Lehrman as Co-Director

Myron Selznick, Vice President in charge of production, declares that work has so far progressed on the Owen Moore comedy, written and directed by Henry Lehrman, that a release date in January is now being decided upon. Having placed the entire resources of the organization behind Mr. Lehrman in the production details, the engagement of David Kirkland as co-director was included in the arrangements. Mr. Kirkland has a record of fine accomplishments in screen productions and his experience is being employed to the fullest in developing Mr. Lehrman's ideas with Kirkland embellishments.

House Peters in Cast of "Human Hearts"

"Human Hearts," adapted from the play by Hal Reid, will be put into production at Universal City in the near future. King Baggott, who will direct the production, is completing the preparations for the filming of this subject. House Peters has been engaged for a role in this production.

Lon Chaney's new subject for release by Universal has been completed at Universal City. The final title has not as yet been selected. Robert Thornby held the megaphone on Chaney in his first starring picture. A big cast, which includes Irene Rich, Spottiswoode Aiken, Herbert Standing, Frank Campeau, Dagmar Godowsky, Alan Hale and little Stanley Goethals, makes this picture a wonderful advertising proposition.

Stampede Scenes Made for Carey Picture

Trenches and fortifications have been built on the plains of the Agoure ranch, a typically western estate in the Chalk hills, north of the San Fernando valley, in order to film the stampede of thousands of head of cattle in Harry Carey's current starring production, "Man to Man," a Universal-Jewel protodrama based on Jackson Gregory's novel.

Carey will be called on to ride through the cattle. Stuart Paton, who recently completed "Conflict," a Priscilla Dean offering on the Universal-Jewel program, is the director of "Man to Man."

Pathe in Central America Deal

ARMANDO LOPEZ ULLOA, Consul General from Honduras to New York, sailed for home on a short visit last week after obtaining from Pathe Exchange, Inc., a concession to handle exclusively the Pathe product in Central America. Senor Lopez carried with him also a print of the new successful Pathe serial, "Hurricane Hutch," the first presentation of which in his own country he will personally supervise.

As he was sailing with his concession and his first shipment of Pathe film, the Consul General exhibited considerable satisfaction over his deal with Pathe. "During the last few weeks," he said, "I have devoted much of my spare time viewing motion pictures and studying the film situation in New York and elsewhere in the United States, through a desire to improve the character of that sort of entertainment in my own country.

"Previously, I had investigated the same fields in France, England and Germany, but I am satisfied that the American pictures are far superior to the European product and better suited for the Latin American countries, which like subjects of romance and adventure. From previous observation, I know that it would be impossible to organize a complete service without the backing of an extensive serial program and to this end, I approached the Pathe Company which,

Winnifred Westover as "Anne" in "Anne of Little Smoky," an all-star Playgoers Picture

I understand, is called the House of Serials and is acknowledged the leader in the serial and short subject field. I have also made arrangements to select from their feature programs such number of subjects of this kind as my service can afford and I feel that with the Pathe serials and comedies, and such features as 'The Devil,' 'Half a Chance,' 'The Killer,' etc. I can present the greatest attraction ever introduced into Central America.

"Our people are enthusiastic patrons of the movies, and the managers of our theatres have been doing their best to provide attractive programs. In many instances, they have been handicapped with a poor quality of product, and with second-hand prints, which never give satisfaction on account of numerous scratches, torn sprocket holes, and particularly, shortened or missing scenes. Central America is a long way from New York, and our theatre owners and managers have few opportunities to come so far to insure themselves against second-class shipments.

"Being privileged to examine the whole range of Pathe products, and finding them eminently suited to our popular taste, it occurred to me that an arrangement to supply them in the form of new prints with accompanying attractive advertising matter would be very acceptable to theatres not only in Honduras but in all the cities and towns of Central America. So I applied for and obtained from Pathe Exchange, Inc., the concession to handle exclusively their products in Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and British Honduras.

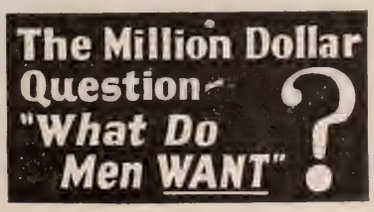
"I was especially impressed with the popular appeal of the new Pathe serial, 'Hurricane Hutch,' and am making it the subject of my first shipment—in fact, I am carrying with me new prints of all fifteen episodes, and shall personally supervise its first presentation in Honduras, exploiting the attraction in the highly efficient manner characteristic of exhibitors in the United States."

Bright Prospects for R-C Drive

Records to Be Broken in Drive During "R. S. Cole Month"

SO enthusiastic has been the response of exhibitors to R-C Pictures' idea of calling the month of November R. S. Cole Month, in honor of its president and to the extensive business drive which will cover that period, that Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution, doesn't hesitate to make the prediction that all booking records of his concern will be broken.

Every department of R-C Pictures is co-operating to the utmost in the effort to pile up bookings as a tribute to Mr. Cole. Special instruction have been sent by General Manager Rogers to the various branch managers; special publicity and advertising material has been prepared for the assistance of the exhibitors and every member of the R-C organization, from general manager down, will be on his toes and prepared to put forth his absolute best on November 1, when the drive is scheduled to begin.



Some of the most important productions ever turned out of the R-C studios at Hollywood will be available to exhibitors during R. S. Cole Month. In addition to having a wide range or early releases from which to choose, exhibitors also will be able to book such subjects as "Where Lights Are Low," starring Sessue Hayakawa; "The Sting of the Lash," starring Pauline Frederick; "Shame of Society," with an all star cast including Montagu Love, Barbara Castleton, Macey Harlam, Julia Swayne Gordon and others of equal calibre; "A Wife's Awakening," a Gasnier special; William Christy Cabanne's "The Barricade," featuring Katherine Spencer, Kenneth Harlan and William Strauss; "The Foolish Age," a rollicking Hunt Stromberg comedy in which Doris May recently made her debut as an R-C star. "The Foolish Age," trade critics agree, is one of the really important comedy releases of recent weeks and already has had flattering receptions in Boston, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, New York and elsewhere.

Of great interest to exhibitors everywhere, furthermore, is the announcement from R-C Pictures that "Possession" will be released on November 20, thereby making this unusual French-made subject available to exhibitors during R. S. Cole Month. "Possession" was produced by Louis Mercanton, called "the Griffith of Europe."

In addition to this unusual production R-C Pictures also will offer during November two others of high attraction value. They are "The Lure of Jade" in which Pauline Frederick is said to give a brilliant characterization and "Silent Years," a Gasnier special based on the novel "Mam'selle Jo" from the pen of Harriet Comstock, while "Silent Years" will be presented on November 27.

With such a program for R. S. Cole Month, Mr. Rogers feels that each of his branch managers will turn in a new record in bookings for November.

The R-C organization embraces the following exchange heads and supervising executives; Samuel Sax, sales manager; E. C. Jensen, field representative; Joseph Klein, New York City; L. Wingham, Seattle; J. S. Nelson, Denver; R. A. Davis, Atlanta; Newt Levi, Pacific Coast representative; H. D. Goldberg, Pittsburgh; E. L. M'Avoy; C. D. Beale, San Francisco; A. W. Carrick, Indianapolis; Harvey B. Day, Minneapolis; A. W. Moses, Buffalo; R. E. Churchill, Kansas City; C. J. Sonin, Washington; E. H. Brient, St. Louis; E. J. Lipson, Omaha; J. B. Dumestre, Jr., New Orleans; L. E. Harrington, Dallas; Louis Klar, Milwaukee; A. R. Patten, Los Angeles; H. K. Moss, Detroit; J. M. Flynn, Philadelphia; S. S. Webster, Cleveland; W. A. Ryan, Oklahoma City; E. T. Gomersall, Cincinnati, and A. J. Gallas, Chicago.

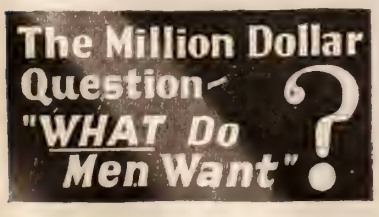
Clarence Badger Will Direct for Universal

CLARENCE BADGER, who directed Will Rogers in "Doubling for Romeo" and others of his successful comedy dramas, is preparing to start work at Universal City. He will follow a long series of winning comedies with "Cupid Incog," a flapper comedy drama starring Marie Prevost.



"Cupid Incog" was first called "The Frisky Flapper" and will probably have an entirely different release title. It was written by Irving G. Thalberg and the continuity was written by Doris Schroeder. It will be started just as soon as Marie Prevost can be snatched out of the hands of Director George Cox who is producing "Princess Virtue" with this star. Mr. Badger and Fred Datig are busy assembling a cast.

Realart Announces New Titles of Pictures

The titles of three forthcoming Realart pictures are announced for early release: "The Love Charm," by Harvey O'Higgins for Wanda Hawley; "First Love" by Sonya Levien for Constance Binney; and "A Homespun Vamp" by Hector Turnbull for May McAvoy. They will be respectively the tenth, eleventh and twelfth of the current season.

Artistic Exteriors in "Silent Years"

The exterior scenes for "Silent Years," the R-C Picture adapted from Harriet Comstock's novel, "Mam'selle Joe," and directed by L. J. Gasnier, are noted for their grandeur and dignified beauty caught by the cameraman, Joseph Dubray, in the High Sierras, state the distributors.

Rogers' Success Universal

"Doubling for Romeo" Sets Entire Country Laughing, Says Goldwyn

"DOUBLING FOR ROMEO," with Will Rogers in the stellar role, is doing phenomenal box office business in the four important motion picture centers where it was given its first showings, says a statement from Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

In New York where it played last week in the Capitol theatre, it did one of the phenomenal week's business in that house of great seating capacity. It stands among the very top-notchers in the point of receipts at that house, as well as artistically as an unusual and well-done comedy.

"Doubling for Romeo" has driven a cyclone of mirth clear across the continent. It started in Los Angeles at Miller's theatre, where people stood in line through an entire showing to gain admittance and blew at the rate of 1,000 laughs a reel across the Rockies into the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, thence to the big Capitol theatre in Cincinnati and so to New York.

The motion picture reviewers of the four cities vied with each other in praise of this most unusual of Goldwyn comedies. With such reviews as "Doubling for Romeo" received and with such big receipts as it is playing to in the four cities, Goldwyn considers it is amply justified in placing the new Will Rogers comedy in the list of big fifth year productions—a list which already contains "The Old Nest" and "Dangerous Curve Ahead" and to which will be added, following "Doubling for Romeo," "Poverty of Riches" and "The Sin Flood," with still more to come.

"Flower of North" Shipped

Completed Prints of Curwood Special at Vitagraph Exchanges

THE completed prints of the James Oliver Curwood special, "Flower of the North," have been shipped from Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio to that company's branch offices, 28 in all, in the United States and Canada. So much interest was displayed in this forthcoming superfeature that the Vitagraph laboratory in Brooklyn worked night and day to get out prints and allow them all possible time for shipment to their respective destinations, before a possible railroad strike.

The exhibitors in all parts of the country had already had their appetites whetted for this special by seeing the trailer sent out some few weeks ago. This trailer showed flashes of the big rapids scene, the terrific battle between the opposing railroad gangs, and other sensational shots from the film.

Vitagraph branch managers had been eager to secure the finished prints of this film, inasmuch as one of the most successful specials put out by Vitagraph was a seven-reeler by the same author, James Oliver Curwood, staged by the same director, David Smith, and in which the female star was the same girl who is starred in the new special—Pauline Starke. This was "The Courage of Marge O'Doone." Chief among the added points of appeal in this latest feature is Henry B. Walthall. Some members of the supporting cast who have wide followings are Emmett King, Walter Rodgers, Harry Northrup, Joe Rickson, Jack Curtis and Vincent Howard.

Pathe Schedule for Nov. 13

Tom Santschi in "Heart of Doreon" Heads Ensemble of Short-Subjects

WESTERN subjects have a dominating position in the ensemble of short features scheduled for release by Pathe Exchange, Inc., during the week of November 13th. In Tom Santschi's latest two-reel drama, "The Heart of Doeon," the star plays the role of a French-Canadian of the Northwest, with the famous Royal Northwestern Mounted Police figuring prominently in the fast action Ruth Stonehouse plays opposite Santschi.

"A Day in the Wilds" is the latest offering of the series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob," showing the exploits of Bill and Bob Bradbury and their dog "Rags." The offering is a conglomeration of woodland stunts performed by the boys, showing their versatility in woodlore.

Harold Lloyd's latest re-issued one-reel comedy is "Crack Your Heels." Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard both appear in the offering.

"Double Crossed" is the title of episode eight of "Hurricane Hutch" the new Pathe serial starring Charles Hutchinson. "Hocus Pocus" is the title of the latest Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard. The comedy is a satire on the old-time stage magician and all-around barnstormer.

"The Owl and the Grasshopper" is the current animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables" produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry. "Soft words often hide a wicked intent" is the moral.

Pioneer Offering New Series of Comedies

A series of six 2-reel comedies made by Lifeograph of Portland Oregon, and known as "Peeps into the Future" is now being released by all Exchanges of Pioneer Film Corporation.

The first comedy carries the title of "Paul's First Kiss," and will be followed by "Paul's Temptation," "Paul's Dilemma," "Paul's Mistake," "Perils of Paul," and "Paul's Wedding Day." The cast assembled by the creator of these comedies, W. E. Keefe, includes Eugenia Gilbert, Clara Morris, Dave J. Parke Jones, and Genevieve Knapp. Bob Gray directed these 2-reel Pioneer Featurettes.

Nearing 2,000 Limit on Goldwyn Franchises

Goldwyn Franchises have been going in record time, says an announcement from Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, and exhibitors who wish first call on all Goldwyn fifth year product for their theatres will have to get their applications in very soon, it is announced. Goldwyn limited the number of franchises which it would grant in the United States to 2,000, and that number has almost been reached.

Such big Goldwyn fifth year pictures as "The Old Nest," "Dangerous Curve Ahead," "Doubling for Romeo," "Poverty of Riches," "Ace of Hearts" and "The Man From Lost River," following each other in close succession, have given exhibitors a good idea of the sort of photoplays Goldwyn is making and keen desire to book the entire product for first, or later, runs in their theatres, states the announcement.

Brenon Directing New Pearl White Feature

Herbert Brenon is directing Pearl White in a new picture at Fox Film Corporation's New York studio. The picture is being made under the title "Discontent." Miss White appears in the role of a woman of wealth and high social position. The screen version was prepared by Julia Tolsva.

The cast for "Discontent" includes Gilbert Emery, Holmes Herbert and Lawrence Johnson, a character actor who has appeared in a number of productions directed by Mr. Brenon. Gilbert Emery is a well known writer, author of "The Hero," a stage success, as well as an actor of note on the speaking sta

Hampton Spurs Salesman With Prize Offer

JESSE D. HAMPTON is sponsoring a test among Pathe and Associated Exhibitors salesmen, which will result in one representive of either company winning a trip to Los Angeles and return from his branch city, or to New York and return, as he prefers. All expenses will be borne. The award goes to the salesman obtaining the greatest number of Hampton contracts over an eight weeks' period by Mr. Hampton. The branch managers are not overlooked in the producer's office, for the manager whose office shows the greatest increase in collections on Hampton's attractions during the eight weeks of the contest, based on his average of collections for the preceding eight weeks, will receive the same award as the successful salesman. In the event of a tie, all contestants tieing will receive the full award.

The Hampton contest will be inaugurated on October 31st and will close at midnight, December 24th, covering a total of eight weeks.

New Christie Comedies in Production

Two new two-reel Christie Comedies are being started this week, while a new comedy featuring Neal Burns, with the support of Helen Darling, Laddie and Jane Hart, has just been completed under the direction of Scott Sidney. The title is to be "No Parking" and has to do with a runaway portable house.

Al Christie is undertaking production of a special which will feature Dorothy Devore as a knight in armor. She will be supported by David Belasco, Earl Rodney and Alice Maison.

Bobby Vernon is starting work in another two-reel comedy under the direction of H. Beaudine. The story has to do with a small-town carnival and was written by Frank Conklin.

Hodkinson Offices Are Opened

24 Exchanges Across Country Ready for Business

AS already briefly outlined in these pages, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation enters this week into the final stages of a complete reorganization which began some three months ago, and coincident with the announcement of the celebration of the company's fourth anniversary, comes the formal opening of twenty-four distributing branches located in the following cities:

New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, detroit, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Oklahoma City, Salt Lake City and New Orleans.

At each of the above points, there has been installed under the Hodkinson Banner a completely equipped branch exchange and in each one of these branches, "Hodkinson House-Warming Week" will be observed from November 7th to 12th.

A general invitation has been extended to exhibitors in all territories and to the general public and tradepress to witness special screenings of Hodkinson Pictures during "House-Warming Week." "The Beggar Maid" will be screened at all showings, and the other Hodkinson features will be shown according to the following schedule:

On November 7th, 9th and 11th—"A Certain Rich Man," and "Rip Van Winkle;" on November 8th, 10th and 11th—"The Mysterious Rider" and "Jane Eyre."

In anticipation of this expansion in the Hodkinson Organization, the salesforce has been largely increased in all twenty-four cities where Branch Exchanges are being operated.

Notable among the acquisitions in personnel, is Phil Ryan, one of the youngest executives in the industry and formerly on the sales-staff of Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Ryan goes to Kansas City as Manager of the Middle West Division, with the St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Omaha and Minneapolis exchanges under his jurisdiction.

B. W. Alberts, one of the live-wires of the Fitzpatrick & McElroy organization, has been assigned to special work in the Chicago territory. Harry Reiff remains on the job as Manager of the Pittsburgh Branch and will be backed up by Joe Bloom, formerly of the Kansas City field, who goes to the Smoky City on special assignment.

H. A. Boyle moves up the ladder from Albany to take charge of the Buffalo Branch, and his old stamping ground will be looked after from New York. Jack Withers, for many years a forceful figure in the states rights field, will look after the Connecticut territory, working out from the New York Exchange.

Ray Nehls, who has been handling Hodkinson product in the Indianapolis field, goes down to Cincinnati, and the former territory will be covered from other exchanges.

This realignment of the Hodkinson forces completes the severance of the organization from the Pathe Exchange, through which the physical distribution of the Hodkinson releases has been effected for some years past.

"With our own branches," said W. W. Hodkinson, President of the Corporation, "We shall not only be in a better position to serve the exhibitor, but we shall be better placed strategically to exercise the selective principle on which the whole success of our business is built.

"At a moment when all our efforts are centered on transferring our activities into our own twenty-four branches, I cannot permit the opportunity to pass to thank the exhibitors of the country, and the loyal members of our organization who have made this splendid stride forward possible."

"Over the Hill" Tie-ups

Exhibitors Invent Ingenious Devices to Exploit Fox Production

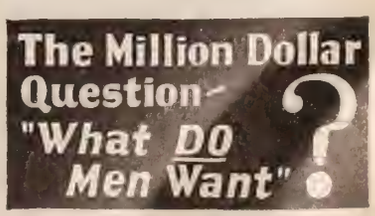
INGENIOUS devices in great variety are being employed in all parts of the country in the exploitation of "Over the Hill," the Fox super-special. The photodrama lends itself well to stunts and tie-ups. One enterprising exhibitor tied up with nearly every store carrying anything that could be given to "Mother." In the candy shop he placed signs reading: "Don't forget mother. Send her a box of candy." The stationery store urged: "This writing paper on sale at a bargain price so you can write a line to mother. Are you neglecting her?"

He tied up with florists, urging the sending of a bouquet to mother; with music stores, with "Over the Hill" songs to sell; with book stores carrying Carleton's works.

Another exhibitor had signs printed on muslin strips, urging sons to send a ton of coal to mother, and placed them on coal delivery wagons. Other stunts included the printing of "Over the Hill" ads on wrapping paper and paper bags; and distributing these by thousands to butchers, grocers and other dealers sending goods into the homes; pasting small stickers on milk bottles, advertising "Over the Hill"; filling street cars with cardboard representations of passengers and marking the car with a streamer, "We are on our way to see "Over the Hill" at the * * * theatre"; and sending a carriage through the street with an old lady made up as Mary Carr in the role of Ma Benton in "Over the Hill."

"In many places a special showing was arranged, to which were invited city officials, clergymen and other prominent persons. The result has been many testimonials which could be used in advertising, and numerous sermons on "Over the Hill."

"Big Four" Releases in "Exceptional" Class



THREE more film productions released through United Artists Corporation have won on their distinctive merits the right to be placed by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures among the recent "Exceptional Photoplays."

They are "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks as producer and star; "Little Lord Fauntleroy," produced by Mary Pickford, who stars in the dual role of the little Lord and Dearest, his mother, and "Disraeli," with George Arliss as the star, and produced by Distinctive Productions Inc.

This trio of pictures thus selected keeps the United Artists record clean at 100 per cent, since every picture released by that organization thus far has been awarded a place among the "exceptional" productions.

Tearle Film Opens House

"After Midnight" at Kansas City Opening; "Selznick Week" Booming

THE Select organization in making its drive to place Selznick pictures on every available screen during "Selznick Week," will be greatly aided in the Kansas City territory by the fact that Conway Tearle, in "After Midnight" was selected as the opening photoplay, in conjunction with vaudeville, at the newly dedicated Orpheum Jr. theatre. The fact that Zena Keefe, also a Selznick star, supported Mr. Tearle in this attraction, made "After Midnight" an especially fitting adjunct to the vaudeville in which the Orpheum Circuit specializes.

Miss Keefe was a featured player in vaudeville before entering the Selznick star set and had previously made repeated appearances in Kansas City. The additionl fact that Ralph Ince directed the presentation gave what is really a three-star offering which Orpheum Jr. could feature along with its vaudeville main-stay. Direct influence naturally resulted on the prolific territory of which Kansas City is the center, and Select salesmen are making the most of the Orpheum Jr. event.

In addition to the very successful country-wide showings of "After Midnight," as first of the Conway Tearle series for this season, Select is now heralding "The Man of Stone" as the next number in the Tearle issues. November 10 is the release date of the new feature, bringing it into circulation as an added feature for the "Selznick Week" drive.

"The Man of Stone" is announced as a story of English army life in Arabia with Tearle playing the role of an officer who has taken a difficult and dangerous commission to get him away from London where he has been worsted in a battle for love. Martha Mansfield, who has been leading woman for Tearle and Eugene O'Brien in previous Selznick pictures, plays the role of the woman who swaps a soldier's love for a title.

New Wanda Hawley Picture

Realart Announces Comedy Drama, "The Love Charm," as Next Vehicle

WANDA HAWLEY in a role diverting humor and touching drama, is what Realart promises in Miss Hawley's new picture, "The Love Charm." A daring theory is expounded in "The Love Charm." It is that a girl or woman can have the man she wants by using the almost infallible law of symbols, and playing upon his subconscious memories of the things that were dear to him in childhood and youth.

In other words, the old-time vamp who made use of her physical charms to ensnare the unsuspecting male has been succeeded by a new and subtle siren who uses her brains. Indeed, so complete has been the reversal in this epoch-making story by Harvey O'Higgins that when Miss Hawley, as the heroine, dons a "low-and-behold" gown and does a snappy modern dance, she turns the hero completely against her.

"The lights and shades of present-day life have been well brought out by Harvey O'Higgins, who created the story, and by Percy Heath, who wrote the scenario," announces Realart. "Nothing was overlooked in the direction by Thomas Heffron, who has directed a number of Hawley successes."

William E. Collins photographed "The Love Charm," which was supervised by Elmer Harris.

Educational's First Runs

Big Fall Sales Drive Bringing in Maximum First Run Bookings

WHILE bookings of Educational Pictures on Broadway are showing a steady increase, branch exchanges are reporting to the home office an unusual boom in first run bu iness in many other parts of the country as a result of Educational's big fall sales drive, according to announcement this week by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

In several cases, Mr. Hammons stated, these reports show maximum first run bookings, and virtually every branch in the country is showing an increase.

On Broadway Educational's two-reel comedies and single-reel scenics and novelties are keeping up with the fast pace set by Selig-Rork Photoplays. Last week saw the new Mermaid Comedy, "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," featuring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, at the Strand. There have been from one to five or six Educational Pictures on Broadway every week since the increased fall business began.

The Far West branches lead the way in the matter of maximum first run bookings, according to th statement made by Mr. Hammons The manager of the San Francisc Exchange, reporting an extraordi nary number of first run booking wrote that "This schedule wil make the rest of the boys sit up an take notice when they realize tha our exchange has six first runs i one week in the largest houses i San Francisco." The bookings in cluded: California theatre, "Th Stork's Mistake," Campbell Com edy, and Kinograms, news reel Portola theatre, Kinograms; Ti oli theatre, "Doggone Torchy, Torchy's Comedy, and "Troub dours of the Sky," Chester Screer ic; Imperial theatre, "Just fo Fun," Sketchografs.

In Los Angeles the week of Oc tober 23 had three first run show ings of two-reel comedies. " Pair of Sexes," a new Christ Comedy, was at the California th atre; the Kinema theatre playe "For Land's Sake," a Mermai Comedy, and another Christie Con edy, "Oh, Buddy!" was at Miller theatre.

"Fauntleroy" Making Hi

Opens in Chicago and Atlanta and is Hailed by the Public and Press

OPENING in Chicago at the Randolph theatre and in Atlanta, Ga., at the Howard theatre, Mary Pickford's screen version of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has won immediate favor with the public and the press of both these cities, according to advices from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation.

Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy" boyishly swaggered into the Randolph theatre, Chicago, just as Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" dashed out to keep other engagements, and immediately Chicago's critics and public were captured anew, and there wasn't the slightest interruption of the capacity crowds that had been filling the Randolph every day from early to late.

"If you doubt the use of that modest title, 'America's Sweetheart,' just hear the crowd in the packed Randolph roar with sympathetic affection for Mary Pickford, a spirited, humorous, fighting 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,'" says The Observer in the Chicago Herald Examiner. "As a tomboy and a comedienne Mary is all the public says of her, and as an actress depicting adult emotions she is a beautiful woman. White-haired men and women were laughing laughs that had gone unlaughed for thirty years, and moving their knees up and down gently as if dream children were sitting there."

"This is not a review. It is an appreciation," declares Rob Reel in the Chicago American. "Show me the critic who could do justice in cold type to Mary Pickford's 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' at the Randolph! If words were gems I could not express my regard for Miss Pickford's 'Fauntleroy' in dozen Koh-i-noors.

"A porcelain doll in exquisi settings. Youth incarnate, buoyar kindly, beautiful. You will laug You will weep."

Mary Pickford and her late United Artists production, "L tle Lord Fauntleroy," won th plaudits of all Atlanta without th semblance of a struggle. This fil feature, shown at the Howard the tre to capacity audiences, quick won enthusiastic praise of the cr ics and the public flocked to see t film version of the famous sto and to view Miss Pickford in h equally famous dual role of the l tle lord and "Dearest," his moth

Strand Circuit Book "The Beggar Maid"

Following its pre-release sho ing at the Rivoli and Rialto th tres, New York, "The Begg Maid" has been booked for t Strand Circuit, so the Hodkins offices announce.

In the Strand theatre, Brookl it will be put on with a prolo said to be even more elaborate th that used during its Broadw premier.

This contract calls for its pearance at the Strand, Syracu the Strand, Albany; the Stra Buffalo, and the Sheridan, N York City.

The Million Dolla Question "What Do MEN Want"

"Peter Ibbetson" Sets Record on Broadway

AT the end of its second week at the New York Criterion, George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production, "Forever," or "Peter Ibbetson," as it is called in its New York presentation—had set up a record for receipts never before equalled at that theatre, according to a statement from the Paramount office.

Playing in a house with seating capacity around 650, with only two performances a day, the picture drew during the first two weeks a paid attendance averaging more than 1,200 daily. This high figure is the more remarkable when it is taken into consideration that all seats are reserved and that the top price is $1.50, with $2 ruling on Saturdays and Sundays.

Urges Small-Town Play Right After Key City

The importance of smaller town exhibitors playing the really big attractions as soon after they have played the key cities as possible is pointed out by Marshall Neilan.

"A report from R. A. Shobe, manager of the Kentland theatre, Kentland, Indiana," said Mr. Neilan, "is a striking example of the importance of playing the big successes as soon after they have appeared in the key cities as possible.

"In his report on the picture, Mr. Shobe stated that one of my old pictures was a good attraction and admitted that had he played it sooner, while the big town advertising was still hot, he would have even realized a greater profit.

"In every small town the public receives the daily and Sunday newspapers from a nearby large town. The exploitation stories and advertising appearing in these large town newspapers in connection with the showing of pictures there reach the small town public just as they do the public of the larger cities. Word of mouth advertising on pictures also travels from town to town I have found, to a surprising extent. Stunts that are put over on pictures in big cities travel via the newspapers and other media to the smaller towns."

Providence Critic Lauds "Three Musketeers"

Here is what the dramatic critic of the Providence Journal had to say of Douglas Fairbanks' production after viewing "The Three Musketeers" at Shubert's Majestic theatre:

"'The Three Musketeers' is in every way entitled to be called a masterpiece. Mr. Fairbanks has never done anything better; it is doubtful if he ever excels his characterization of D'Artagnan. While he and his sturdy companions are living up to their motto 'All for one and one for all' at the Shubert Majestic they should be seen by every lover of clean, worth while motion pictures."

National Tie-ups on "Molly O"

TIE-UPS of unusual character and magnitude have been effected for the exploitation of Mack Sennett's "Molly O," starring Mabel Normand. The picture is scheduled for November release through the First National exchanges. According to word from the Sennett offices, Arthur M. Brilant, director of exploitation for Mack Sennett, has worked out an exploitation campaign, which is "not only unique but unprecedented in the history of motion-pictures."

A tie-up has been arranged with the H. R. Mallinson Silk Company of New York, says the Sennett statement, by which the Mallison Company will put on the market and advertise nationally a new high-grade silk fabric to be designated as the "Molly O" crepe. The Mallison dealers throughout the country will utilize in their window displays 7 x 5 and 11 x 14 cards advertising the showing of the picture in the local theatres.

The Loose Wiles Biscuit Company, according to the Sennett statement, is now making up and marketing a new tea biscuit with the name "Molly O" stamped across the face of the biscuit. These biscuits are now being turned out at the ten big Loose Wiles bakeries throughout the country. The salesmen of this company cover over 150,000 retail stores. Window displays are to be furnished to each of these stores tieing up the picture and the "Molly O" biscuit. National "Molly O" advertising is also being carried on by Loose Wiles.

The Sidney G. Hirschberg & Company, millinery manufacturer, is putting out on the market as a result of a tie-up a new "Molly O" hat of the sport type. A special drive is now being made upon all dealers handling Hirschberg merchandise to advertise the new hat and co-operate with the local exhibitors in exploiting the Sennett picture. Each hat will bear on its lining a facsimile signature of Mabel Normand and the name "Molly O."

Mabel Normand, star of "Molly O," the Mack Sennet-First National forthcoming release wearing "Molly O" shoes

What is probably one of the most unique ideas is an arrangement made with the Midland Playing Card Company and Inter-Ocean Playing Card Company of Lafayette, Indiana, whereby they will put out on the market a new "Molly O" deck of playing cards. This playing card, which is of a high-grade quality of linen-back paper, gold-edged and carried in a telescope case, is unique, in that it is a souvenir of the motion picture. The ace of spades is a picture of Mack Sennett, the producer of "Molly O." The four queens will carry four poses of Mabel Normand in the character of "Molly O." The four kings will be four poses of Mabel Normand and Jack Mulhall, the leading man, in scenes from the production. The four Jacks will be four poses of Mabel Normand and other male characters in scenes from the production, and on the back of each playing card will be a photograph of Mabel Normand. The Playing Card Company is inaugurating a national-wide sales campaign, which will include every drug store, cigar store and novelty store in the country. It is expected that more than 25,000 stores will make a feature of this new "Molly O" playing card, and as an exploitation help, the Playing Card Company is issuing to all of its dealers a three-part window display folder, beautifully illustrated in colors, and prominently featuring Mabel Normand in "Molly O."

The Sennett headquarters declares that tie-ups have also been effected with Miller & Son, manufacturer of high-grade ladies' shoes; Max B. Sheffer, of Chicago, manufacturer of novelties; the Sonora Phonograph Company; the Waterson, Berlin & Snyder Music Publishing Company; the Victor Talking Machine Company, and the Leever Brothers, of Boston, who put out Lifebuoy soap.

In addition to the national advertising built up around the name "Molly O," as a result of these tie-ups, it is estimated by the Sennett offices that more than 225,000 windows come within the scope of the arrangements for window displays of the Mabel Normand starring vehicle.

School Head Lauds "U" Serial

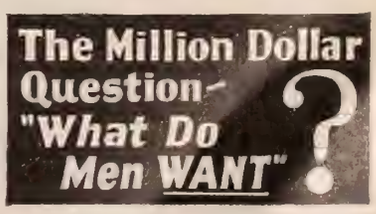
Tribute Paid to Art Acord's "Winners of the West"

UNSTINTED praise for "Winners of the West," Universal's thrills-from-history serial, starring Art Acord, has been expressed by E. E. Cortright, assistant superintendent of schools of Bridgeport, Conn. The educator holds the new style Universal serial up as a model for moving picture producers and acclaims it as of great value for both children and adults.

Mr. Cortright's opinion was contained in a letter to Mr. H. P. Morgan, New Haven representative of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, following a private showing of the opening episodes of the serial to representative members of the Board of Education of Bridgeport.

"It was a great pleasure to me to sit in with a few of our school people recently, wrote Mr. Cortright, "to witness the first three episodes of your new serial, "Winners of the West." This was true because our experience with serials has been most unsatisfactory. They have been cheap, lurid, artificial and psychologically unwholesome.

"You have a great theme in this picture, and if the following episodes are carried out with anything like the care exercised in the staging of the first three, you will have made a distinct contribution to educational opportunities for both children and adults.



"I wanted to say this word to you because of the splendid promise of the picture in this field of serials, which has been sadly mishandled by practically all former companies up to date."

Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Company, has just seen the completed serial and is reported to be unusually enthusiastic concerning it.

"Universal will offer 'Winners of the West,'" he is quoted as announcing, "as a serial which may be witnessed by every red-blooded American from nine to ninety. It is the kind of a serial I take a particular delight in presenting to the public. It is scrupulously clean, dramatic and historically educational."

This serial, starring Art Acord as Arthur Standish, one of Capt. John C. Fremont's scouts, has received greater attention in its production than any serial ever before made, it is Universal's contention. Due to the necessity of getting the historical incidents of the gold rush days correct, and of duplicating dress, customs, weapons and surroundings of 1848 with exactitude, the Universal City research department kept a corps of investigators busy during the entire filming of the serial.

The success of the thrills-from-history serial has been phenomenal. Every Universal exchange reports that all early serial booking records have been broken by it. Although the serial is still in the first month of its booking.

Pola Negri Picture Coming

Paramount to Release First of Two Features in February

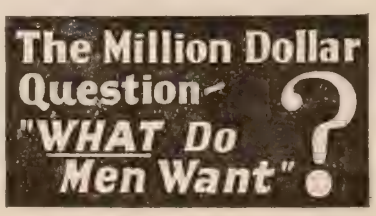
PARAMOUNT announces that the first of the two Pola Negri pictures which it is to release has been scheduled for December. The title is "The Last Payment." The other, "The Red Peacock," will be released some time in February.

Unusual interest attaches to "The Last Payment," for it is said to be the first picture in which the American public will see this foremost screen actress of Europe in a purely dramatic role. The other productions in which she has been seen here have been essentially spectacular.

"The Last Payment" was written by John Brennert and George Jacoby and was directed by the latter. The settings and decorations, which are said to be fittingly elaborate, were designed by Carl Richter, one of Europe's foremost stage directors, and were built under his direction.

An atmosphere essentially exotic pervades the entire picture, the story opening in South America and continuing to its close in Paris. It is a tale of successive love affairs of a woman of the Latin Quarter who has fled from the wild life of Paris to bury her past in self-exile in South America. There she meets and marries a rich cattleman who, some time later, is murdered, leaving her again dependent upon her own resources. At about that time she meets a Parisian and, overmastered by her longing for the old life in her native city, returns with him to Paris and is taken by him to the home of his father. There she finds a former husband and, fearing to acknowledge him as such, finds herself the object of the attentions of three men. The situation is productive of tragedy and gives Miss Negri a splendid opportunity to display her pronounced talent as an emotional artist.

Playgoers' Film Due Nov. 20



Winifred Westover Heads Strong Cast in "Anne of Little Smokey"

PLAYGOERS' PICTURES announce a Wistaria production for release on Nov. 20th, the title of which is "Anne of Little Smokey." No less attractive a screen personality than Winifred Westover heads the players, although the cast is described as all star. Joe King, in the role of a forest ranger, plays opposite Miss Westover, while Frank Sheridan, who was the picturesque lumberman in "The Rider of the King Log," portrays a virile mountaineer, whose independence reflects the hard life of the woods. Dolores Cassinelli is splendid in her interpretation of a gipsy princess. Frank Hagney and little Harold Callahan have important parts as well as Ralph Falkner, Alice Chapin, Edward Rosemon, Margaret Morris and Florence Ashbrook.

The story was written by Brevard Connor. The action is centered in Little Smokey, a region of natural beauty and resources, set aside by the Government as a forest and game preserve.

Brockton village is the home of the fighting Brocktons, who held Little Smokey as their own before the war came as represented by Robert Hayne (Joe King), responsible for the sanctity and welfare of the community.

The feature is described as an outdoor production, set in the natural splendor of the Kentucky Mountains, yet it is distinctly out of the ordinary, since its theme is far removed from the usual type of mountain story.

Foreign Novelist Arrives

Mlle. Henriette Sava-Goiu (Saavah-Goyah), poet, dramatist, novelist and scenario writer and one of the younger literary celebrities of Europe, arrived recently aboard the Aquitania. Mlle. Sava-Goiu has come to America in order that she may see and do the things she likes without the circumscribing harassments of European customs. Parisian and London producers wanted her to play in some of her own or their scenarios for the European screen and did induce her to have made some tests, but when it came to signing contracts mademoiselle decided not. It was whispered in Paris that possibly it was a bit too near home.

The brilliant visitor has been entertained at various box parties by theatre managements in New York, and several producers have asked to read her latest play, produced in Europe, "The Only Truth." She was more interested at first, however, in seeing a great American picture palace, and the day after her arrival she visited the Capitol theatre. She was enthusiastic in her praise of that spacious house and the way in which it handles and presents films.

Mlle. Sava-Goiu's interests in America are under the management of F. J. Tietsort of New York who in motion picture matters is being assisted and advised by George Blaisdell.

Ince Feature Meets Test

"Hail the Woman" Wins Approval of Varied Audiences on Coast

THOMAS H. INCE put his forthcoming super-special "Hail the Woman" to an audience test before three distinct types of theatre patrons in Los Angeles this week.

At the conclusion of the tests, which the producer and his staff pronounced highly satisfactory, he released prints for shipment to the exchanges of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., through which the production will be distributed.

"Hail the Woman" was presented on three successive evenings at the Royal, the DeLuxe and the Windsor theatres in Los Angeles. The Royal caters to a patronage of laboring people, the DeLuxe is a middle class house and the Windsor has an exclusive patronage. The reviews were totally unannounced. The production was put on following the regular program, and in every instance these thoroughly unprepared audiences sat through the entire screening.

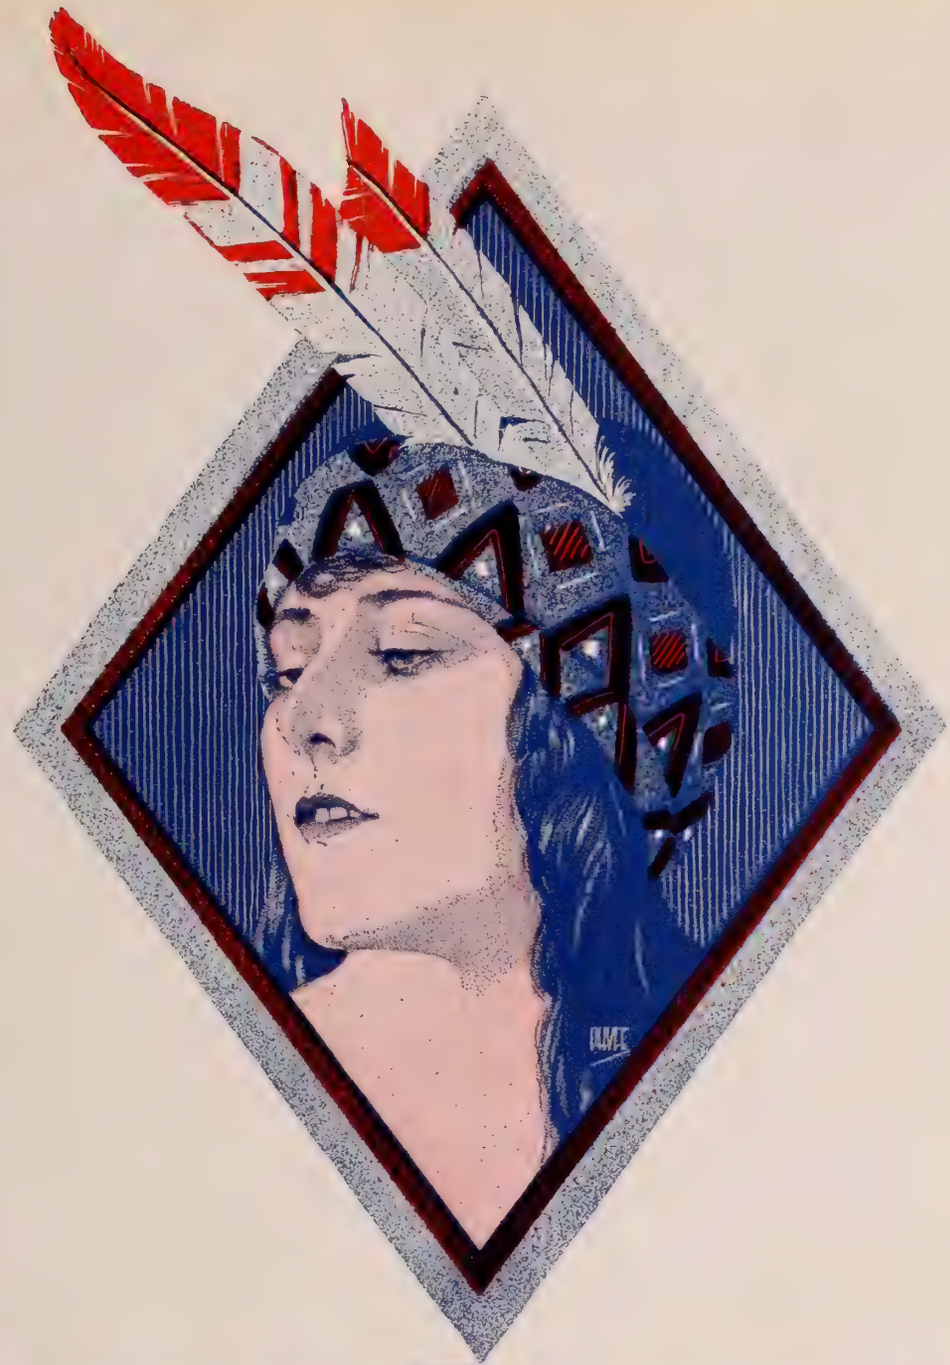
Comments gathered by Mr. Ince personally and members of his staff scattered through the theatres and mingling with the audiences proved that all classes of theatregoers will be enthusiastic over the production.

"Hail the Woman" represents the sum of my observations as to what it is that the public really want when it calls for 'better pictures'," commented Mr. Ince. "'Hail the Woman,' I submit, is not only such a 'better picture' from the public's point of view, but also from that of exhibitors, producers, distributors and artists.

"In all my producing experience I have never felt so satisfied with a production of mine as I do with 'Hail the Woman,' and I am mighily proud of it."

New Prevost Production

"Princess Virtue," Third for Universal Release, Soon Ready



"PRINCESS VIRTUE," Marie Prevost's third and latest Universal feature, is nearing completion at Universal City under the direction of George Cox.

"Princess Virtue" will probably be her most elaborate production, states Universal. Like "Moonlight Follies" and "Nobody's Fool," "Princess Virtue" provides the former bathing queen with an alluring, attractive "baby-vamp" crusher of masculine hearts type of role. Louise Winter wrote the story.

Tom Gallery plays opposite the star. The cast also includes George Fisher, Bertram Grassby, Ma Busch, Rose Diore, George Peri lot, Lillian Lawrence and Lilli Rambeau.

George L. Cox, who is directin Miss Prevost in "Princess Virtue is a newcomer to Universal. H recently was associated with th American Film Company in San Barbara, and directed many of th Margarita Fisher productions. "Th Week End," "Whispering Smith "Their Mutual Child," "The Da gerous Talent" and "The Bi Moon" were among his more r cent successes.

Varied "Four Horsemen" Exploitation in Many Cities

Metro used the above exploitation in Minneapolis, Chicago, Atlantic City, San Francisco and St. Louis

Five Metro Companies at Work

METRO'S Hollywood studios are humming with the activities of the company's five producing units, all of which are beginning work on special pictures.

Chief among these is Rex Ingram's production of "The Prisoner of Zenda," a screen version of the Anthony Hope romance that is expected to rank with "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in popular appeal and importance in the photoplay world. Mr. Ingram has spent nearly a month selecting the principals for the picture. Considerably more time still will be required for the elaborate sets for the story.

Bayard Veiller, head of the producing unit bearing his name, is filming Justus Miles Forman's story, "Tommy Carteret." Its screen title will be "The Phantom Bride." Bert Lytell, star of the picture, has in it one of the roles he loves best—a part that permits of deft characterization and participation in outdoor action.

Maxwell Karger has organized a strong supporting company for the production of "Kisses," his first comedy-dramatic picture in which Alice Lake enacts the stellar role. Harry Myers, of comedy fame, has the leading male role in this May Tully story of candy and corporation finance. Other members of the cast include Edward Connelly, Dana Todd, Edward Jobson and Lignon Anderson. June Mathis, of Metro's West Coast scenario department, prepared the 'script for this unusual story.

George D. Baker will invade foreign territory for scenes of the newest S-L picture now under production for Metro, "Stay Home" when he journeys to old Mexico with his entire company headed by the youthful Gareth Hughes. The expedition into the southern republic will be of several weeks' duration to enable the director to obtain all the necessary scenes for this Edgar Franklin story.

New Specials Started in Production at Hollywood

Harry Beaumont's production of "The Five-Dollar Baby," starring Viola Dana, promises to be unique among the company's new pictures. The Irvin S. Cobb story will be told for the camera in a big reproduction of a section of New York's lower East Side, to be constructed at Metro's Hollywood studios; and in numerous scenes that will be shot on New York's waterfront, showing the Statue of Liberty in the background.

Rex Ingram Completes Cast

Prominent Players Assembled for Roles in "The Prisoner of Zenda"

REX INGRAM has practically completed the cast for his special production for Metro of "The Prisoner of Zenda"—a cast that will stand out as remarkable even among the notable companies he has organized for his earlier pictures.

Lewis Stone, star of the speaking stage who leaped into prominence on the screen because of his virile characterizations in Northwestern dramas, will play the dual role of The King and Rudolf Rassendyll.

Alice Terry, whose first big success was in Mr. Ingram's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," will be seen as the Princess Flavia in the Anthony Hope story. This new celebrity on the screen horizon has just completed work in the Ingram production of "Turn to the Right," which is expected to add materially to her laurels.

Robert Edeson, star of the stage and screen, has signed a contract to enact the role of Colonel Sapt; and Stuart Holmes, villain of a thousand dramas, will make it a thousand and one by portraying Black Michael.

Edward Connelly, world famous as the creator of the part of "Uncle Nat" in the stage production of "Shore Acres," has been selected as the Marshal Strakencz of the picture.

Eric Mayne, whose most recent success was in Mr. Ingram's production of "The Conquering Power," has been given the picturesque part of Lord Burlesdon. Malcolm McGregor, recognized as a screen favorite, will make his first appearance in a Metro picture as Fritz von Tarlenheim.

The part of Countess Helga von Strafzin has been taken by Lois Lee, who made her debut in pictures as the result of a contest in which scores of beauties in the Middle West competed.

Nazimova's "Camille" Follows Dumas Novel

Nazimova this week explained why, in her photoplay of "Camille," Armand is not present in the death scene. The Russian star made clear the point that her modernized version of the story is based upon the novel, not the play of Dumas; and that the book calls for no reappearance of the hero in the last hours of the life of Marguerite Gautier.

"There are many well-meaning critics," said the star, "who disregard the fact that 'La Dame aux Camelias' was written by Dumas as a novel, in twenty-seven chapters, four years before it was produced as a play at the Vaudeville in Paris. And as the motion picture version I am using was made from the original story, and not from the play which followed, I am adhering absolutely to the text in the interpretation of the final scene."

Veiller Starts Work on "Tommy Carteret"

Bayard Veiller began this week at the Metro studios in Hollywood production of Bert Lytell's newest picture, a screen version of "Tommy Carteret," by Justus Miles Forman. The title mentioned is tentative, and will be changed later. For the out-of-door scenes the star and his company will go into the wildest region of the San Bernardino mountains.

Jane Hart and "Laddie" in "No Par ing," an Educational-Christie comedy

Baby Peggy's First Release on B'way

Baby Peggy, the youngest star the movies, will exhibit her tw year-old charms in "Get Ri Quick Peggy," which will be t two-reel comedy on the Centr theatre bill the week of Novemb 7th. Her company includes amo others Louise Lorraine, who pla the part of a gypsy queen; t Aulbert twins, talented juvenil and Teddy, the former Mack Se nett dog.

The story is directed by A Goulding.

Robert Edison Engage for Metro Role

Robert Edeson, star of the legi mate stage where he created t leading roles in "Strongheart "Ranson's Folly" and "Soldie of Fortune," has been engaged Metro to play Colonel Sapt, t grizzled old war veteran, in t Rex Ingram screen production Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner Zenda."

His starring career began wi "Soldiers of Fortune." His pla have included "Classmates," "T Rector's Garden," "The Call of t North," "The Noble Spaniar "Where the Trail Divides," "T Cave Man," "The Indiscretion Truth," "Fine Feathers" a "Sinners." "Strongheart" was l greatest success.

Prompt Exhibitor Response Due to Punch Found in "Fightin' Mad"

FROM the moment of the initial announcement that Metro Pictures Corporation had added "Fightin' Mad," the great outdoor super-special production, to its list of releases, exchanges in all territories and the home office itself have been receiving inquiries from exhibitors concerning details of bookings and the release date of this action photoplay.

"The manner in which our announcement of 'Fightin' Mad' has been received," said William E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, after being advised of the exhibitor interest in the production, "verifies what is a truism in the picture field: that the public likes punch in its pictures, especially the American public.

"Such is the case in other fields which appeal to the public. The crowds don't go to the Polo Grounds to see a scoreless game, no matter how scientific. They want to see Ruth knock a homer. They want something that scores. That's why we've added 'Fightin' Mad' to the Metro batting order."

This smashing outdoor picture, a William Desmond Production, was written by H. H. Van Loan, author of "The Virgin of Stamboul" and other big successes. It was directed by Joseph J. Franz, under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton. Harry A. Gersted photographed it. The cast is a list of names notable in the ranks of motion picture players and by-words in the public's vocabulary of popularity. It includes William Desmond, Rosemary Theby, Virginia Brown Faire, William Lawrence, Joseph J. Dowling, Doris Pawn, and others no less prominent. The picture is scheduled for release December 5.

The Million Dollar Question—"What DO Men Want" ?

"Four Horsemen" vs Disarmament Parley

DISARMAMENT conferences would hardly be necessary, if everyone could see the screen production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," declares the Reverend T. Harry Kelly pastor of the First Methodis Episcopal Church, Superior Wis., in a letter to Harvey Buchanan, manager of the Savoy theatre, where this sensationally successful Re Ingram production wa shown.

The minister's communica tion said in part:

"It is a massive produc tion, and in my opinion rank with 'The Birth of a Na tion' and the few other pic tures that are truly great.

"I have not read nor hear anything that so tersely de picts the horrors of war."

"Conquering Power" Continues a Favorite

COUNTRY-WIDE booking, on the part of exhibitors, and unvarying heartiness of reception on the part of their patrons, of Rex Ingram's production for Metro of "The Conquering Power" prove that the early-season form of the attraction, when it played to capacity during the two hottest weeks of the summer, at the Rialto and Rivoli Theatres in New York, is being maintained.

Its success is fairly treading on the heels of the preceding Ingram photoplay, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," but in spite of the fact that this tremendous screen triumph placed the name of its director at the very top of the list of picture producers, the reports upon the sweep of popularity of "The Conquering Power" is enjoying indicate that this cinema version of Honore de Balzac's novel is standing on its own merits and winning on them.

"The Conquering Power's" overwhelming victory stands as proof of early predictions. When it was first shown in New York, without exception it received the most praiseworthy comments from the newspapers' dramatic critics; and from the reviewers of the trade paper there came a unanimity of judgment that it would prove one of the most powerful box office attractions ever put forth by a producing or distributing concern.

Every element which went to make up the completed unity of the photoplay received praise. The story itself, faithful to the spirit of Balzac and following the book, "Eugene Grandet" with remarkable accuracy, was changed in adaptation by June Mathis only in regard to the end—and, in the opinion of critics, improved. The direction by Mr. Ingram, which included not only the choice of artists and supervision of their action, but final decision in the matters of settings and lighting and above all, in the general composition of the scenes as they would appear on the film, brought to him even more worth-while notice than did his work in "The Four Horsemen." The photography by John F. Seitz, who was behind the camera during the screen production of the Ibanez novel, was acclaimed one of the most beautiful examples of cinematographic painting ever achieved.

In addition to what practically amounted to perfection in the reproduction of Balzac's novel of provincial France, a cast of rare ability and undeniable personality did its considerable bit toward the effectiveness of "The Conquering Power." Alice Terry, the Marguerite Laurier of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," recently said by Russell Iredell, the artist, to be the most perfect type of the American beauty he had yet seen, was cast as Eugenie Grandet. Playing opposite her was Rudolph Valentino, another celebrity from "The Four Horsemen" and hardly less noteworthy in the group of players were Ralph Lewis, Edward Connelly, Edna Dumary, Bridgetta Clark, Mark Fenton and Eugene Pouyet. In his arrangement of the scenes Mr. Ingram was aided in great measure by Ralph Barton, the American poster artist, who worked with Amos Myers in the art direction of the picture.

Rex Ingram to Film "Prisoner of Zenda"

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA" is to be the next subject produced for the screen by Rex Ingram. Every detail of the appointments for the production, from the design of the dragon on the helmets of the king's guards to the construction of the hunting lodge, will be created especially to measure up to the ambitious standard Rex Ingram, director of the photoplay for Metro, has set for his newest production.

For Mr. Ingram has found that the seemingly limitless possibilities of the studio property room furnish nothing suitable. Every wall of every set, every costume of the thousands of principals and extras who will participate in the picture, and even some of the out-of-door backgrounds will have to be prepared particularly to suit the requirements of this screen reproduction of the Anthony Hope romance.

An example of the painstaking care that is being exhibited in attaining similarity to the minutest details of the story may be seen in the plans for making the helmets of the king's guards. Although Los Angeles costumers have helmets of every variety, Mr. Ingram found none available unless topped by a dragon. Since a dragon-crested helmet was not to be discovered he called upon Finn Frolich, who has created many original bits of statuary seen in Metro pictures, to reproduce the dragon done by Benvenuto Cellini, the Italian sculptor, for the helmets. The regal headgear now is under way at the Hollywood studios of the company.

The same insistence upon detail obtains in designing the costumes to be worn by the military officers, the ladies-in-waiting, the peasants and attendants at the coronation scene of the picture. Since Ruritania, the mythical province in which the action of the story takes place, must be peopled with living men and women whose dress fits into the story, it is impossible to make use of the uniforms of the armies of any other power.

Mr. Ingram, assisted by a corps of technicians and builders, is constructing a section of the capital of the province of the kingdom in which the hero of the story meets with his bizarre adventures. A cathedral, a castle, several business houses and residences of an unusual style of architecture will be seen in this setting for one of the big scenes.

Mary O'Hara, of Metro's scenario department, has prepared the script for the story. John F. Seitz is to be the camera man.

"Camille" Breaks All Booking Records : :

NAZIMOVA'S "Camille" broke all booking records of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation this week when that organization signed contracts to exhibit the production in its entire chain of twenty-five theatres, with Metro Pictures Corporation, distributor of the Russian star's masterpiece.

The arrangement was made by Regal Films, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada, which distributes Metro productions in that section of the country. Word of the transaction reached the Metro home offices this week from Arthur Cohen, vice-president and general manager of Regal Films, Ltd.

The theatre which will show Nazimova's modernized version of the "Camille" of Alexandre Dumas, the younger, as adapted to the screen by June Mathias, are six in Toronto—The Regent, the Alhambra, the Oakwood, the Palace, the Garden, and the Family—and nineteen others in the Dominion. The Temple, in Brentford; the Regent, in Oshawa; the Brook, in Brockville, the Regent, in Galt; the Regent, in Guelph; the Capitol, in Kitchener; the Capital, in Peterboro; the Royal, in Port Hope; the Algoma, in Sault Ste. Marie; the Capitol, in Montreal; the Capitol in Winnipeg; the Capitol, in Regina; the Empress, in Edmonton; the Capitol, in Calgary; the Capitol, in Vancouver; the Capitol, in Victoria; the Savoy and Strand in Hamilton, and the Broadway, in Vancouver.

Six prints of the Nazimova picture have been dispatched to as many of the largest of the Canadian cities, for simultaneous release.

The terms of the contract have not been made public, but it is understood that it was commensurate with the record-breaking extent of the booking.

A scene from "There Are No Villains," released by Metro. Viola Dana is the bride-to-be

The enthusiasm at the private showing held in New York by Metro several weeks ago, in the grand ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, when the star herself was among the notables who crowded the exhibition room; the heartiness of praise from the metropolitan press when "Camille" was shown for two weeks at the Rivoli, in New York; and the capacity business this film playhouse did throughout the engagement—all these were unmistakable finger-posts pointing to a nation-wide and world-wide sweep of triumph, of which the record booking in Canada is the first rush, declares the Metro home office.

Metro to Film Cobb's "Five Dollar Baby"

Irvin S. Cobb's "The Five-Dollar Baby" is about to be produced at Metro's West Coast studios, with Viola Dana in the stellar role, as one of the company's most ambitious features.

Harry Beaumont, director of this new picture for Metro, is organizing an exceptionally strong cast to support Miss Dana. Edith Kennedy, of the company's scenario department, has prepared the script for the screen version of the Cobb story.

"A Virgin Paradise" An Unusual Story

William Fox Special Super-Production Filled With New Scenes and Startling Action

WITH a range of background that reaches from palatial estates and mansions in a cosmopolitan centre of the United States clear to the savage splendor of a South Sea island, "A Virgin Paradise," another William Fox special super-production, chooses a monster stage for itself, and then proceeds to enact on that stage a story of the jungle and civilized hypocrisy that fairly bristles with startling dramatic action and unusual scenes. With the perfect showmanship for which he is noted, William Fox has stepped in just as the newly created public appetite for South Sea adventure and atmosphere is whetted to its keenest edge. They fairly ate it up in New York after a run on Broadway at the Park theatre and Capitol theatre, and now it is being served to the rest of the country.

In action and theme it is without comparison. In color and atmosphere it is prodigally rich because it so vividly visualizes the exotic and romantic scenes that hold such strong appeal—emerald seas and sapphire skies; an island paradise, with all its wild beauty and strange life. It mixes skillfully in its magic spell the charm of the tropics with the hypocrisis and adventures of civilized life. It is a thrilling and primal drama of tangled lives and fortunes shot through with rare romance and thrilling episodes.

Its properties are wild animals, volcanoes, jungle depths, strange gods, native villages, primitive passion slumbering and awake; and standing out above them all is the central figure, a girl, barbaric and beautiful, around whom a fickle fate has built a strange drama that surges in a steady crescendo to the smashing and effective climax.

A SMASHING CLIMAX

It is the two-fisted punch of this climax that has made of the whole a great story. Imagine a beautiful girl plucked by Fate from wealth and civilization as a baby and cast alone on a deserted and haunted island in the South Seas. Mothered by the beasts of the jungle, she grows to young womanhood, knowing nothing of human beings. Then comes an adventurer into her strange paradise. An instinctive and primal love fills her and she journeys back to civilization. The sham, perfidies and conventions of her new life irk her—madden her! She wants nothing of shoes, dresses or mansions, and pines like some beautiful bird in captivity for her wild life again.

There is an appealing romance in "A Virgin Paradise."

And then comes the tempter. Instinctively she knows he is unclean. It arouses the tigress in her; and then, reversing all tradition of fact and fiction, she seeks vengeance. She locks him in a room with herself, and then in one of the greatest and breath-taking fight scenes ever brought to the screen, she tries to kill him with her bare hands. But the savage fire burns out in her breast with the ensuing and equally thrilling episodes, and she accepts the ultimatum of civilization when it offers clean love and domestic happiness.

REALISTIC BECAUSE REAL

That's the big moment in "A Virgin Paradise," and only a glimpse of what it contains. Its wild animals are lions—full-grown king lions. Its volcanic scenes are realistic because they are real—made on the island of Martinique, in the West Indies, with the famous and familiar Martinique volcano belching forth its molten lava and showers of smothering ashes. Many days were consumed by the company in watchfully waiting for the slumbering mountain of fire to awake and go on one of its tantrums.

Its jungle scenes were made right in the heart of the tropics. Its dark-skinned people are the natives. Its white beaches, coral islands and picturesque lagoons are those over which authors recently have used up pages of rich description, holding thousands of readers thralled with the charm of it. And here in "The Virgin Paradise," right before the eye, with greater vividness and realism than the printed word could ever give, this William Fox super-special brings them.

"A Virgin Paradise" therefore because of all this becomes just what William Fox intended it to be—a special super-production, with its story of thrills and adventure at two points of the compass primed to meet public demand. It is bound to duplicate the success of its Broadway run wherever it is shown. It offers exhibitors everywhere an opportunity to stir things up for it is chock full of exploitation possibilities.

Famous Lions In "The Virgin Paradise"

William Fox engaged for "A Virgin Paradise" a number of the finest specimens of lions in the world. Among them "Jimmy" and "Beauty" are known wherever a circus has appeared.

"Jimmy" is a perfect specimen of the king of beasts. He weighs 800 pounds, stands three feet high and measures ten feet from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail. "Beauty" weighs 450 pounds, stands three feet four inches in height and measures eight feet long.

Six Comedy Companies Busy on Fox Lot

SIX comedy companies are at work at present at Fox Film Corporation's West Coast studios. Heading the list is the Clyde Cook company, busy on the second of a series of special comedies, "The Chauffeur," with Lois Scott playing the girl. Jack Blystone is directing the production.

The acrobatic Al St. John, whose starring comedy, "The Happy Pest," is scheduled as an early November release, is busy with his "Straight from the Farm," with Bessie True. Gil Pratt is directing. Among the Sunshine Comedies, one is "Old Clothes." This is said to be a striking novelty. Delmar Del Lord is directing. "False Alarm," with Chester Conklin and Bee Monson, is being made under the direction of Earl Kenton. Slim Summerville is directing Jim Savo and Lillian Hacket in "Pardon Me." Harry Depp and Hattie Chambers are at work in "Go and Get It," under the direction of Al Herman.

Aubrey Comedy Booked by N. Y. Strand

Jimmy Aubrey, Vitagraph comedian, is going bigger than ever and his latest comedy, "The Applicant," has been booked by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand theatre, Broadway, New York, as a featured part of the Strand program for this coming week, announce Vitagraph.

"The Applicant" is an original comedy of the semi-slap-stick variety. It was written around the peculiar comedy characteristics of Aubrey, and is described as one long laugh.

Educational Releases at Three Openings

Educational Pictures had the distinction of being on the opening programs at three new theatres in or near Los Angeles in four days. The new Encel theatre, in Los Angeles, opened on October 19, with "The Ride on a Runaway Train" on the program. The Wilshire, which was opened October 20, showed the Mermaid Comedy, "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," featuring Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton, and Kinograms. At Ansheim, Cal., "Robinson Crusoe, Ltd.," was on the first program of the California theatre on October 22, as was also a Kinogram news reel.

Victor Heerman Signed as Selznick Director

Victor Heerman has been signed by the Selznick Pictures Corporation to direct future Selznick productions. Arrangements which had been formulated with Mr. Heerman were concluded a few days ago when Myron Selznick, vice president in charge of production of the Selznick corporation, signed Mr. Heerman to a contract which will keep him busy for some time.

"Humoresque" Called Best of 1920

TWO million readers of Photoplay, the fan magazine, have cast their votes in favor of "Humoresque," a Cosmopolitan Production, as the finest motion picture produced in America in 1920.

The December issue of "Photoplay," just off the press, announces the result of the balloting and the consequent award of a gold medal to Cosmopolitan Productions. The magazine of which James R. Quirk is the editor, congratulates Cosmopolitan Productions and all concerned with the making of "Humoresque."

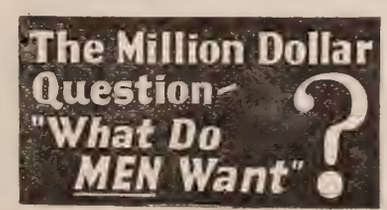
Early in the year Photoplay announced it would award a gold medal to the company that produced in 1920 the picture that was judged by its readers as the best photoplay. Ballots were printed in four successive issues and it was not long, the editors said, before their offices resembled an Arctic landscape, so heavy was the return of the ballots.

The medal is of solid gold, weighing 123½ pennyweights, and was executed by Tiffany. The inscription on the obverse reads: "The Photoplay Magazine Medal." On the reverse: "Presented to Cosmopolitan Productions by Photoplay Magazine for the production of 'Humoresque,' the best photoplay of the year 1920."

In announcing its plan to have its readers vote, Photoplay gave these qualifications to be considered: Theme, story, direction, acting, continuity, setting and photography.

In its December issue the magazine, in making known the result of the contest, says, "We think you have made a wise selection in 'Humoresque.'

"This picture is truly great. It is an artistic achievement and a popular triumph. Its theme, the universality of motherhood. Its direction, worthy of the beautiful theme. Its acting, exceptional. Its settings, extraordinary. Its continuity, smooth and faithful. Its photography, clear and fine."



Rush Bookings on Ray Film

Exhibs Taking Advantage of Interest in Current Football Matches

THE showman sense that sees box office value in a football photoplay at this season is responsible for a stimulated booking record this week for Charles Ray's "Two Minutes To Go." The star's latest First National release had opening runs in New York, Atlanta, Oklahoma and Des Moines, in each of which the football appeal added appreciably to the normal drawing power of Charles Ray's name. Successful tie-ups in New York and Des Moines point the way to the vast exploitation possibilities for this subject in any town which has a school team, professional team or athletic society of any type, declares a statement from Associated First National Pictures.

Among recent bookings on "Two Minutes To Go" reported by John C. Ragland, of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, which presents the star for First National distribution, are Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo, where Harold B. Franklin will soon present the Ray film; the Grand theatre, Pittsburgh, where Manager Bill Mason has booked the picture; the Queen theatre, Dallas, Texas; the Liberty theatre, Seattle, Washington; Turner & Dahnken's Tivoli, in San Francisco; the America, in Denver; Col., and the Madison theatre, in Detroit, Mich.

The success of the film in New York City in its initial screening by the Strand theatre, is attested to by Manager Joe Plunkett, who put on one of the most elaborate exploitation campaigns ever undertaken by his house. A tie-up whereby the football teams of Columbia, N. Y. U., Fordham and C. C. N. Y. occupied boxes at the Strand on different nights during College Week resulted in a highly stimulated attendance by the student bodies of each university. The interest evidenced by the college men is reflected in the fact that, although at the beginning of the week, through some inadvertence the City College was not included in the plans, by the end of the week the City College men made application themselves for inclusion in the College Week plans and Friday night was devoted to them.

Yale Professor Endorses "Three Musketeers"

Prof. William Lyon Phelps, professor of English Literature at Yale, after viewing "Three Musketeers" at the Shubert theatre, New Haven, wrote as follows to the management of the Shubert:

"I enjoyed the picture play, 'The Three Musketeers' immensely. It is thrilling from beginning to end, and is without any trace of silliness or vulgarity. It is a clean, inspiring picture and everyone ought to see it."

"Poverty of Riches" Is Next Goldwyn Picture

GOLDWYN'S next big picture to be added to the list that contains already, from the company's fifth year product, "The Old Nest," "Dangerous Curve Ahead" and "Doubling for Romeo" is "Poverty of Riches," directed by Reginald Barker and adapted from Leroy Scott's story, "The Mother." It has received wide bookings throughout the country.

This is the picture that Goldwyn declares to be one of the greatest human documents the screen has ever reflected. It is the story of a young married couple who defer having children despite the wife's longing for them, until the husband has won big social and financial standing in his community. In the leading roles are Richard Dix, John Bowers, Leatrice Joy and Louise Lovely. Others playing important parts are Irene Rich, De Witt C. Jennings, Dave Winter, Roy Laidlaw, John Cossar, Frankie Lee and Dorothy Hughes.

Universal-Jewel Opens Springfield Strand

Gus and Louis Kerasotes, veteran exhibitors of Springfield, Ill., recently threw open the doors of one of the best equipped theatres in the middle west. It is the New Strand Theatre, at Sixth and Washington streets, Springfield. "No Woman Knows," the Universal-Jewel production made by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber's novel "Fanny Herself," was the feature of the first week.

Having booked "No Woman Knows," the Strand management arranged a tie-up with the Springfield Journal, as a result of which the Journal called for individual 100 word criticisms on the picture. This prompted many persons to go the opening night so they could write their criticisms.

Suggesting a Way By Which Pictures May Be Financed

There is a studio in Florida equipped and ready for modern productions. Dark Stage is 60 by 60 with Cooper-Hewitts,—Hard Lights,—and several 100 Amperes spot Lights. There is also a open-air stage 50 by 142, which is one-half enclosed, and could be wholly enclosed at little cost. The two stages together could accommodate three separate companies. There are 18 dressing rooms and plenty of flats and sets and a laboratory. It is situated right in the city and cost $65,000. To a reputable producing company, that would acquire this property, the financing of its pictures or the selling of stock for this purpose would be an easy matter on account of this asset. The Owner is willing to sell for one-third cash, one-third Stock, and the balance in easy payments.

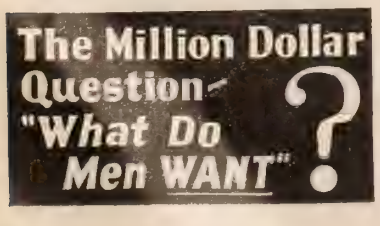
Four Sennett Units Busy on Coast



Mack Sennett announces that by November 15 he will have four companies at work in his studios. Mabel Normand arrived in Los Angeles on Oct. 21 and began work on a comedy romance of Southern California. Ben Turpin has returned from New York and started work on his next picture, "Bright Eyes," on Nov. 1. Billy Bevan started a new two-reel comedy on Oct. 24, in which Mildred June has the feminine lead. On Oct. 22 Billie finished a two-reeler which will be released by First National under the title of "By Heck." "By Heck" is the Bevan successor to "Be Reasonable."

Hughes Has Difficult Role in Ince Feature

A study of "character transition," one of the most difficult of elements to interpret either on the stage or on the screen, is given by Lloyd Hughes in his role of David Beresford in Thomas H. Ince's "Hail the Woman," soon to be released by Associated First National Pictures. All these successive stages of fearfulness, doubt and weakness are cleverly and convincingly sketched by Lloyd Hughes.

Earle Williams Seen in Outdoor Picture

Earle Williams has returned to a rugged outdoor role in "Bring Him In," which is his current Vitagraph release. Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, decided that Mr. Williams could duplicate his success in "The Wolf." The truth of this has already been proven by the success which greeted "Bring Him In" wherever shown.

"Iron Trail" Based on Actual Happenings, Beach Tells Audience

THE premier showing at the New York Strand theatre of Rex Beach's "The Iron Trail," produced by the Bennett Pictures Corporation, and released through the United Artists, had as an added attraction a personal appearance by Mr. Beach.

Mr. Beach briefly explained that his original story, adapted for the screen by Dorothy Farnum, was based on actual happenings and that the characters were actual persons who did build an actual Alaskan railroad, that was actually bridged through an Alaskan winter.

There was a packed theatre audience which applauded Mr. Beach's talk and also gave generous applause to the many thrilling scenes in the picture.

The picture won much-deserved praise from the critics. "The picture is another one of those which needs no review," says Harriette Underhill, in the New York Tribune. "If you like Rex Beach you will like the picture which is called 'The Iron Trail' and is full of icebergs and he-men. It is extremely interesting, and the scenes in Alaska are magnificent."

Says Suzanne Sexton in the Morning Telegraph: "A Rex Beach story usually is as bracing as the morning plunge into a cold tub. This one is no exception.

"Wyndham Standing was well chosen for the leading role of Murray O'Neill. He has all the good looks and the romantic appeal which a builder of railroads and bridges, who has trestled all the way from Chile to China, should possess on the screen. And he is too finished an artist to give anything but a splendid performance."

Writes Quinn L. Martin in the New York World: "This picture has action, with interpolations here and there of the Alaskan intrigue and far North bravery, heroism and romance."

"There are many thrilling scenes of the breaking up of the ice in 'The Iron Trail,' which you can enjoy without a doubt," says the critic for the New York Times.

Kolker to Produce Abroad

Director and Technicists to Make Pictures for Italian Producer

Henry Kolker

A MOVEMENT of international importance in the motion picture industry was practically launched on October 25th when Henry Kolker and his staff of technicists sailed for Cherbourg en route to Italy under contract with the Societa Anonima 'Ultra' of Rome, Luporini Brothers, and Ernest Shipman, of New York City. Among the personnel of Mr. Kolker's staff are Howard P. Bretherton, assistant director, and Charles Rosher, who for the last three years specialized as cameraman to Mary Pickford and her productions.

Following a round table conference of Ernest Shipman and his associates, Henry Kolker was finally selected from the available American directors, not only on account of his many screen successes, culminating in "Disraeli," but because of his long experience upon the legitimate stage, which eminently qualifies him to interpret the works of the various authors selected by the Ultra Company of Rome.

The internationally read stories of F. Marion Crawford have been purchased by this company and "Sant Ilario" is the one selected for the premier production. Kenneth O'Hara, who gleaned wisdom in the Thomas H. Ince school of experience, was entrusted with the adaptation and continuity, and before sailing Mr. Kolker received, on his working manuscript, the "O. K." of the various interested parties on this side of the water.

Two negatives will be made of each story, one under the direction of an Italian producer for the Latin-foreign field and the other under Mr. Kolker's direction for the Anglo-American countries. William G. Colvin is already in Rome making preparation for the coming of the director and his staff. The combined studios of the Nova and Bernini companies, under the control of Ultra, have been completely equipped and especially prepared for this first Italian-American effort.

Novel Herald Is Issued for "Enchantment"

What is said to be something new in a herald has been devised by Cosmopolitan Productions to exploit its newest release through Paramount—"Enchantment," starring Marion Davies. The herald, copies of which were distributed in the Rialto, Criterion and Rivoli theatres, New York, for the pre-release showing in the latter theatre the week of October 30, is a four-page affair. The first and last pages are in black and white and carry an announcement of the production, an outline of the story and the credits.

The centre spread is in four colors and consists of cut-out dollies for the children. There is a figure of Marion Davies in one gown and there are four other gowns and a fur coat to be cut out and put on the cut-out of the star.

Five Century Comedies for November Release

Julius Stern announces that Century Film Corporation will release for November a diversified list of five comedies. One will stage Charles Dorety, and Bartine Burkette, the new Century beauty; one Brownie the Wonder Dog, one Baby Peggy the two-year-old star, one Teddy the former Mack Sennett great Dane, and one Harry Sweet.

Charles Dorety and Bartine Burkett will be seen in "The Nervy Dentist," which will be released November 2nd; Brownie will be seen in "Around Corners" released on November 9th; Baby Peggy will star in "A Muddy Bride" released November 16th; Harry Sweet will star in "Playing Possum," the comedy which played two weeks at the Central theatre. It will be released November 23rd. Teddy the great Dane will be seen in Teddy's goat released on November 30th.

"Thunderclap" Is A Great Picture From Every Angle

Born a Great Picture—Achieved Greatness and Had it Thrust Upon It.

THE old saying prescribes three way of acquiring greatness.. To make sure of it, "Thunderclap," a William Fox special super-production, used all three ways. It was born great, achieved greatness and then had it thrust upon it.

It was born great because it boasts of the presence of Mary Carr, the famous little mother of "Over the Hill," plus the most sensational and thrilling race track scene ever staged. These two elements alone, with the power and permanence of a sharp edged chisel, etched the name of "Thunderclap" now and forever among the other few winners on the flinty scroll of famous films.

As in "Over the Hill," Mary Carr again shines forth like a crown jewel as the mother in "Thunderclap." And her Ma Benton in "Over the Hill," by the sheer artistry, beauty and appeal of its characterization, has enshrined her as the symbolic mother of 21 million homes in this country. She gave to it the power of a magic wand with which it has swayed to its will hundreds of thousands of people in every walk of life, of all ages, color and creed. In "Thunderclap," as the wan and wistful little mother, chained to an invalid's chair by paralysis, able to move only her eyes, she sits helpless while those she loves are threatened with danger and the great drama moves all around her.

Thus, deprived of all the natural means of acting her role, does Mary Carr, by her birthright as an artist, carry off the big emotional and dramatic moments of this production with her eyes. And if ever eyes spoke volumes hers do here. Joy, tragedy, fear, faith and every other emotion that the dramatic surge of the story at these points calls for, are registered by means of her consummate artistry and power just as clearly and perfectly as a sub-title or her own voice might convey it.

THEY'RE OFF!

That's the cue to another great scene in "Thunderclap"—the thrilling, colorful race track spectacle where everything at that moment depends on the stout heart and the flying heels of a horse. It is the scene that has caused critics to label the production, "the greatest race track drama ever staged". The modern panoramic perfection of the Akeley camera and the enterprise of the Fox Film Corporation in making these scenes right at the famous New Orleans race track brings such vivid and realistic effects to the screen that all those who see it are fairly transported by the nerve tingling spectacle and the theatre auditoriums have been practically turned into paddocks and grandstand. One fairly feels the tense and expectant silence as the horses fight for mastery around every turn and the pounding of flying hoofs almost sounds from the screen.

THEREFORE BORN GREAT

Thus have these two elements given "Thunderclap" a birthright of greatness and with a score of other thrilling and dramatic highlights with which it is studded, it has achieved the right to be great. Achieved it by a prodigality of effort and effects such as seldom have ever been put into one picture. Achieved it by a cast of all-star players that alone would have given it unusual prominence.

Another of the big moments in this production, probably ranking next to the race track scene for thrills and sheer melodramatic effect, is the now famous scene in the whirlpool rapids. Staged amidst swirling, dangerous rapids and a thundering water-fall, it is a moment that has gripped the attention and nerves of the most blase of theatre-goers. The perilous journey of the hero through the deadly rapids—the grim fight for life on the brink of the falls, and then the startling and daring rescue with a human life-line, all makes this another dramatic peak of the picture that sticks forever in the memories of those who have seen it.

Then there are the glamorous and bizarre scenes in the gambling casino—an incident in this picture but a subject and atmosphere that furnished enough plot and action for a whole big stage production which recently opened in New York.

GREATNESS THRUST UPON IT

In this manner has "Thunderclap" been born great and achieved greatness. It remained for the photoplay and dramatic critics of newspapers in New York and elsewhere, not forgetting the tens of thousands of persons who have flocked to see it all over the country, to thrust the mantle of greatness upon this production. A few of the New York papers did it thus:

"One could quite audibly hear the happy cheers from the audience—" N. Y. Herald.

"The struggle for life in the Niagara rapids rivals the water scenes of "Way Down East."—N. Y. Commercial.

"We want everyone to enjoy it as much as we did."—N. Y. Tribune.

"A most thrilling melodrama, concocted of everything that has been a sure-fire hit in the past."—N. Y. Times.

Number of Exclusive Features Embodied in Mitchell Camera

Will Aid in Securing Better Photography, Company Claims

A new motion picture camera perfected by George A. Mitchell and being manufactured by the Mitchell Camera Company of Los Angeles, has been introduced on the west coast where a number of the cameras are now in use.

The Mitchell Company, organized about two years ago, has developed a number of exclusive features for a motion picture camera all of which are embodied in the first models which have been sold, and will surely serve as a great aid to the operators in securing better photography and in reducing footage retakes and time required in setting up, focusing and making ready for the filming of a scene.

According to the statement of President H. F. Jeger of the Mitchell Company the product has been withheld from the market in order that additional time and labor-saving devices could be perfected and added to their instrument. A list of the exclusive features may be enumerated as follows: means of focusing without disturbing the position of the lens; matte box carrying stock mattes is made a part of the camera; the four way mattes are inside the camera and operated from the outside, and the iris which may be adjusted to any part of the aperture. The camera has a rising and falling front convenient manner of matting and a positive acting releasing movement. In addition to the above the camera has, according to George A. Mitchell, twelve other distinctive features.

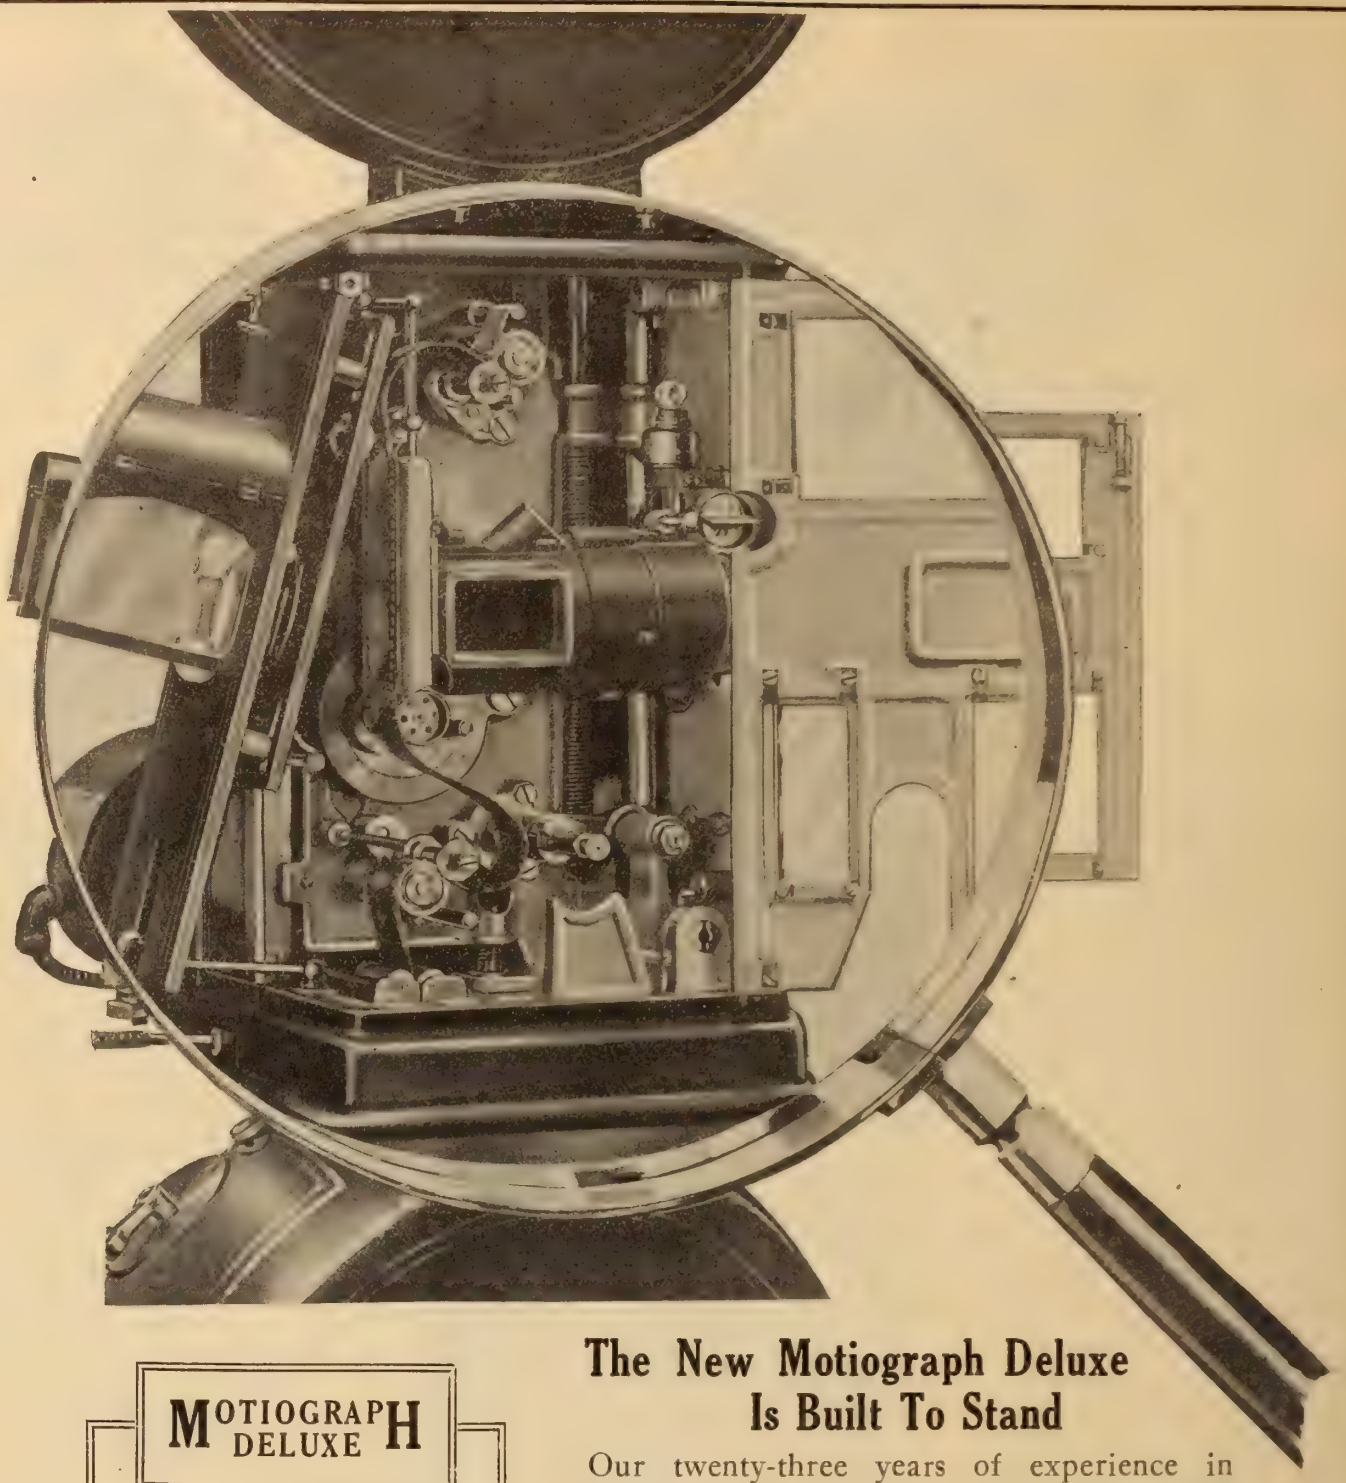
The Mitchell camera, as described by the inventor, is in two parts: the camera box and the base, both of which are cast of aluminum alloy each in one piece. Mounted on the base frame are the iris, four way mattes, matte disc, turret plate and turret. The box is mounted on dovetail guides or tracks which are a part of the base. The box slides by movement of a handle in the rear which operates pinions meshing with racks. A release button in the center of the handle operates a locking mechanism so that in either position the camera box is securely locked in place. The camera box may be instantly shifted from the photographing position to the focusing position or visa versa with one hand.

Focusing is accomplished by shifting the camera to one side by a turn of the handle on the rear of the base. The focusing tube on the door of the camera is brought immediately behind the lens by the above shift. When the focusing is completed, a turn of the handle brings the camera box back directly behind the lens and the focusing tube on the door becomes under. The focusing tube carries a series of magnifiers and the magnified image can be seen on the ground glass of this tube when it is in focusing position back of the lens, or in photographying position back of the finder lens. This manner of changing from focusing to photographying position is claimed to be highly advantageous for there is no movement of the lens. The operation is practically instantaneous and requires only the half turn of the handle.

The Mitchell Camera

The movement of the film is accomplished by a three-cam mechanism. A three-cornered cam moves the pins up and down. A second cam of the same design but smaller operates the pins in and out, a third cam relieves the tension as the pins enter the perforation of the film and applies the tension again as the pins leave the perforation after the film has been advanced. Through a cycle of operation the film is held in contact with the aperture by the face cam as the pins enter the film perforation the pressure is released so that the film may be advanced while it is free. The pressure is again applied as the pins are withdrawn. During the exposure the film is positively held in position, but during the advance of the film there is no tension. The pins fit the perforation thus insuring correct registration. A test was made in the factory by running the camera at high speed eight hours each day for ten days. At the end of that time it was found the glass-hardened cams and cam guides showed practically no wear.

Immediately in front of the shutter and inserted in the base is a revolving circular matte disc which fits within the front plate containing twelve stock mattes and space where a special slide or matte of any size or shape may be inserted. This disc is operated from the outside. Any desired matte may be turned to position in front of the aperture by releasing an index pin. This feature insures all mattes are protected and are ready for immediate use at any instant.



There are also four way mattes which make possible any rectangular opening. All four mattes may be operated together or each may be operated independently. These like the stock mattes are on the inside of the instrument protected from dust, and so placed that there is no danger of reflections from electric lights.

An Iris is pivotally mounted within the camera, and is adjustable to any part of the aperture. The iris may be moved up and down or from one side to the other by the turning of thumb nuts. An automatic shutter is provided for making lap dissolves and fadeouts. The maximum opening of the shutter is one hundred and seventy degrees, and the shutter, an invention of Mitchell's, is made on the planatory gear type mounted with ball bearings. The shutter may be operated to close in either two, four or eight foot exposure of the film. When the shutter closes it trips and applies a brake which may be released by pressing a button on top of the camera. Another feature added to the shutter is that the length of the fadeout may be extended over a longer period of exposure if so desired.

The Mitchell camera has a rising and falling front. By pressing on a knob, a pinion is disengaged from a stop, and by turning this knob the turret revolves slightly giving the equivalent of a fifteen-degree tilt of the tripod without distortion of the image. The front is graduated so that the lens may be brought to center. The turret revolves independently of the mechanism.

In the focusing tube there is a slot in which a slide may be placed immediately in front or behind the ground glass. The object of this is that ground celluloid may be placed on the rear of the glass while the camera is in focusing position. The operator can then cut out any object that is to be matched up in a double

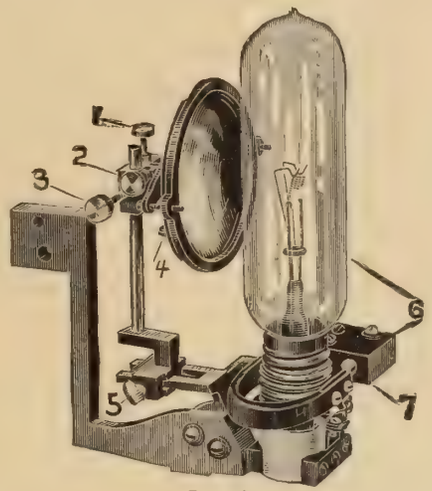
Many Claims Made for New Madza Adapter



Perfected Motsco Now Ready for Motion Picture Projectors

After many months of experimenting and testing, the Monarch Theatre Supply Company Chicago announce that they have perfected a Madza Adapter for motion picture projection, which they call the Motsco.

In perfecting the Motsco, the Monarch Theatre Supply Company, so they state, were aided by the advice and tests of engineers of the Nela Specialties Division of the General Electric Company and by the electrical engineers of the Armour Institute of Chicago. The Motsco Adapter is now ready for the market and is being produced in quantity.

The Improved Madza Adapter consists of arm F (see illustrations) which replaces the arc lamp, two quick change globe holders with flexible plugs, elevated handle H (see cut B) and a reflecting mirror with four fine screw adjustments. The arm of casting F, which is made of the best malleable brass, replaces the arc lamp. With a screw driver the arc lamp can be quickly removed and casting F attached as shown in cut D. When thus attached the globe can be raised or lowered, moved forward or back, swung from one side to the other, the same as when using the carbon arc light.

The advantage of the quick change globe holder is that in case a globe is broken or burns out a change can be immediately made. By handle H the hot globe with holder can be removed and the reserve holder with the new globe instantly inserted. Plugs 7 have slightly tapered points and are flexible and therefore slip in the sockets easily. It is claimed that they do not bind or stick and that they always make a good contact.

Handle H is high on the socket so it will pull out over the lower edge of the lamp house (see cut C). The right angle elevation is rigid and strong and the handle has a direct pull from the sockets. Without this right angle elevation it would be necessary to raise the lamp before the globe holder could be pulled out over the lower edge of the lamp house. To raise the lamp would cause delay and make it necessary to readjust the light after the new globe and attachment was in place. The globe holder has no mica washers or bushings to crumble and wear away, nor connections that might get loose and arc. The manufacturers claim that it is so constructed that a short circuit is impossible.

The value of a reflector does not depend so much on its size, shape or quality of material as it does upon accurate adjustment. When used generally a reflector is a "flood of light" and practically requires no adjustment, but when used for motion picture projection it must condense and focus the light at a definite point. The movement of the reflector one hundredth of an inch too far to one side or the other when magnified on the screen will change the position of the reflected image several inches. Therefore, to get full value of the light it requires more accurate adjustment than focusing the objective lens. The four fine screw adjustments of the improved Motsco Adapter will be greatly appreciated by those who understand how to scientifically "focus the reflector."

There are two ways of using the adapter in the Powers Lamp House; removing the lamp and screwing in its place casting F, using attachments complete as shown in cut A, or by removing the lower carbon holder and using as shown in cut C. Casting F brings the light back farther and if the throw is long and the condensing lens of long focus it may be necessary to remove the lamp and use casting F.

New Movie House for Hendersonville

That the summer slump is over, and better times are coming for hardworking exhibitors, is the assertion of Chester Glenn, who operates the Queen and Rialto theatres, in Hendersonville, N. C.

Mr. Glenn is superintending the tearing down of the Queen, which will be followed by the erection of a beautiful new theatre, seating 500, and costing in the neighborhood of $30,000. The new theatre will be known as the New Queen and will be thoroughly modern and up-to-date in every respect — with ladies' rooms, smoking rooms, and maybe even a day nursery, where tired mother's may check tired babies, and everybody have a good time.

The Rialto, which has been known heretofore as a strictly summer theatre, to accommodate Hendersonville's summer colony, will be kept open while the Queen is being torn down and rebuilt.—Gaddis.

Has Four Houses Under Construction

Joseph Stern, of Newark, N. J., has just broken ground for a new theatre in Belleville, N. J., with a seating capacity of 1,500, and expects to open it on or about April 1. William Lehman, of Newark is the architect.

This is the fourth theatre that Mr. Stern has now under construction. The open on election day. The Tivoli theatre, Orange and Grey streets, Newark, which he expects to open about January 1; the Roosevelt theatre at Bloomfield and Belleville avenues, Newark, and the aforementioned Capitol theatre of Belleville, N. J.

The Capitol theatre will have a lobby of 25-100 feet. It will be finished in marble. The auditorium will seat 1,500 and will be 100 by 127 feet and 34 feet in height, and will be finished in the colonade design with draperies formed in a half circle. There will be a five foot marble wainscoating all around the theatre. The dome in the ceiling will be an oblong shape 40 feet in length by 11 feet in height, and will be illuminated by three color system.

Many Claims for New Mazda Adapted

When the Madza globe is attached to the arc lamp by removing the lower carbon holder the light is brought much nearer the condensing lens.

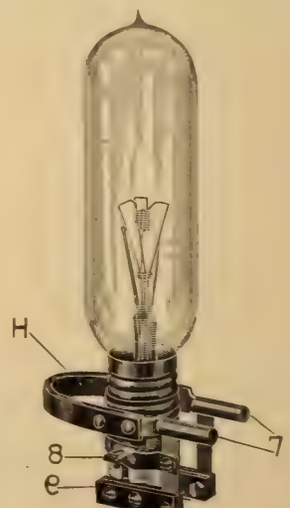
In the Simple machine the condensing lens are inside the lamp house and if the globe is attached to the carbon holder it cannot be removed back far enough to focus the light. Therefore it is necessary to remove the arc lamp and use casting F as shown in cut D. The arc lamp can be removed by taking out one large screw.

In attaching to a Motiograph lamp the lower carbon holder is removed and attached the same as in cut C or remove arc lamp and use casting F. Owing to the offset in the Motiograph lamp base it will be necessary when attaching casting F to use an extended flat washer, which is furnished by the Monarch Theatre Supply Co.

Removing the arc lamp and attaching casting F has a number of advantages among which are: the light is more rigid, there is more room in lamp house, allows the light to come back farther, less number of levers or handles and more simple to operate. Although the arc lamp with some of the levers are removed, however, those left give you every movement you could use for quick and accurate adjustment of the light.

The Motsco Reducer is 12 inches high, 14½ inches long, 6 inches wide and weighs 15 pounds. It is provided with an automatic indicator J and adjustable cut-out B to regulate the voltage and amperage. It reduces the current to 30 volts (using the 900 Watt 30-volt 30-ampere globe) and is as simple to operate as an ordinary rheostat. With the Mazda incandescent lamp it throws a brilliant, white light equal to sixty amperes with the carbon arc light on an alternating current. It produces a bright, clear moving picture up to 100 feet from the screen.

Theatre Building Boom in Troy



Two new motion picture theatres are in course of construction in Troy, N. Y., and plans for a third to cost $300,000 are now being drawn.

The Palace, owned by Battaglia Bros., will be opened on Thanksgiving Day. The house will have an auditorium of 65 by 100 feet. There will be a stage 14 by 35 feet, while the throw from the projection machine to the screen will be in the neighborhood of 90 feet. The theatre will cost about $60,000. The front will be of Indiana limestone and tapestry brick. A Dunham heating and ventilating system will be installed. The name of the house will be outlined with 350 lights. The Battaglias already own two other houses in Troy, the Lansing and the Monroe.

A. and H. Symansky are building a motion picture theatre almost directly across from the City Hall, from plans prepared by M. F. Cummings and Son. The work of excavation has just begun. The house will be completed within ninety days. It will be of brick and steel construction, measuring 45 by 132 feet, the front being of terra cotta. The lobby will be 20 by 17 feet. In many ways, the house will be similar to the Strand in Albany. There will be no boxes, however. The interior will be of tinted plaster.

Particular attention is being paid to the ventilation. A large part of the front of the house will be of glass, permitting the light from without to enter on both the mezzanine and balcony floors. The house will seat about 1,200.

The largest and most expensive house of the trio will be the Strand, plans for which are now being prepared by Thomas W. Lamb. Joseph and Edward Murphy, of Troy, and Frank P. Dolan, of Albany, will finance the enterprise. The house will cost about $300,000. It will be located in the center of the city and will have a capacity of 2,200. Ten months' time will be required to complete the house. It will be equipped with a stage in case the management should desire to book road shows.—GRANT.

THOMAS W. LAMB, Architect
Speckled gray Terra Cotta

NORTON SQUIRES blew into Hartford, Conn., early one evening. He had been traveling since seven that morning. He was tired and wanted amusement. Approaching a fellow salesman in the hotel lobby Squires asked, "Where's a good place to see a picture?"

"I'm a stranger here myself," replied the man, "but there's a fine looking picture house about three blocks down the street. I don't know its name, but you can't miss it."

"What's the picture?"

"I didn't notice," replied the stranger, "but from the looks of the place you're not taking any chances."

Squires found Poli's Capitol Theatre without difficulty. To be sure, there were other picture houses in the locality. But the appearance of the Capitol left him only one choice. He went in.

* * * * * *

A beautiful picture house not only attracts the stranger. Such a building is also a source of pride to a community. People like to have a handsome theatre in their town. And they evidence this liking by patronizing it.

Poli's Capitol Theatre is just such a crowds-attracting house. Note the columns, the frieze, the decorative detail, and the cornice crowned by the heraldic emblem—all of Terra Cotta. The Capitol presents a distinguished appearance, and attracts the passers-by. Faced entirely with speckled gray Terra Cotta, it's a business-getter—a permanent advertisement.

Does an Automatic Curtain Machine Pay in a Small House?

Cost of Maintenance Is Low—Curtain May Be Controlled by Projectionist

(The Technical Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS asked E. J. Vallen, of the E. J. Vallen Electrical Co.: "Does an automatic curtain machine pay in a small house?" His answer is given below and will no doubt prove interesting to owners and managers of small moving picture theatres.)

In connection with the subject of this article the question has been asked: "Why would it pay to install a curtain in a small movie theatre?"

It is a known fact that the day has passed when an exhibitor can maintain a steady attendance by merely showing a picture. A curtain, in the majority of small houses, is even more essential than in the larger ones, even though the price of admission be less. In the eyes of the patrons the admission is higher for the reason that from the time they enter until leaving the only thing greeting their eyes is the picture upon the screen; while in the larger houses during the prologue and at the close of the picture the beautiful paintings and artistic decorations, which few of the smaller houses possess, prove very restful to their eyes.

One of the main reasons why the small house does not install a curtain is the additional cost of maintaining someone to operate it by hand, while by installing one of the Vallen automatic curtain machines for its operation it will give the projectionist absolute control over the curtain at all times. Not only does the Vallen give the projectionist absolute control over the curtain, but also will permit him to control sufficient number of lights, in conjunction with the operation of the curtain, to illuminate the house for ingress and egress of the patrons. All that is necessary for him to do is to operate one switch located in the booth; then he may go about his work, as the machine will take care of the rest. When the curtain has reached a closed position the lights are automatically switched on, being again automatically switched off as the curtain is nearing an open position. This machine has really been designed to meet the requirements of the small house, for after once being installed it requires no attention from a mechanic, only being necessary to be oiled twice a year. It is simple and fool-proof, being absolutely protected by mechanical devices to prevent any harm coming to the machine or curtain, and each machine is guaranteed indefinitely.

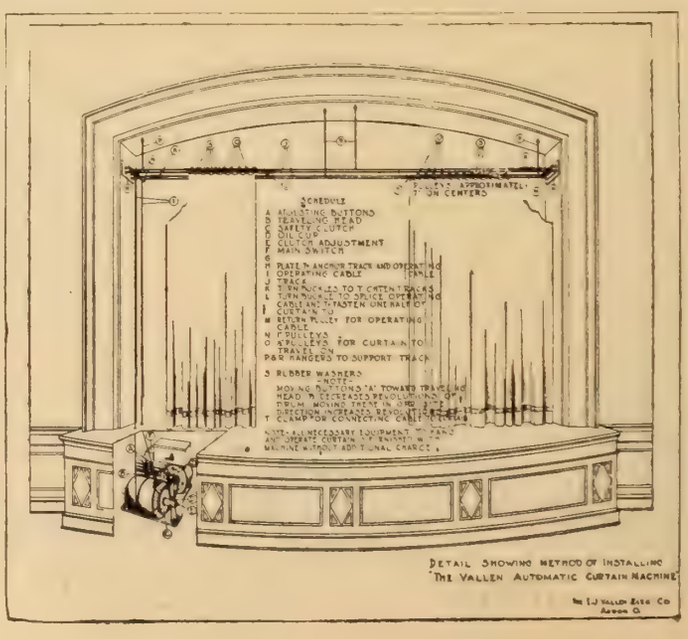
A very important feature is the trifling cost of the electricity consumed by one of the Vallen machines such as used in a small theatre, in that it is almost negligible, being only forty cents per year.

It is not so much the question as to whether one of these machines would pay in a small house as the fact that the silent drama has reached the point where the public demands something other than the picture alone. There must be a start and a finish to the silent drama and how other can it be accomplished than by a curtain, and the Vallen machine makes it possible for even the smallest of exhibitors to install the curtain.

In a recent conversation the writer had with Mr. Casper, of the Rowland & Clark theatres, of Pittsburgh, Mr. Casper stated, "It is not a question of whether we shall install a curtain or not, as the public has answered that. The question is: can the exhibitors afford to install them if they must be operated by hand?" His question was answered by placing one of the Vallen machines in their new Perry theatre in Erie, Pa.

The exhibitor installs a projector, a screen, the seats, because he cannot open his house by omitting any of the three. What is lacking? A curtain to cover that screen, which cannot be operated by any other means than a Vallen machine to complete the artistic effect which has already been afforded by the curtain. The machine insures an even and slow movement as well as a positive stopping of the curtain at the same point at all times.

It prolongs the life of a screen by covering it at night during the cleaning of the house, and it is a known fact that a screen lasts seventy-five per cent longer when a curtain is used due to the protection thus afforded.



The Vallen machine will move a curtain in any desired form and will operate any curtain that can be operated by hand.

Hamilton, Ont., Theatre Opens

Hope Hampton, E. K. Lincoln, Gladys Leslie and Lucy Fox were the screen stars in attendance at the recent opening of the new Pantages theatre in Hamilton, Ont. The house is one of the finest in Canada. Every bit of modern equipment is included in the house. The Sheldons ventilating system is used. This equipment consists of 72 inch Sheldon Multiblade Supply Fans, having a capacity of 70,000 cubic feet of air per minute, operated from 15 horsepower variable speed Westinghouse motors. These fans are arranged for tempering the fresh air delivered into the theatre in the winter. In summer the fans are used for delivering air at the outdoor temperature. Foul air is extracted from the building through two 8-foot diameter Sheldon Multiblade exhaust fans with combined capacity of 70,000 cubic feet per minute. The operator's room, lavatories and smoking rooms are ventilated by separate exhaust fans. George Stroud is manager of the new theatre and Harold Dahn, assistant manager. The house was formally dedicated by Mayor Coppley of Hamilton. Performances are continuous from one to eleven P. M., and the programs run for a week.—Taylor.

Difficulties of Tinting Eliminated by the New Film with Colored Base

A large proportion of the motion picture films which are exhibited at the present time are tinted in order to give some idea of the color of the original scene or to indicate more or less conventionally the conditions under which the scene was taken. It is customary to tint night scenes a deep blue, scenes including fire are tinted red, while those showing interiors of rooms or warm sunlight are frequently tinted yellow. These tints have in general been obtained by immersing the positive print in tanks containing the dye, so that the gelatine of the emulsion took the dye up from the solution.

The tinting of films, however, has always presented difficulties. The varying quality of dyes on the market tended to produce a lack of uniformity between different batches of the film. Films tinted on racks often showed unevenness and streaks, which occur unless great precautions are taken. Streaking is caused by the bleeding of the dye from the gelatine during the period between rinsing after dyeing and the placing of the film on the drying racks. Any drops of water on the surface of the film become more or less saturated with dye and these after drying remain as spots and irregular markings which are very apparent on the screen. The dyes also affect the strength of the gelatine emulsion and under some circumstances have made the gelatine brittle. This brittleness is frequently caused by the addition of acid to the dyeing bath in order to cause it to act more rapidly and evenly. It is not uncommon for film to become so brittle by the use of acid in the dye bath that it is quite unsatisfactory for projection.

After prolonged study of the subject the Eastman Kodak Company has come to the conclusion that the best method of producing tinted film is to provide the tint permanently in the film base itself. The most desirable colors have been selected and have been carefully standardized—red, green, orange, yellow, blue, amber and pink. These colors are determined with great accuracy in the laboratory of the company and their application to the film is controlled by means of specially designed instruments and apparatus. A high degree of uniformity in the tinted base is consequently obtained, while the gelatine remains unaffected, and the natural wearing strength of the film is retained. Thus all difficulty in the use of colored film is removed.

The use of tinted film makes it necessary, of course, to increase the stock of film which is carried and the range of colors which are available is necessarily limited. It would be quite impossible to produce the great variety of tints which the fancy of each producer might make him wish to have and for those who require only small quantities of specially tinted film the older process by means of dyes is still available; if the dyes which are recommended for the purpose are used carefully without the addition of unnecessary acid, excellent results can be obtained. However, for the bulk of the motion pictures produced in the future we have no doubt that film coated upon tinted base will be advantageous both to the producer of the film and also to the exhibitor who will benefit by its wearing qualities.

The Orpheum at Akron, Ohio, the latest addition to the string of houses operated by the Orpheum Dreamland Theatres Co.

Orpheum New Akron House

The Orpheum, at Akron, is the latest addition to the theatres of the Orpheum-Dreamland Theatres Co., which operates a string of theatres in Ohio. The Orpheum has a seating capacity of 985. The lobby is constructed entirely of Alabama marble with marble floors and stairways.

The ventilating is of the thermostatic type, self-adjusting to all conditions and temperature. The buillding is of steel and concrete construction. One feature of the construction of the Orpheum is that the entrance is at right angles to the position of the screen. The lobby is at the rear and leads to the main thoroughfare of Akron.

The house has been playing to exceptional business since it opened. It owns a Goldwyn Franchise.

"Better Pictures" are largely dependent on adequate, steady illumination that will not fail at critical moments because of derangement of the apparatus.

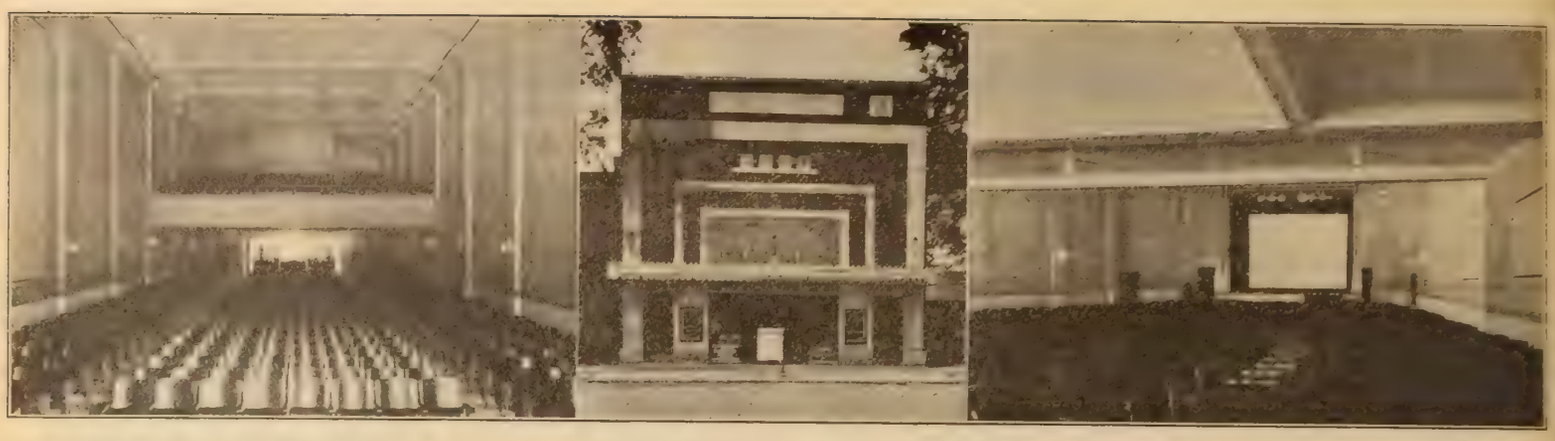
Operating Advantages of GE Compensarcs

1. Steady strong arc.
2. Easily operates two arcs the same time for change-over.
3. Quiet arc strike and quick settle-down.
4. Self regulating arc voltage.
5. Current stays at set value.
6. Current easily raised and lowered.
7. Cannot be damaged by short circuit.
8. Fading made easy.
9. Not affected by changes in current conditions.
10. Quiet in operation.

GE Compensarcs Furnish Dependable Light

The GE Compensarc automatically protects itself from burn-out or the blowing of fuses where the operator changes the projection from one lamp to the other. In fact, there will be no burnout or blowing of fuses even if the generator be short circuited by leaving the projection carbons indefinitely together.

Fading, also, is made easy by the GE Compensarc because the capacity of the set is sufficient to carry the two projection areas in series during the change over period. The arc on the second machine can thus be started and adjusted before the end of the first reel. One reel fades into the next without interruption or flicker.



Compensarcs are safe, easy to operate, efficient, economical and reliable—GE offices or distributors everywhere for prompt deliveries and service

The Colonial Theatre at Tarboro, N. C. A Splendid Type of Small Town House

Although Having But a Capacity of 650, the Building of McCabe and Ruffin Is Model in Every Respect

The Colonial Theatre, recently opened at Tarboro, N. C., is a splendid type of small town theatre. Although said to be the oldest town in the state and only having a population of 7,000, its theatre is modern in every respect and plays close up to release dates on the best pictures.

The Colonial is of brick and concrete construction, the front ornamented with tile, with borders and columns of stone, and a handsome marquee. The main floor and balcony accommodate 650 people. The house is cooled by Typhoon fans. The indirect lighting plan is used, with electric torchieres along the walls, which are hand-painted and decorated. The screen is a Minusa gold-fibre. The projection room is a model, built of iron and asbestos, 12 ft. x 15 ft., with fireproof doors. The whole theatre is steam heated.

McCabe & Ruffin, owners and managers of the Colonial, have been in the picture business for eight years. Benton & Benton, of Raleigh, N. C., were architects; D. H. Harris of Tarboro, building and heating contractor.—Hutson.

exposure. This is for quick and more or less rough work. The more accurate way is to use a piece of negative which may be inserted in the slide immediately in front of the ground glass, the mask may then be made of any opaque material. A special punch is provided which accurately cuts a frame of negative to fit the slide. The negative may also be used as a matte by cutting out a part of the scene to be double exposed painting the remainder black and then slipping it into the matte disc and revolving it to the aperture, or placed in a slot in the aperture, which is practically contrast matting. Any thin opaque material may be used. In this method of matting you are always focusing through the actual matte the picture is to be photographed through thus reducing possibility of error.

The turret of the camera has places for four lenses. An index pin conveniently placed locks the turret when the lens comes into position. The regular equipment of the camera includes a one and five-eighths inch, a two inch, and a three-inch lens with matched finder lenses.

The magazines are cast of aluminum alloy. A small spool of the same size as that furnished by manufacturers of film is used in the magazines. With this size it is not necessary to rewind the film or tear out the center. The magazines are made to accommodate a four hundred foot roll of film.

The throat of the magazine is composed of three velvet-covered rollers in contact. The two outside rollers are on spring bearings which maintain the contact constantly and at an even pressure. The film being drawn out of the feed magazine causes the rollers to revolve, this insures the film being delivered to the take-up magazine and eliminates buckling in the camera. Because of the small spool a high speed take up has been found most desirable. By using the high speed and a loose belt there is slipping from the start and the last fifty feet of film will take up as easily as the first few feet. The pressure on the crank does not get heavier as the end of the roll is reached.

Each camera is provided with a veeder film counter built in the camera. This may be set back.

As a part of the regular equipment of the camera there is an arm and upright which may be mounted on the base of the camera to be used when requirements demand a special class of matting. To this sun shades may be applied.

Introduce Mitchell Tripod

The Mitchell Company is also introducing their new tripod, which in appearance is very similar to other tripods on the market, but differs greatly in construction. The shoes are of cast aluminum, with points of hardened steel screwed in and locked with nuts. Inside the shoe and at an angle of forty-five degrees is a second point, which will catch in case the tripod leg slips, thus preventing a bad accident. The legs are of maple, reenforced with metal at the top, and a steel plate on either side of the wood.

A third set in the leg has a forty-five degree taper pressed in the end which fits in a recess machined in the base. This recess has a hole in the center, and a bolt passes through this, through the base, and into the other section of the leg. A lock nut maintains a constant tension at all times. In reality the legs are on taper bearings, and tightening the nut draws the bearing central as well as tightens it. A quick release is provided so the camera may be turned quickly. This release has a left-hand thread. which tightens when you unscrew the tripod head and loosens should any one tighten the head too tight.

A double-quick operating clamp is mounted between the legs, right and left-hand screws actuated by large aluminum knobs tighten the clamps on each leg. A compensator in the clamp assures that both clamps will operate evenly no matter what the irregularity of the legs. This clamp is operated with one hand and a half turn is sufficient to release or clamp the leg. A standard Kuffel and Esser instrument thread is provided on which to screw the tripod head. The tripod head is made of aluminum alloy and is adjustable throughout. It does not depend on the fit of the worm and worm wheel for steadiness, but has two discs in bearings which are pressed together with spiral springs. This gives steadiness directly in the bearings. The panorama device is of a distinct type. The worm wheel with bronze bushing in the center fits on a hardened steel spindle threaded at its lower end. Two lock washers fit onto this by which the wear in the bearing may be adjusted. The worm wheel has no bearing on its periphery so a dent will not interfere with the working of the panorama. The weight of the camera is carried on the top outer edge of the worm wheel which rests on a ring of like diameter cast in the tripod base, thereby affording added rigidity. The worm is adjustable endways by a threaded bushing and locknut. The worm may also be brought into closer mesh with the worm wheel by removing a sheet of Laminum which is two-thousandths of an inch in thickness.

Indiana Gets Improved Simplex Service

The past summer marked a new era of a broader service to the owners of Simplex projectors and other equipment in the State of Indiana when the Exhibitors' Supply Company, Inc., took possession of their new spacious quarters at 128 West Ohio street, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Exhibitors' Supply Company, Inc., are exclusive authorized distributors of Exterior of the new Indianapolis supply store of the Exhibitors Supply Co.

Simplex projectors in Indiana and also distribute exclusively both in Indiana and the surrounding territory, transverters, Minusa Gold Fibre screens, Peerless arc controls. National carbons are handled, and whether one requires a box of thumb tacks or a complete equipment the order will be given the same prompt and cheerful attention, this being part of Esco service.

No expense has been spared to make this new equipment center the most complete and up to date one of its kind in the middle west. One of the outstanding feaures is the repair department, which has been equipped with the very latest type of Simplex tools and accessories.

This department is under the personal supervision of E. S. Scobey who spent considerable time at the Simplex factory, New York, studying the construction and repairing of the Simplex mechanisms under the factory experts.

"This assures all our Simplex users of receiving factory service at all times and a service based on actual knowledge," stated R. E. Gumm, branch manager. Gumm has been with the Exhibitors' Supply Company, Inc., as branch manager for a number of years and the service he renders the exhibitors in his territory has largely been responsible for the wonderful growth of the Indianapolis office.

M. B. Rains and S. M. Houts act as sales representatives respectively. Their experience puts them in a position to advise and assist exhibitors in every phase of their business.

Manager Gumm extends a standing invitation to all those identified with the industry to visit his new quarters where he will personally show the visitors around and explain in detail about any equipment they might be interested in.

The personnel of the Exhibitors Indianapolis branch as shown in the picture, from left to right, is as follows.

R. E. Gumm, manager; S. M. Houts, salesman; M. B. Rains, salesman; E. C. Scobey, repair department; W. A. Washburn, shipping clerk; D. K. Smith, assistant manager; Miss C. McHugh, bookkeeper; Miss C. M. Stierle, stenographer; Jim Stanley, porter.

O. F. Spahr Returns from Brief Trip

O. F. Spahr, manager of the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., has just returned from a short visit to Detroit, Cleveland and Akron.

In Detroit he visited the Motiograph distributor, G. C. Brady of the Exhibitors Supply Co. and several of the leading theatres that are running the new Motiograph DeLuxe.

Mr. Spahr says he was highly pleased with the results the machines are giving in Detroit.

In Akron the Enterprise executive saw Mr. Simmons of the Allen Theatre and found him to be very enthusiastic over the new machine.

Mr. Simmons has been a constant user of the Motiograph Projectors for the past five years and he says that in the last two years he has not spent over twenty dollars on repairs.

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS motion picture operator who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the operating-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in first-class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother operators and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Dear Sir:

Enclosed you will find a drawing of the way I make my change over. I have been intending to send it in for some time, and upon reading Mr. A. F. G.'s piece in the projection department, I was prompted to do so, and if you think that any one can be benefited by your publishing it, it will certainly please me if you use it.

Referring to Mr. A. F. G.'s letter about going after things that projectionists want, we being 1,800 strong, I would like to suggest that we make a move to have all pictures sent out on 2,000 ft. reels, and do away with the 1,000 ft. reels. If this plan was ever carried out it would mean much to the projectionist, as well as the film companies, as only half as many leaders to a picture would be required. In other ways it has advantages over the 1,000 ft. reel.

Hoping to hear further on this subject, I am

Yours truly,

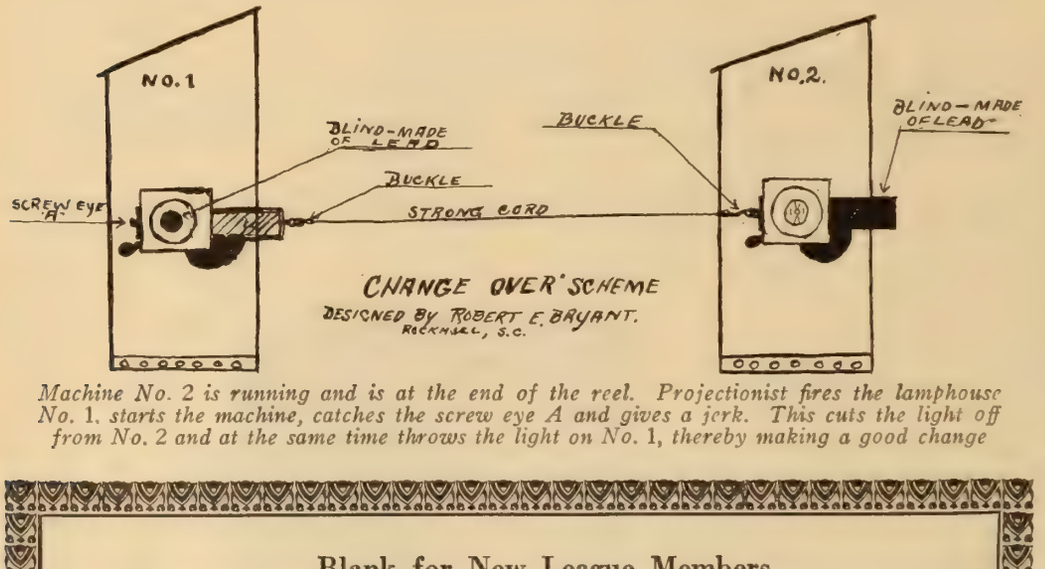
Dear Editor—It has been some time since I have written to you, but I have to now as I want some advice. Before the afternoon show every day I find that my lenses are out of focus. I am sure no one gets in to touch them, so the only thing I can figure out is that they must be loose. I have remedied that, but still find my lenses out of focus. What do you th can be the matter?



Am enclosing a photograph for the a tion. I am watching your departme every week for news.

Yours for better projection,

They keep the picture on the screen—that is, there is no fade-out or loss of brilliancy when seen from various angles. Any theatre-goer knows that side seats are never as good as center ones—MAJOR-LITE SCREEN PAINTS abolish this prejudice.

They also eliminate eyestrain caused by flareback from metallic screen or other reflective surfaces, distribute light evenly, giving both high lights and shadows their proper emphasis—and make every detail distinct.

Remade Bank Now Modern Theatre

A novelty in moving picture construction has been accomplished in Springfield, Ill., where the old First National Bank Building, a three-story structure at Sixth and Washington streets, one of the most prominent corners of the city, has been remade into a modern photoplay house. It is called the New Strand theatre and boasts every convenience to be found in a newly erected theatre. Gus and Louis Kerasotes, two exhibitors of long standing in Springfield, are responsible for the new motion picture house, which recently was opened to capacity crowds, with "No Woman Knows," a Universal-Jewel production as the featured picture.

In remodelling the old bank building, little was left of the former structure, except the outside walls. A skeleton steel frame supporting steel girders was put inside of the old building, on new foundations. The old walls were anchored to this, much after the manner of modern steel building structure. The entire inner floors and partitions then were removed, so the auditorium could be formed.

The outside appearance of the building was done over, the front being done in polychrome terra cotta, and the entrance and foyer lined with white marble. The foyer is decorated in ivory and gold. The interior of the theatre is done in old gold, gold leaf, ivory and polychrome.

A $15,000 pipe organ, a typhoon ventilating system, and up-to-date lobbies and rest rooms also are included in the modern equipment of the new Kerasotes house. The New Strand is considered one of the best theatres in Springfield. Its capacity is 800.

Coming—
Big Story on Construction Material

Reports Big Business

R. D. Thrash of Dallas, Texas, distributor of the new Motiograph DeLuxe for the Southwest territory, is reporting excellent business. He has just taken an order for twenty-two new Motiograph DeLuxe Projectors to equip eleven theatres. He states that the new equipment is receiving considerable attention in that territory and he expects to have a big run on these machines for the balance of this year.

Work on Montclair House

A $400,000 theatre, store and office building is being erected at Bloomfield avenue and Seymour street, Montclair, N. J., by H. H. Wellenbrink. The house will have a seating capacity of 2350. It is expected to be completed by about March 1.

New Motiograph De Luxe Goes Over Big

In a recent interview with O. F. Spahr, the manager of the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., he tells us that in all his career he has never yet seen a product go over so quickly and so successfully in such a brief period as their new machine.

Mr. Spahr says it's more like a dream than anything else. He is actually amazed at the way the Exhibitors have received the announcement of the new machine.

The announcement was made in the Motion Picture News that the new Motiograph DeLuxe was on the market, and instantly—in only a few days—it went over in a phenomenal way, he states.

Many of the largest and finest theatres in America have already installed the new Motiograph DeLuxe and hundreds of others are fast falling in line.

Proposed Park theatre building, to be erected at Stamford, Conn., by Rappawan Square Corp. Plans call for a $432,000 building to seat 1800. Drawn by Eugene De Rosa

Working on Strand, Schenectady

Rapid progress is being made in the construction of the Strand theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., which is being erected for Max Spiegel and his associates and which, costing in the neighborhood of $250,000, will be completed by next April. M. Shapiro & Son, of New York City, well known in motion picture theatre construction, has the contract. The work of construction got under way on September 15, and the walls of the first floor have now been completed. The building will be about 100 feet by 170 feet in dimensions, with the main entrance through an arcade which will also serve Proctor's Arcade theatre adjoining.

The theatre will be of brick and steel construction. It will be about 40 feet high to the parapets and 70 feet to the peak of the roof. The house will have a seating capacity of approximately 3,000, the interior being a stadium effect quite similar to the Strands of Brooklyn and Plainfield, N. J.

There will be a row of loges in the rear of the orchestra circle and in front of the so-called balcony effect. There will also be one orchestra box at either side of the colonnade.

The tableau platform will be 20 feet by 30 feet, the orchestra being located in a pit directly in front.—GRANT.

Million Dollar Theatre for Boston

Plans are being made for the construction of a one million dollar theatre and office building on Washington and Province streets, Boston, for Gordon & Shoolman. The building will be built of brick, stone and concrete and will be twelve stories high. Mowl & Rand, of Boston, are the architects.

Start Stamford Theatre Project

Start on a $432,000 theatre building project was made several weeks ago when a plot was purchased in Stamford, Conn. by C. William Wurster and E. O. Gordon of New York City. Buildings on the purchased premises are being removed and a theatre and 3-story business building will be erected across a 117-foot front.

Eugene De Rosa of New York is the architect and Jardin & Co. are contractors. A fireproof house seating 1800 will be erected of steel, concrete, brick and terra cotta. The main floor will have 1300 opera chairs, and balcony 500. Ventilation and heating systems will be of an effective type, and comfort room facilities will be of the best.

The theatre, which will be called the Park, will be located at South Street and Boston Post Road. The project is being handled by the Rippowam Square Corporation. The entire structure is scheduled to be completed in six months.

Shea's Opera House, Jamestown, N. Y.

Dear Editor—As an old member of the N. A. M. L., No. 888, I wish to inform you of my change of address. Previously it was Bradford, Pa., at present it is 618 Murray avenue, Jamestown, N. Y.

For the past two years while operating in this house I worked for the keeping of films in good condition but the exchanges seem to offer no co-operation at all. I mailed film clippings bearing punch marks, paper stickers and scratch marks and misframes to the exchange managers in order to call their attention to the conditions, but it all seemed useless.

An operator who damages a film in any respect is not fit to be placed in a blacksmith's shop, let alone a projection room. He is a detriment to the trade. For the love of me I can't understand how managers can tolerate work showing punch marks, scratch marks and misframes. He is either sleeping or is so ignorant that he doesn't know the difference.

Boys, you can bank on this, that a manager who demands results upon the screen is making you a skilful projectionist, and is willing to pay well for the results he obtains.

What seems to be the matter with the projection department of this paper? I haven't seen any important items or drawing for some time? Why not start a series of questions on some technical points? Yours for success,

STEPHEN S. KARKULA,

Fine! Shoot in your questions. We are making arrangements for a number of technical articles with drawings, which will be of interest to projectionists.—Tech. Ed.

Dear Ed:

I sure do want to see your discussions column be a success. All projectionists have some little ideas by which they improve their work, and I am sure they can help others by passing them along.

I have a few time savers which I will send you later as I am going on a vacation which the manager has given me. Am enclosing an application blank.

Yours truly,

Music and the Picture

Dr. Strauss to Tour States

Famous Composer Arrives in New York; First Visit Since 1904

RICHARD STRAUSS recently arrived in America for his first visit since 1904 and naturally the music critics rushed to his hotel immediately for an interview.

Many of the questions which were flung at him, contained such musical meaning as can be found in an earnest discussion of the quality of German beer and others were so high brow as to incite a discourse on the innermost meaning of Dr. Strauss' tone poems. Besides answering the critic's questions Dr. Strauss also talked at some length about himself, his friend, Hans von Buelow, of his own favorite works, etc.

Of the programmatic material which accompanies his "Death and Transfiguration" Dr. Strauss had this to tell: That he did not, as has been often reported, compose the music and then tack a literary turn upon it. He had himself written a scenario of the music's intentions before all else. Then he had composed according to the scenario. When the music was complete his friend, Alexander Ritter had been inspired to incorporate the scenario in a poem.

"Every work I have written," he declared soberly, curtly, "is out of my own life. I have never composed anything which is not subjective."

The so-called favorite questions were sprinkled into the conversation at every opportunity. Dr. Strauss answered them all without hesitation and in as good spirit as he were hearing them for the first time.

"My favorite composer? Mozart. It is hard to choose—but Mozart. Remember what Rossini said when they asked him the same question: 'Beethoven is the greatest, but Mozart is the only one!'

"The greatest of my own songs? 'Traum durch die Daemmerung.' I wrote it in five minutes. My wife had asked me to come out for a walk. I was waiting for her to change her dress. I lingered at the piano. The theme came to me 'Taum durch die Daemmerung.'

"My tone poems? Which is the greatest of these? My favorite? I can only choose those which I consider most characteristic, which I love the most because they have meant the most to me, express my life most dearly. 'Zarathustra,' 'Don Quixote' and the 'Domestica' symphony. These three I would choose."

Asked of his newer works, Dr. Strauss divulged a fact which his own native land has yet to learn. It is that he has just finished sketching a new ballet, "Schlagobers"—which, in good Viennese, means no more nor less than "Whipped Cream." He has written his own libretto to it; has set its two scenes in the kitchen and restaurant of a Viennese pastry shop, where children come to feast and celebrate their first religious confirmation.

He spoke, too, of his new opera, "Intermezzo," one of the two acts of which he has just completed. "It is an opera in a novel style, written for an orchestra of only forty-five pieces, on a tragic-comic episode from my own life. I wrote it this past summer in the Austrian Alps. I tried to express in it what I feel all art should express in these days of omnipresent tragedy—a lighter, a merrier mood."

It must be remembered that Dr. Strauss's other new opera, "Ariadne auf Naxos," which has yet to be heard in America, is scored for an even smaller orchestra of only thirty-five pieces, and for an intimate type of theatre.

Of art abroad, post-war and post-impressionistic, Dr. Strauss could be got to speak only charilty.

"There is just as much art being produced as ever in Europe—but I have not been able to detect the direction of it. I fear, in fact, that it has none. No, I have no faith in the so-called national schools. Inevitably, there are national influences in the music of France, Russia and modern Italy. But self-conscious schools? Was there a Beethoven school? There can be no such things as schools in music. Only talents.

"Talent is not necessarily genius. A genius must have talent. One cannot demand the converse to be true. Von Buelow used to say that Schumann began as a genius and ended as a talent."

Dr. Strauss is to be in America for two months, he said. During that time he will conduct forty-two concerts, travelling as far West as Kansas City.

Franklin's Music Predictions Being Realized

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, is making good his promise made a few years ago in a story published in Motion Picture News that it would not be long before the best directors and soloists in the land would be appearing in the picture theatres of the country.

For the past several weeks Creatore has been conducting the big symphony orchestra at the Hippodrome with unusual success and enthusiastic reception from audiences. In a few weeks Victor Herbert is coming to Buffalo as guest conductor of the orchestra.

Every week some well known soloist appears on the Hippodrome stage and the musical part of the bill has come to be one of the most entertaining units of the program. In his story a few years ago Mr. Franklin also mentioned the possibility of such soloists as Mischa Elman, Kreisler, McCormack and others appearing in the larger picture theatres. It will be interesting to see how long a period elapses before this prediction comes true. It really was realized several months ago when the late David Bispham appeared at the Capitol theatre, New York.

Mr. Herbert, following his current engagements at the New York and Brooklyn Mark Strand theatres and his recent appearance at the Rialto theatre, Washington, will go to Buffalo for his Hippodrome engagement. Elaborate preparations are being made for his visit.

Creatore is now on a leave of absence from the Hippodrome, taking a short tour with his band. In the interim Harry Wallace, formerly conductor of Shea's Criterion orchestra, is wielding the baton at the Hippodrome.

Goldman Makes Capital of St. Louis Opera Season

WILLIAM Goldman, managing director of the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, has recently demonstrated how the musical events of a city may be capitalized by the motion picture house.

St. Louis has a municipal open-air amphitheatre which is the cynosure of all musical eyes, because during the summer months the city produces a series of light operas which has attracted favorable comment from critics throughout America. Ask a St. Louisan about his city and the first thing he will mention is the Municipal Opera with its 10,000 seats, its cast of 150 prominent singers and chorus, its stage of 325 feet in width and natural trees, etc.

So anything that smacks or savors of the Municipal Opera is due for success and public favor. Hundreds and hundreds of columns of newspaper criticism and comment has been afforded it, and Goldman perceived a possibility of cashing in on its tremendous advertising values.

Accordingly, with the aid of Stage Director Charles Dahl and Cast Director Grant Kimbel, Goldman planned a general revue of the season of opera which concluded the previous week.

The Mayor of St. Louis, Henry W. Kiel, was invited and responded to the invitation of addressing the opening night audience, large advertisements were used in the four daily newspapers, and the crowds came.

This year the operas last eight weeks, having changed each week. Among those presented were Sari, Chimes of Normandy, Fra Diavolo, Chocolate Soldier, Pirates of Penzance, San Toy, Beggar Student, and The Fortune Tellers. So with a large cast of singers, many of whom had actually participated in the municipal affair, a short revue of the most popular melodies from each opera was offered the Missouri patrons. With each opera revue, scenes were changed, the entire production lasting 45 minutes. The applause which followed each selection was sufficient proof of its success.

The tremendous approval on the part of the audience during the fourth night of the showing was so sincere in its length and staunchness, that Goldman ordered the entire revue to be resung. It went over big.

Twenty-Fifth Maine Musical Festival Held

THE Silver Jubilee (twenty-fifth annual) Maine Music Festival opened in Bangor on October 6 and continued in that city October 7 and 8, and in Portland, October 10, 11 and 12 (five concerts in each city), under William Rogers Chapman, director-in-chief, who this season completed twenty-five years of distinguished service in behalf of the musical and cultural life of Maine. He was assisted by about fifty men from the New York Philharmonic Society and a chorus of 600 voices, in each city. The soloists were Rosa Fonselle, prima donna soprano, Metropolitan Opera Company; Charles Marshall, tenor, Chicago Opera Association; Helen Yorke, soprano; Phoebe Crosby, soprano; Mildred Bryars, contralto; Francesco Bocca-Fusco, tenor; Fernando Guarneri, baritone; Ernest J. Hill, tenor; Raymond Otis Hunter, baritone; Attlilio Marchetti, oboe. The concerts were the same in each city.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Screen Snapshots" No. 12
(Federated)

HERE is a one-reel that will fill in nicely any program. It is not only interesting from the point of view of screen personalities, but is well photographed and captioned.

First to appear is Vivian Martin, who comes down the steps of her residence and hurriedly enters a taxi, with orders to drive to the theatre. It appears she is late. Stopped by the traffic policeman, she explains and is given a right of way. Taxi man takes advantage of her frame of mind, and a nap while her show is on; tells Miss Martin she did not dismiss him, which costs her $20.

Then comes Norma Talmadge, at her home, where Harrison Ford and Mae Murray are among guests for a week end. Shots are all exteriors. Norma builds a camp fire and proves she is something of a cook.

Follows Constance Binney playing opposite Wallace Reid, the scenes being those actually being taken for a picture, in the studio.

Wesley Barry visits Babe Ruth and both look pleased about it, while at the end we find Charles Murray, famed Mack Sennett comedian, playing solitaire. His facial expressions are characteristic, especially when he tries to cheat himself, and looks to see if anyone is looking. —LILLIAN R. GALE.

"Texas of the Mounted"
(Texas Guinan Productions — State Rights)

TEXAS GUINAN, the female Bill Hart, dons the uniform of the Royal Northwest Mounted in this two-reeler, and it can be said without fear of contradiction that she does full justice with the role of the intrepid minion of the law. Miss Guinan is not the cringing, clinging-ivy type of woman. Such a type would make her appear miscast. It is in the representation of the she-woman that she scores and "Texas of the Mounted" permits her to carry herself with her customary abandon. If the story is of a familiar design, its obviousness will be forgotten in the bristling incident which marks the story from beginning to end.

The star plays a dual role, that of twin brother and sister. As the brother she is killed by a vengeful outlaw, and to exact full payment for his death she dons his uniform determined to get her man. The Royal Mounted never fail to get their men. Never! She surprises him in a he-man fight with another member of the Mounted and comes to the rescue with the ferocity of a tigress. Miss Guinan is so earnest, so sincere, in her characterization that she always excites interest. It is a picture which moves with creditable tempo and flashes a line of action indicating a healthy sample of punch. And against this action are the backgrounds of the San Jacinto mountains—surely an ideal location for the expression of rugged drama. Certainly the offering is interesting enough to find a good spot on most any program.—Length 2 reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Saving Sister Susie"
(Christie Comedy—Two Reels—Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

HERE is another Christie which will afford satisfactory entertainment as delicious comedy relief on any program. It is a "situation comedy," but this does not mean that its action is not fast-moving. It is simply rapid-fire comedy action arising from a reasonably sensible story. The players are Dorothy Devore, Earl Rodney, Eugenie Forde and Katherine Lewis.

The story concerns two sisters, the younger of whom is sufficiently attractive to steal the other's admirers. To stop this pirating, mother and elder sister conceive the idea of putting the baby vamp into rompers, leaving her a baby, but no longer a vamp. The scheme works well, but the girl is as attractive as a child as she was as a young lady, and the young man in the case is willing to play with dolls in order to be near her. Her real age is finally discovered, but when the couple try the elopement act, the minister orders the child sent back to her mother. This idea is developed so that a number of good laughs result, thanks to the gags and the method with which Dorothy Devore puts them over.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Torchy a la Cart"
(Produced by Master Films—Released Through Educational Exchanges—Two Reels)

SMILES or possibly snickers will be the result of this Torchy comedy, but seldom a burst of spontaneous laughter. It is a bit tame from start to finish, and despite the efforts of Johnny Hines, never becomes more than mildly amusing. Johnny, freed from his office duties, takes charge of a lunch room—one of the cart variety. The gags fall thick and fast, but there is no excuse for them in the story. Potatoes are mashed by the stump of a wooden leg. And the sub-titles pun, sometimes pathetically, in an effort to be funny. Shifting to a higher plane of society, we see Torchy attending a party. A mouse enters his trousers leg and he does the shimmy. This gag is as old as the shimmy itself. For a final thrill an escaped convict enters the home of the girl in the case and is finally apprehended by Torchy. This later sequence has some original and funny gags.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Capturing Lions by Aeroplane"
(Major Allen's Wild Animal Pictures-Pathe)

MAJOR JACK ALLEN has bobbed up again with another of his thrilling adventures—this time accomplishing the very novel and daring feat of capturing the king of the jungle from an aeroplane. The major plants his reason for capturing the lion by showing the animal as a sheep-killer. Thus the spectator is disarmed for championing the cause of the jungle beast. The camera caught some excellent shots of the lion with no danger attached for the photographer and explorer insofar as the beast is concerned.

It is exceptionally novel, the method of capture. A chain noose is attached to the axle under the wheels and when the plane descends within the proper distance the lion is caught and the chains released from the plane. The animal is prevented from getting away by anchors secured to the end of the chains. This is a real novelty with plenty of the Allen punch registering throughout. It may not be quite as thrilling or dangerous as capturing wild animals in the customary fashion, but its distinct novelty will make it appreciated everywhere. —Length 1 reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"Combatting the Elements"
(Kineto Review—One Reel—Released through National Exchanges)

CHARLES URBAN has managed to collect some vivid storm scenes which give this Kineto Review an unusual touch of realism. There is shown, to start with, the Great Lakes as they appear when in the grip of a storm, and then is seen Chicago, helpless before the gale. Other scenes include a building burning in zero weather, with the water freezing as it falls upon the flames; the trans-Atlantic liners as they appear after a snowy crossing; and some flood and cyclone scenes, showing the wake of destruction they leave behind them. A sunset on the harbor—the clearing after the storm—concludes the picture.—MATTHEW A TAYLOR.

"Breaking Into Broadway"
(Harold Lloyd Reissue—Two Reels—Pathe Exchanges, Inc.)

THAT Harold Lloyd was always a comedian of the highest calibre is proven by the reception accorded this re-issue at the Rialto in New York. It is, to anyone in the smallest way familiar with pictures, not a new production, but this did not affect its welcome. Perhaps its gags are not as funny or as continuous as in this star's latest productions, but they are funny. In fact this comedy is the equal of many present-day comedies.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"THE RIGHT WAY"
(Producers Security-State Rights)

Tremendously Effective as Drama, Lesson and Entertainment

ONCE in a while a picture reaches the screen which surges with such stark realities and moves with such force and vigor and carrying a deep lesson that it seems destined to find a place in the memory long after the day of presentation has been forgotten. Such a picture is "The Right Way." Thomas Mott Osborne, the ex-warden of two prisons, who, true to his ideals, started a crusade toward prison reform which had for its purpose the moulding of character and giving the prisoners a chance to find themselves, has conceived a story which is rich in stark realism, but which palpitates with the truth—although this truth hurts, the way it is unfolded. He is carrying on his ideals here in a manner which will be appreciated by everyone fortunate enough to see this remarkable slice of life.

"The Right Way" carries just enough fiction to give it a dramatic dressing. For the most part it is the bold, untarnished truth. But aside from the significant appeal to social reform which it sounds, there is a crash of dramatic conflict, an array of clashing action which takes a powerful grip upon the emotions of the spectator. You see how criminals are made here through lack of proper understanding. A young boy of the slums is sent to reform school because he accidentally broke a window of a cheap shop. His spirit is broken. He graduates a finished, hardened derelict of society, and takes up evil associates. It isn't long before he is railroaded to prison through an attempted burglary, and the harsh, cruel treatment is unfolded before your eyes.

Osborne tells the truth here. His scenes and details are the real thing. And for contrast he shows a youngster of the rich, who, possessing a weak character, finds himself involved in forgery and forced to pay the penalty despite the influence of wealth and society. Mr. Osborne shows these men buffeted about, scorned, insulted, trailed and punished. And the deep lesson of humanity burns with a powerful glow. When the humanitarian who succeeds the brutal warden establishes his new code, the honor system, the spectator catches the inspiration, the new spirit, that is felt by the prisoners. The picture doesn't pause for details or for the purpose of emphasizing any point. It proceeds straight to its climax which shows an innocent man expiring in the electric chair because the governor had refused to entertain the idea that the Mutual Welfare League could sponsor his innocence. This is a heavy touch, although softened by a romantic ending. But the author has not minced matters. He has kept to realities.

The shock of the condemned man paying the supreme penalty will encourage society to think a little deeper in regard to its outcasts. The picture is remarkably well acted and its scenes are mostly authentic. Basil Dickey, the scenarist, has kept the scenes compact with action and incident, with all the necessary touches sharply emphasized. The picture has something to say and says it in a manner which cannot be disputed. Truth, reality and humanity are stamped all over it.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Now and then a picture comes to town that is able to command more than passing interest, but in "The Right Way" the patrons of the ———— theatre will be able to enjoy what is considered one of the film sensations of the year. This photoplay is a master drama of the times and sort of smashes picture traditions through its authenticity and originality. It shows some remarkably photographed views of actual life behind prison walls and unfolds a story stark in its realism and always pulsing with tense drama.

Thomas Mott Osborne, the noted prison reformer, and ex-warden of two prisons, has fashioned a story here which is certainly a plea to look upon prisoners not so much as criminals but as victims of misfortune. He offers a narrative which will stimulate public interest toward the good work of bettering the unfortunates who are outcasts of society. One sees slum life in all its entirety. And giving balance to this idea is the manner in which criminals are encouraged through not giving them the proper encouragement when their characters are being molded. The picture is finely staged and acted.

PROGRAM READER

A great story of love and prison life. A picture that is as big as life itself. A film touch of nature that makes the whole world kin. A picture once seen, never forgotten. A real photodrama of throbbing humanities written by the eminent Thomas Mott Osborne, who as ex-warden of two prisons, started a crusade toward prison reform which led to a better treatment and understanding of the convicts. His story is part fiction, but mostly truth, and he draws life here just as he has experienced it in his duty as warden. It is a stark, grim drama of shadows and sunshine. You experience the sensations, the bleak monotony of life behind prison walls. And you become a real humanitarian. See "The Right Way." At the ———— theatre next ————.

"ENCHANTMENT"
(Cosmopolitan-Paramount)

Undeniably a Good Audience Picture

MARION DAVIES and Robert Vignola have turned out a good audience picture in "Enchantment." The star herself carries an interesting part in an interesting and, it is hardly necessary to add, a fascinating manner, while Mr. Vignola has made a picturesque and artistic production elaborately and liberally spiced with sets and scenes certain to be appealing.

The theme is very modern—another advantage. Miss Davies plays a flapper—a big city flapper whose faults are all very recognizable. She is conceited; has an exaggerated idea of her own importance and charms; underestimates the worth of the older generation; is shallow minded and vain. Care is taken, however, not to take all sympathy away from the character. She is an innocuous flapper, far more silly than really bad. Her father conceives an idea to cure her of flapperish tendencies. He persuades a handsome actor to flirt with her, break her heart, and then breeze out of her life. Thus will she be left humble and no longer sure of her irresistible power. Even if the ending is foreseen from this point on, the interest is still the same. One knows as soon as the paternal scheme is announced, that the actor will himself fall in love.

The development of this romance gives an opportunity to satirize modern youth in the titles, and permits Miss Davies to give a splendid characterization of a blase, bored-to-death sub-deb, which will be counted by many as the best work of her career. All the scenes are laid in fashionable restaurants, tea-rooms and studios and are delightful to the eye. Here follows a sequence which is a credit to Mr. Vignola's direction. It is a society pageant of "The Sleeping Beauty," with the flapper and the actor playing the leading roles. It is little needed dramatically, but it has been so beautifully staged that the production is enhanced by it, and the story is allowed to slip out of sight unnoticed. When the pageant sequence is over, the Twentieth Century Cleopatra has been broken down, but the heart-breaker is himself in love. Repentant, he confesses the entire scheme, and the scene which ensues is tense and dramatic, with Miss Davies giving a highly creditable performance.

One point which should not be overlooked is the fact that the star brings before the camera an assortment of gowns and coats and hats which will set every feminine eye in the audience shining with delight. Another asset is the titles. An audience will be delighted by them. Forrest Stanley supports Miss Davies in a highly satisfactory manner, and Tom Lewis, as the father, supplys excellent comedy relief.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Marion Davies, one of the most beautiful screen stars of today, whose work in such pictures as "Buried Treasure" has raised her to the highest pinnacle of screen fame, will be seen in her latest picture, "Enchantment," at the ———— theatre on ————. Miss Davies, because of her beauty and charm, has become one of the most famous and popular of all picture actresses.

"Enchantment," which was directed by Robert Vignola, who has been at the helm in the making of previous successes starring Marion Davies, is a story of the modern society girl, adapted from a novel by Frank R. Adams. The characterization is remarkably human, and few pictures have so accurately described the society girl of today. She is spoiled and egotistical, but underneath she is lovable and charming. How she is "cured" and made to take a more serious view of life, is admirably shown in the development of the story.

"Enchantment" will be the feature at the ———— for ———— days beginning ————. The name of Marion Davies in front of the ———— in the past has always meant a crowded and well pleased house, and history is expected to repeat itself.

PROGRAM READER

Beautiful Marion Davies, one of picturedom's favorites, has added another prize to her collection. This time it is a prize picture, a worthy successor of "Buried Treasure." It is entitled "Enchantment" and it will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————.

The ———— theatre offers this feature to its patrons, confident that they will pronounce it one of the most attractive productions ever made by this star. It is a story of the modern society girl who is as egotistical and spoiled as Cleopatra. Everyone, she imagines, is deeply in love with her. She accepts compliments and invitations as if they were her due. But eventually she is cured. How and why makes up the bulk of this interesting story—one which holds the interest throughout every moment. Dramatically strong, the production is also pictorially beautiful. Director Robert Vignola, one of the screen's most capable artists, has seen to this. The story is adapted from a novel by Frank R. Adams.

CATCH LINES

Irresistible Marion Davies in a story of the modern girl. How a flapper was taught to give up her flapping. How a girl was made to act naturally, and cease her pretty affectations.

A glorious, human story of modern youth—its faults and its virtues. Marion Davies, as beautiful as ever, in a story of how a flapper was cured.

"FIGHTIN' MAD"
(Desmond-Metro)

First Rate Entertainment in This Lively Western

TO show that a Western can be simple in outline and yet carry enough elements to provide first rate entertainment one need only turn to "Fightin' Mad," written by H. H. Van Loan and starring William Desmond. The author has hit upon two likely ideas for his stories—one of which can be related to the late war in regard to a topical song of the time—"How you goin' to keep 'em down on the farm, once they have seen Paree?" and the other exploiting a modern treatment of the "Three Musketeers." It is a real, snappy Western which sparkles with humor, which carries a kick like an army mule, and which contains an exceedingly adventurous line of action. While it develops rather slowly, it soon picks up momentum and carries on like an army tank.

Desmond, who has an exceptionally colorful role, has lately returned from Paris. The old farm palls on him and he bids the "governor" good-bye—to make his way where there is adventure lurking around the corner. He rides into a border camp and applies for a job as a ranger. The humor comes into expression when he is forced to prove himself every inch a man. Mind you, he doesn't want to fight. He is too easy going to get into trouble, but somehow is unable to avoid it. So he punishes three of the border police—giving them a good sample of his fistic prowess. These fights are there with a punch. It happens that he meets the girl again whose hat he had rescued when it blew away as she was riding via the observation coach on a westbound train. And here the picture picks up its action.

The three buddies become so inseparable that they adopt the "three musketeer" idea which is "all for one, and one for all." They ride into Mexico and rescue the heroine from a horde of greasers, the hero accomplishing his job almost single-handed. This is the point of fast riding, and quicker shooting, and plenty of excitement and suspense. Mr. Van Loan has kept his story moving with sufficient incident, taking care of all the necessary elements. He has left out triangle situations and sneaking villains, though the principal Mexican is something of a crook. The main point is the author has made a rattling good story from the simplest kind of material and has kept the spectator's interest throughout. There is plenty of good incident, comedy, romance, pathos and action. Especially action. The scenes are mostly exteriors and the picture indicates it didn't cost much to make. Which is further proof that a photoplay does not have to cost a vast sum to entertain. Joseph J. Franz' direction is first rate and the acting right up to the handle. Your crowd won't be disappointed here.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A fast-moving, exciting adventure story is "Fightin' Mad," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring William Desmond. Written by the talented H. H. Van Loan especially for the star, one feels safe in saying that it brings out the actor's talent to a marked degree. The story revolves around a healthy, athletic chap who had returned to the farm after seeing Paris while in the army. He couldn't become satisfied. He craved adventure, and found it by joining the border police.

Quiet, unassuming, no one took him for a fighter. And they teased him—did these rough and ready ranchmen. And how he could fight! Before he had finished they learned to respect his fistic prowess. He could get so fightin' mad that he forgot when to stop administering punishment. And the picture is packed with punches and lively adventure and a fine flavor of romance. In Desmond's company are players of recognized talent. The picture is well staged, carries sufficient action and humor, and is said to be one of the best Westerns ever released.

PROGRAM READER

There was no getting away from it, he couldn't settle down on the farm after seeing Paris. That's what the war did for him. And he was such a lively young fellow that he simply had to find excitement. He didn't seek trouble. It just naturally sought him. But could he defend himself? Oh boy! He had as handy a pair of "dukes" as ever possessed by a man. He could be fightin' mad, and when his temper was up, well, he just naturally sailed in with both hands—and feet. He beat the boys in camp and they made him their leader. And before he finishd he beat up a good share of the Mexican army. See William Desmond in the exciting, fast-moving picture, "Fightin' Mad," at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill Desmond is the star of this picture and he certainly gives the spectator his money's worth in the shape of adventure. Tell them that this popular star has an ideal role for the expression of his talent. Tell them that Desmond is one of the most accomplished actors on the screen—an actor who would have made a good prizefighter had he elected to go into the ring. Bring forth that the picture was written especially for the star by the talented H. H. Van Loan. Describe it as a lively, adventurous, romantic melodrama in which there is exciting action every minute. Call attention to the fact that the picture is one of the best westerns ever released.

"POSSESSION"
(Robertson-Cole)

Likely to Get Over With Its Rapid Action

HERE is a French picture produced by Louis Mercanton, who has been called the "Griffith" of Europe, the feature being adapted from Sir Anthony Hope's novel, "Phroso." It has been renamed "Possession" for the American market, and it is likely to get over because of its fast action and the extremely colorful backgrounds, it being mostly an exterior picture. The creaking hinges of the story have been silenced through the display of hectic action, the scenes comprising a series of encounters between an intrepid Englishman and a band of native Greeks and Turks. If there is any fault to be found it must rest with the editing and titling. There is a confusion about the assembling of the sequences, and the action dashes in headlong flight paying little attention to the demands of continuity.

At times one wonders what it is all about so profuse are the scenes. And most of them are based upon rescuing the heroine, not once, but, seemingly, many times. The hero is thwarted time and again, but always bobs up to adjust matters. The villain is turned back in similar fashion, but he manages to keep alive until the finish. Were the picture re-edited and titled and with some extraneous details and repetition of scenes eliminated it would carry a better story interest and certainly more suspense. It is a good deal like a serial as it stands at present. However, there is no gainsaying the fact that it speaks volumes in regard to the element of action. And thrill after thrill punctuates the drama which coupled with the marvelously rich backgrounds (the picture has been taken in locations adjacent to the South of France and in waters of Southern Europe) and the considerable amount of local color offers some compensation for the lack of sequence.

The plot revolves around a certain adventurous Englishman who purchases an island in the Aegean Sea and takes possession. The natives are desirous for a native ruler, and the Britisher accedes to their whims. He has incidentally, capitulated to the charms of the princess and the action details his attempt to prevent her being captured by the Turks. The Englishman is involved in one intrigue after another. Secret hiding places, battles along cliffs, secret code messages, rebellion and every conceivable ingredient and implement is employed to provide a colorful tale. Certainly the picture has its appeal although it doesn't spell any real drama. For one thing it is a novelty. The cast is capable except for lapses when they are inclined to over-act. The director's chief talent seems to be a flair for steady and hectic action, coupled with a technique for photographic display.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An adventure story of colorful action and romance is "Possession," adapted from Sir Anthony Hope's novel, "Phroso," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. This production is the work of Louis Mercanton, a famous director of France and it contains a celebrated cast of European players, among them being Reginald Owen, Paul Capellani, Max Maxudian, Malvina Longfellow and others. The plot takes on the nature of an international intrigue which concerns the ruling of an island in the Aegean Sea.

Lord Wheatley buys the island and journeys there to take possession but he finds that the natives are loath to let it pass out of their hands. They insist that Phroso preside as the ruler. The conflict revolves around the attempt of a Turkish pasha to win the fair Phroso so that he can gain title to the island. And the adventure presents a dramatic and thrilling line of action between the intrepid Englishman and the Turks. The picture is marked for its colorful atmosphere and backgrounds.

PROGRAM READER

An exciting and adventurous story of turmoil and strife, flavored with a fine vein of romance, and punctuated with colorful backgrounds and acted by a superior cast of Europe's most celebrated screen players, is "Possession," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The picture, because of its wealth of adventure and its exciting sequences, affords the spectator moments of the keenest suspense. The action switches from England to a locality in the Aegean Sea, and is marked for its picturesque scenery and colorful atmosphere. The plot concerns a net of intrigue which is flavored with romance. The considerable amount of local color gives it a note of reality.

"WHITE OAK"
(Famous Players)

Ordinary Western With Star as Nick Carter Hero

IT will be a warm admirer of the one and only Bill Hart, Young America excepted, who can enthuse over "White Oak." Calling a spade a spade and not mincing words, this picture is of the vintage of ten years ago in every department—story, plot, style of construction, titles and detail of production.

"White Oak" is an "Indian" picture, with plot complications galore, in which Bill is a genuine "Nick Carter" hero, killing off red skins and bad whites by the score. The story, which Mr. Hart announces is from his own pen, is obvious, episodic and lacking in suspense, unless scenes showing Indians attacking a wagon train, are considered sufficient to produce this valuable pictorial quality.

Mr. Hart plays the role of a frontier gambler of the '50's who falls in love and is accepted but later becomes convinced that his sweetheart is unfaithful, since he sees her embraced by another, her brother. Later the action jumps to the Indian attack with the star to the rescue, fighting the whole band of red skins single handed.

When this job is completed and the villain has got his, the brother part of the plot becomes known and the picture is over. There is a dog who also helps Bill in his heroics, carrying the message of the Indian attack from the girl to Bill, who by the way is in jail on the charge of murder he thinks the girl committed.

Some of Mr. Hart's support is not of the best; extras in the ensemble scenes and notably Alexander Gaden, who plays the very villainous heavy of the story. Vola Vale is the star's leading woman. She plays her role very well indeed. The girl has wholesome good looks and personality and was a fine type for the pioneer maiden of the period.—Length, 5 reels. —J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Oak Miller, a gamblin' man.....William S. Hart
Barbara, his sweetheart.....Vola Vale
Mark Granger, a crook.....Alexander Gaden
Harry, Barbara's brother.....Robert Walker
Elipnalet Moss, a banker.....Bert Sprotte
Rose Miller, Oak's sister.....Helen Holly
Long Knife, an Indian chief.....Chief Standing Bear

Story by William S. Hart.
Scenario by Bennett Musson.
Camera work by Joe August.
Directed by Lambert Hillyer.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Scenes on a river typifying the first stages of the journey westward the pioneers had to make in the days of gold, have been exceptionally well done in "White Oak," William S. Hart's latest Paramount picture, which comes to the ———— theatre next ————.

The quaint old steamer, resurrected from goodness knows where, was absolutely true to the period and the costumes were equally faithful to the times and types.

Exciting scenes include a dive into the river by several of the leading people including Mr. Hart who swam in icy water and rescued his sister from death. The story was written by Mr. Hart and directed by Lambert Hillyer, with Bennett Musson as scenarist. The photography is the work of Joe August, A. S. C. and the production is a thrilling story of the days when the California pioneers crossed the deserts and mountains, braving untold dangers en route.

As Oak Miller, a gambler with a heart of gold, Mr. Hart is at his best and Vola Vale is a very demure and sweet leading woman.

PROGRAM READER

There are several novel and unusual situations in "White Oak," William S. Hart's new Paramount picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. One of the most thrilling and splendidly portrayed scenes is the reproduction of the famous "Circle of Death." An entire tribe of Indians in full war regalia attack the biggest and richest wagon train out of Independence, Mo., in the year 1852. The train has been betrayed to the Indians by four white traitors who are with the emigrants. A revengeful old chieftain swoops down in ambush with his entire fighting strength. The battle scenes are charged with danger and thrills, as well as excitement. This is a marvelous reproduction of the historical Circle of Death in all its realism and the actual action as well as the photography was difficult to get.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill as an old time Western with the star in the sort of role that made him famous. For prologue the always pleasing male quartette numbers with western stage setting is suggested. Lobby displays of the same type are within easy reach of the average exhibitor. Make a play for the patronage of Young America. They will eat it up.

CATCH LINES

The one and only Bill Hart in one of his old time roles, the square dealing gambler of the pioneer days—a story of Indians, Western bad men and romance and action.

He is your favorite in one of his old time, two gun man roles. He licks three white men and a whole band of Indians and then gets the girl of his choice. It is an action story of the pioneer days when men were brave and women courageous.

"THE SWAMP"
(Robertson-Cole)

Hayakawa Writes a Good Heart Interest Story for Himself

SESSUE HAYAKAWA has not been so hard up for stories that he has had to write one for himself. Most of his recent efforts have provided satisfactory entertainment. Whether he conceived his latest opus for the sake of showing his versatility or because he wanted to emphasize a note of heart interest is beside the point. The main thing is he has furnished a satisfying little drama in which he has written a good part for himself. It is a picture which tugs at the heart and builds a good share of sympathy. And Hayakawa is supreme in the delineation of pathetic Oriental characters. His moods of expression are such that he appears to better advantage in stories which call upon his store of pathos, than in those subjects which present him as wily villains.

The idea here is well established and, for the most part, rings genuine. It offers the star as a Chinese vender whose kindliness to a young girl-mother in distress and her little son places him in a sympathetic light. In bringing order out of the complications the author-actor has stressed a note of drama which is quite effective. There is a flash of coincidence which takes away some of the forceful moments and the outcome is easily obvious. But for its flaws—minor ones at that—the story has its compensations in the heart interest element and the sincere performance of the star. The heroine in question has married unwisely and her erstwhile sweetheart appears to stress the unhappy touch.

The Chinaman through his fortune-telling occupation is able to unearth the villainy of the husband who has deserted his wife. The little boy is employed to rifle the pocket-books of the clients from underneath the table during the seances. It is through him that he discovers the true conditions concerning the lad's mother. The Oriental makes money from his scheme and starts the mother on the road to fortune and happiness. And to show that Hayakawa appreciates the barrier of East and West, he departs to claim his Chinese bride. The author and director have injected a satisfactory sample of atmosphere with realistic touches being brought forth in good relief. The star has had heavier roles, but none which have carried such good audience appeal with the possible exception of "The First Born." Bessie Love makes a wistfully pathetic heroine, while Frankie Lee is the tiny juvenile.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Wang.....Sessue Hayakawa
Mary.....Bessie Love
Norma.....Janice Wilson
Buster.....Frankie Lee
Mrs. Biddle.....Lillian Leighton
Spencer Wellington.....Harland Tucker
Johnie Rand.....Ralph McCullough

By Sessue Hayakawa.
Scenario by J. Grubb Alexander.
Directed by Colin Campbell.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An interesting little picture with a note of heart appeal strongly emphasized is "The Swamp," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Sessue Hayakawa. The star wrote the story and appears to distinct advantage in a role which enables him to show his talent for feeling genuine humanities. He plays the part of a Chinese fortune-teller who, through employing a little newsboy as the medium, is able to discover the secrets of his clients. This he does by placing the boy beneath the table where he is able to rifl the pocketbooks of the patrons. Wang, the Chinaman, learns of the misfortunes which the lad has encountered and discovers that the mother of the child is in poverty and distress.

Through his table manipuplations he unearths the villainy of her husband and restores the girl-mother to her erstwhile sweetheart. The picture tugs at the heart and offers a good sample of drama aside from its sympathetic anpeal. Prominent in the cast is Bessie Love. The picture carries first rate detail and atmosphere and is always well acted.

PROGRAM READER

Do you believe in fortune-tellers? Do you believe that they can penetrate the secrets of your innermost lives? Sessue Hayakawa is able to discover a deep, dark secret through employing a little boy to rifle the pocketbooks of his clients while he is placed under the table out of sight. The eminent Japanese actor has a fine story here—one which he wrote himself and which builds a compelling note of heart interest and appeal. It is the sort of picture which will conquer the hearts of the most hardened spectators. Hayakawa gives a superb performance. The picture contains rich drama, effective incident and is appropriately staged. Bessie Love is in the cast. "The Swamp" will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Bring forth that Sessue Hayakawa wrote this story as well as starring in it. Bring forth that it carries the same rich heart interest and appeal as "The First Born." Since Hayakawa wrote it your patrons need have no fear that he will use the idea of the barrier of East and West. He simply exploits a simple little heart-drama in which he has emphasized the necessary elements to arouse the sympathy of the audience. Play up that the picture is rich in its incident and drama. And play up Bessie Love as the leading lady. This actress, who has been a star, has a following. So play her name up prominently. The usual scheme of exploiting the Jap star's pictures may be employed here. An Oriental prologue and appropriate atmosphere for your lobby will be correct.

CATCH LINES

See Sessue Hayakawa in "The Swamp," a picture of tense drama and appealing heart interest. Written by the eminent Japanese star. Don't miss it.

"THE ROUGH DIAMOND"
(Fox)

Rapid-Fire Melo-Comedy With Comic Opera Trimmings

TOM MIX does not believe in following orthodox channels with his offerings. One never knows what to expect from the Fox star. He may adapt himself to the regulation Westren formula or he may open the throttle and breeze through at high speed in some crazy-quilt pattern that entertains because it defies the conventions. "The Rough Diamond" presents him in a topsy-turvy story which has a melodramatic foundation, but which depends upon a fairly new line of gags and stunts and wild action for its entertainment values. There is very little of Western gunplay in it, and the horsemanship in which Mix excels is more or less relegated to the background.

The picture starts off with plenty of comedy spirit showing the star in the role of a "good-for-nothing." He is a sort of country character who relies upon picturesque figures of speech or some stunt for the interest of the spectator. Along comes a touring car loaded with a president of a South American republic, his aide, and very charming daughter, and Mix rescues the girl's hat. The tourist is searching for a fearless and daring man who will be offered the job of generalissimo of the army. The next sequence shows Mix with a trick donkey being engaged by a circus. It is a one horse show and the star puts it on the bum by disobeying orders. This incident offers some exhilirating comedy, particularly when Mix reveals himself as a bareback rider, adorned with a ballet skirt and wearing a wig. When he shows his fearless attitude with the circus proprietor, the Spanish president offers him the army job. And Mix steals the trick horse from the circus and beats it across country.

It is all good burlesque, though you cannot take it seriously once the comic opera finale is introduced. This particular line of action offers the star in a series of incidents in which he is constantly rescuing the heroine. He is "shanghaied" aboard a vessel sailing for the South American port, but he bobs up with plenty of courage which takes form in the shape of lively stunts. Once in the new country, he becomes identified as "General Motors," and his uniform is a knock-out. The concluding scenes present him leading the army and a continuation of the rescue act. It smacks very much here of a burlesque upon the Richard Harding Davis stories, with Mix galloping around the lot and cutting up didoes in the customary fashion. The star holds the spotlight throughout, there being scarcely a scene in which he is not dominant. Ralph Spence's titles are for the most part satisfactory, and the picture is certain to get over everywhere. Surely it keeps moving.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Tom Mix, the daring and dashing Fox star, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Rough Diamond," written by the cowboy in conjunction with Edward Sedgwick, the director of the production. The star who has been doing the unexpected in his recent offerings, comes forward here with a sample of clever burlesque. It is a different type of story which combines romance, adventure, thrills, and suspense throughout an unadulterated line of action.

Mix plays the part of a good-natured adventurer who is responsive to any and all lines of action. With his trick horse he develops into a circus performer and before he knows it is shanghaied and carried to a South American republic. The powers of this nation are eager to discover a man who combines courage with diplomacy, but principally they want a figure who is unafraid. Mix fits into the role and gives the spectator a treat in wholesome and exciting adventure. His company includes Eva Novak.

PROGRAM READER

He was open to any kind of suggestion which spelled adventure. Perhaps that is why he joined the circus. And he persisted in doing things just as he pleased. The result was he broke up the circus. But in the audience was the girl whose hat he had rescued. And her father was the president of a South American republic. It happened that he wanted a man to take charge of his army—a man unafraid of danger. Did Tom Mix respond? You just bet he did. There was no adventure too thrilling for him. He literally jumped at the chance to prove his courage. And he took up his task with fearless abandon. See "The Rough Diamond," an exciting picture at the ———— theatre next ————. Eva Novak is in the cast.

SUGGESTIONS

Since Tom Mix is furnishing his following with screen stories of marked adventure you would do well to state that "The Rough Diamond" is perfectly cut out for him. Bring forth that it offers an exciting line of adventure and action—that it travels on high most of the time. Bring out that Tom Mix has discarded his two guns and uses his brain and fists here—also his trick horse. And make mention that it is a different type of story. Play up Eva Novak as his leading lady, and tell further that the picture is on a par with "A Broadway Round Up," and "The Road Demon." Bill it as an adventurous melodrama which tingles with action and suspense.

CATCH LINES

A thrilling adventure which travels on high throughout is "The Rough Diamond," which brings the irrepressible Tom Mix as star. At the ———— theatre next ————.

"THE MILLIONAIRE"
(Universal)

Fair Mystery Melodrama With Rawlinson as Star

HERBERT RAWLINSON has been knocking about quite a bit on the screen. From stellar heights to leads, and character parts, he has once more climbed to the top rung of the ladder and appears as Universal's newest star. The first vehicle awarded him is a fairly interesting mystery melodrama, though with the star's flair for comedy expression it strikes us that a deeper humorous note should have been exploited. The very idea of a wage slave becoming suddenly rich has its comic possibilities. But these are never established and the onlooker is forced to watch a mysterious line of action concentrated around an eccentric benefactor who has shuffled off leaving his heir in the dark concerning the conduct of himself.

The early scenes disclose Rawlinson having an argument with his employer and getting fired as a result. Then he comes into sudden wealth because the benefactor had once loved the youth's mother. The deceased has indicated that he was a marked man, and that it is up to the heir to protect himself at all hazards. And to accomplish this he is forced to take up his abode in a mysterious house which carries secret panels, doors and the customary serial trimmings and trappings. He hires a valet who is to double for himself, but wherever he goes he is a marked man. There is even a mercenary woman introduced whose purpose is to intrigue the young Croesus into matrimony. The picture follows a single track line of adventure, though there is some suspense in wondering just how the central figure will adjust himself to the various and "in-tri-kut" situations. He puts on a fierce make-up which discloses an ugly set of chin whiskers, and attempts to beard the lion in his den—the lion being the assasin of the old man. Just why they have this grudge against him is not brought forth, nor the reason for their enmity against the deceased.

The picture shows evidences of being hastily assembled, for it jumps from scene to scene with little continuity. And the love interest is negligible. The picture is saved by a hectic finish which shows the millionaire successful in battle against overwhelming odds. He has discovered the whereabouts of the gang and jumps down from a skylight, surprising them. In his descent he accidentally turns on a fire hose. And the water aids him in defending himself until the police arrive. The watery episode could really be dispensed with, since it serves no object other than giving the set and the actors a thorough wetting. So much for realism. The story does not ring true. Had it developed a comedy angle it would sound a higher note. Such an idea as exploited here could be made into a lively satire.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Millionaire" is the title of the latest Universal picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Herbert Rawlinson. This picture presents the popular player in a role which carries plenty of appeal. He appears as Jack Norman, a wage-slave when the story opens. When he is fired by his employer he suddenly comes into a rich inheritance under the provision that he protect himself from the men who had killed his benefactor. He attempts to get at the bottom of matters but finds himself confronted by hidden dangers which seemingly lurk everywhere.

The picture develops an exciting and often humorous line of adventure and after many complications in which the hero punishes his enemies and disperses them, the story ends. The acting of the star is always conspicuous for its poise and abandon, and giving excellent support are Lillian Rich, Fred Vroom, Doris Pawn and Bert Roach. Jack Conway directed from a story by Hulbert Footner.

PROGRAM READER

How would you like to be a millionaire? Just suppose that you were slaving away in a store or factory on little or nothing a week. Suppose that you had a run-in with your employer and he fired you or told you in politer terms—that your services were no longer desired. Then when you found yourself down and out, suppose word reached you that you had inherited a million dollars, but that in inheriting it your life was in danger. Would you wish yourself back in your former plight? Or would you guard your precious wealth and health? See "The Millionaire," the Herbert Rawlinson picture which comes to the ———— next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Make the most of the fact that Herbert Rawlinson returns as a star after many seasons as leading man. He will be remembered by most of your patrons. He appeared opposite Priscilla Dean in "Conflict." And play him up and use stills. Develop a following for him. Play up that the picture is a breezy comedy-melodrama which travels with plenty of speed and dash. Play up that the pretty Lillian Rich is in the cast as leading woman. Get out a snappy line of teasers and catch lines. Play it up as a crackling mystery melodrama which carries sure-fire qualities. Bring out that it offers fine entertainment. But your main argument is Rawlinson.

"ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE"
(Goldwyn)

A Delightful Farce Comedy That Should Please Them All

"ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE" will not lose friends for any exhibitors. It may not be talked about as the best comedy of the year, but it will give entertainment to each and every one who sees it. It is clean, wholesome, fast-moving, filled with hokum of the better sort, and aided greatly by its titles. The picture might easily have been made comedy drama, or even heavier, but the producers have elected that it should be developed with such rollicking fun that it cannot be taken seriously, although the early scenes are never farcical.

The title is a little hard to justify, for the story deals with a swift romance and marriage of a happy couple. But a former flame of the groom, a typical movie type of vampire, has appeared on the scene and planted seeds of doubt in the mind of the happy bride. This bride is a stubborn, pert and assertive little thing, and the honeymoon never takes place. Of course both are very unhappy, and both have sufficient pride to keep themselves so. May Collins plays the girl and she has golden opportunities here. She weeps all over the house, torments her poor father, and wears a heavy veil, but her pride forbids her going back to her husband. She hits upon the idea of disguising herself and vamping him into humility. Dressed as every good vamp should be dressed, she lures him to her Egyptian apartment, practising her arts in such an amateurish and grotesque fashion that it makes good hokum. When her husband discovers her identity he gives a true opinion of the "movie type" of vamp. The titles poke fun at her.

There is no praise too lavish for Miss Collins. Besides being a comedienne of ability, she might well be ranked among the foremost of the screen beauties in face and figure. She has a distinct type of beauty and a charm of personality seldom so gracefully combined. In "All's Fair in Love" she will make many admirers and she deserves them all. Fortunately the picture allows her to wear many and varied gowns. All this may appear to neglect Richard Dix, who deserves no such treatment. His work as the leading man is excellent, his self-restraint being especially admirable. To complete this capable Goldwyn cast are Raymond Hatton, Marcia Manon and Stuart Holmes. Director E. Mason Hopper has made the story (which is not startling in its originality) thoroughly refreshing and interesting by introducing novel bits of business. The only trouble with the titles is that they sometimes descend to farce when the action is on a higher plane. But they are clever.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"All's Fair in Love," the Goldwyn feature, which will be the main attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— has an all-star cast which truly lives up to its name. In the leading male role is seen Richard Dix, the manly young actor who won further prominence by his work in "Dangerous Curve Ahead." Playing the leading feminine role is May Collins. Miss Collins is a born comedienne and has the reputation of being one of the prettiest actresses on the screen.

"All's Fair in Love," as adapted from a stage play by Thompson Buchanan, entitled "The Bridal Path." It is built for entertainment, and it lives up to its promise. It is a light comedy, filled with new and engaging situations, and has been received wherever shown as one of the most fascinating and refreshing light comedies to be produced in many a month. As one may guess from its title, it deals with the love affairs of several young people which do not become untangled until the final moment. In addition of being original, its comedy has the added advantage of being clean and wholesome.

In addition to Mr. Dix and Miss Collins this cast includes Raymond Hatton, Stuart Holmes and Marcia Manon. The picture was directed by E. Mason Hopper.

PROGRAM READER

Do men like to be vamped? We mean vamped in the snaky, slithering way which the movie stars have introduced? Natalie, youthful bride who had quarreled with her husband, thought they did, so she tried it. The result was not all that she had hoped. Instead of "falling" her husband enjoyed it immensely, and when he saw through her disguise, his joy was unconfined.

Co-starred in this picture, which is entitled "All's Fair in Love," are Richard Dix (he was the young husband in "Dangerous Curve Ahead") and May Collins (she has been voted one of the prettiest actresses of the screen). Others in the cast are Stuart Holmes and Raymond Hatton—you know them both. The picture was adapted from a stage play by Thomas Buchanan, entitled "The Bridal Path." E. Mason Hopper directed. "All's Fair in Love" will be the feature attraction at the ———— for ———— days beginning ————. It is clean, wholesome, refreshing comedy—the very kind you have always enjoyed seeing.

SUGGESTIONS

You have a cast here which, while it includes names of no topnotchers, numbers among it at least four well known and undoubtedly popular players. They are Richard Dix (if you have played "Dangerous Curve Ahead" do not forget his part in it), May Collins, Stuart Paton, and Raymond Hatton. The picture has the advantage of being a matrimonial comedy which is perfectly clean and inoffensive. Bill it as such, and promise sure-fire entertainment which does not bother about carrying home any lessons or morals. They will not be disappointed.

"BRING HIM IN"
(Vitagraph)

Fair Picture Based Upon Northwest Mounted Formula

YOU can toss the Northwest Mounted formula about, puncture it full of holes and present it very much worn and punished, but it always bobs up to demand attention and usually succeeds. There may not be much variation in the general outline, but the fact that the central figure, who is either the hunted figure or the red-coat, is sufficiently dramatic, which coupled with appropriate exteriors and a snappy line of action makes the story dependable is sufficient to lend an appeal. H. H. Van Loan may not have worked along original lines here, but he has contributed a lively story which contains a satisfactory brand of action and suspense, and has further heightened it with a first rate sample of mystery, though this element does not always ring true.

The strong feature about the picture is its action which keeps moving from the introductory scene to the conclusion. However, the fact that two main themes are presented tends to befuddle the spectator. One is a murder mystery which revolves around a surgeon residing in Calgary, the other, a theme characteristic of the Northwest Mounted, in which the red-coat must get his man through love of duty, despite the fact that the offender has saved his life. The spectator who is a stickler for the truth may object to the idea that a doctor would escape from a crime of which he is innocent and take up his abode far from civilization. This idea more or less dissolves into the Northwest Mounted pattern. But when the open country is reached, the picture takes on an appeal through its virile action, its rugged backgrounds and the sympathetic note found in the attempt of the surgeon to escape the clutches of the law.

One sees plenty of shooting and riding with several rescue incidents finding a place. Earle Williams is the doctor and plays the part with acceptable spirit and abandon. He assisted in the direction with Robert Ensminger, and here his work is not so commendable. He has relied too much upon unimportant details to the elimination of salient episodes. The doctor saves the Mounted's life on two occasions and when the latter is wounded he carries him back to the post and surrenders. Eventually the mystery is cleared up and the innocent man allowed his freedom. There is a faint love note introduced, but it never intrudes to any extent. The picture will satisfy those who do not expect too much in the shape of realities.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Dr. John Hood ..... Earle Williams
Mary Mackay ..... Fritzi Ridgway
McKenna ..... Bruce Gordon
Biggs ..... Paul Weigel
Canby ..... Ernest Van Pelt
Baptiste ..... Elmer Dewey

By H. H. Van Loan.
Scenario by Thomas Dixon, Jr.
Directed by Earle Williams and Robert Ensminger.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Earle Williams, the Vitagraph star, will be seen at the ———— theatre next ———— in "Bring Him In." This is a rugged story by H. H. Van Loan, an experienced screen author, which deals with the activities of the Canadian Mounted Police and was directed by the star himself with Robert Ensminger acting as co-director. Assisting Mr. Williams in the preparation of "Bring Him In" were a number of players selected for their particular adaptability to the requirements of mystery, love and adventure which vivify and sustain the interest of this remarkable story.

The star has a role somewhat different from the kind that has been expected of him and a sort that he has portrayed in the past. How the hero and the policeman live together in the woods unaware of each other's identity, and how the former finally brings his man in, form an intense dramatic story which is enlivened by a good love interest. The picture is beautifully staged.

PROGRAM READER

A story of love, adventure and action in the Canadian Northwest, where red-blooded men fight for right is "Bring Him In," the Earle Williams picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It presents a man hunt! There is a peculiar thrill about a man hunt that gets under the skin and holds the interest. It is such an appeal that makes this picture one of unusual interest, especially as the hunter and the hunted live together under the same roof with neither being aware of the other's identity. It is a thrilling story—a story of self-sacrifice and duty—a story tingling with adventure and crisp action and staged in the big open places. See it.

SUGGESTIONS

Since this is based upon the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police formula it would be advisable not to go into detail. This story is pretty old and the steady patron may object if he is to see something so familiar. However, if this type of story is popular in your house there need be no hesitancy upon your part of advertising it for what it is. Play it up as a rapid action story—one filled with good adventure and romance and presenting Earle Williams in a different type of role. Play up the atmosphere and describe it as a mystery picture of the Northwest.

CATCH LINES

Do they always bring them in? Well, these officers of the Northwest have never been known to fail. See Earle Williams in "Bring Him In."

Adventure, mystery, romance—these elements are found in the lively dramatic picture, "Bring Him In." At the ———— theatre next ————.

"THE IDLE RICH"
(Metro)

Clever Little Picture in Every Respect

WHEN a picture comes along which savors of originality in theme, and which points a lesson developed subtly and with plenty of sure-fire touches in the way of comedy relief—when a picture comes along which carries clever characterization and which builds its situations easily and surely—that picture is bound to succeed. Take "The Idle Rich" for example. Adapted from Kennett Harris' magazine story, "Junk," it offers a fine flavor of originality in the figure of the youth who suddenly awakens to the realities of life and develops his character by grasping his opportunity and making the most of it.

Take every department of the feature and it stands above reproach. The scenes are worked out evenly with the correct emphasis placed on every incident. There is a breath of fine sentiment about it—also a breath of everyday life which marks the picture as being genuine. We look upon an idle son of the rich catering to his equally idle set. He is spending money like the proverbial drunken sailor, and a party he is giving looks like the last word in reckless lavishness. Then the bottom drops out. He becomes so poor that his friends desert him. The creditors come and take everything—even the cup of tea he is drinking. This is a comic touch in a picture which is saturated with comic touches. And when he has reached the depths word reaches him that he has inherited a dilapidated house and the adjacent junk heap from a deceased aunt.

The youth who has never worked a day in his life is brought sharply to the task of making a living. And he makes it out of junk. Discarded stuff is stored in the attic, the cellar and the yard of the house. He reckons that everything thrown away, someone could use. So he establishes a trading post at his home. And soon develops into a successful broker in junk. This may sound like a character study and it is in many respects. But it carries enough substance—enough balancing elements to make it a story containing a dozen sure-fire qualities. His uncle has made a fortune from just such an opportunity. He developed a trade-mark. And the junk dealer develops one, too. The romance does not have much of a chance, but whenever it does appear it never assumes the touch as if it were added because it was deemed necessary. His awakened conscience—his grasp of business methods brings the girl back into his confidence. She believes in him. The spectator is interested and sympathizes with him. You regard this picture as genuine and teaching a very good idea. And it entertains because it carries a real story interest. Bert Lytell plays the part with his customary finesse, and his cast is entirely capable.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Kennett Harris' popular magazine story, "Junk," has been adapted to the screen by the gifted June Mathis and will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— under its new title of "The Idle Rich," with Bert Lytell as the star. This is a highly original story revolving around the theme of making the most of your opportunity. It shows the blessing of hard work if one would attain success.

Take Sam Weatherbee for example. He had inherited the money of his ancestors and proceeded to spend it. He had never worked a day in his life. Then it suddenly dawned upon him that he didn't possess a cent in the world. A deceased aunt had left him with a dilapidated house, the attic and yard of which were piled high with junk. It was Sam's idea that he could act as middleman in disposing of it. He would establish a trading market. And he flourished and became successful. It is a cleverly worked out story which builds a rich vein of humor and a worthy sample of romance and is excellently acted and staged.

PROGRAM READER

Money can be made from most any project if one has enough ingenuity to work for it. Sam Weatherbee had never worked a day in his life. He didn't have to, for his forefathers had left him with plenty of wealth. But one day he discovered himself poor and his friends failed him. When he had reached the depths of despair he suddenly found that he inherited a junk heap. He knew that for every article of useless value that its owner had thrown away, there would be someone who would want it. So he established a trading market and the dollars poured in. This is the substance of "The Idle Rich," which has been adapted from the magazine story "Junk," and it appears at the ———— theatre next ———— with Bert Lytell as the star. A highly amusing and original story. Don't fail to see it.

SUGGESTIONS

The theme behind this story is highly original and it points a good moral and teaches one the value of perseverance. Many people cry aloud that they are unable to make money but it is always around waiting for someone with ingenuity to make the most of his opportunities. Tell that even a junk heap has its value even though it is a calling that doesn't bring a great deal of respect. Play up that the original appeared in a popular magazine and was written by one of our cleverest short story writers. Mention that June Mathis adapted the story—the same woman who gave us "The Four Horsemen." Play up Lytell. Play it up as highly novel and amusing.

Simplex

THEN AND NOW

Have you ever stopped to consider the vast difference in projector improvements in general that have taken place since Simplex was first placed on the market?

DO YOU REMEMBER

THE WOODEN BASE-BOARD.
THE SPINDLE LEGS.
THE OPEN MECHANISM.
THE EXPOSED LOOPS.
THE FUNNY LITTLE ARC LAMP.
THE THOUSAND FOOT MAGAZINES.
THE INSIDE SHUTTER (WITH THE AWFUL FLICKER).
THE CRUDE METHOD OF SETTING THE SHUTTER.

The Simplex was born without any of these afflictions.

AND DO YOU REMEMBER

How our competitors condemned our enclosed mechanism, the original shutter-setting device, the single bearing intermittent, the intermittent shoes, the heavy pedestal, and the big type " S " lamp when the Simplex was first introduced?

AND DO YOU KNOW

That practically every new projector that has been introduced (and others that have been improved) since Simplex was first marketed, have not only followed the Simplex design and construction, and have copied very faithfully numerous of the Simplex features, but have announced these features as new ones, all of which is most flattering to the Simplex engineers.

" And they asked me how I did it
And I gave 'em the Scripture text

They copied all they could follow but they couldn't copy my mind
And I left 'em Sweating and Stealing

Pure and Simple

featuring BOBBY VERNON

Exhibitors' Trade Review Says:—

"'PURE AND SIMPLE'—Bobby Vernon is a riot in this picture. He borrows a funny looking suit from an immigrant and disgraces his relatives in this country by making persistent appearances at one of their social affairs. They weren't surprised to see him looking so queer—they had fully expected that—but it was tough that the Swedish count who was about to wed their daughter (Josephine Hill) had to be so embarrassed. Bobby finally manages to expose the fake count and even brings in the latter's wife and children to prove his falsity. When he changes his clothes and makes love to the pretty ingenue, it seems like a pretty good ending for the hilarious short subject."

Has a Thrill That's a Sequel To "Way Down East"

Priscilla Dean in
"CONFLICT"
Jewel Prod.—Universal

DIRECTOR ..... Stuart Paton
AUTHOR ..... Clarence Buddington Kelland
SCENARIO BY ..... George C. Hull
CAMERAMAN ..... Harold Janes
AS A WHOLE.....A really fine picture with a thrill in the finish that is a knock-out
STORY.....One of the best that has reached the screen in some time; fine mystery and characterization
DIRECTION.....Very good; has created impressive and realistic atmosphere always; handles the ending excellently
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... First Class
LIGHTINGS ..... Good
STAR.....Especially well suited and does her usual good work
SUPPORT.....Carefully selected and thoroughly capable EXTERIORS ..... Splendid
INTERIORS ..... All right
DETAIL ..... Good
CHARACTER OF STORY....Girl defies her lumber king Uncle and aids her lover in sending his logs down the river
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... 6,205 feet

Universal picked a good one for Priscilla Dean when they selected Clarence Buddington Kelland's Red Book serial. George C. Hull's scenario conforms pretty closely to the original with one or two changes, including the heroine's rescue of the hero that is made a part of the final thrill. The story as published probably contained so much detail that it could not all be used and at the same time keep the picture down to the necessary footage.

Stuart Paton has provided an excellent production in every way. He has created a realistic atmosphere first, in establishing the sinister characters in the home of John Remalie, and secondly, in the marvelous exteriors of the lumber lands. And it isn't likely that he was lucky enough to find natural geographical locations to fulfill the needs of the story. But the dam, the sluice and the dried runway which is later flooded by the blowing up of the dam are all presented and the shots of the logs travelling at a fast speed down the river are really great. But best of all is the thrill in the final reel when Priscilla Dean jumps from log to log while they hurry down towards the rapids, in her attempt to rescue her lover who, on a raft, is headed straight for the falls.

Those selected to portray the various roles are well chosen types and all do very good work. Martha Mattox makes the crafty and sullen Miss Labo all that Kelland intended, and Edward Connolly is splendid as John Remalie. Herbert Rawlinson and L. C. Shumway are adequate as hero and villain, and Sam Allen makes a good deal of the short role of Orrin Lakin.

Dorcas Remalie, by the terms of her father's will, must live with her uncle until she becomes of age. At this time Remalie is fighting a newcomer, Jevons, a fellow who is the first to attempt opposition to Remalie's monopoly on the timber lands. For years Remalie had lived in a cheerless old house with no one but a housekeeper, Miss Labo. A word never passed between the two and no one knew that twenty-eight years before Remalie had been the father of Miss Labo's child whose murder she accused him of. But in reality she had raised the child, now a man, and employed by Remalie, though each man is ignorant of his relation to the other. Dorcas overhears Miss Labo telling the man he is Remalie's son. She believes Jevons is the son and so tells Remalie Complications pile on, Miss Labo tries to poison Dor cas, she escapes and later saves her lover, Jevons, wh is not Remalie's son. It develops that Sloane, t foreman is his son. There is a happy ending w Remalie marrying Miss Labo, and Dorcas and Jevo

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

"Conflict" should go over very well, and the thrill at the end is certainly a sequel to that of "Way Down East." My dear Mr. Josephs:-

You and your organization are deserving of great praise for the service given me in your International News of the current week.

The scenes taken by your cameraman at the Yale-Army game last Saturday were delivered to me Sunday morning around 10-00 for insertion in my News issue starting that night. This service was greatly appreciated especially considering the fact that there was no extra charge on your part.

I note that most of the news weeklies that I have seen only released the pictures last Thursday which proves that International is on the job and giving exhibitors news while it is news.

Thanking you for the many favors that you have extended to me in the past and wishing you all the success which you so well deserve I remain,

New York Says:

"It is a wonder that is has not been advertised as a million dollar production, for it must have cost a fortune to do what they have done in the way of laying railroads and bridges in the frozen North. And it couldn't possibly be faked. There is a lot of humor in the picture in spite of its serious nature. It is an extremely interesting picture, and the scenes in Alaska are magnificent. If you like Rex Beach you will like this picture. The whole cast is good."

Harriette Underhill, in the Tribune.

"A Rex Beach story usually is as bracing as the morning plunge into a cold tub. This one is no exception. 'The Iron Trail's' fate turns on the melting of the Alaskan glaciers and the effect is breath-taking."

Suzanne Sexton, in the Morning Telegraph.

"The producers have lavished upon it much in the way of atmosphere and background. This picture has action, with interpolations here and there of the Alaskan intrigue and far North bravery, heroism and romance."

Quinn Martin, in the Morning World.

"There are many thrilling scenes of the breaking up of the ice in 'The Iron Trail' which you can enjoy without a doubt."

Critic for the New York Times.

"'The Iron Trail,' a railroad tale, sweeps along with something of the irresistible force that is rushing down on the railroad bridge being built by the hero and threatens to shiver the timbers of the bridge and the hero, too. As this is a Rex Beach story there are naturally fights, this time by the wholesale and in job lots. In the general Free-for-all the skirmish takes place mainly with picks and shovels; and it has a good deal of the spirit of the first battle of the American engineers in France."

Critic for the New York Herald.

"All romance is not concerned with the love of a man for beautiful heroines. There may be romance just as vital in the achievement of ambition, the organization of a great business, or the building of a railroad. 'The Iron Trail' pictures the heroism and the thrills involved in performing the last named task in Alaska. There are many thrilling scenes in the picture. The cast is a competent one."

Critic for the New York Globe.

"Every new photoplay drawn from Rex Beach sources has become a cinema event and 'The Iron Trail' is no exception. It is sometimes thrilling, sometimes appealing, and always an interesting story."

Critic for the New York Sun.

"The picture holds one interested throughout. The ice floe is well stimulated; its excitement sustained. It has a background for desperate deeds, hatred and intrigue. The photography throughout is good; the stage directing is artistic."

Critic for the New York Evening Journal.

"As a spectacle, this picture is truly magnificent. Most of the Hollywood products seem like small-town stuff besides this tremendous production from Italy."

—N. Y. Times

"The scenes open with an earthquake, rush madly on through a chaos of battle, murder and sudden death, and culminate in the most realistic arena scene that ever let very real and obviously starved lions loose on thousands of terrified Italian extras." —N. Y. Globe

"Outdoing for sheer magnificence, thrills and spectacular splendor any motion picture ever seen here, "Theodora" offers a new film sensation." —Evening Mail

"There is always room for one more, it seems, especially at the top. 'Theodora,' presented by Goldwyn last night, holds the altitude at the present writing." —Evening Sun

"It is through its stupendous settings, far excelling anything seen here before, that it is likely to become one of the sights of New York."

—N. Y. Herald

Cleveland

(This is the first review from Cleveland received in time to catch the press)

"One cannot over-praise this film, in fact, cannot adequately describe or criticize it. It is beyond anything that I expected from producers of films for years to come. A triumph, and not only a triumph of cinematography, but an alluring, remarkable play that does not permit interest to flag during eleven reels.

Palaces, circus, spectacle, tumult of huge mobs of people, all are splendidly represented in a manner that will exhaust your adjectives of surprise and appreciation. It is believe that it will score the American recor for receipts."

—Archie Bell, Cleveland New

Detroit

"Griffith is out-Griffithed. Holly wood is made to look like a child paste-board town."

—Detroit Free Pre

"And if it cost three million dolla to achieve the amazing successio of trip-hammer punches such as or sees in this production, all I can s is that it looks like a full money worth." —Detroit Journ

"Nothing so dramatic has been se in motion pictures, and almost alo this would be enough to stamp t Italian production as one of t most unusual that has ever be produced." —Detroit Ne

"In 'Theodora,' master photopla the screen comes into its own, if ever will. The picture dwarfs t efforts of the biggest American fil producers of the day."

"Gorgeous is a word frequently used by those who would describe dramatic scenes whose magnificence has pleased. The word is much too weak to adequately fit the settings of this production."

—Chronicle Telegraph

'Most stupendous scenes ever hrown upon the screen. Rita olivet is adorable."

—Pittsburgh Post

It abounds with startling and vivid cenes that excel the thrilling visuization of gathering klansmen in he 'Birth Of A Nation.' It is more pectacular than 'Civilization' and s love theme more impressive than roken Blossoms.' "

—Pittsburgh Sun

'Theodora' is the most satisfying reen spectacle and sets a mark excellence."

—Gazette Times

A Few Trade Opinions

"Impossible to do justice to this stupendous picture. It seems incredible that the camera could have visualized all this grandeur, this tumultuous, whirling, riotous action. The silence was broken only by fervent outbursts of applause. The picture will net a fortune. The whole country should be given an opportunity to see it." —The Billboard

"'Theodora' has been selling out right along.
You leave the theatre bewildered, and it takes moments to compose yourself to picking out the "smash" of the production, and then you are embarrassed by a confusion of choice, for there are so many big passages one can set down only a few." —Variety

"This massive spectacle dwarfs other achievements of its kind."

—Motion Picture News

"'Theodora' is magnificent, an epic of the screen." —Moving Picture World

"As a money-maker for exhibitors it is sure to be as big an attraction—or bigger—than any of the spectacle productions yet offered to the American buyers." —Exhibitors Herald

THE BIGGEST CLEANUP OF THE YEAR FOR STATE RIGHTS BUYERS

PRICE?— That's the first question to confront the State Right Buyer. But you will find that Western Classics can give you an answer that will sweep you off your feet. If prices mean anything to a live-wire buyer, then this brand new series of 24 two-reel Western Classics will prove a gold mine. We do not want more than you can afford to pay, therefore our price will mean that territories will be closed very quickly. Will your name be inserted in our next week's advertisement?

WESTERN CLASSICS are sure-fire westerns of a new and better kind—subjects that will be shown in 20% of all the theatres in the country. Each picture is far above the average subject of this type, being packed with stirring action—pathos—romance and death-defying thrills. State Right Buyers need short subjects that have power, pep and selling appeal—pictures that will bring you money and build up a following of satisfied and prosperous exhibitors.

Don't let your competitor beat you to this unusual box-office series. Get in touch with us today—now!

First Three Two-Reel Sure-Fire Subjects:

"BULLETS AND JUSTICE"

Featuring Tom Pickford and Bill Patton, in a whirlwind, dramatic tale of the fast-dying West — a picture packed with thrills — daring horsemanship and human situations.

"THE HEART OF TEXAS PAT"

A stirring story of the border lands, replete with sensational stunts and a heart-throbbing theme.

"THE UNBROKEN TRAIL"

A smashing, virile drama of a lonely desert and its untold hardships.

Western Classics are being offered to the State Right Buyer at prices that will astonish them—a price that assures them an unusual profit in quick time. Three subjects are now ready for release, and the others are being produced in our Los Angeles Studio. If you are a buyer of decision and quick action NOW is the time to get in touch with our nearest office, for territories won't last long on the terms we are offering. Our slogan is: "Small profit and a quick turnover."

R-C PICTURES

Sir Anthony Hope is the master of dramatic story telling. His romances have vividness of first hand experience.

Mercanton, the "Griffith of Europe," has produced in "Possession" a picture of such intense action as to hold the spectator breathless.

The sets in this picture are real. A real and famous old castle. A great natural cave 300 feet below ground, its walls and roof a-glitter with stalactites of weird and eerie beauty. Every action takes place in the identical location, amid the identical surroundings that gave the novel its atmosphere and color.

What Do Men Want ?

We'd rather play ANYONE percentage on the million dollar question,

Showmen without exception have recognized the million dollar value of the title.

But—WE KNOW THE PICTURE!

Lois Weber's greatest production is a cyclone of dramatic intensity, a screen triumph that moves with the strength of a gigantic whirlwind.

It's a woman's picture that ALL women will see and all women will bring THEIR MEN to see.

Prepare for the onslaught; you'll need a bigger theater.

Here is one of those sure-fire features built around a personality which wins the sympathy of your audiences and has them enthusiastic before the first reel is over. It tells a story as sincere as it is realistic and reflects the life of any small American community in colorful detail.

There is action, self-sacrifice, humor, joy and romance in its telling which sweeps through five delightful reels to a forceful climax of excitement and suspense.

Tom Wise, known and admired by countless American theatre lovers, proves his wide popularity in "Father Tom" by the sympathetic portrayal of a role wonderfully suited to his personality.

The announcement of "Father Tom" with Tom Wise is enough to guarantee a successful showing of the production at your theatre.

It is one of those features which never fail to please.

"Father Tom" is one of those wholesome, human productions of "The Old Homestead" type whose appeal to American audiences is proven by time and experience.

It is essentially an out-of-doors feature which wins your heart interest from the start and ends with an exciting horse race, as vividly thrilling as ever portrayed. Tom Wise is perfect in a typical Tom Wise characterization.

"Father Tom" is a feature you can show with the assurance of its proving satisfactory and successful.

We have your letter of the 20th together with booklet containing reviews on "A Man's Home". I have digested its contents thoroughly and really believe that these reviews are not half strong enough to tell the exhibitors what an exceptional feature you have in this production.

You may add the name of Greater Amusements to the enthusiastic boosters of this excellent attraction. The writer has seen the picture twice, once before writing the review on the production which appeared in our issue dated October 22nd and once since and can honestly say that the second reviewing was fully as enjoyable as the first. Were he to write the review now, he would surely exhaust his supply of superlatives in attempting to do justice to the picture.

In "A Man's Home" you have a picture that "has everything". It is excellent from every mechanical standpoint and what is more, it is real. And that, in the final analysis is the true test of a picture's greatness.

With the thorough manner in which you are bringing home the message of this picture to exhibitors, coupled with the excellence of the production, there seems little doubt that "A Man's Home" will be one of the outstanding successes of the year.

Assuring you of our co-operation in aiding you to put over this attraction in our territory, we are,

Sincerely Yours,

A STATEMENT

IN presenting "OVER THE HILL" for the entertainment and edification of theatre-goers the world over, I am performing a task which affords me a delight wholly unalloyed.

Will Carleton, upon two of whose poems this production is based, is known as the "Farm Poet." He sang of the homely things of life—the things with which you and I are intimately familiar.

In the two fine poems here referred to, Carleton touched upon the same subject which caused Absalom to break the heart of his father, David, King of Israel, and which evoked from King Lear his immortal plaint, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child." It is a subject which will wrest songs from poets of all the generations yet to come.

I have watched the development of "OVER THE HILL," from the moment the first scene was written. I have watched it throughout the months it was in course of production. It represents a Labor of Love. In it I take a pride which has never been exceeded—or even equalled—in all the years I have been making pictures.

"OVER THE HILL" is a picture that will live as long as the homely virtues continue to exist. Dedicated to all the mothers and fathers in the world, it will do its share toward making the world a better place to live in.

WILLIAM FOX.

Fine Production Given To Unusual Western

Russel Simpson in
"SHADOWS OF CONSCIENCE"
Russell's Productions

DIRECTOR ..... John P. McCarthy
AUTHOR ..... Francis Powers and John P. McCarthy
SCENARIO BY ..... Francis Powers and John P McCarthy
CAMERAMAN ..... Victor Milner
AS A WHOLE ..... Fine Western, far above the average. Good tense drama and some splendid acting
STORY ..... Deals with the West of thirty years ago. Keeps the star in the foreground and gives plenty of scope for romance and actoin
DIRECTION ..... Does good work. Creates suspense and gains sympathy
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Good throughout with several excellent shots. Special attention paid to composition
LIGHTINGS ..... All right
STAR ..... Does good work and puts it over. Attractive personality
SUPPORT ..... Good. Types well chosen
EXTERIORS ..... Good Westerns with some fine long shots
INTERIORS ..... Correct. Some ti[illegible]
DETAIL ..... Satisfactory
CHARACTER OF STORY ..... "Murder will out."
Bad man tries to win the daughter of his murdered partner. Guardian plays hero role
LENGTH OF PRODUCTION ..... About 7,000 feet

One of the happy features of this Western is that it is different. The plot is away from the ordinary, the construction is unusual and the ending, while happy, does not close with a wedding. The production as a whole forms a pleasing and satisfactory entertainment and, while differing from the ordinary Western, it nevertheless contains the elements of good drama and presents real people. The characters are well drawn, and the producer has made no mistake in the selection of his types. They carry on in a logical manner and act within their parts.

Russell Simpson acts in a very quiet and restrained manner. He is economical with his means, and gets over a good deal of strength and personality.

In the supporting cast both Barbara Tennant and Gertrude Olmstead do very satisfactory work in difficult roles. Ida Mckenzie is quite winning in a juvenile part, and Landers Stevens creates a good deal of hate in the part of the villain.

It is evident that the director gave a good deal of thought to his work. He avoided overacting and restrained the sentiment. He has also inserted a little legitimate comedy just before the climax to relieve the tension of the drama and make it more human. The photography is on a high plane. The hand of the art director, Lewis E. Meyers, is also evident and not too apparent. This is as it should be. The blizzard scene in the early part of the production is well staged and splendidly photographed.

The story deals with a man's conscience and the torments thereof. Unfortunately this theme, which is almost Russian in character, is over-shadowed by other interests and for a long time the soul of the murdered is neglected. The action takes place in a small Western town in which Wade Curry is the keeper of the primitive hotel. He kills his mining partner in order to gain possession of the child, but the little girl is saved by a traveler who turns out to be the brother of Wade Curry's mistreated wife. In the fight that follows Curry shoots his wife and throws the blame upon the brother who manages to escape with the child. Ten years later their lives are picked up again in California. The child has grown and Curry accues her guardian of the murder. But his conscience takes hold of him and his guilt is soon made apparent.

"Should be given a big league rating. Looks like a three-base hit and should grab first money in any town. There is no reason why it shouldn't be given a Broadway premiere; with clever presentation and some exploitation will probably romp home a winner".
EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW.

"Has all the marks of a genuine state rights success. It is a melodrama with a western background, rather than a western of the 'Shoot 'em up' variety. The suspense interest and constant action make it a moving melodrama which should be enjoyed in all classes of theatres."

"The usual stock situation which the 'Movie' patron has come to expect in all photoplays dominated 'western' are noticeable in their absence. The blizzard scenes are so realistic that the spectator's imagination will give him a shiver or two." MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"It is a purposeful, ardent offering. An interesting, well directed photoplay and never was there better photography."

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES

This Sounds Like a Fairy Tale But It's the Gospel Truth!

A certain amateur film enthusiast, who as yet prefers to remain unknown, decided to take a flier in the picture business on his own account.

He is an ardent movie fan; he thought he knew how pictures should be made and was willing to back his judgment at no matter what cost.

By an arrangement with us he engaged Marshall Neilan to direct the picture between his regular First National releases.

As money didn't matter, he engaged John Barrymore to play the leading role. Neilan had a free hand on the production. He assembled a fine cast, including Wesley Barry, Anna Q. Nilsson, Coleen Moore, J. Barney Sherry and other well known film players.

The vehicle selected was Albert Payson Terhune's story, "THE LOTUS EATER," a tale of a young man of twenty-five who saw a woman for the first time when he stepped off the palatial yacht upon which his millionaire father's will had held him prisoner.

In our opinion the picture is one of the most dramatic, most beautiful, and altogether most perfect productions yet made.

Motion Picture News

The Booking Guide—Its Mission

THE trade paper today, in our frank opinion, does not lend to the distribution of pictures the force it could and should.

But the fault is not primarily the trade paper's. It is rather the fault of the trade paper advertising. The press-book, in general, is similarly wrong. So, in fact, is the entire advertising effort.

The basic trouble lies in the fact that, at present and for the past several years, the whole business of distribution is very largely geared up to the first run theatre.

We are aware of the ruling opinion that a first-run booking, in itself, advertises and books the picture to later run houses to some degree.

But we are speaking here of trade paper and other printed advertising.

Let us review the present situation.

In this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS the picture advertising is devoted, almost entirely, to current or very recent releases. So with every issue throughout the year of every trade paper.

In many instances the release is advertised for a few issues and then never mentioned again in an advertising way for the balance of its screen life.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has some 8,500 exhibitor readers. Only a certain percentage are immediately interested in the current or very recent release. The majority of the exhibitors won't book the picture for anywhere from two months to a year later. Yet at the time the picture is booked by this majority there is no advertising of it in the current trade paper.

Editorially we carry the picture along. It is mentioned in the release date pages. Its booking career may be given in the Box-Office Reports; its exploitation may be carried in the Exhibitor's Service Bureau. But all this time no advertising effort is put back of it—no adequate advertising effort, if any at all; and by advertising effort we mean the kind of advertising information that will not merely bring the picture fully and forcefully enough to the exhibitor's attention but also and principally the exploitation aids that will help the exhibitor put the picture over once he has booked it.

In other words and to sum up, the trade paper advertisement today announces the picture to probably 10% of the picture theatres and does practically nothing for the remaining 90%.

It will be said, in reply, that the press book which goes with the later run booking does just this thing, gives just this aid.

But if the press-book source is necessary, why not make the same effort or at least a parallel effort in the trade paper advertising pages?

And, also, let us see if the press-book, the average one, is of service to the exhibitor.

The press-book, like the trade paper announcement, is aimed too much at the early run theatre, or to put it otherwise, at the theatre which has plenty of advertising facilities.

The first- run theatre, as a very general thing, doesn't need a press-book and doesn't use one. Its advertising manager is fully able to handle the picture's exploitation. He wants the basic selling idea of the picture, but that's about all.

It's the small town and neighborhood theatre everywhere—the 90% theatre—that needs badly and should want practical exploitation aids. But, candidly, how many, as contained in the sixteen pages of the average press-book, are within the publicity facilities of the small town showman?

The problem, in this important respect, has for some time been our own problem.

We are meeting it immediately with "The Booking Guide," the 400 pages of which give detailed booking and exploitation facts on every release of 1920-1921.

The subject is, to our minds, of such large importance that we bring it, in these columns, to the serious attention of each branch of the trade.

"The Booking Guide" gives all possible information, all pictures being treated alike.

The Producer, the Distributor, the Star, the Director.

The summary of the story, so that the theatre man may know the plot, the high spots and whether it will fit his particular audience.

In addition all references made in MOTION PICTURE NEWS to the picture are referred to by pages—when reviewed—first run showings—producer's advertisements—exploitation—newspaper display—prologue suggestions, etc. This means a complete record of the picture from every angle.

The first issue covers all pictures released between September 1, 1920 and September 1, 1921. This volume of 400 pages combined with a file of the "News" will be absolutely invaluable to any theatre man.

The "Booking Guide" will be issued in future every six months so that the next edition will contain all information on all pictures between September 1, 1921 and February 1, 1922.

The exhibitor will need a complete file of MOTION PICTURE NEWS to use with this second volume.

Start now. Don't let a copy get away from you. Lock them up if necessary but—

Kineto to Make Official Reel for M. P. T. O.

Will Be Released Weekly as "Official Urban Movie Chats of the M. P. T. O. of A."

AN arrangement of great importance has just been entered into between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Kineto Company of America, Inc., after a series of conferences extending over two months, whereby the Kineto Company of America will produce every week a single-reel that will serve as the official screen publication of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

It will be known as the "Official Urban Movie Chats of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

The contract between the two organizations was signed November 1, 1921, by the Executive Committee and officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and officials of the Kineto Company of America. The approval of the executive committee and officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America was unanimous, and it also received the endorsement of the various State member organizations, as well as the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York.

It will become operative on January 1, 1922.

Those who participated in the meeting and who signed the contract are as follows: Charles Urban, President, Kineto Company of America; H. J. Shepard, Kineto Company of America; W. A. True, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut; Charles L. O'Reilly, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York; R. F. Woodhull, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey; John S. Evans, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania; C. C. Griffin, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California; E. T. Peter, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas; E. M. Fay, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Rhode Island; John Manheimer, Chairman, Board of Directors, Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce; W. D. Burford, Member of Board of Directors, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; J. T. Collins, Member of Board of Directors, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; C. E. Whitehurst, Executive Committee, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; J. L. Lazarus, Vice-President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California; George Aarons, Secretary, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania; S. I. Berman, Secretary, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York; Thomas Goldberg, Vice-President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland; A. J. Moeller, General Manager, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Sydney S. Cohen, President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Charles Urban will lend his skill, gained in an experience of twenty-five years; his great film library and his organization to the production of the best single reel that it is possible to construct. Associated in editing the "Official Urban Movie Chats of the Motion Picture Theatre owners of America" will be an Advisory Board consisting of some of the most influential men and women in the country.

A joint statement issued by the M. P. T. O. of A. and the Kineto organization read in part as follows:

"It will be a reel that every exhibitor will be proud to have his name associated with; one that will be a privilege for his patrons to see; one that will be his duty to show, because it will be the official reel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Every release will contain a message from some official prominent in public life as well as information the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America desires the public to know.

"Every exhibitor in the country will be asked to contract to play the "Official Urban Movie Chats of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America." Contracts will be made in the usual way at a price in keeping with the theatre and locality. No deposit will be asked. Every theatre in the country will be expected to play this official screen publication of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"We feel that every producer, distributor and exhibitor who have the interest of the country and the motion picture industry at heart will welcome and co-operate in this constructive step."

Pearson Finds Conditions Steadily Improving

RETURNING from a tour of Pathe Western branch exchanges, General Manager Elmer Pearson reported some interesting deductions from his observation of business conditions in different districts.

"Conditions everywhere," Mr. Pearson said, "show steady improvement. Theatre attendance is slowly but surely getting better, but it is my impression that admission prices are a little too high to suit the average patron's pocketbook. Instead of taking in all the programmes offered in his locality, one finds him indulging himself only once or twice a week. This has resulted in picture shopping, so to speak, and is the only way to account for the unusual difference in box office receipts from exploited subjects and big star pictures as compared with the so-called programme offering."

Nat'l Ass'n Strengthening Lines of Defense

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is strengthening its lines of defence work throughout the country.

Plans for closer affiliation between officials of the association and exchange managers of each company member are being worked out whereby the distribution representatives in each exchange center will have a clearer understanding of the industry's problems and defence plans—thus enabling them to function more systematically in matters of general importance as the occasion may arise.

As a preliminary step in welding closer co-operation in this direction, arrangements have been made for officials of the National Association to address future home office gatherings or conventions of managers, division managers and special representatives. At the suggestion of President William A. Brady this plan has been placed before the sales executives of the association's distribution company members and has met with ready response.

Officials of the National Association say that exchange managers organizations and F. I. L. M. clubs throughout the country have been of great service to the industry in actively aiding the national committees in successfully combatting hostile legislation and that the effectiveness of their co-operation can be largely increased by the proposed home office "get-together" meetings.

Stop Comparing Present with Abnormal Days

By Arthur S. Friend

PROGRESS requires fundamental recognition of the truth. One is not a pessimist who acknowledges now that the attendance in the picture theatres throughout the country is, on the average, noticeably below what it was during the boom times of a short while ago. Optimism does not require us to blind our eyes to this truth. The real optimist is the one who, after carefully analyzing that which is wrong, sets forth to make it right.

We must clear our own vision at this time and stop comparing present conditions with those of the abnormal good times. Our comparisons should be with the normal conditions. The individual exhibitor must study his own problem and then with grit and determination, solve it. The abnormally bad can be beaten just as the abnormally good dissipated itself. The exhibitor has no time for the bickerings or differences that may exist or be developed between any distributor or producer groups. He must be left free to carry on the heavy work he has in hand.

The problem is to attract patronage to his theatre, and to satisfy that patronage. People are not rushing in any more simply because there is a sign out with the magic letters t-h-e-a-t-r-e. The spendthrift attitude of the American public is over, and in the picture business, as in every other business, only those who are entitled to it can get the trade.

The exhibitor must be free to book the specific pictures that will serve his particular theatre, and his particular kind of clientele best.

To get at first hand at least a little information as to what "all the shooting is for" I made a short trip into the Middle West a few weeks ago, and I looked and I listened. The motion picture business is all right, but like every other business in the world, it needs tending to by the people who are in it. The exhibitor can no longer be forced to take the worthless with the good. The bad picture must stay on the producer's shelf, and the sooner the producer realizes that, the better for the industry. This is the time for clean pictures, built with an appreciation of the fact that the public seeks only entertainment in the picture theatres, and that if there is no entertainment for the public, it will not respond.

M.P.T.O. Officers Deny Existence of Dissension in Organization

Brand as False Rumors of Discord; Re-Affirm First Purpose of Ass'n

THERE is no dissension in the ranks of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the M. P. T. O. of A. still stands for the purpose it was created—to protect the independent theatre owner of the country: This is the statement issued during the week by C. C. Griffin, vice president of the M. P. T. O. of A. and president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California, and W. D. Burford, member of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. of A. and vice president of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance.

Another communication bearing on the subject of a reported disruption in the ranks of the M. P. T. O. of A. was addressed by the same two officers to Martin J. Quigley, editor of Exhibitors' Herald. In this letter, Messrs. Griffin and Burford deny that various members of the M. P. T. O. of A. informed National President Sydney S. Cohen that they could no longer approve of the contemplated investigation of Associated First National Pictures.

In their statement to the exhibitors of the country, Messrs. Griffin and Burford declare:

"We wish to state to the exhibitors of the country, that despite all rumors to the contrary, published or conveyed through devious channels, that there is no dissension in the ranks of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and that the organization still stands for what it was created: The protection of the individual independent motion picture theatre owner of the country.

"While Mr. C. C. Griffin, whose signature is subscribed to this statement, introduced a resolution at the get-together convention in Chicago, expressing confidence in the officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., it is also true that the officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., pledged themselves to withhold publication of said resolution until it became apparent that no adjustment of the grievances between Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America could be accomplished.

"As every effort is now being made by the undersigned to arrive at a constructive solution of the problem whereby the interests of those exhibitors who complain of unfair treatment will be safeguarded and adequate adjustments made, we therefore deplore the fact that certain persons, and particularly certain trade papers, have distorted the facts and attempted to circumscribe our efforts by throwing over us a cloud of disloyalty to the organization of which we are both officers.

"We wish to state also that as a result of our activities, we have succeeded in arranging an open meeting at the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, between officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at which time the specific complaints of members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America who are sub-franchise holders, as well as those members in territories where there are no sub-franchises, will be aired in the hope that this procedure will result in immediate adjustments of complaints and a better understanding between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

(Signed) "C. C. GRIFFIN,
"W. D. BURFORD."

The letter addressed under date of November 4 to Martin J. Quigley, editor of Exhibitors' Herald, by Messrs. Griffin and W. D. Burford follows:

"DEAR SIR:

"Your article in reference to the First National investigation by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in your issue of November 12, 1921, on page 35, is a deliberate distortion of the facts:

"Your statement that various members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which included ourselves, informed our National President, Sydney S. Cohen, that they could no longer approve of the contemplated investigation of the management of the affairs of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is absolutely untrue, and no such message was conveyed to President Cohen in any way.

"The statement attributed to W. D. Burford that the explanation of officials of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., had shed a new light on the affairs of the company and that the investigating program was not called for is a deliberate falsehood. No such statement was made by Mr. Burford.

"The undersigned will ask you to give the same publicity in your next issue—November 19, 1921, to these specific denials, which the undersigned subscribe to, and that we are above all loyal to the organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, of which we are both officers; that any statements to the contrary are as unfounded in fact as your article printed in your issue of November 12, 1921.

"Assuring you that our organization, which was formed for the protection of the independent motion picture theatre owners of the country will always act for the best interests of its members, we beg to remain.

"Very truly yours,
"W. D. BURFORD."
(Signed) "C. C. GRIFFIN."

J. D. Williams Is Asked to Meet M.P.T.O. Group

WILLIAM BRANDT, president of the Theatre-Owners Chamber of Commerce, has invited J. D. Williams, general-manager of Associated First National Pictures, to meet in open discussion before the Theatre-Owners Chamber of Commerce on November 22nd representatives of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of America. Mr. Brandt's letter to Mr. Williams follows:

"My dear Mr. Williams:

"It has been officially brought to my attention that Mr. C. C. Griffin, vice-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has suggested to you and you have agreed to have an open discussion before the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, of the alleged complaints of members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, filed against your company, by sub-franchise holders of your company as well as by other members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in territories where no franchise exists.

"The date suggested by Mr. Griffin for this discussion was November 9th, but in view of other matters previously scheduled, I have arranged for this open discussion between you, the officials of your company and whom else you may desire and the officials of the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, for Tuesday, November 22, 1921, at one thirty o'clock at the Hotel Astor, Broadway and 44th street, New York City.

"I therefore cordially invite you to be present on that date. It is needless for me to say to you, that the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce is delighted for the opportunity of affording a forum in keeping with its policy, to gladly assist in anything that will bring a healthy condition in the Motion Picture Industry, and I am certain that a get-together before this impartial body will bring quick adjustments of these complaints and a more amicable understanding between your company and the National organization of exhibitors."

Wire Briefs from Coast

WILLIS ROBARTS, well-known actor, died on Thursday of last week after finishing role in Universal's production, "Human Hearts." Mr. Robarts succumbed to an attack of heart trouble.

The local First National officers have made elaborate preparations for the reception on the Coast of the Norma Talmadge and Joseph Schenck producing unit. The plans include a welcome of the company at the station by Mayor Cryer and other city officials as well as a large delegation from the film colony. The Talmadge organization is expected to arrive in Los Angeles November 14th.

The Los Angeles theatres will co-operate with the American Bookseller's Association by showing during the week of November 13th, to be celebrated as "Children's Week," film adaptations of children's stories.

Rex Ingram and Alice Terry were married on Saturday, November 5th.

"Supreme"!

"I herewith hand you check for $2.00 in payment for another year's subscription to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. I feel that I cannot afford to be without the NEWS, for your publication as a trade paper for our profession stands out, head and shoulders, above all the rest of them."

Exhibitor Warns Against Alleged Fake Producer

L. Gold, manager of the City theatre, Passaic, N. J., declares that early in September the Elid Productions, operating under the guidance of a man styling himself Elid Stanley, agreed to take moving pictures of the audience in the house, and put on an act for the amusement of the patrons.

Stanley actually did set up studio lights and set a camera for the filming of the pictures of the audience on each of the three nights, September 7th, 8th and 9th. Mr. Gold says he never secured a view of the inside of the camera and cannot therefore tell whether it was really loaded or not. He doubts it. Mr. Gold states that he paid the man for his three-night engagement after being assured that a print, approximating nine-hundred feet, would be forwarded him within two weeks. Since September 9th no word has been received from Stanley and the promised print is still undelivered. A conspicuous part of the Elid Productions outfit was a Haynes touring car camouflaged with a colored map of the United States on which the principal cities are prominently marked.

Special Provisions Made for Armistice Day

All the news-reel organizations have made special preparations to cover the impressive Armistice Day ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery in honor of America's "Unknown Hero." Governmental officials are reported to be making special arrangements for the cameramen so that the unprecedented scenes of solemnity will be presented before the people of the country as vividly and realistically as possible by way of the screen.

International News is among the organizations making elaborate arrangements. Especially advantageous points of observation are being selected for the International cameramen, according to word from the Universal home-office, to catch shots of the parade, ceremonies at the Cemetery, and the spectacular illumination effects to be staged in Washington on Friday evening. Elaborate arrangements are also being made for the rapid transportation of the film to the laboratories and from there to the theatres.

Blue Law Advocate Repudiated in Maryland

The Blue Law reformers have been repudiated in Maryland. Their pet candidate for the Legislature—Dr. Howard A. Kelly—was defeated on November 8th by an overwhelming majority. Dr. Kelly is well known there as a reformer. In his campaign for election to the Legislature, Dr. Kelly was sponsored by the Lord's Day Alliance.

Another candidate for public office in Maryland who has been unfriendly to the motion-picture industry is State Senator Oliver Metzerott. He was the Republican candidate for State Comptroller and was decisively defeated.

N. Y. Commission in Albany Starts Functioning

George H. Cobb, chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, spent last Tuesday in Albany, conferring with Ansel W. Brown, recently named as head of the Albany bureau of the Commission. Within the next few days, Mr. Brown expects to call on the exchanges in Albany, as well as to begin making the rounds of motion picture theatres in seeing that the law is fully complied with. The Albany office of the Commission opened on November 1.

Brunton Studios Reported as Sold

Dispatches from Los Angeles on November 9 indicated that M. C. Levee, Treasurer and General Manager, and Motley Flint of the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, have purchased the Robert Brunton studios. One million and a half is the valuation placed on the plant.

Number of Incorporations Decreasing in New York

Twenty-eight companies, with a total capitalization of $1,452,500 incorporated during the month of October for the purpose of entering the motion picture business in New York state. These companies, however, do not compare either in number or in the amount of capital stock with the 34 companies which incorporated during the same month a year ago, having an aggregate capitalization of $5,282,400.

The records in the secretary of state's office show that up to the present time 389 motion pictures companies have incorporated this year, with a capitalization amounting to $24,451,600.

While motion picture companies incorporated at the rate of one a day during the past week in New York state, the records in the secretary of state's office at Albany reveal that the capitalizations were of such low amounts, that the capital stock represented reached only $71,000. These companies include:

Faness Amusement Corporation, $500, with Nathan, Harry and Rose Suchman; Photocraft Productions, $25,000, Nathan and Melvin Hirsch, B. H. Bernstein, New York; Mallie Theatre Co., $10,000, Mallie Mass, David Lisnow, Benjamin Goldstein, Brooklyn; Pictorial Clubs, New York, Inc., $500, William L. Lee, Michael Caton, Harry T. Hatcher, New York; Motion Picture Guild, Inc., $20,000, Sam Ross, Louis Zoeller, Jeanette Pereira, New York; British and Continental Trading Company, $5,000, H. S. Abrams Guest at Luncheon

Just prior to his departure on a short business trip to Europe, Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists Corporation, was the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered by the board of directors of the United Artists at the Claridge.

Those present were Dennis F. O'Brien, Nathan Burkan, Albert H. T. Banzhof, Albert Grey, Kenneth Hodkinson, general manager; William W. Hines, general sales manager; Charles E. Moyer, director of advertising and publicity; F. A. Beach, Comptroller, and Max Prager, treasurer.

Fowler With F. B. Warren

George M. C. Fowler has been appointed successor to P. J. Richrath as purchasing agent of the F. B. Warren Corporation. Mr. Fowler takes office on November 7th.

United Artists Executives Are Promoted

JUST before leaving for Europe, Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists Corporation, made the announcement that Paul N. Lazarus, sales promotion manager, had been made assistant general sales manager for United Artists.

Mr. Lazarus has been with the United Artists Corporation since its inception. He came into the organization as director of advertising and publicity. Charles E. Moyer has taken over full charge of the publicity and advertising departments.

Mr. Lazarus is widely known throughout the motion picture industry, not only on the advertising end of the game, but in the exhibitor field as well.

William A. Brady Pleads Cause of Screen

In Eight-Day Campaign in Mid-West Defends Industry before Public Bodies

WILLIAM A. BRADY, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has just returned from a successful eight-day campaign in the Middle West, during which he conferred with a large number of women's organizations, addressed several thousand parent-teachers and photoplay indorsers and won many new friends for the industry by frankly stating its problems and accomplishments and exposing the evils of censorship. He conferred also with exchange managers' organizations in several states and with prominent exhibitors for the purpose of fostering closer relations between all branches of the industry.

In Indianapolis on Wednesday Mr. Brady addressed the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, Parent-Teachers' Associations and allied clubwomen of the city at a meeting presided over by Mrs. David Ross. Among the educators present was E. V. Graff, superintendent of schools.

Mr. Brady asked that the movies be not judged by the black sheep in the industry, but by what the screen has accomplished along educational and humanitarian lines, as well as in affording wholesome, instructive amusement throughout the world.

"You cannot keep people away from the movies," he said. "You cannot combat them any more than you can combat electricity and the telephone. They have come to stay. They can be kept worthy by earnest cooperation between the industry and organizations such as yours.

"Censorship is not needed to keep the movies worthy. Anyone who shows an indecent picture can be arrested and prosecuted under present state and federal laws. Indecency on the screen is not tolerated by existing laws any more than it is tolerated by decent people. Ninety per cent of the objectionable features have been eliminated from pictures since March when the producer members of the National Association adopted an admirable set of production standards which have since been observed in our studios. In six months the remaining ten per cent of objectionable features will be eliminated."

In Detroit Mr. Brady was given an enthusiastic reception by three thousand Michigan educators attending the convention of the Parent-Teachers' Department of the Michigan State Teachers' Association. Both there and in Chicago he was entertained by exchange managers' organizations and discussed with them plans for the future defence of the industry against hostile legislation in the states served by both of these exchanges. He also visited Columbus, Ohio, and conferred with the exchange managers there upon conditions affecting the business in that state. Mr. Brady is highly gratified with the result of his tour.

"I found a ready willingness among women's organizations, particularly among parent-teachers' associations, to cooperate with the industry. They are not wedded to the censorship idea and when the facts are placed clearly before them are eager to aid the industry in the solution of its problems. The object of my trip was to show these estimable organizations of teachers and mothers that the motion picture industry, as represented in the National Association, desires to work in harmony with them for the maintenance of a clean and wholesome screen, entirely devoid of offensiveness, yet unimpaired in its ability to interest both young and old."

Rembusch for Campaign of Public Education

Urges Corps of Speakers to Place Problems of Screen before People; Lauds Wm. A. Brady

A CAMPAIGN of enlightenment, with speakers at Chautauquas and lyceums throughout the country, is urged by Frank J. Rembusch, of Indianapolis, to get the facts of censorship and other great problems of the motion picture industry squarely before the public. He says that by work of this character, public sentiment for the industry can be quickly crystallized as an offset to the damaging influence of professional reformers who have exploited the ill side of pictures so vociferously.

In a letter to Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Mr. Rembusch pays a tribute to the work of William A. Brady as a champion of the industry's cause and suggests that Mr. Brady is the logical man to carry the industry's message to worthwhile people wherever possible in an enlightening crusade to further the good of the motion picture business. Mr. Rembusch's letter was as follows:

"Dear Mr. Elliott:

"Enclosed find a few clippings of Mr. Brady's visit to Indianapolis. These only faintly outline the wonderful lasting good his conference here accomplished.

"In a beautiful way he expressed the appreciation and regard of the industry to the Indiana Photoplay Indorsers, for their friendly attitude and help in furthering and encouraging good pictures, and their great help in the anti-censorship fight during the session of the recent legislature.

"The most representative club women of Indiana attended the several meetings. It was a most notable gathering. Mr. Brady was everything. By his cordial friendly manner, every heart went to him. The ladies fairly mobbed him. He represented the industry in such a substantial and dignified manner that we exhibitors present were glad to be in the business. There was just something about the whole affair that can't be told in words. In one minute by his marvelous wit his hearers were convulsed with laughter; in another they were holding their breath in attention by his serious defense of our industry. It was Brady at his best, and that means incomparable. He is a giant when he is at his best, we all must admit. We hope he enjoyed his visit here.

"Robert Lieber and Gus Schmidt gave a dinner in his honor at the Athenaeum, and had all the downtown exhibitors present. Everybody was friendly. He was with us only a few hours, and the notice of his coming and stay was so short, or we might have had a greater gathering. We certainly made good use of him, and he was about worn out, making one address after another.

"This is the kind of work that counts. We should send out speakers. Someone should be on the lecture platform in Chautauqua or Lyceum work telling the good side of pictures. The public only gets the ill side. We should get our story to worthwhile people.

"Brady—Yes!—GREAT—in a few months there would be a wonderful change. He has his heart and soul in the work of furthering the good of the motion picture business. He plays no favorites, fears nothing it he thinks he is right.

"Do get the idea into the minds of your people that we must make friends of the influential people during leisure time so that they will help us when the fanatic and reformer try to destroy us during periods of legislative work.

"We are all very glad of Mr. Brady's visit. The ladies keenly feel that the industry paid them a great compliment by his visit to them. Mr. Brady made a lot of friends for us, himself, and the industry.

"We thank the National Association for sending hiim, and hope he will return again and stay longer.

"Very cordially,
(Signed) "F. J. Rembusch,
"F. J. Rembusch Enterprises."

The newspapers of Indianapolis gave much space to the meeting of educators and clubwomen at which Mr. Brady outlined the evils of censorship and set forth the good which was being accomplished through the medium of the screen. In an editorial following the meeting the Indianapolis News said in part:

William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, yesterday told members of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, Parent-Teacher Association and others that since last March, when the motion picture producers started to purge the industry of lawless producers, 90 per cent of the objectionable features of the films have been eliminated. This is a remarkable improvement, and adds force to Mr. Brady's arguments against public censorship of the films by state boards.

In taking the stand that the movies can not be stopped, Mr. Brady raised the question as to why any producer should believe that any one expects to stop the movie. Few persons believe that the motion picture will lose its attraction for the great mass of people. Its grip upon the primitive man's love for a story in pictures is too strong. Instead of losing its hold upon the interest of the people, it is likely to strengthen its hold, for any one with a discerning eye who has observed the machinery of the average motion picture drama knows that the producers have only begun to exploit their medium.

Ray Leaves Coast Nov. 15th Due in New York Nov. 22

The complete itinerary of the Charles Ray party, which will leave Los Angeles for the East on November 15th, was made public this week. Not only does the star plan to get his first view of New York City on this trip, but according to present plans he will visit several interesting places en route, including a two-day stop-over in Chicago and a look-in at Niagara Falls. Mr. Ray is scheduled to arrive in New York City on Wednesday morning, November 23d.

Citizens League Urges Increase in Censor Board

After discovering that the Democratic reorganization plan for virtually all of the State Department does not include the State Board of Motion Picture Censors, the Citizens' League of Maryland for Better Motion Pictures addressed a letter to Governor Albert C. Ritchie. Instead of a board as now constituted of two members and a secretary, the latter also a member, the league urges an increase in its membership to three men and two women. The league asks that the chairman and vice-chairman, one of whom shall be a lawyer, shall receive salaries of $4,000 and $3,000, respectively. The secretary, it is recommended, shall receive $3,000.

The other two members, petitions the league, are to be chosen, one by the State Board of Education and the other by the Board of Education of Baltimore City. These, the league says, should not be paid.

Missouri Exhibitors Support Lambert Bill

MISSOURI exhibitors have launched their entire strength in support of the Lampert bill. The sentiment of the "men back home" has been put squarely before United States senators and congressmen, concise resolutions have been adopted and sent to Missouri representatives, and not without results.

The following telegram was received last week from United States Senator Selden P. Spencer, a member of the committee on claims: "I am just in receipt of the resolution signed by the committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, concerning the Lampert bill and taxes on file, etc., and I am very glad to have it. It is most helpful and you may be sure that I shall not forget what you have written."

This message and a bulletin, extolling the work of President Cohen and other exhibitor officials in Washington, was sent to every exhibitor in Missouri.

Musicians Strike in Los Angeles Is Settled

Representatives of the Los Angeles musicians, who have been on strike for the past three weeks and local theatre owners have reached a settlement. Under the terms of the agreement, the men will resume work at once at the old scale of $54.50 a week with an increase of two working hours per week. The musicians and the individual theatre owners will arrange the working conditions. The settlement was reached as the result of a conference between the union committee and that of the Theatres' Association on last Thursday.

National Board of Review Literature in Demand

The National Committee for Better Films declares that a very live interest in the subject of better films exists, or persists, in the states where legalized boards have been created, and that many organizations, groups and individuals have expressed their dissatisfaction with the state boards by buying and using the National Committee's catalogs or monthly lists of selected motion pictures for entertainment purposes, which are published by the National Board of Review. While Better Films Committees working with the theatres are a partial indication of this desire for improvements of equal value also are the undertakings of churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, schools, clubs, community centers, industries and individuals.

Lunn to Appeal from Order on Film Disbursements

Announcement was made this week that Mayor George R. Lunn of Schenectady, N. Y., would appeal from the decision recently handed down by the Supreme Court, ordering him to open to public inspection the account of disbursement of money received from owners of motion picture theatres in that city as a contribution from receipts of Sunday shows.

Mayor Lunn contends that inasmuch as the money was voluntarily contributed by the theatre owners and has been devoted to the child welfare fund for charitable purposes that it would prove a source of embarrassment to those who had been benefited if the record of disbursements should be thrown open to public inspection. The amount in question approximates $7,000

Rothafel Chairman of Film Group of "Budget Guard"

S. L. Rothafel of the Capitol theatre, New York City, has been appointed chairman of the motion-picture group of the "Budget Guard," organized by the National Budget Committee to support the movement for national economy and lower taxes, inaugurated by General Dawes.

Urges Volume of Business Instead of High Prices

After several attempts at putting over big special pictures at 75 cents and $1.00 top have failed in his theatres, Edward C. Beatty, general manager of the W. S. Butterfield string of motion-picture houses in Michigan and the Central West, announces that hereafter he will not attempt to put over productions at this price.

Beatty books and outlines the playing policy of Mr. Butterfield's twenty-four theatres, twelve of which are first-run houses, and his experiences in attempting to put over pictures at high prices are interesting.

"We have booked several big pictures and have attempted to play them in our cities at prices asked and received in most of the big first run towns, but we simply cannot do it. The people pass them by and go to the cheaper shows.

"The only system in operating a motion picture house, to my way of thinking, is to keep the price within the reach of all and depend upon the volume of business instead of attempting to reach a set figure by high prices.

"Some of the pictures that are playing the smaller cities today at high prices would simply clean up, instead of playing to only average business, if a popular price was placed on them. This action isn't fair to the public and it isn't fair to the exhibitor."

A. M. P. A. Dinner Proves a Happy Affair

Practically everybody who is anybody in the advertising and publicity game in New York attended the big A. M. P. A. dinner which was held in the Big City on Monday evening, November 6. There were a number of vaudeville acts to add to the general festivities.

The unsupported word of a handful of members of the trade press that a picture is good may not make it so.

But we'll venture to predict that word will be supported by every person who sees Harold Lloyd in his newest Pathe release "A Sailor Made Man."

We laughed at the start—we laughed throughout the hour of its projection, and we were still laughing when the lights were flashed on.

No slapstick, laugh-grabbing efforts of the ordinary kind. No played-out hokum. Fresh, novel, mirthful innovations in an honest-to-goodness story background. That's "A Sailor Made Man."

Bankers Join in War on Fake Film Projects

Vigilance Committee Will Maintain Investigators in Twenty-five Business Centers

THE Vigilance Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held a conference with representatives of the banking interests at a luncheon given last Friday, November 4th, at the Uptown Club, New York City. Martin J. Quigley, chairman of the Vigilance Committee, told the banking representatives and members of the trade press present that his committee had inaugurated a course of action which will seek to protect the public from being fleeced by wildcat motion picture enterprises and which will place at the disposal of the bankers reliable information regarding motion picture companies and the principals associated with these companies. Prominent bankers addressed the conference and promised heartiest co-operation in waging war on bogus motion picture projects.

According to Mr. Quigley's statement, active representatives of the Vigilance Committee will be maintained in twenty-five of the country's business centers. Their task will be to investigate all motion picture stock promotion schemes in their territories and report their findings to the Vigilance Committee in New York. Bankers approached for information by prospective investors in film enterprises will, upon application to the Vigilance Committee, be furnished with particulars regarding these enterprises and the men connected with them. In this way, the committee plans with the bankers' co-operation to drive all fly-by-night organizations from the field. Where a new enterprise, not previously known of, is mentioned in the bankers' inquiries, investigators will be put to work by the Vigilance Committee so as to ascertain the character of the new project and the standing of those supporting it.

Co-operation of the bankers will be effected through the American Bankers Association and the Investment Bankers Association of America. Reports on specific promotions of a questionable character will be filed with both of these organizations for action by their proper committees.

The extent to which the public has been victimized is evidenced in figures presented at Friday's meeting showing that during the past year a quarter of a billion dollars in questionable film stock was offered to the public and more than fifty thousand dollars actually invested in worthless securities of this character.

"There is being perpetrated throughout America a gigantic swindle," said Chairman Quigley. "The motion picture has provided unscrupulous promoters with the greatest bonanza they have ever known. Our committee has information which indicates that this wholesale swindle in the sale of stock of film promotion schemes is not confined to any one section of the country. Our aim is to put a stop to these activities so far as possible. In order to assure the success of this vigilance work, we need the cooperation of the banking interests and for that purpose we have today invited several prominent bankers to attend our meeting."

William A. Brady, president of the National Association, was another speaker at the meeting. He said the bankers should take the motion picture industry more seriously; that while a great amount of bogus movie stock has been floated in this country, the motion picture industry is not alone in this respect since other industries at their inception were afflicted with the wild-cat promoters. After calling attention to the high calibre of the leading men in the industry and the public service rendered by the screen through its established and reputable organizations, Mr. Brady concluded with the statement that properly conducted the motion-picture business is one of the soundest to invest in.

Thomas J. Reynolds, vice-president of the National City Bank, said that the importance of this vigilance work was fully appreciated by bankers throughout the country as well as by all business men and suggested that the Vigilance Committee work in harmony with the American Bankers Association and the Investment Bankers of America.

G. B. Walker, of the American Bankers Association, assured the committee that the American Bankers Association would gladly accept reports on questionable film enterprises and would handle such information through their regular channels.

John Young, of the National City Company, gave assurances of hearty cooperation.

Warren Resigns Presidency

F. B. WARREN announces his resignation as president and director of the F. B. Warren Corporation, motion-picture distributors at 1540 Broadway, New York City, effective November 8.

Mr. Warren in a brief statement announces that he has sold his entire interest in the company bearing his name to Wid Gunning, thereby giving Mr. Gunning the complete ownership of the organization.

When questioned at the Hotel Astor, where he makes his home, he declined to discuss at this time his personal plans in the industry.

Canadian Censors Plan Greater Co-operation

REPRESENTATIVES of all moving picture censorship boards in Canada gathered at Toronto, Ontario, recently, to discuss and agree upon co-operation and the application of standard principles to the work of censorship. The conference was considered highly important as it was a step in the direction of standardized censorship as desired by film exchanges and other interests of the Dominion. One of those in attendance at the convention was Mrs. H. R. Patriarche of Winnipeg, member of the Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors, who made interesting comment on the subject of film censorship in Manitoba and generally.

"Our plan is simple," she declared. "We consider that the whole effect and type of picture is the important thing rather than individual incidents. If the actual tone of a picture is off-color we reject it absolutely rather than attempt a large number of eliminations. If the motive of the picture is wrong, making crime heroic, condoning brutality or stirring sex emotions, we reject the film. The flashing of a knife does not necessarily mean a wrong motive or an instance to be eliminated. The underlying motive counts."

Kansas Exhibitors Support "Exhibitor Days" Drive

Exhibitors of Kansas pledged their support to "Exhibitors' Days," November 2 and 3, at meetings in the eight Congressional districts of the state last week, and the success of the venture was a tribute to the loyalty of the theatre owners of the Sunflower state. The event might have been called a "self-benefit," as one-half the profits made on one of the two days, the exhibitor himself to select the day, went towards the maintenance of the state organization, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kansas.

M. Van Praag, president of the organization; R. G. Liggett, vice president; C. M. Patee, of Lawrence, Kan., and H. R. Troh, of Valley Falls, Kan., not only volunteered their time in making a success of the venture by addressing various exhibitor meetings throughout the state, but bore the burden of expenses as well.

Alexander Beyfuss Elected President of "Exceptional"

AT a meeting held in Boston, Mass., this week, the board of directors of Exceptional Pictures Corporation elected Alexander Beyfuss to the presidency of the corporation.

Since Exceptional Pictures entered the field on last September 1st, it has made rapid strides forward, and its success in releasing such unusual productions as "His Nibs" and Martin Johnson's Jungle Adventures" has excited highly favorable comment as well as affording expectations for new achievements in the way of exceptional releases still to come.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

George Walsh, the stalwart moving picture star, made personal appearances at the Rialto theatre this week, coming from Los Angeles for a two weeks' stay. Following his engagement at the Rialto, he will play for a week at McVickers. Another film celebrity who will be seen at McVicker's shortly is Grace Valentine, who has just made a decided hit in Select's new picture, "Man's Home."

Douglas D. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Company's Practical Picture Division, addressed the Chicago convention of the American Pulp and Paper Association this week. He told the delegates in detail just how the association might employ practical motion pictures to increase business and train new salesmen.

W. D. Russell, of Russell's Productions, has returned from New York City, where he went to complete plans for putting "Shadows of Conscience," his big feature picture, starring Russell Simpson, on the state right market. New York picture men who had the opportunity of attending trade showings of this picture were strongly impressed with its value as a box office attraction and predict a big success for it.

The Chicago Film Board of Trade has named a grievance committee of three members composed of I. L. Lesserman, manager of Universal's Chicago office; Clyde Eckhart, manager of Fox's Chicago office; and R. C. Seery, manager of First National's Chicago office and has invited the Motion Picture Theatre Owner's organization to appoint a similar committee, which will meet with the Film Board of Trade representatives and settle differences arising between exhibitors and exchanges in this territory. It is suggested by the Film Board of Trade that if the two committees cannot arrive at a decision when sitting together that they appoint an arbiter who shall have the power to make final decision on questions in dispute.

Hiram Lutz, Fox News camera man, was busy in Chicago this week in connection with the visit of Marshal Foch, of the French Army, to the Windy City. Mr. Lutz has travelled throughout the country with the noted French leader and secured a large footage of interesting pictures featuring the reception America gave the Marshal.

D. M. Vandawalker has accepted a position with the out-door advertising department of the Thos. Cusack Company and will specialize on picture and theatre advertising.

Ascher Brothers are again running their Capitol theatre at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, as a unified program house, five acts of vaudeville, as well as feature and short reel pictures being on the program. Charles Menzing, a veteran of the Ascher organization, and well known in Chicago, through his connection with local theatres, is in charge of the house.

The trade showing of "Conflict," Universal's splendid new feature starring Priscilla Dean and Herbert Rawlinson, at Aryan Grotto on Tuesday of this week, brought out a big crowd of exhibitors and theatre men. The thrilling climax of this picture was highly praised by those who witnessed it and many predicted it will be a splendid box office success in this district.

Mary Carr, the little mother of "Over the Hill," made personal appearances at the performances of that picture this week and received an unusual amount of newspaper publicity. She was also the honored guest at various women's club's functions and of civic organizations during the few days she spent in Chicago.

Charles Goetz has resigned the management of Associated Producers' Chicago branch and it is understood will return to the New York headquarters of that company.

Sales Manager Eichenlaub, of Associated First National, is in St. Louis this week for a conference with Joe Desberger, newly appointed manager of Associated First National in that city.

Manager Cecil Maberry is mourning the loss of his beautiful golden bird cage and pair of gorgeous, automatic song birds, with which he used to entertain visitors to his private office. It disappeared as if by the hand of a magician a few days ago and no trace of his plaything can be found.

Chicago abandoned its daylight saving schedule on October 30th and went back to standard time, and already the Motion Picture Theatre Owners are making plans to combat or modify the present daylight saving ordinance before next summer. It is estimated that the daylight saving cost Chicago theatres a very large sum during the past summer, and it will be the aim of the theatre men to have the period of daylight saving, which now runs from May 1st, to October 30th, materially curtailed or, if possible, to have the ordinance revoked so that the city will run on standard time during the entire year.

President A. E. Lefcourt, of Pioneer, has appointed Ed. Silton general field manager. Mr. Silton eventually will make his headquarters in New York City but will be located at the Chicago office for some time. He, this week, is making a visit to the Cincinnati and Indianapolis exchanges of his organization. Mr. Silton has appointed Jack Barry Chicago sales manager as a reward for the splendid work he has done with the organization for some time past.

Harry Peters is scheduled to go to the Grant Hospital this week to have his tonsils removed and expects to be around film row again within a few days.

Balaban & Katz have renewed contract with Miss Marjorie Dodge, prima donna, for the entire year. She has been the principal soprano in Balaban & Katz organization for the past three years and has the distinction of having appeared on the opening programs of the Riviera, Tivoli and the Chicago theatres.

The opening of "Theodora," on Friday night at the La Salle theatre, under the Goldwyn banner, and the Chicago premier of "The Queen of Sheba," Fox's big, spectacular cinema at the Woods on Thursday night, were important theatrical events of the week. The Goldwyn organization are abandoning the invitation presentation of "Theodora," originally scheduled for Thursday night out of courtesy to William Fox, who previously had scheduled the opening of "The Queen of Sheba" for that night.

The Hodkinson organization is now located in its new quarters at 730 S. Wabash avenue.

The theatre, owned by Dallas Kuntzi, was destroyed during the course of a fire which swept an entire block at Chestnut, Illinois, wrecking six business houses and causing an estimated loss of forty thousand dollars.

Paramount's new Milwaukee exchange opened its doors Monday with A. F. Bernstein in charge as branch manager; H. A. Simons, chief accountant; Charles D. Keohler, chief booker; A. H. Hancox, Eddy Felix and M. M. Hirsch, salesmen.

Louis Bloom, owner of the Monarch theatre, has purchased the Crystal, a 299-seat house, on West 63rd street, from Max Aaron.

Tom Gallery is visiting Chicago and may make some personal appearances while in this city, in connection with the showing of "The Son of Wallingford," one of Vitagraph's important Fall releases, which Chicagoans will see for the first time, within a few days. Mr. Gallery has a big part in this picture, which is acclaimed as his greatest success, and his father, Captain Gallery, a veteran of Chicago's police force, has been kept busy receiving congratulations from his hundreds of friends on Tom's success in the big picture ever since Vitagraph's pre-view showing at Aryan Grotto.

Joe Friedman, of Celebrated, has recently added a number of important features and short reelers to his list of releases, including twelve Scattergood stories, two reelers; eight Western Cuneo features; twelve five reel Westerns and eighteen two reel Westerns; twelve two reel Irving Cumming's Northwestern Mounted pictures; six Oscar Atfel productions; four Macklyn Arbuckle features, and a series of Burr Novelty releases, one reelers combining a fashion show in color, some beautiful scenics and a cartoon. "Why Girls Leave Home," one of his recently acquired features of merit, will have a first run in the loop at a Jones, Linick & Schaefer house and its first run at Indianapolis at the Ohio.

Watterson Rothacker Goes to the Coast

Watterson R. Rothacker leaves this week for perhaps a month's stay on the Coast, where he will work with Joe Aller to perfect the co-ordination of the Los Angeles Rothacker-Aller Laboratories and the Chicago Rothacker plant. By the co-ordination plan the two plants use the same formulas, processes and time cards. Thus the Coast plant can make prints for the Western theatres and then forward the negative to Chicago, where the remainder of the prints can be turned out—with uniform quality resulting.

While on the Coast Mr. Rothacker will consult with producers concerning the making of their foreign prints in the Rothacker laboratory which is to be built in London.

Little Lord Fauntleroy—
Very fine feature and one which brought good business.

Was much surprised that we had only about average business on this picture, as I consider it one of the best releases this year. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

No Woman Knows—
Wonderful production, well deserving of the high praise it received at my house. Brought great business, too. (West.)

Red Courage—
Good picture with more than usual business. (West.)

The Fox—
Fairly good feature. Average business. (West.)

R-C PICTURES

The Sting of the Lash—
I have always insisted that Pauline Frederick was the greatest actress on the screen—and I still say so. This feature was good and drew well. The women liked it. (East.)

A fairly entertaining subject which held up well for a week's run despite bad weather. (East.)

The Swamp—
Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

REALART

The Speed Girl—

Fine picture. Bebe did herself well in it. Big business. (Middle West.)

Moonlight and Honeysuckle—
An average picture and business. (East.)

Her Face Value—
Frothy, very light—like most of this star's productions, but it pleased the flapper crowd. Had some depths which were not stressed. On the whole, business was fair—though cool weather had a lot to do with that. (East.)

WARREN

The Old Oaken Bucket—
Very fine feature which seemed to please my patrons. Greater business than usual. (West.)

The Blot—
An average production with business about as usual. (East)

SELZNICK

The Last Door—
Decidedly not one of O'Brien's best. Business fair. (East.)

The Fighter—
Conway Tearle does not seem to pull them in at this house. Picture liked by those who viewed it. Business below average. (East.)

Clay Dollars—
An average picture which did not draw well. (East.)

HODKINSON

Pilgrims of the Night—
Fairly entertaining with fair business during run. (West.)

ARROW

God's Country and the Law—
Mighty fine outdoor story; one of Curwood's best. Business good. (Middle West.)

Has beautiful outdoor scenes and was a winner from a box office standpoint. (East.)

EQUITY

Charge It—

The Black Panther's Cub—
An entertaining production with an interest-holding plot. Business capacity. (East.)

Samuels Builds Atmospheric Lobby Front

Manager Samuels, of the Alamo No. 2, Atlanta, had a very effective lobby recently, when he played "Her Sturdy Oak" for a return engagement.

The center of the lobby was occupied by a small oak tree. The floor of the lobby was covered with leaves, moss, and soft turf, so that the tree, which was a real one, and brought in from the woods that morning, seems to be growing.

In front of the tree was a small, white-painted bench, on which sat a very large doll, dressed in an airy-fairy dress, something on the order of those worn by the star in the picture. The doll was quite blonde, and with her hair dressed like Wanda Hawley's.

There were pots of flowers around, and a book lying open on the doll's lap added to the effect.

There were little hand-drawn cards around which read:

"If you want to own a sturdy oak, be a clinging vine."

"It's the girl with the smile, who knows how to cling, that wins a sturdy oak."

"Be pretty and pleasant—and let who will be clever—if you would find a sturdy oak," and so on.

Striking Lobby Front Used at Milwaukee

The accompanying cut shows the lobby front which Manager Perlowitz of the Rialto theatre, Milwaukee, arranged for his showing of "The Heart of the North."

The color scheme of the display was in daring colors, a midnight blue serving as the main background against which the red of painted flames and smoke clouds were brought out in brilliant relief.

Pittsburgh Veterans Prefer Pictures

When the Pittsburgh Gazette announced a theatre party for the wards of the United States Marine Hospital and the inmates of the various homes for the aged, a general shout went up. The old folks expressly thanked the theatre for having chosen a picture show instead of a spoken play. One old man wrote:

"My hearing is bad and I am damn sensitive about it."

The picture was "Experience," George V. Hobart's allegorical play put on the screen by Paramount. The entertainment was generous on the part of the Olympic Theatre and the Gazette-Times but it is a poor philanthropy that does not bring a flood of good-will. William N. Robson, the Paramount exploiteer, claims to have had the first altruistic impulse. He sold the theatre on the idea of admitting the old-folks. The theatres then turned the entire credit to the Gazette-Times which printed the stories of the matinee on the front page.

Old folks and injured war veterans don't travel readily on street cars, and the paper put in a plea for volunteer transportation. F. B. Stockwell, a local cab man, furnished the cars free of charge.

Novelty lobby display for "The Shark Master" used by the Family theatre, Philadelphia

Hyman's "Bits of Life" Presentation Numbers

As a prologue number for "Bits of Life" Manager Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre worked out an idea in connection with Lake's "Old Timer's Waltzes."

The set used was a scene in New York's east side showing a row of tenement houses at night with lights dimly flickering. Lamp posts were illuminated at either end of the stage and an owl lunch wagon projected from the wings at left.

The number opened with a typical "touch" ambling across the stage. Others appeared in quaint old east side costume and finally the gayety began. The orchestra played such old successes as "The Bowery," "The Side Walks of New York," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "Daisy Bell," "Comrades," "Little Annie Rooney," "She May Have Seen Better Days," "The Band Played On" and "After the Ball."

An interlude was also used by Mr. Hyman in his presentation of the picture. This number is explained by the accompanying cut.

Good Idea That Can Be Used Anywhere

J. S. Toland, publicity director for First National at the Cleveland exchange, has discovered a new exploitation stunt which by the way is within the reach of nearly every exhibitor.

One of Cleveland's classiest jewelry windows displays a chronometer that invites passersby to regulate their timepieces. Recently in addition to the clock, the window carried a display of silver picture frames. Mr. Toland supplied photos of various First National stars for each frame and the store window dresser did the rest. Every photograph was autographed so it didn't look in the least like an advertisement, and there was always a crowd around the window deciphering their names.

"Toonerville" Comedies Exploited in Novel Way

It has remained for F. Reed Hass, manager of the McKinley theatre, Canton, O., to think up a new exploitation angle on the "Toonerville" comedies.

Recently when one of the "Toonerville" releases was on his bill, Mr. Reed sent out notices to all the operators of the "one man" trolley cars running in Canton that they would be admitted free.

Then, knowing there is little love existing between employes of these cars and the conductors and motormen of the larger cars, he did not fail to have the word passed around at the barns that the "one man" operators were going to be guests at the theatre.

The result was that the others made it a point to be in the theatre to guy the fellow that operates the little cars.

Modest Lobby Decorations Gets Business for "Anatol"

When Manager Creislein of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, played "The Affairs of Anatol," he realized that very little exploitation was necessary, when the names of the stars had been announced. But he chose an effective way of doing that.

A cut-out of Wallace Reid, in evening clothes, was posed at one side of the lobby, with hand outstretched. In his hands were streamers of vari-colored crepe paper, and these streamers led to various portions of the lobby. To the other end of each streamer was a small cut-out of the head of one of the stars in the picture. The streamers led in all directions, and people grew quite eager in their hunt to find the face at the end of the streamer.

This, with a twenty-four sheet across the front of the theatre, was all for the lobby, itself. But in the space back of the box-office, leading to the theatre proper, were posed twelve cut-outs of the stars in the picture. A deep green carpet on the floor, two or three shaded parlor floor-lamps, and tall baskets of flowers aided the illusion of some social function attended by the twelve "cut-out stars."

Box Office Boosted by Poetry

Zimmerman, North Tonawanda, N. Y., Exhibitor, Tells His Advertising Story in Lyrics

ONE hates to accuse anyone of such a thing, but Fred M. Zimmerman, president and general manager of Nu-Art Pictures corporation and owner of the Avondale theatre in North Tonawanda, N. Y., is a poet. The secret came out this week when residents of the western New York town received in the mail some excellent business pulling epistles from the pen of Mr. Zimmerman. A few days later another letter arrived at the doors of patrons and soon the whole community was commenting on the stunt, in fact so much interest was aroused that the high school principal and L. E. Barger, resident manager of the Avondale, got together and arranged a contest in which the students are taking part. The scholars are writing poems along the lines originated by Mr. Zimmerman booming the Avondale. Money prizes will go to the winners.

To prove that Bill Shakespeare had little on Fred Zimmerman we print some of the poetry which helped bring Tonawanda folks to the Avondale box office. Listen:

Sunday is your day of rest, so do the things you like the best
And after dinner when you find a desire to appease your mind
There is the AVONDALE.

And so each night, as the week glides by,
  Some recreation you should try,
To rest your tired and weary brain
  And so we go right back again to the AVONDALE.

It's comfy and cozy all the time,
  Its pictures, music you will find
Are the best to be had in the amusement line—
At the AVONDALE.

The next letter sent out thanked the community for their attendance on the occasion of the showing of "The Old Nest," and "When Dawn Came," and went on to say that the patron responsible for the following must have derived an unusual amount of pleasure at the Avondale at a very reasonable figure. The patron, by the way, is Mr. Zimmerman. Hear:

For years and years we've heard it said,
  A man's a fool to board 'til dead,
'Cause a heap of work demands some play,
  And makes you fit for next day,
So remember the Avondale, handy by
  And tonight when you finish your dinner try
An hour and a half, or two if you wish,
  Of pictures and music served as a dish
So palatable—at the AVONDALE.

While the poetry is rather deep stuff it got the business and because of this fact Fred has decided to keep on writing it.

Football Schedule Printed on Herald

School opened at the University of Texas September 27th, 1921, with a very large number of students registering. Mr. Hegman, manager of Austin's most attractive theatre, the Queen, has a true psychologist's viewpoint of business. He distributed dodgers advertising "Peck's Bad Boy," having a boy who resembled Jackie Coogan, stand with a dog and distribute these dodgers to the registration crowds. The college football schedule was arranged around the advertisement of "Peck's Bad Boy"; not only the schedule but the picture of glorious Tom Dennis, Texas' hero—the man who won the Texas A & M game last November.

Then Hegman enticed the students down to see "Peck's Bad Boy" by the following means: He made very charming circulars, got the name of the House Representative for the sorority or fraternity (this information can be obtained very easily from the registrar's office) and sent the herald with the invitation: "We have plenty of nice boxes. Come and enjoy an evening of real fun, and also make another rushee pledge." (The show was run during "rush" week.)

These novel methods of exploitation went like wildfire even with very good opposition attractions.

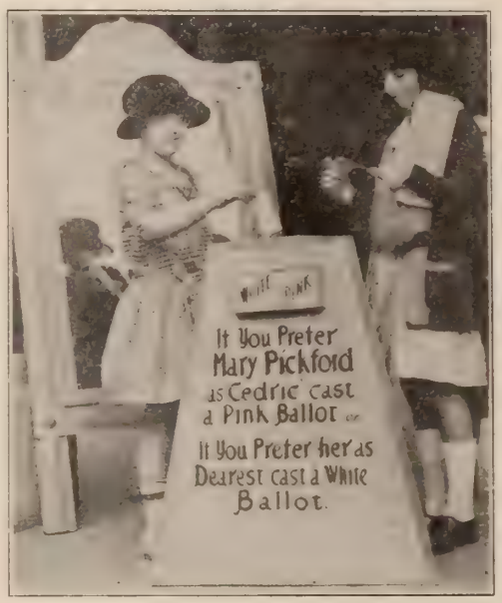
Inexpensive Novelties for "Fauntleroy" Make Hit at Atlanta

During the run of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," at the Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga., all the population of that city had a chance to record their choice for Miss Pickford as the little Lord or as "Dearest," his mother.



The idea was put into effect by a special representative of the United Artists Corporation, and had the full co-operation of the theatre management. It was intended to create "talking" publicity for the picture and was entirely successful.

The voting was done as the Pickford fans left the theatre. In the lobby were attendants who handed out pink and white cards, the pink card being a vote for Miss Pickford in the character of the little Lord, and the white one being a vote for "Dearest."

The contest also was successful in that it obtained good publicity, the newspapers printing spread stories and carrying cuts showing the voters casting their ballots.

Another exploitation stunt which pleased Atlanta theatre goers was carried out when the services of a handsome eleven year old local boy, attired as "Little Lord Fauntleroy," were secured to give out programs for the picture.

Cuts illustrating the voting contest appear on this page.

Log Cabin Lobby Display Goes Good for Nichols

The accompanying view of lobby display on "The Idol of the North" shows how Manager Nichols of the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C., broke his summer records. The lobby was covered with rough wooden slabs, transforming it into a northern cabin. A real bearskin was hung beside the window, and oddly-lettered signs attracted attention, in addition to plenty of stills and larger photos. Big newspaper publicity helped beat the hot weather for a record.

Schools and Literary Clubs Aid "Disraeli"

In presenting "Disraeli," in Buffalo, Manager Arthur L. Skinner played the educational value of the story by inviting all the teachers and principals of the west side schools to a special free screening of the George Arliss production in the Victoria theatre last Wednesday afternoon.

Not only the school folks, but members of several literary clubs received invitations. The Victoria was packed to the roof, for everyone who received a "bid" accepted.

As a result of the showing Mr. Skinner was able to get much valuable advertising through those in attendance telling of the picture's worth. The principals and teachers urged students to attend the Victoria.

In addition to the "educational party," Mr. Skinner arranged for several excellent window displays in the vicinity of the theatre, took additional space in the newspapers and put on a special lobby display.

New Angle to Wrecked Car Stunt

Manager Kistler, recently of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, now located as manager of the Strand theatre, Gaffney, S. C., put on speed during the first week of his new job by staging a novel exploitation campaign for "Too Much Speed."

Kistler picked up a wrecked Ford car, tied a cow bell fast to the ancient machine and then dragged the whole outfit, bell clanging and loose parts flopping, about the city. A banner connected the ballyhoo up with the showing of "Too Much Speed" at the Strand.

After the daily parade the banner and the wreck were parked in front of the theatre.

Cummings Gets Editor to Boost "The Old Nest"

Evert R. Cummings, manager of the Fort Armstrong and Majestic theatres, Rock Island, Ill., operated by Rosenfield Hopp & Company, grabbed off the most valued space in a newspaper when he induced the editor of the Rock Island Argus to use a half column of his editorial page for an article praising "The Old Nest."

The Argus editor was invited to a special screening of the picture and its good points, especially in its theme, judiciously pointed out to him. The result was the editorial that ran under the caption of "Elevating Amusements."

Mr. Cummings secured the services of a telegraph operator and placed him at the disposal of patrons of the theatre, to send messages in the same manner as has been described a number of times in these columns.

A huge telegram reproduction was used in the Western Union windows and other co-operative advertising stunts were put over.

Liberal newspaper space was purchased and plenty of posters placed in advantageous positions.

Lester Enters Float in Festival Parade

On the occasion of the annual Floral Festival at Columbia, S. C., L. T. Lester, manager of five Columbia theatres, alive to all advertising opportunities, entered an artistically arranged float in the parade. The float was built of flowers and tissue paper and besides advertising First National stars, carried in the rear seat of the car Mr. Lester's two little daughters. A card read "Lester's Little Queens." Much favorable comment was forthcoming from Mr. Lester's contribution to the Festival and the children were close rivals in popularity with the chosen queen of the event.

Buffalo Theatre Builds Fine Lobby Display

Howard J. Smith, manager of the Palace theatre, Buffalo, has a new exploitation idea. Most houses show trailers inside. Howard presents his outside.

"The Fox" was the attraction at the Palace and Mr. Smith conceived the novel stunt of putting on a miniature show in the front of the lobby. He set up a portable projector and made a box-type screen, consisting of an oblong-shaped box standing on end, a small hole cut out of one side and a bit of screen placed over the hole.

On this little screen, Mr. Smith flashed the trailer furnished on "The Fox." For a week in advance of the showing this same trailer was used inside the Palace.

Another eye-catching part of the lobby ballyhoo was a large stuffed fox, which Mr. Smith borrowed from a local taxidermist. Mr. Smith placed leaves and branches of trees around the animal, giving it a life-like appearance.

As a result of these excellent stunts, some good newspaper advertising and a number of window cards, Mr. Smith was able to do the best business recorded at the Palace box office since last Spring.

Good Small Town Stunt Originated by McConville

A strip of light-colored flooring, 10 x 8 feet, was laid on the sidewalk in front of the Rialto theatre, Fall River, Mass, during the run of "The Affairs of Anatol." The reading matter, hooking up both the picture and the brand of flooring, was printed so as to read two ways. Manager L. M. Boas and the Paramount exploiteer John P. McConville co-operated on the stunt. McConville also used the same tie-up for the Park theatre, Barre, Vt., thereby adding one more piece of evidence to the proposition that "If it works for the other fellow it will work for me."

Atmospheric prologue for "The Old Nest" originated by S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Allen theatre, Cleveland

Notopoulos Gives "Over the Hill" Every Aid

Manager A. Notopoulos, manager of the Capitol theatre, Altoona, Pa., executed a resourceful tie-up with the largest local music house in the city during the run of "Over the Hill."

With the assistance of a Fox representative, Notopoulas contrived with the music dealer to give added publicity to the sale of phonograph records and sheet music during the week of the picture's presentation. Considerable advertising space was used by the dealer, and the "Over the Hill" song was prominently featured. Of course, much free advertising accrued to the Capitol theatre from the newspaper space devoted to the song and paid for by the merchant.

Following the third reel of the film an intermission was offered, and a phonograph lent by the dealer played the song. Its appropriateness and the plaint of its melody were a strong part of the week's program.

In addition to this effective tie-up, Notopoulos constructed a special front for his lobby and arranged a private view for the clergymen, educators and leading society members of the city on the night before the opening.

Another feature of his campaign was the placing of half-sheet cards on the front of all the trolley cars of Altoona. A special trolley car was utilized for the carrying of an "Over the Hill" banner. This car was driven about the city promiscuously and attracted the interest of the public on every street of the business and residential districts.

Manager W. C. Brimmer shows exhibitors how to utilize exploitation material on "The Son of Wallingford" by putting splendid display in the big window of Vitagraph's exchange on South Wabash avenue. At night it is vividly illuminated

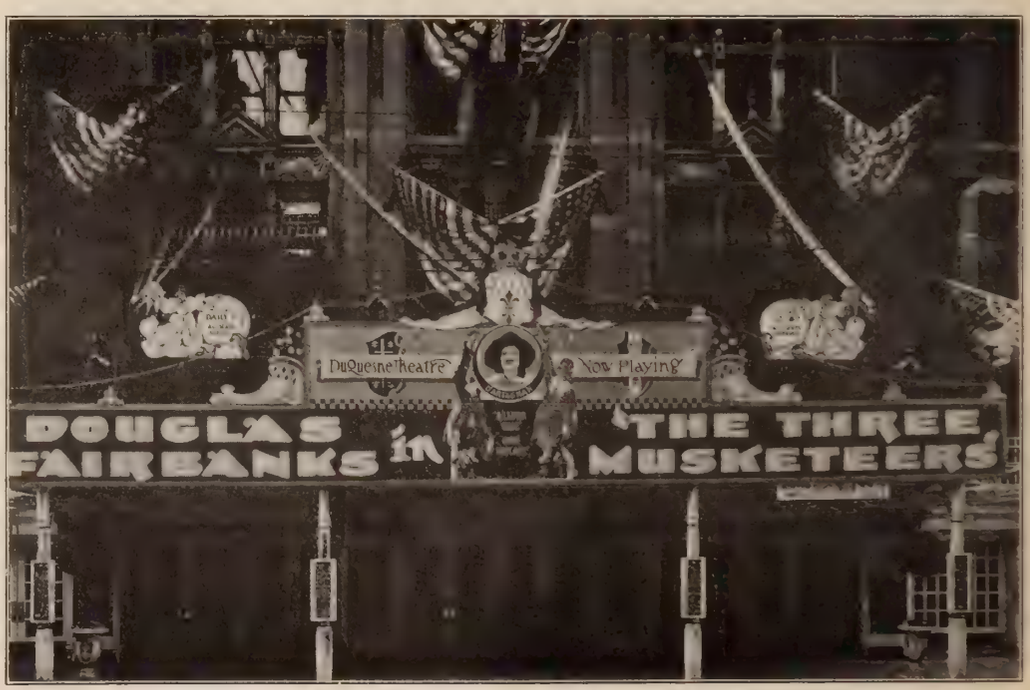
Illustrative Symbols in Glens Falls Exploitation

A bizarre but nevertheless striking display was made for "The Affairs of Anatol" when it played at the Rialto theatre, Glens Falls, N. Y. Herman Phillips, the Albany exploiteer for Paramount, grabbed the location at the arcade just opposite the public square.

He placed a big Webster's Dictionary on a stand to which he attached a card, reading:

"All the 'good' adjectives in the dictionary will describe the wonder picture 'The Affairs of Anatol' at the Rialto theatre."

Phillips also disproved the coal shortage rumor by swiping a huge lump of anthracite and placing it on a stand alongside the dictionary. An accompanying card read:



"Blackstone, a great lawyer and man of affairs, if he were alive today, would appreciate 'The Affairs of Anatol.' See it at the Rialto Theatre."

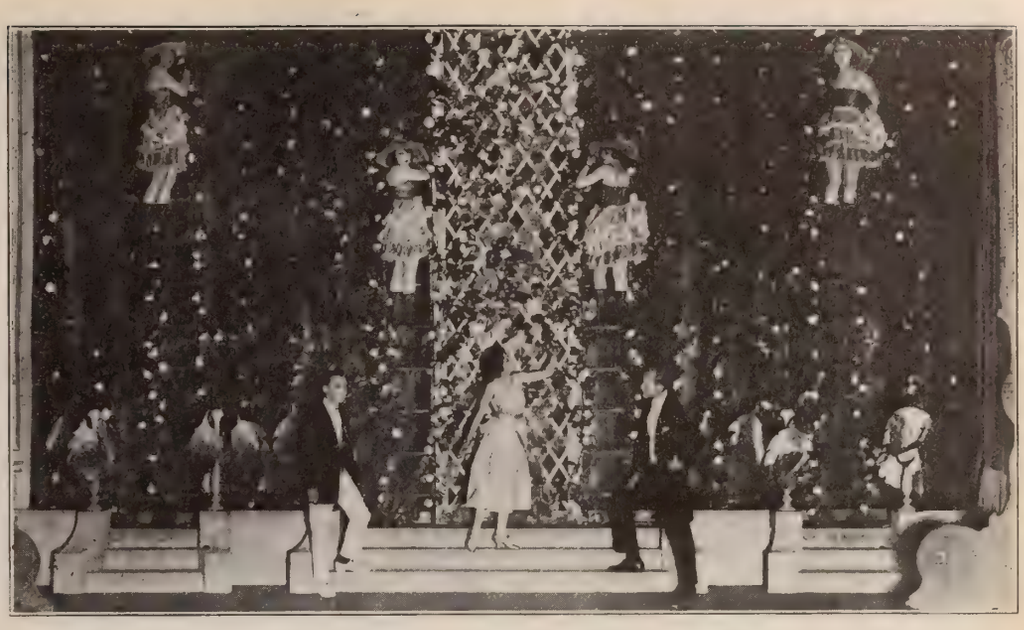
Lithographs of Agnes Ayres, Gloria Swanson, Wanda Hawley, and Monte Blue, flanked the two stands. Phillips tested this display by standing across the street for an entire morning and his report was:

"Not a single person who passed failed to stop and look at the display."

Lobby Ballyhoo on "Peck's Bad Boy" Gets Results

Mgr. Bert Jordon, of Princess theatre, Memphis, Tenn., attracted a lot of attention to "Peck's Bad Boy" by use of a grocery store display of good variety. It tied up very well in reminding all of the pranks of the mischievous boy, as did the big wagon with cut-outs of a boy and dog goin' to the store. As groceries can be borrowed so easily, there was almost no expense connected with the display.

This is the way Roy C. Brown, manager of the Duquesne theatre, Pittsburg, decorated his lobby front for the showing of "The Three Musketeers"



Excellent Prologue Presented for "Dangerous Curve Ahead"

A novelty prologue which served as a most appealing musical number as well was staged at the California theatre recently during the run of "Dangerous Curve Ahead."

The prologue opened with one of the most popular numbers from "Canary Cottage," "I Never Knew," by James Burroughs and chorus in a richly appointed stage setting as a background. Followed a dancing number "Blue Danube Waltz" by Arthur Norbury and Marion Gould which led into a grand finale by company and chorus, "The Ladder of Roses" from the New York Hippodrome production "Hip, Hip, Hooray."

During the rendition of the verse, a ladder of roses, covering the entire opening, and studded with red, white and blue lights, descended slowly, and as the chorus swung into the refrain of the number, the girls began climbing the ladders in one of the most pleasing and attractive ensembles ever staged at the California theatre.

A distinctive feature of the prologue was the lighting effects, especially during the finale, the lights being so arranged among the flowers as to represent a brilliantly lighted rose garden at night. Another attractive feature was the costumes, the girls making two complete changes for the opening and closing numbers.

Landers Holds "Ghost Party" on Halloween

C. H. Landers, live-wire manager of the Opera House in Fredonia, N. Y., took advantage of the "ghost" situations in "A Midnight Bell," to put on a "Hallowe'en Party," October 27 and 28. Mr. Landers took large ads in the Dunkirk newspapers to advertise his party. He also showed "Haunted Spooks," a Harold Lloyd comedy as a special "Hallowe'en comedy." Folks took kindly to the idea and the box office kindly took their money.

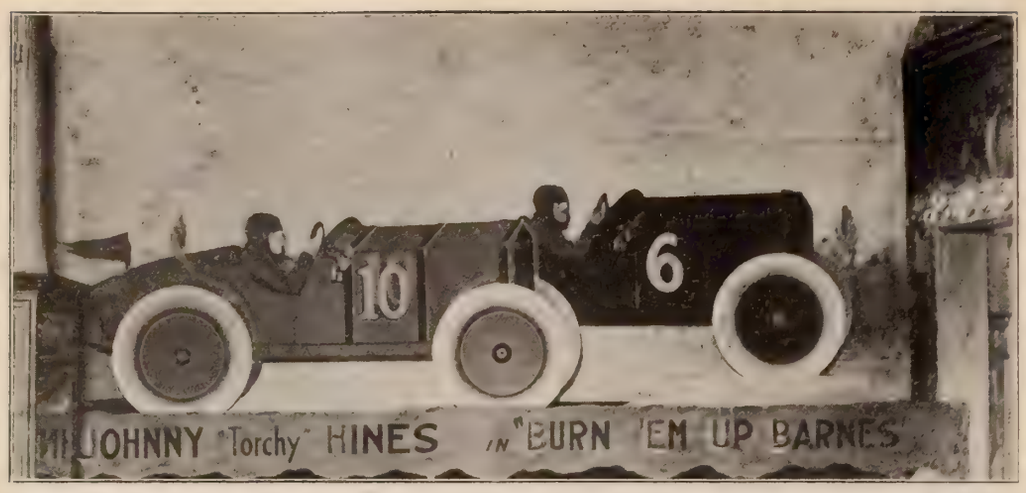
Vogel Hires "Anatol" Headquarters

When "The Affairs of Anatol" played at The American theatre, Bellingham, Wash., A. Mike Vogel, Paramount exploiteer, acquitted himself of a brand new bit of exploitation.

He rented an empty store, and fitted it up as an "Anatol Headquarters." The interior was fitted with banners, stills, and other accessories. Donations from the Victor Talking Machine Company, a piano store, and a furniture store gave the place a lively and prosperous appearance. Since the goods were loaned and identification tags attached they formed a co-operative exhibit. The theatre hired two girls, one to pound jazz from the piano, while the other served coffee to the guest and showed them the stills.

There was a steady flow of visitors all day long, and it became necessary for "anybody who was anybody" to visit the Anatol Headquarters.

Telegrams dated from Los Angeles and signed by the stars decorated the front windows of the store. Cut-outs from three-sheets were also used for the exterior.



Cut-outs used to advantage in a lobby display for "The Affairs of Anatol" during the showing of this picture at the Rivoli theatre, La Crosse, Wis. Manager William Freise and Paramount Exploiteer Leon J. Bamberger arranged the lobby display shown

Spiffy Sandwich Man for "Experience"

A natty gent—dress suit—high topper—white gloves—cane, to all appearances a normal human being patroled the streets of Evansville, Ind. The only flaw in his make-up was the black ink on his otherwise white shirt front which read: "Did you see my back?"

Pinned to the shoulders of the coat and hanging down the small of his back was a banner advertising "Experience" at the Strand. The contrast between the neat-looking gentleman and the mission of his journey made the ballyhoo effective. Oscar A. Kantner, Paramount exploiteer, arranged the stunt.

Samuels Uses Log Cabin Lobby Display

Manager Samuels, of the Alamo No. 2 theatre, Atlanta, recently played "The River's End" for about a fifth or sixth run for his Friday and Saturday business, and, despite the fact that the picture has been seen again and again in Atlanta he "cleaned up" on.

He built his lobby into a log-cabin, lightly sprinkled with snow. He masked the one-sheet frames at the side of the theatre, and in every way possible, he hid the "personality" of the Alamo No. 2 beneath an exterior that was a faithful wilderness cabin.

There were two or three pine-trees—tiny saplings that would not dwarf the size of the cabin, and of the lobby, and they too were sprinkled with snow. In front of the cabin, on the left-side of the door, there was a small shelf with a wooden bucket half-full of water and a tin washbasin. Underneath the shelf a tin bucket.

On a wooden block above the door the words "The River's End" had been burned—in a very good imitation of the way a magnifying glass and strong sunlight will burn wood.

A pair of snow-shoes, worn and patched, hung on one side of the wall. A pair of skis leaned against the other wall, while a gun, fishing rod and tackle and divers other small articles that are necessary in the woods, were scattered about to lend atmosphere.

Potted Palms Symbol of Prosperity

Manager Charles Eggers of the Lyric theatre, McKeesport, Pa., has made his lobby a home of the evergreen. No matter what the season, there are always hothouse plants placed around and about.

In a key city there are foyers, lobbies, tapestries, friezes, wall paintings, frescoes, and the like; but in a small town the plants in the lobby mean much.

They are symbols of distinction and refinement. This policy is another reason why Frank Ponoplos, the proprietor, isn't worried about depression.

Blue Mouse Ties Up with Football Game

The management of the Blue Mouse theatre, Minneapolis, took advantage of the big football game between Minnesota and Indiana universities recently by distributing over 5,000 score cards containing a scene from "Why Girls Leave Home," and the added information that the picture was playing at the theatre.

According to the manager of the Blue Mouse the stunt caused the crowd to fight for the score cards, and the result of the exploitation proved to be very satisfactory in its box-office results.

Birch Invents Novel Animated Lobby Contrivanc

Al Birch, manager of the Princess theatre, Denver, hit upon a novel scheme in advertising his recent engagement of "Burn 'Em Up Barnes."

With a twenty-four sheet showing the racing scene of the feature, Mr. Birch constructed an ingenious lobby contrivance that attracted the attention of every person who passed the theatre.

The wheels of the car Johnny Hines drives in the race, reproduced practically normal size in the twenty-four sheet, were cut out and mounted on axles connected with a motor. Then the mechanical contrivance and the twenty-four sheet were placed over the lobby entrance so that when the current was turned on the motor the wheels of the lithographed racer revolved at a tremendous speed.

Mechanical effects also carried out the idea of a real machine in action. A small steam pipe concealed behind the twenty-four sheet furnished a good imitation of dust clouds and an exhaust pipe was arranged, from which, by use of another clever mechanical rig, a realistic impression of flames shooting from the exhaust was presented.

Noise effects of racing cars running at full speed could be heard half a block away.

A cut illustrating Mr. Birch's ingenious lobby display appears on this page.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Broadway Showing for "A Man's Home"

A BROADWAY showing has been arranged for "A Man's Home." "The Greatest Picture That Has Ever Carried a Selznick Trade-Mark," has been booked for an early engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York City. The play date has not yet been decided upon, but will probably be either the third or fourth week in November, the current month.

The Capitol date, arranged through the New York exchange, promises to stand out as one of the big events of the season. S. L. Rothafel was among the first to see the big Selznick picture after it had been finally cut and titled some months ago and was so impressed with its artistry and power that he has been an enthusiastic booster for the photoplay ever since.

Hayakawa Popular with New Yorkers

Recognition has come to Sessue Hayakawa in most encouraging fashion from exhibitors in New York City and environs, judging from the volume of bookings on his most recent R-C Production "The Swamp," reports that company.

Hayakawa's latest three R-C subjects have been shown to Broadway picture audiences with excellent box office results, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution for R-C Pictures. "The First Born" ran a week at the Strand and flirted with the house record established by "Kismet," another R-C production starring Otis Skinner. "Where Lights Are Low," which presented the star in one of his most powerful roles, was featured at the Capitol. Now "The Swamp" again introduces Hayakawa to Broadway theatregoers at the B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre.

Phyllis Haver to Play in Turpin Comedies

Phyllis Haver, whose name is synonymous with Mack Sennett comedies, is back on the Sennett lot after a lay-off of six weeks. Miss Haver has been awaiting the return of Ben Turpin from his Eastern tour of personal appearances in order to appear with him in the leading feminine roles of a series of eight two-reelers. The comedies will be released through First National.

"The Storm" for Universal

Pays $22,500; Harry Carey to Star; Forest Fire to Be Very Spectacular

UNIVERSAL announces the purchase, at the price of $22,500, of the picture rights to "The Storm," Langdon McCormick's successful stage melodrama. It will be used as a vehicle for Harry Carey, Universal's newest super-production star.

"The Storm" created a sensation in New York when it was presented by George Broadhurst, the producer, October 2, 1919. It contained one of the biggest thrills ever presented on the stage—a forest fire scene of unusual realism. The melodrama also had another thrill, almost as gripping as the fire scene. It was a storm scene in which the stage set was all but demolished in the first act. It is around these two big thrills that Universal expects to build the greatest film-melodrama ever screened.

After a year on Broadway, "The Storm" played for a second year in the Manhattan Opera House, New York City, and in other nearby playhouses. This year it is on the road, where it is reported to be meeting with unusual success, despite the entertainment depression outside of New York.

The play is now being put into continuity by Universal's leading scenario writers. Universal reports that options are being taken on an immense tract of forest land which actually will be burned so that the camera can actually record the thrills and terror of a forest fire. This tract will be far removed from other timber, so that there can be no possible chance of a disastrous spread of the fire, says Universal.

"We have bought 'The Storm,' and have paid for it the highest price ever paid for a Universal picture, because we believe it will make the most spectacular photo-play ever seen," said Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, in discussing the new Carey picture.

"There have been storm scenes in pictures and there have been fire scenes in pictures, but we mean to make this the greatest of all, regardless of cost. It will have everything that goes to make a picture great, including a tremendous heart interest."

"Dangerous Curve" is Making Good Record

Goldwyn's second Rupert Hughes feature picture, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," in which its two players now being featured, Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix, made their first appearance together, is proving a rival to "The Old Nest" both in the matter of receipts and in the commendation it is receiving from exhibitors from all parts of the country, announces Goldwyn. In Kansas City, Sam Harding, after a week at the Liberty Theatre, transferred it to the Doric where it ran for two weeks, duplicating the record of "The Old Nest."

Scores of favorable letters have been received from exhibitors.

"The Old Oaken Bucket" Scores on Coast

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET" which has just finished a triumphal engagement on Keith's circuit in the East was this week reported as duplicating its success in far Los Angeles. The Wid Gunning release played at Clunes theatre in the California city and pleased audiences for a full week. The Los Angeles Herald declared in its review "May Tully has woven memory into a beautiful picture. The Old Oaken Bucket plays this week at Clunes and what a theme for a picture memory is."

Dramatic Picture Made in South Sea Isles

The first company of film players to penetrate the remote islands of the South Sea for the purpose of filming a dramatic spectacle arrived in San Francisco from Tahiti last week. This is the first expedition to be launched by the Far East Productions company, recently organized by W. F. Alder and S. M. Unander for the purpose of filming pictures in remote and picturesque quarters of the globe.

The production just completed is from W. F. Alder's book, "The Lagoon of Desire," dealing with the native customs and life of the South Sea islands.

Campaign Book for "A Man's Home" Ready

The Selznick home-office announces that a campaign book of an effective and serviceable character from the exhibitor's angle has been prepared on the Ralph Ince production, "A Man's Home," which has just been released. This campaign book is said to be the best thing of its sort yet turned out by the Selznick publicity department.

Mayer Feature Goes Big in Los Angeles

A new record in downtown runs in Los Angeles was established recently by Louis B. Mayer's "The Child Thou Gavest Me," the initial offering in First National's series of John M. Stahl Productions. The picture played to crowded houses in the business section of Los Angeles three times within a month and is now in demand for one more play date in the first-run district.

"The Infidel" Completed

Katherine MacDonald in Colorful Role in First National Release

PRODUCTION has just been completed on "The Infidel" Katherine MacDonald latest feature for Associated First National, at the Ambassador studios according to word received at the First National offices from B. P. Schulberg, president of the Ambassador Pictures Corporation. He is now on the Coast supervising filming of the MacDonald photoplays.

"The Infidel" is a story of the South Sea Islands from the pen of Chas. A. Logue, former Manhattan newspaper man, who already has more than 200 screen successes to his credit.

More than half the scenes in the picture were made at night, and many of them in conjunction with the Pacific Fleet, with the cooperation of sailors and marines from the dreadnaughts. One of the thrilling episodes aboard ship necessitated thirty-six hours of continuous work because of the fact that the vessel received special orders to put to sea before the date originally contemplated.

In a letter to J. D. Williams, general manager of First National, Mr. Schulberg says: "We have in 'The Infidel' a photoplay that far outclasses anything of its kind I have ever seen. The story gives 'the American Beauty' the greatest role she has yet played and she portrays it admirably.

"The cast selected for Miss MacDonald's support helps materially to secure the total effect of merit. The male lead is played by Robert Ellis who came specially to play the role, from the East where he has been directing for the past three years.

"An important part is interpreted by Joseph J. Dowling in a manner comparable to his work in Mary Pickford's 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' which is receiving extensive praise wherever the picture has been shown. Melbourne MacDowell, Charles Force, Boris Karloff, Chas. A. Smiley, Barbara Tennant, Loyola O'Connor and Eleta Otis depict other important roles. The masterly direction is due to the skill of James Young, a pioneer in picture production."

Foch Pictures as Specials in Pathe News

By special arrangements perfected with that object in view, Pathe News enables residents of cities giving ovations to Marshal Foch to enjoy those thrilling scenes twice—in motion pictures at the local theatres a few hours after the public reception to the country's famous guest. These scenes were screened as local specials in Kansas City, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Detroit and Chicago in addition to being represented in the regular issues of Pathe News. In No. 87 the great Marshal's arrival in the United States is shown. In London, a week earlier, General Pershing is seen decorating the grave of an unknown soldier.

In Italy the King and Queen are pictured during the national rejoicing over the acquisition of Northern provinces from Austria under the Peace Treaty. Ex-Emperor Charles of Austria is seen interviewing soldiers of the army which now disavows allegiance to him. Blood-stirring views are shown of the International Fishermen's sailing contest in which the Canadian "Bluenose" defeats America's "Elsie,"

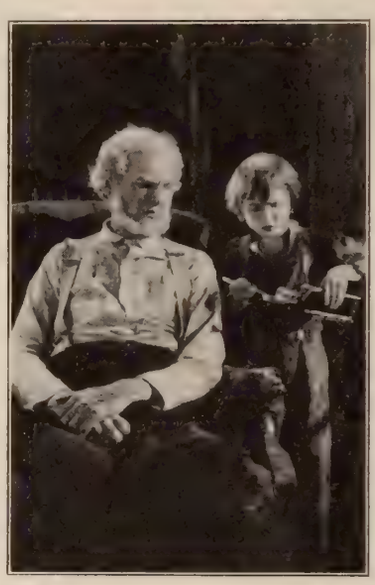
Hunt Stromberg Optimistic

R-C Pictures Producer Sees End of All "Depression Propaganda"

RETURNING to Los Angeles last week from a six-weeks' tour of the East, Hunt Stromberg, producer of the Doris May series of features for Robertson-Cole distribution, was direct in confirming the reports of "better times—full speed ahead" for the entire industry of motion pictures.

Between periods of conference with Robertson-Cole executives in regards present and future productional plans, Stromberg visited exhibitor-friends and Robertson-Cole exchange managers in several of the principal Eastern centres.

"There is no doubt but that the 'propaganda' referring to 'depression' has wended its course to a natural demise," said Stromberg upon his return to the West Coast Studios. "From direct discussions, and observations, I found that the trade in general, inclusive of exhibitors, company-representatives and newspapermen, are now perfectly willing, and solidly joined, to cut out the pessimism in all its form.



"I am delighted with the progress, and position of esteem held by Robertson-Cole. It is a source of infinite satisfaction to be identified with a concern having the integrity of purpose and fine high standards such as theirs.

"The new-season product of R-C is getting its full share of representation in the biggest and the best first-run theatres of the country. "My first production, 'The Foolish Age,' is sufficient evidence of this fact. By November fourteenth, less than thirty days from the release of the picture, October 16th, 'The Foolish Age' will have played its big engagements in one hundred key points of the United States.

"I am emphatic in the statement that General Manager Charles R. Rogers has assembled one of the finest, most alert-and-on-their-toes organization in the business. Robertson-Cole is conducting affairs with a determination and enthusiasm altogether commensurate with the present needs of the industry, and the exhibitors have the utmost confidence in their efforts and transactions."

To Decide Coogan Release

Distribution of Jackie's Series to Be Definitely Settled Soon

Master Jackie Coogan in his second starring vehicle, "My Boy," produced by Sol Lesser

ALL matters pertaining to the national distributors of Jackie Coogan's entire series of five-reel feature films (five in all) will be definitely settled this week after the executive meetings of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., are over.

Sol Lesser, vice-president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., and power behind the Coogan productions, has had several concrete offers via state righting and from large national distributing organizations. Mr. Lesser naturally is inclined to lean toward First National and while a deal has not been consummated, it is generally understood that this releasing body will handle the Coogan picture.

"My Boy," the first of the series, is completed and is being personally brought East this week by Mrs. Jack Coogan, mother of the star.

The bookings for Jackie's last film, "Peck's Bad Boy," in England have reached the 25,000 pound point and, considering that Colonel Fred Levy, who personally consummated the deal, did so but little more than a month ago, this is a remarkable record and one that is not often tied by any film feature.

There is a strong indication that both Colonel Levy, in whose hands has been placed the foreign affairs of the Coogan organization, and Sol Lesser, will make an early trip to London where they will carefully look over the ground with the thoughts of taking Jackie there to produce a big picture.

"My Boy" will be given its New York premiere the end of November.

"Tropical Love" Finding Ready Favor

Associated Exhibitors report that the excellence of "Tropical Love," which was released on October 23rd is contributing greatly to their 36-a-Year policy. Directed by Ralph Ince, "Tropical Love" was actually produced in Porto Rico, with a cast including Ruth Clifford, Reginald Denny, Fred Turner and others.

"Across the Divide," "Discontented Wives," "The Family Closet" and "Home-Keeping Hearts" as well as "They Shall Pay," "Women Who Wait" and "The Butterfly Girl" are previous feature productions on the Playgoers program.

"Father Tom" Offered by Playgoers Pictures

"Father Tom," the newest Playgoers offering, set for release this coming week, November 13, is described as one of those wholesome, homey attractions, of the "Old Homestead," type whose appeal to American audiences is perennial. It features the famous old character actor, Tom Wise.

Essentially an out-of-doors picture, many attractive exterior sets are shown, and the thrilling race course scenes, flashed at Saratoga are realistically portrayed. Tom Wise is appealing as always, and he is assisted by a carefully-selected cast, which includes James Hill, May Kitson, Myra Brooks, Ray Allen, Harry Boler, Alexander Clark and Nancy Deaver.

Head of American Film Laboratory Resigns

Samuel L. Silverberg, for seven years laboratory superintendent for the American Film Company of Chicago, has resigned.

Mr. Silverberg, during his connection with the American, has had full charge of the main laboratories at Chicago. He has not yet announced what his future connections will be.

Gunning Release in Big Demand

"What Do Men Want" Booked for Elaborate Openings

THE picture that the Wid Gunning organization has nicknamed "The Million Dollar Question" is starting off the booking career at a pace that bids fair to more than equal the finest exploitation of the distributing organization. "What Do Men Want" is already scheduled for a number of big city openings on a scale of legitimate theatre attractions while unusual interest from exhibitors is reported at every Warren Office.

At the Lyric theatre, Broadway and 42nd street, New York City, "What Do Men Want" on Sunday, November 13th, followed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Three Musketeers" for an indefinite engagement. Wid Gunning, who is presenting the attraction, has already started a broadside exploitation campaign in the big city on what he terms Lois Weber's greatest picture.

The newspaper campaign got under way teaser copy playing on the title "What Do Men Want?" About the middle of the week preceding the showing, the exploitation organization began to take advantage of the unlimited window display tie-up possibilities in the title. Bill Boards and other unusual means are also employed, while the exploitation men have a number of big tricks up their sleeves which will begin to break Sunday on the opening. All signs point to the Lyric as being a center point of interest and a Broadway theatrical firmament for several weeks to come.

"What Do Men Want?" is also stepping out like "A Million Dollar Question" in Philadelphia. The owners of the famous Metropolitan Opera House were quick to get in touch with Edgar Morse, manager of the Warren, Quaker City Office, when they heard the glowing reports on the latest Lois Weber special, and effected an arrangement by which "What Do Men Want?" will open an indefinite run there November 16th. An advance campaign similar to that used in New York is already under way in Philadelphia. The Metropolitan Opera House is the most distinguished of Philadelphia playhouses and the promoters are making the engagement of "What Do Men Want" a special one in every sense of the word.

Out in Chicago, "What Do Men Want?" gets off to a flying start soon with a special downtown engagement at the Bijou Dream. Manager Sidney Goldman, at the Chicago Warren office, had already booked "What Do Men Want" far beyond his original quota of prints, but he reports that since exhibitors have begun to see the picture itself the interest has assumed sensational proportions. Many exhibitors who had already set their dates have applied for additional days on "The Million Dollar Question."

Wid Gunning, who is presenting "What Do Men Want?" at the Lyric is one film man who isn't a bit surprised at the phenomenal pace set by "The Million Dollar Question." "I have been quietly telling friends for many weeks that we had a million dollar baby," he declared, "and in fact that phrase does not half tell the story, for I am convinced that we will outstrip the mark set by such record breakers as "The Miracle Man." The bookings pouring in already show that exhibitors are aware of the tremendous exploitation possibilities of Lois Weber's greatest picture, and before we have finished with the long runs in the biggest cities there won't be a soul in the industry who won't know that the "year's biggest one" has arrived."

Goldwyn Buys Eight Stories

Works of Famous Writers to Be Produced at Early Date

EIGHT new stories of unusual interest have been purchased by the Goldwyn scenario department for early production. Vice-President Lehr and Paul Bern, scenario editor, in selecting these screen stories have read hundreds of books and manuscripts.

Gouverneur Morris has just completed an original for the screen which bears the title "Always Warm and Green." Ruth Wightman is writing the continuity in collaboration with the author.

Although several of Kathleen Norris's stories have been screened she is now working in a studio for the first time. She has written a story directly for the screen and declares she is fascinated with the work. She and Julien Josephsen are collaborating on the scenario. The story, for the present, answers to the name of "The Happiest Night in Her Life," but this is not likely to be the release title.

"Brothers Under Their Skins," a magazine story by Peter B. Kyne, is being fitted to the screen by Grant Carpenter, playwright and scenarist.

Great interest attaches to the filming of Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," because of the announcement that the author will take passage from England next month. Charles Kenyon, rated as one of America's foremost playwright and photoplaywrights, has already completed the scenario. It will be held for the author's final inspection and approval.

Rupert Hughes has written another original, which at this writing is known as "Remembrance."

Basil King, best remembered for his notable "Earthbound," is again at the Goldwyn studio and is assisting in the production plans of his latest novel. "The Dust Flower." The author and Charles Kenyon are cutting the scenario pattern together. Whenever Mary Roberts Rinehart starts her typewriter going something light and entertaining may be expected. That's what she has done in "Jane," which tells how a spoiled girl was tamed. Isabel Johnston is the scenarist.

Katharine Newlin Burt has written "The Summons," which is also to appear in novel form. J. G. Hawks is making the screen adaptation.

Six feature pictures are in production at the big Culver City plant. They are Anzia Yezierska's "Hungry Hearts," directed by E. Mason Hopper, with Helen Ferguson and Bryant Washburn heading the cast; "Yellow Men and Gold," by Gouverneur Morris, directed by Irvin Willat, with Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix; "Sent for Out," a Rupert Hughes story, directed by Alfred E. Green, with Colleen Moore and Ralph Graves; "What Ho, the Cook!" a Chinese fantasy from Gouverneur Morris's pen, directed by Rowland V. Lee, with Jack Abbe and Winter Blossom; "The City Feller," featuring Cullen Landis, directed by William Beaudine, and "The Octave of Claudius," by Barry Pain, directed by Wallace Worsley, with Lon Chaney, Jacqueline Logan and Raymond McKee.

Lewis Stone is Added to Ingram's Cast

Lewis Stone has been selected by Rex Ingram to enact the leading male role in his metro production of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Alice Terry, of "Four Horsemen" and "The Conquering Power" fame, has the leading feminine role. Robert Edeson, star of both stage and screen, will play the part of Colonel Sapt and Edward Connelly, the veteran actor who has been associated prominently with Mr. Ingram's earlier successes, again will play an important role.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" was adapted by Mary O'Hara.

Jones Drops "Buck" for "Charles" in Baptism

The William Fox star who has heretofore been known on the screen as "Buck" Jones has officially and with all due ceremony discarded the "Buck" and adopted the name of "Charles." The change in name occurred when Jones was recently baptized in the Church of the Angels, Los Angeles, by the Rev. Dr. Neal Dodd.

"The Kid" Three Times in Lorain, Ohio

Lorain, O., has had "The Kid" three times to date. And the popular Chaplin-Coogan serio-comic drama of the screen seems just as popular now as it ever was according to reports.

Travers Vale Stages Big Scene at Fort Lee

THE PEERLESS WORLD STUDIO, Ft. Lee, N. J., was the scene of unusual activity during the last week. The reason was the staging of a big scene for "The Paste Board Crown," in which several hundred extras were put through their paces by Travers Vale, who is directing the subject. "The Paste Board Crown" is an original story by Clara Morris and is the first of a series of pictures Mr. Vale will direct for Messrs. Nathan and Semerad. The big scene presents a "first night" theatrical showing.

New York Booking Lloyd

Comedian's "Never Weaken" to Run at Capitol and Brooklyn Strand

WITH S. L. Rothafel starting with its initial New York showing this week at the Capitol theatre, Harold Lloyd's "Never Weaken" will have the greatest presentation in Greater New York ever accorded a Harold Lloyd production, announces Associated Exhibitors.

For the week of November 13 "Never Weaken" will be featured at the Brooklyn Strand by Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, who expresses his enthusiastic opinion of the comedy in these words.

"Harold Lloyd in 'Never Weaken' is one of the best comedies that I have even seen, and I conscientiously feel that I am not extravagant in my praise. If this first of a series of new comedies by Harold Lloyd is a criterion of what the others will be, I can forecast a new place for the Lloyd kind of entertainment in the National Amusement line of the United States. Harold Lloyd in 'Never Weaken' shall have top position on the program of the Brooklyn-Mark Strand theatre."

On the week beginning November 20, no less than twenty-seven first-run theatres from Forty-second Street north, all houses of the U. B. O. Fox and Loew circuits, will show "Never Weaken" day and date. After which their theatres in lower Manhattan will follow for a week's day and date showing. Then, in turn, the Brooklyn theatres will have their week's day and date run.

In addition to this huge circuit booking, the comedy will be shown at the Sheridan Square and the New Metropolitan, both independent houses, day and date with the circuit theatres in their respective zones.

"Foolish Age" in Cleveland

Doris May Picture Greeted with Enthusiasm at Allen Theatre Run

DORIS MAY'S picture, "The Foolish Age," has been welcomed in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and other leading cities with flattering enthusiasm, announces R-C Picture Corporation, but, however, it remained for Cleveland to extend to the vivacious young star the most fervent greeting her sparkling vehicle has thus far received.

"The Foolish Age" was such a success when presented by that skillful showman, Barrett McCormick, at the Allen theatre, Cleveland, that it was necessary to give an extra showing of the picture at night—a third show—to accommodate the thousands who clamored for admission.

The Allen was swamped by patronage during the engagement of "The Foolish Age." Not only was this due to the popularity of the star and the quality of her first R-C vehicle, but also to the showmanship of Mr. McCormick and the aggressive exploitation campaign carried out by representatives of the R-C organization.

All this, too, in spite of the fact that opposed to Miss May as an attraction at the Allen were two of the greatest motion picture cards of the day—Charlie Chaplin and Jackie Coogan at other houses.

In every respect the debut of Miss May as an R-C star in Cleveland was a brilliant occasion. Mr. McCormick arranged a spectacular and artistic setting in which to offer "The Foolish Age," as only he can do.

Extra Matinee Is Required

Additional Performance for "Four Horsemen" in Big Baltimore House

TO accommodate the crowds in Baltimore, Md., who are thronging to see "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," a Rex Ingram production for Metro of the famous novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, now being shown in that city at the New Theatre, double matinees have been instituted.

So enthusiastic was the reception accorded this picture, which critics all over the country have declared to be among the finest works of the silent drama, that long before the time for the opening night the house had been sold out. Governor Albert Ritchie and numerous other state and city officials were among the initial audience.

The sensation caused by this picturization of the most noted story of the great war, influenced the management of the New Theatre to accede to the public demand by arranging an additional matinee. The first afternoon performance begins at 12; the second at 2.30.

The wide interest manifested in the picture has been cleverly exploited by some of the leading haberdashery stores of Baltimore. They have co-operated with the New Theatre management by having scene cuts from the picture printed on bags and envelopes used for enclosing purchases of customers. In connection with the cuts is the notice of the showing of the picture at the New Theatre.

"The Four Horsemen" was adapted by June Mathis. John Seitz was in charge of the photography.

Claims First Right on Detective Pictures

In connection with its announcement in the advertising section of the current issue of the News, Alexander Film Corporation, addressing itself to the trade, declares that nearly two months ago it acquired the United States and Canadian distribution rights to "the first and only film productions ever made of the Sir A. Conan Doyle stories, 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'"

In last week's issue of a theatrical publication there appeared an article to the effect that John Barrymore was about to rush through the making of a special Sherlock Holmes feature for Famous Players. "This is deemed necessary," continues the article, "to forestall the release of a series of 15 two-reelers on the Conan Doyle's stories by Alexander Film Corporation."

Allen Forrest Opposite Minter in New Film

Allen Forrest has been engaged to play the male lead opposite Mary Miles Minter in a new Realart picture which has just been started. Miss Minter's new story is by Helen R. Martin and has not yet been titled.

"Three Musketeers" Sets Mission Theatre Record

CLOSING at the Mission theatre at the end of a week's run, Douglas Fairbanks' "The Three Musketeers" established its second Broadway record—one on Broadway in New oYrk, the Mother on Broadway, Los Angeles.

At the Mission theatre, Los Angeles, not only was a new mark set for length of run for Broadway playhouses, but attendance figures were far excelled. In the 315 performances in which "The Three Musketeers" was shown on the Mission screen it is estimated by Harry David, managing director, that 150,000 persons saw the picture.

Three views of "The Sheik," the Paramount super-feature in which Rudolph Valentino and Agnes Ayers have leading roles, current this week at both the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York

"The Sheik" Gets Big Reception in N. Y.

"THE SHIEK," George Melford's production for Paramount, featuring Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino, which opened Sunday simultaneously at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres in New York, came within an ace of breaking the record for the two houses on its opening day. According to the statement from the Paramount office, there was a total of 19,824 paid admissions—slightly under the figure set by Cecil B. De Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol." Just how near it came to breaking the "Anatol" record is indicated by the fact that the total receipts at the Rivoli on the De Mille production's record day exceeded those for "The Shiek" on Sunday last by less than $1.

Constance Talmadge Revival Announced

The revival of Cyril Harcourt's "A Fair of Silk Stockings" is set by Select for November 20. This will be the second feature in this season's issues of Selznick revivals, starring Constance Talmadge.

As a stage play the Cyril Harcourt story had been a pronounced success and it was selected as an especially suitable vehicle for Constance Talmadge to utilize. Harrison Ford appears opposite the star.

The late Walter Edwards directed the presentation and Wanda Hawley, now a screen star, appeared in Miss Talmadge's support, the other players including Vera Doria, Helen Haskell, Florence Carpenter, Louis Willoughby, Robert Gordon, Thomas Persee and L. W. Zteers. New prints have been shipped to Select branches, after a thorough editing and furnishing of the original presentation.

Vitagraph Completing "The Prodigal Judge"

Vitagraph's picturization of "The Prodigal Judge" is almost completed. Officials who have watched its progress at the Brooklyn studios are enthusiastic over the results secured. Edward Jose is the director, and Jean Paige plays the leading female role. The picture is based on Vaughan Kester's novel of the same title.

"Our Mutual Friend" Scores

Going Big on Coast; Is Booked by Kehrelein Bros. for Frisco Theatre

"OUR MUTUAL FRIEND," which the Wid Gunning organization calls "the Perfect Movie," has already started its sweep along the Pacific Coast. Following closely on the heels of the news that its Los Angeles premiere had been unusually successful there comes the announcement that the Kehrelein Brothers have booked the Charles Dickens' photoplay for one of the initial offerings at the reopening of the famous College theatre.

The Kehrlein Brothers have taken the College theatre and practically built a new playhouse out of a well known San Francisco amusement place. The entire theatre has been redecorated in mission style and those who have seen it proclaim it the last word in artistic theatrical setting.

The selection of "Our Mutual Friend" the play at the College theatre is a considerable feather in the caps of the Wid Gunning organization as competition has been keen in San Francisco for the honor of being chosen on one of the early bills of this house. The Kehrlein Brothers were known to be shopping for attractions of unusual merit both from the angle of exploitation and production quality. It was probably natural that "Our Mutual Friend" should be chosen after its engagement at Clunes, Los Angeles theatre, as the papers of the Southern California film capital have seldom accorded the praise to any production that they gave to this screen version of Charles Dickens last complete novel.

The Los Angeles Times declared "the charm in its fidelity to the character drawing of Dickens, laughter, suspense over the doubtful principals, and hatred for the villains of the piece follow each other in rapid succession. The dramatic situations are tense. Mechanically the picture is excellent."

Fox Branch Conducts Drive

New York Exchange Aims to Stimulate Public Interest in Specials

WHAT is believed to be one of the most aggressive publicity drives ever directed to the public by a motion-picture exchange has just been launched by the New York branch of the Fox Film Corporation under the direction of Louis Rosenbluh in charge of that branch. The "Direct-to-the-Public" selling campaign, after several months of intensive preparation, is now in full swing.

In a statement issued during the week, Mr. Rosenbluh declares:

"In offering exhibitors such attractions as 'Over the Hill,' 'A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court,' 'The Queen of Sheba,' 'Thunderclap' and a regular program service of high calibre, we are giving him the essential elements of profitable merchandising—a salable product. But a product, no matter how great its intrinsic worth may be, is valueless unless a market is created for it.

Appreciating the value of vigorous exploitation and endeavoring to extract from our productions a one hundred per cent return on their drawing power, we have installed in the New York exchange what is probably the largest staff of exploitation experts ever assembled in a branch office. Qualified by training and experience to originate and execute productive publicity, these men are devoting their time and energy exclusively to selling our productions direct to the public.

"A unique and effective feature of our Direct-to-the-Public sales campaign is the maintenance of an 'Exploitation Circus' for the benefit of such forthcoming attractions as 'Queen of Sheba,' 'A Connecticut Yankee,' 'Thunderclap' and the Tom Mix star-series. Our 'Exploitation Circus' includes camels, chariots, trick motorcyclists, cowboys and in fact everything needed to stage striking bally-hoo stunts. All are at the disposal of exhibitors playing these attractions."

Tod Browning Is Signed Again by Universal

TOD BROWNING, one of the best known directors of big photoplay productions, has been signed again by Universal.

This is the third engagement that Browning has entered into with the Universal, and this one involves the most money and the most work, it is declared. In fact Mr. Browning has undertaken to produce in the space of a year from November 1, two Jewel pictures and six Special Attractions. This is quite an undertaking, but Browning is satisfied that he can do it, and Mr. Laemmle, who personally signed the contract at Universal City, has ordered Irving G. Thalberg, general manager, to place every production facility at his disposal.

"Hurricane Hutch" in Central America

Armando Lopez Ulloa, Consul General from Honduras to New York, sailed for home on a short visit last week after obtaining from Pathe Exchange, Inc., a concession to handle exclusively the Pathe product in Central America. Senor Lopez carried with him also a print of the new Pathe serial. "Hurricane Hutch," the first presentation of which in his own country he will personally supervise.

As he was sailing with his concession and his first shipment of Pathe film, the Consul General exhibited considerable satisfaction over his deal with Pathe.

Read What New York Said of

"Enchantment"

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS:

"'Enchantment' is exquisitely conceived and executed. I fancy the ladies who like to cry 'lo-ovely' will fall for 'Enchantment' with a dull hard thud. They will pay rich tribute to Mr. Robert Vignola who directed. Really, it is enticingly beautiful."

NEW YORK MORNING TELEGRAPH:

"A word of praise should be given the work of Bob Vignola, who directed 'Enchantment.' His work has been well done. The photoplay in his hands has been molded into entertainment of the highest order. This is especially true of his direction of the star."

NEW YORK GLOBE:

"The possibilities open to the moving pictures when they are endowed with an intelligently worked out story, delicacy of production, and a saving grace of humor, are strikingly illustrated in 'Enchantment.' The production is well staged throughout."

NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

"You can't help but like 'Enchantment.' Robert Vignola has directed the picture beautifully, with a fine attention to the humorous situations."

NEW YORK HERALD:

"It is a very captivating production. Vignola has directed Miss Davies very effectively."

NEW YORK EVENING POST:

"How cleverly it is developed. A charming photoplay, delightful in staging and costume. Marion Davies, beautiful, charming and expressive, is a picturesque and vivacious bit of girlhood."

NEW YORK EVENING WORLD:

"Delightful little story."

NEW YORK SUN:

"Brilliantly staged."

NEW YORK WORLD:

"One cannot see 'Enchantment' without being amazed. Marion Davies is a very sweet and properly willful little society flapper."

New Film Center for Long Island

THE Ferndale Corporation with headquarters located in the Empire Theatre Building, New York, announces that it has now under way at Ferndale, Long Island, N. Y., within a distance of sixty miles of New York, the construction of modernly equipped studios, surrounded by country of scenic grandeur and located on the borders of a beautiful lake within two miles of the ocean front.

In its announcement, the Ferndale declares that within this area are to be found settings representative of every part of the earth, while buildings already erected or under construction will afford producers every facility for filming in a community rich in historic and romantic interest. The statement from the Ferndale Corporation also emphasizes the proximity of the Metropolis with its leading directors, stars and actors; and its great stores of costumes and production accessories.

The Ferndale announcement is directed especially to the independent producer, to whom it promises fullest co-operation. Five of the studio buildings have already been finished, according to the statement, and a large swimming pool is rapidly nearing completion. A large tract of land has been cleared and greenhouses put under construction to enhance the beauty of the location. In addition, a 75-room hotel is said to be under way in connection with a colony of bungalows for the accommodation of the producer and the artist.

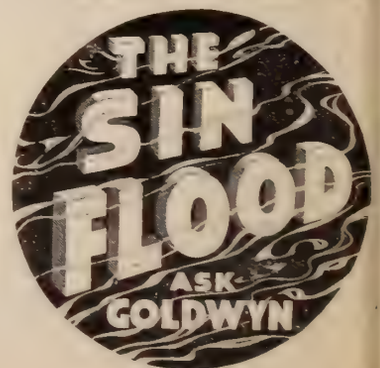
The officers of the Ferndale Corporation are: C. K. F. Andrewes, president; Mrs. Oliver Harriman, vice-president, and Coburn McFadden, secretary.

Yard-Stick Minimizes Risks

Precautions Taken to Reduce Hazards in Making "Three Musketeers"

LETTING the uninitiated into behind-the-camera secrets of motion pictures in the making is becoming popular, declares a statement from United Artists. Only recently the method of double photographic exposure, which enabled one of the greatest of film stars to play a most extensive dual role, was explained in detail. And now comes Douglas Fairbanks who tells how the foot-rule and yard-stick are brought into play as camera aids, and every inch of every scene wherein there lies the least physical risk to the actor is measured and laid out with all the fineness of the most complicated engineering problem.

In Mr. Fairbanks' film version of "The Three Musketeers" there is a little more than two miles of danger, declare United Artists, and every inch of this was measured to the last degree of mathematical nicety so as to eliminate as much as possible the element of physical risk.



The scenes containing the most physical risk in this film were those featuring the sword attacks. In one of these, measuring 124 feet, Mr. Fairbanks fought eleven men, and a single slip, or the least misjudgment of distance, might have brought serious injury either to the star or some of his combatants, it is stated.

There are 740 feet of danger for Mr. Fairbanks in duels alone. In his flight across the roof-tops with the heroine over his shoulder in a semi-swoon there are 250 feet in which the slip of a foot meant a forty-foot fall, for both. Other scenes filled with risk are those in which he boarded the ship, dove into the water and dodged real bullets; rode bareback at break-neck speed over rough roadways; leaped from a second-story window to avoid capture; vaulted a fourteen foot gate at the port; slid down a banister

Reviewing Boards Honor Two R-C Releases

THE official list of the National Motion Picture League issued recently included William Christy Cabanne's production of "The Barrier" in its list of subjects recommended as "family films." "The Barricade" was based on an original story by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, the locale of which is New York where most of the scenes were taken. Among those in the cast are Kenneth Harlan, Katherine Spencer, William Strauss, Eugene Spencer, Dorothy Richards and others.

"The Sting of the Lash," starring Pauline Frederick also won official commendation from the National Board of Review, in the October honor list of which the production was included among the "exceptional pictures" of the month. "The Sting of the Lash" was written by Harvey Gates and is a story of the strongest drama.

Truex Comedy Heads Releases for Nov. 20

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., has added the first of a series of comedies starring Ernest Truex to the pretentious collection of short subject features scheduled for release November 20th, "Little, But Oh My" is the title of the first offering.

"Roping the Black Panther" is the next of the series of Major Jack Allen's Wild Animal Pictures.

"The Marathon" is the next re-issued one-reel comedy starring Harold Lloyd. Bebe Daniels plays opposite the star, with "Snub" Pollard in a prominent role. "Dangerous Dollars" is the title of the film version of Holman Day's latest story of the same name showing life in the Maine woods. Edgar Jones and Edna May Sperl are the featured players.

"Penny-In-The-Slot" is the title of the current Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard. "The Woman and the Hen" is the latest animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., and created by Cartoonist Paul Terry. "Overboard" is the ninth episode of the new Pathe serial, "Hurricane Hutch," starring Charles Hutchison.

Pathe Review, No. 130, presents a practically all-star selection of subjects. "The City of Romance" shows views of St. Augustine, Florida; "The Tale of a Tire" is the history of an automobile shoe; "The Running Broad Jump" contrasts the American and English styles, "The Citybred Generation" is the latest Capitol Travelaugh by Hy Mayer; and "Springtime in Northern Africa" is a Pathecolor travel-picture.

Spectacular Setting in New Christie Comedy

Something decidedly new and spectacular in comedies is announced in the latest two-reel comedy being produced by Christie for Educational release. The picture, which is titled "A Barnyard Cavalier" and which features Bobby Vernon, has been carried out with a magnificence in scene settings and detail which establishes a precedent for short film comedies, it is declared.

Viora Daniel is the pretty foil for Vernon in this comedy. The story of "A Barnyard Cavalier" was written by Frank Roland Conklin.

As evidence of the greater effort being put into all the new Christie Comedies, "A Barnyard Cavalier" will follow on Educational's release schedule one of the best Christie Comedies made up at this time, "No Parking." Neal Burns is featured in "No Parking," with Helen Darling, as well as Jane Hart, the baby who appeared in "Sneakers," and "Laddie," the collie dog.

$60,000 for a Reel and a Half

"Iron Trail" Refutes Idea That Outdoor Films Are Cheap

REX BEACH'S "The Iron Trail" is held up as an absolute contradiction of the common idea that "outdoor pictures" are cheap to make. This picture is a seven reel feature, yet two episodes, composing perhaps one reel and a half, cost more than $60,000, the producers declared.

"The results of this picture particularly interest me," says Whitman Bennett, "not only because of immediate financial considerations but also as a guide to future endeavors. The issue in outdoor pictures is whether the exhibitor wants the regular back-woods hoakum of lumber-jacks and fur coats, with the regular and everlasting dog-sledge and Indian hut, or whether he wants genuine higher grade stories with big scenes involving big expense. It is much simpler to do the regulation brand and far less of a financial hazard, but I feel absolutely assured that the more ambitious work is going to make the only permanent appeal.

"Anyone who stops to think will see at a glance that the two most costly scenes of 'The Iron Trail' were the fight at the crossing and the bridge episode at the end. The fight could have been done much more cheaply by just making it a rough-and-tumble without attempting to preserve the railroad atmosphere or to show the actual railroad construction progressing throughout the encounter

"The construction of the artificial bridge, to match the actual bridge in Alaska, was, however, the most interesting as well as the most costly part of the undertaking—and something of an engineering achievement. The real bridge across the Copper river in Alaska—the building of which furnished the essential facts for Mr. Beach's story—is photographed and shown in the film.

"The bridge that we built for the dramatic scenes and to show the real bridge in construction represented a span and a half of the actual bridge, was copied from exact photographs, and was built to scale with the utmost accuracy, so that the artificial and real shots should 'match.' This does not mean that it was small. As a matter of fact, it was nearly a hundred feet long, the roadway or floor was forty feet above the ground, and the trusses reached another twenty-five feet into the air. Below the floor of the bridge, of course, were the scaffolds and the pilings.

"The bridge was built of wood but had to be strong enough to bear the weight of sixty or seventy people and very heavy lighting apparatus. In other words, though it was only a moving picture 'prop' it had to be strong enough to bear the traffic of any ordinary actual bridge. While the action of the play was being filmed real bridge workers and riveters swung from scaffoldings, hoisted and riveted beams into place and relived in minute detail the building of the genuine Alaskan structure.

"There was still a third extremely expensive feature in the photographing of this story—the shots of the rushing ice in the spring break-up which endangered the structure. All of these shots, as well as all other atmosphere shots of glaciers and backgrounds, were taken by a crew sent to Alaska for that special purpose. The ice 'break-up' shown in the film was the actual break-up of the Copper River (called the Salmon river in the story) last April. It was only by this means that we felt we could get absolute realism, showing the rushing ice between the river banks and against the glacial scenery."

Chas. Bryant to Direct Madame Nazimova

CHARLES BRYANT will direct Madame Nazimova in her forthcoming production of Oscar Wilde's "Salome" and Ibsen's "A Doll's House," the double bill she is preparing as her first "repertoire film" for the United Artists.

Mr. Bryant also will have full charge of all production details. Wallace Beery has been engaged for the part of Helmer in "A Doll's House."

"Enchantment" Has All the Ingredients of Success

IN a genuine and entertaining picture that casts a brilliant light on the life of the young woman of today, Marion Davies, star of Cosmopolitan Productions, shows convincingly in "Enchantment," her latest and her best screen production, a dramatic ability that has evoked the enthusiasm of newspaper and trade paper reviewers alike.

Following its opening at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, on Sunday, October 30, critics and public were unanimous in praise of both the story and the undisputed gifts of the actress.

"'Enchantment' is exquisitely conceived and executed," wrote "The Daily News."

"The Herald" said: "It is a very captivating production, for at last Miss Davies seems to have found a vehicle that fits her—or that she fits, which is more to the point. Vignola has directed Miss Davies very effectively."

In "The Morning Telegraph" R. W. Baremore wrote: "Miss Davies handles a difficult role in a very clever fashion, playing it in just the right spirit and making of the picture unusually pleasing entertainment. We like 'Enchantment' and we are quite sure that it is by far the best thing Miss Davies has done.

"The Globe" wrote: "Marion Davies, as the flapper vampire, does, we think, the best work of her screen career in this picture. The production is well staged throughout."

A Clever Story

"Enchantment" is primarily the story of a "flapper." Now, young Ethel Hoyt (which is Marion Davies' name in the picture) doesn't think she is a "flapper." Not she! She thinks she is Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, Theodora—all the historic queens of love combined. Because several young and inoffensive Harvard undergraduates beset her with invitations hither and yon she begins to take herself quite seriously, and begins to wonder what there is about her that constitutes this so fatal attraction to the sex that picks up the checks.

Her father and mother are in perfect agreement, not with the picture Ethel paints of herself and her conquests but with the fact that something must be done and done soon e'er their beloved child has her head completely turned.

The solution presents itself to the canny father at a performance of "The Taming of the Shrew" in which his friend Ernest Eddison takes the part of the tamer. Peter Hoyt takes this actor into his confidence and devises a scheme whereby the player is to step into his same stage role for the taming of Ethel.

The actor amusedly consents, not knowing what he's "letting himself in for." As Ethel thinks there is no man not susceptible to her charms so Eddison thinks there is no woman he cannot properly subdue. The game begins, she all the time unaware of the plot that has been hatched against her.

They meet and go about together a great deal. His attempts to tame her only result in the actor's falling in love with her and falling in love so hard that her slightest frowns make him unhappy. And she will have none of him.

Finally comes the night when both are principal characters in a modern society pageant, she the beautiful princess of "The Sleeping Beauty" legend and he the Prince Charming who is to awaken her with a kiss. And he does awaken her—awaken her to great wrath indeed, for he kisses her so fervently on the stage, murmuring tender sentiments the while, that every person in the audience is aware that he is in love with her. This is not pleasing to Ethel and she is furious. She is humiliated; she hates all men and when he insists upon seeing her at home that evening she thoroughly denounces him.

In fact, she denounces him so bitterly that were he not oblivious to all but her anger he would have guessed much sooner that she returned his love. As it is it takes him five or six minutes to glean the truth and her father twice that long to recover from his surprise at the finale of his plottings.

The gowns Miss Davies wears in this picture are a revelation in beauty and good taste. Paris, New York and she herself supplied the designs and the effect is a very happy one. The gorgeous princess costume of rhinestones and pearls on a rich background of heavy satin is from the hand of Joseph Urban.

Mr. Urban also designed the settings which are exquisitely simple, serving as a graceful background rather than obstrusive.

"Enchantment" is released by Paramount.

The Star and Cast

Marion Davies is one of the youngest stars on the screen, being but 21 years old. She was born in Brooklyn, New York, the daughter of a judge. It was from the Ziegfeld "Follies" that she transferred her interest to pictures. Among her best-liked photoplays have been "The Cinema Murder," "The Restless Sex," "April Folly" and "Buried Treasure."

She is surrounded in "Enchantment" by an unusually brilliant company. Her leading man, Forrest Stanley. was last seen in the leading part in "Forbidden Fruit." His experience was chiefly gained on the stage with the Oliver Morosco companies.

The first screen appearance of Tom Lewis, the stage comedian, is another interesting factor of this picture. He plays the father. He is chiefly remembered for "The Yankee Prince," "The Little Millionaire" and "High Jinks."

Edith Shayne, the mother, is well known through having been leading woman in some of the chief successes of John Drew.

As the juvenile, Arthur Rankin is happily cast. A nephew of the Barrymores, he has already shown talent on the stage and screen. With his uncle, Lionel Barrymore, he played an important part in "The Copperhead."

Corrine Barker won her fame principally in "Potash and Perlmutter" on the stage. She has played, moreover, with Julian Eltinge, John Mason, Elsie Ferguson and Julia Dean. She also played with Marion Davies in "The Restless Sex."

Exploitation Tie-Ups

"Enchantment" starring Marion Davies lends itself to extensive exploitation. Here are some hints to exhibitors:

The title itself is amazingly full of hints for window displays. No motion picture star can vie with Miss Davies in the gorgeousness and variety of her gowns. The story-within-the-story of "The Sleeping Beauty," one of the most beautiful sequences ever seen on the screen, presents another opportunity for window displays.

Your nearest Famous Players has still photographs which show many of the gowns which Miss Davies wears in this production. Show those photographs to the head of the Ladies' Wear department of the most prominent store in your community. He or she will be immensely interested in these beautiful stills and will be pleased to arrange a window display showing the finest gowns and stills from "Enchantment." In getting together with advertisers approach those merchants that cater especially to the wants of misses.

In many communities it will be found possible to enlist the aid of the editors of the Woman's Page of the newspapers. "Flappers," their mannerisms, their likes and dislikes, have received columns of publicity in both dailies and magazines and they form a topic that is always of interest.

Florists and proprietors of beauty parlors will be found ready to work with the exhibitor on "Enchantment" because the title can be utilized so effectively in their businesses.

The reception given the production in New York, where it was first shown, proves that it has a very strong appeal to the women, and the wise exhibitor will capitalize this appeal.

Experts Behind Camera

A fine array of motion-picture talent was assembled for the creation of "Enchantment," Marion Davies' latest release.

Robert G. Vignola, who directed "Enchantment," is one of the best known directors in the field. "The Woman God Changed," also a Cosmopolitan Production, was his last picture before this and is still playing to enthusiastic audiences in all parts of the country. He also directed "The Passionate Pilgrim."

Born in Italy and educated in New York, Mr. Vignola began his stage career as a Shakespearean actor. He directed pictures first for Kalem, his initial production being "The Vampire." Others of his pictures were "More Deadly than the Male," with Ethel Clayton; "The Third Kiss," "The Love That Lives," and "The Reward of Patience." For Cosmopolitan he has also done "The World and His Wife" and "Straight is the Way."

The author of this story of the modern "flapper" is Frank R. Adams, one of the most popular short story writers of the present day and especially adept at analyzing the foibles of the young.

Luther Reed wrote the scenario, one of the many excellent scripts he has done for Cosmopolitan. After he left his post in New York as dramatic critic for "The Herald" he joined the screen writers on the Pacific Coast and worked with the old Lasky company. He also did both original and adapted stories for Metro and Thomas H. Ince until the war when he became a lieutenant of infantry. A notable stage success of his was "Dear Me."

Miss Davies' photographer was Ira H. Morgan, one of the veteran cameramen of pictures. In 1911 he did the "Broncho Billy" series, for two years photographed Mary Miles Minter, and did four pictures for King Vidor.

Robertson to Produce "Spanish Jade"

Having completed "Love's Boomerang," in the Paramount studio in London, John S. Robertson will next produce "Spanish Jade," a picturization of Maurice Hewlett's novel. Exterior scenes for this picture will be photographed in Madrid. This in accordance with the plans of Jesse L. Lasky, who recently announced that all European pictures made by Paramount were to be laid in their natural settings.

Geo. Randolph Chester Forms Own Company

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER announces the formation of his own producing company to be known as the George Randolph Chester Productions and will make two big pictures a year. A suite of rooms has been leased on the tenth floor of 516 Fifth avenue. Work on the initial production will start within the near future. The distributing channel will be announced at a later date.

Mr. Chester recently resigned from the Vitagraph Company where he was closely identified with all branches of the Vitagraph productions, his latest work being the directing of "The Son of Wallingford." Mr. Chester plans to make some very big pictures and will give them all of his undivided time. He does not expect to revolutionize the picture industry but he does plan to make films that will merit attention in any screen port in the land.

Mr. Chester is the author of seventeen published novels and has written hundreds of short stories. He has been a magazine editor, newspaper reporter, news editor, war correspondent, dramatist, moving picture scenarist, author, continuity writer, director and special contributor to leading periodicals, and now plans to add "producer" to that list.

C. G. Sullivan at His Best

That is Opinion Voiced by Many After Viewing "Hail the Woman"

AS a product of the versatile pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, "Hail the Woman," Thomas H. Ince's production for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, is considered by many to be the most striking expression of the vivid and spell-binding writing powers that are peculiar to Mr. Sullivan's genius.

In this Thomas H. Ince production, Sullivan has expressed the joint views of Mr. Ince and himself as to what constitutes the sort of motion picture play which the public styles "a bigger and better picture," and which it has called so long. Thomas H. Ince designates "Hail the Woman" as "the picture a weary public has waited for—my greatest achievement," and Sullivan defines it as: "the ultimate solution of a problem."

C. Gardner Sullivan's great success as a writer of screen stories once again proves the general all-round usefulness of trained and talented newspaper writers. A small town, Stillwater, Minnesota, is claimed by Sullivan as his birthplace. At school, to find an outlet for his literary tastes, he used to copy 'pieces' from the local papers, and would then rewrite them to suit the fancies of his imagination. After four years well-spent in the study of "fine letters," at the University of Minnesota, Sullivan decided to become a newspaper writer, and he joined the staff of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. Here he soon attracted attention through the semi-humorous, semi-pathetic theme of his human interest writings—qualities that have since been vividly expressed in many a great scenario! Sullivan subsequently joined a number of newspapers of national and international renown, such as the Chicago Tribune, the New York Journal, and others.

Sullivan is now said to be the most high priced motion picture dramatist in the world. He is under contract with Thomas H. Ince, and last year made a tour through Europe to gather fresh atmosphere and material for picturization.

Salesmen Make Final Efforts for Big Results in "Selznick Week"

REPORTS from the Selznick branches throughout the country give every indication that Selznick Week, November 13 to 19, inclusive, will be a big success. Practically every Selznick office has booked a volume of business considerably in excess of that usually done.

The big Selznick specials, including the new one, "A Man's Home," Vera Gordon in "The Greatest Love," the two Faversham pictures, "The Man Who Lost Himself" and "The Sin That Was His," and "Red Foam" are most frequently mentioned in the extra contracts although there are many extra play dates for the Selznick Star Series attractions with Elaine Hammerstein, Eugene O'Brien, Conway Tearle, and Owen Moore.

O'Brien's "Chivalrous Charley" has been made ready for pre-release during Selznick Week although the regular release date is not set until early December. In this picture O'Brien is supported by Myron Selznick's "discovery" in the person of Nancy Deaver who is now assuming a leading role for the first time in her screen career, although she has appeared frequently in minor roles with other stars.

Release "Ladies Must Live"

George Loane Tucker Production Offered by Paramount on Nov. 13

"LADIES MUST LIVE," the last production made by the late George Loane Tucker, creator of "The Miracle Man," is scheduled for release by Paramount November 13. The picture is presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation and features Betty Compson in the leading role.

Although seized by fatal illness just as the final scenes for "Ladies Must Live" were being taken, Mr. Tucker supervised the cutting and editing of the 140,000 feet of film taken. This had to be reduced to the required number of reels, and when the work of making the finished negative was being performed, Mr. Tucker went to Hawaii for recuperation. There he struck the rainy season and was forced to return to Los Angeles where he died without having seen his finished work.

The picture was adapted from a novel by Alice Duer Miller which appeared in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post. Miss Compson plays the role of a young girl who has been reared by her rich brother-in-law and whose penniless father plans to marry her off to some rich man in order that his income, derived from his son-in-law, may be increased.

Robert Ellis plays opposite Miss Compson, while Jack Gilbert and Mahlon Hamilton have roles of almost equal importance. Others in the large cast include Leatrice Joy, Hardee Kirkland, Gibson Gowland, Cleo Madison, Snitz Edwards, Lucille Hutton, Lule Warrenton, William V. Mong,

"Tony" Moreno, Vitagraph star, as he appears in his latest picture, "A Guilty Conscience"

World Wide Success for "Mother o' Mine"

According to an announcement received by Thomas H. Ince from Millard John, New York manager of Australasian Films Ltd., "Mother o' Mine" is as popular in that section of the work as it has been in America. The cable from Sydney reads: "Congratulations to Ince. 'Mother o'Mine' only attraction drawing capacity business in the last twelve weeks'.

A survey among United States exhibitors who have played "Mother O'Mine" in big cities and small towns made by Ince representatives has revealed no single instance in which "Mother O'Mine" failed to be a money maker of the first degree. There has been no report where the production failed to make an unexpected profit for the exhibitor.

According to Al Lichtman, general manager of Associated Producers, who is supervising its distribution through the exchanges of Associated First National Pictures Inc., few productions released in recent years have had so many repeat bookings as "Mother O'Mine."

Kinograms Increasing Staff of Cameramen

A MUCH bigger staff of photographers is being built up for Kinograms, Educational's news reel, as the first big step in the campaign of expansion and improvement promised recently by Captain G. McL. Baynes, head of the Kinograms Publishing Company, in a letter to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

The editorial staff in the Kinograms headquarters in New ork City has already been enlarged, and a photographer is being placed for Kinograms service exclusively in each town of any considerable size in the country. It is aimed within a month to have a staff of photographers in the United States that will number at least 250 more than at present.

Following the establishment of the bigger domestic staff enlargement of the foreign staff will be started. At the same time other plans for making Kinograms a bigger and better news reel are being developed.

Metro Will Distribute "Fightin' Mad"

METRO concluded negotiations this week for the distribution of "Fightin' Mad," a super-special outdoor production whose cast includes such celebrated players as William Desmond, Virginia Brown Faire, Rosemary Theby and Joseph J. Dowling. It will be released, the indications are at present, early in December.

"Fightin' Mad," in six reels is an action picture throughout. The story is by H. H. Van Loan, author of "The Virgin of Stamboul" and other screen sensations. The picture was made by William Desmond Productions. Joseph J. Franz directed it, under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton. Harry A. Gersted photographed the production.

Universal to Make New Short-Length Series

CARL LAEMMLE has authorized production at Universal City of a series of short-reel features which will be based upon the experiences of a newspaperman on a metropolitan daily. The series will be sent to the screen as "Ned of the News." Albert Russell will direct with Percy Pembroke, a well known young leading man, in the featured role. The stories were written by George Morgan. "Ned of the News" will travel out of "Central" with the Flying Squadron of Police to give playgoers a thrill and anyone who has any idea of the hourly activities of the modern police reporter will anticipate speed and suspense in every foot of the tableaux.

Stunts Suggested for "The Love Charm"

Realart points out that the current Wanda Hawley production, "The Love Charm," contains a number of episodes which suggest good material for exploitation.

Early in the story, the love-sick heroine imagines herself in the middle ages being wooed by a gallant knight. This suggests a man in armor, on a large, fully-accoutred steed. Behind him rides a fair damsel dressed in the medieval style. The rider carries a long lance from which depends a large sign containing the billing for the picture. Should the armor not be available, it can be home-made, fashioned from large sheets of silvered cardboard.

Wanda Hawley makes her entrance carrying an old fashioned wire dress form and a large telescope bag. A girl similarly equipped, dressed in attention-compelling clothes, would make a good subject for a street stunt. The billing can be painted on the side of the bag.

"Quo Vadis" Is Meeting with Great Success

The success that George Kleine's revival of the screens greatest classic "Quo Vadis" is meeting throughout the country is evidenced by a letter just received by Wid Gunning at the offices of the Warren Distributing Organization. It comes from a Detroit film man and is as follows:

"Had a talk with Ed. Beatty, general manager of the Butterfield Circuit, today and he gave me the information that 'Quo Vadis' has been one of his best box office attractions this year. Beattly was frank to say that when he booked the classic he had no idea it would go over so big, even though his expectations were pretty strong. In many towns he tells me he has had to hold it for extra days. 'We have played many of the season's biggest pictures,' Mr. Beatty said, 'but the real sensation of them all has been "Quo Vadis," the George Kleine revival. It has packed houses for us on every occasion.

Hodkinson Changes Staff

Thirty New Offices Are Opened; Changes in Sales Force Personnel

NOTICEABLE to such an extent that it is worthy of comment, the total lack of confusion attached to the opening of nearly thirty offices in the new Hodkinson distributing system established this week has enable Home Office and Branch executives to continue without interruption the work that has been laid out for the forthcoming months.

Several changes in the personnel of the sales staff have been made during the past week. Ralph Pielow, formerly a salesman attached to the Hodkinson offices in Portland, Oregon, has been promoted to the position of sales manager of the new Hodkinson exchange in Seattle, succeeding F. Butler. The Hodkinson office in Portland has been discontinued.

E. Hockstim, of the Albany territory, has been transferred to the Buffalo territory, there he will work with Mr. H. Boyle. Harry Melcher, formerly a salesman connected with the Pathe staff in Omaha, has been appointed sales manager for Hodkinson in the Omaha territory by Phil Ryan, Hodkinson district manager in the northwest.

Another addition to the Hodkinson force during the past week is that of Dan Horgan, formerly Metro salesman in the Boston territory. Mr. Horgan has been engaged as salesman for Hodkinson in the New England territory, working out of the Boston office. E. W. Whitford, another popular film salesman in the New England territory, has also been added to the Hodkinson staff.

New Roland Serial Ready

Pathe Announces "White Eagle" as First Release for New Year

THE first release to inaugurate the New Year from the Pathe Exchange will be "White Eagle," the new Gold Rooster serial starring Ruth Roland. A Pathe announcement this week states that the new chapter play has been scheduled for release January first. The new serial, besides being the ninth chapter play starring Ruth Roland, is said to surpass all the Pathe star's previous efforts in her particular field of the cinema.

The story is from the pen of Val Cleveland, who has written many successful novels brim full of fast action. "White Eagle" sets a fast pace, dealing with the West, in which cowboys and Indians play a leading part, yet the serial was produced in such a fashion as to be absolutely "censor-proof." W. S. Van Dyke, who was responsible for the direction of the Jack Dempsey serial, "Daredevil Jack," is also responsible for "White Eagle."

The new serial was produced at the Hal Roach studios under personal supervision of Mr. Roach. It is the first serial to be produced on the same "lots" made famous by Harold Lloyd, "Snub" Pollard, and other Roach comedians, and consequently called for extensive enlargements of studio space for the filming.

Earl Metcalfe is seen opposite Miss Roland, Otto Lederer, seen as the money lender in "Without Benefit of Clergy," plays the villainous part of Chief Grey Wolf; and Harry Girard, who is well known on both stage and screen, is his chief accomplice, aided by Frank Lackteen.

Al Feinman Moves

Announcement is made this week of the removal of the advertising and publicity bureau conducted by A. L. Feinman to more commodious quarters at 117 West 46th street, New York City.

Elaborate Handbook on Goldwyn's "Theodora"

One of the handsomest motion picture souvenir books ever published has been printed by Carey Printing Company for Goldwyn's Italian spectacular film, "Theodora," which has scored one of the biggest hits in motion picture history at the Astor Theatre, New York.

The book is printed from four-color process plates. Eight pages devoted entirely to reproductions of "Theodora" stills are in color, the other eight pages (mostly pictures also) being in black and white. In the centre is a magnificent two-page spread showing the amphitheatre which figures prominently in the drama.

Huge Lasky Stage to be Roofed With Glass

Studio General Manager Charles Eyton has let the contract for one of the biggest construction jobs to be done in years at the Lasky studio, that of putting a glass roof over the big open stage.

Provision for the increase in production work on Paramount pictures has necessitated the covering of this stage, known as Number 4, which contains the huge tank and tropical garden which have been used in many photoplays of the past.

The dimensions of the stage are 115 by 250 feet.

Realart Announces Feature

"First Love," Constance Binney's New Vehicle, Has Universal Appeal

"EVERYBODY loves luxury—in real life if possible, in reel life at any rate. Yet most folks are ordinary folks, intent on making ends meet, living, loving, marrying and dying inconspicuously. And since they are ordinary folks, they like, now and then, a story about people like themselves, a picture of their own kind of life and its problems," says General Manager J. S. Woody, of Realart.

"First Love," Constance Binney's coming picture, is that kind of a story, announces Realart, a story of the everyday people who dwell in modest homes all over the country, living and loving their whole lives through on scanty incomes, but living and loving no less intensely than the ladies who wear ermine and the men who "dress" for dinner every evening. "First Love," continues the announcement, is the story of an ordinary, wholesome working girl and her first beau. That he was a weakling, a rotter, and a cad made no difference. She saw him only as a hero and loved him blindly.

"Because it deals with a universal, rather than an unusual experience, this picture is bound to appeal to all classes and all ages," says Mr. Woody. "There is nothing morbid about it, and it can safely be advertised as a picture for the whole family, clean, wholesome, realistic; gripping rather than sentional."

Miss Binney is said never to have had a role exactly like that of Kathlene O'Donnell in "First Love," a role which offers her happier opportunities for showing the heart and life of a regular girl, and she has made this simple little working girl one of the most poignant and artistic of all her screen impersonations.

The story was written by Sonya Levien, an author and magazine writer of wide reputation. Percy Heath and Aubrey Stauffer, of the Realart staff, adapted the story in collaboration. The cast has been assembled in keeping with the usual high Realart standards; Warner Baxter is the leading man, George Webb plays the "heavy" and George Hernandez makes a splendid "irate" father. Fannie Midgely will, no doubt, win many hearts with her wonderfully human "mother" role, and the rest of the cast, Betty Schade, Edward Jobson, Agnes Adams, Maxine Elliott Hicks and Dorothy Gordon, give convincing interpretations to their respective roles. Major Maurice Campbell was responsible for the direction.

Lunch time "on location" in France. Louis Mercanton, the noted French producer and members of the "Possession" company. This picture, made from "Phroso," Sir Anthony Hope's novel, is to be released by R-C Pictures

French Film Stirs Interest

No Studio Scenes Taken in Making Picture of Anthony Hope's "Phroso"

THE announcement by R-C Pictures of the forthcoming release of the sensational French production, "Possession," based on Sir Anthony Hope's novel, "Phroso," has created widespread interest among exhibitors, in M. Mercanton, the noted French producer.

In "Possession" not a single studio scene appears. Interiors were taken in ancient dwellings near Cannes, in Southern France, and in an historic fortress on the Island of St. Margaret's, which squats out in the sea off the coast of the republic—and in other out-of-the-way places that appealed to Mr. Mercanton as backgrounds for the swift action of his story. This, according to the producer, makes for far greater realism than studio sets could create on the screen.

Every character in the story has been interpreted by well-known actors and actresses. Reginald Owen, as Lord Wheatley, is a prominent English actor who made his first stage appearance with the late Sir Herbert Tree at His Majesty's theatre, and was with him for some years.

Miss Malvina Longfellow, a popular screen actress both in England and American stage, too, for she appeared in an important role in support of Otis Skinner in "Kismet."

Other well-known Continental actors and actresses appear in the film: M. Paul Capellani is one of the most distinguished actors on the French stage, and has also achieved great success in American pictures, having spent some time in the United States. Mme. Jeanne Desclos-Guitry, the talented wife of Lucien Guitry, has a very important part.

"The Beggar Maid" Gets First Run Bookings

Two important first-runs on Beggar Maid," the first of the series of Triart Great Master two reel features are announced by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation this week.

THE POWER WITHIN

EVERY picture, every play that thrills and entertains and at the same time drives home a big moral, has a better chance for success and lasting fame than those which cater to the whim of the moment or pander to the passions.

Consider "Ben Hur" with its amazing record, its wonderful vitality; consider "The Old Homestead," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Hazel Kirke," "East Lynne" and others like them.

Some of them have been running for over thirty years and have played to their tens of millions. They thrill and inspire.

"THE POWER WITHIN" thrills and inspires. It is a drama of the soul, big with nobility, charity, love, faith and courage.

Your audiences will thank you for running "THE POWER WITHIN."

The men who are making R-C month a big success

R-C Releases for November and December

CHARLES R. ROGERS, general manager of distribution for R-C. Pictures, has announced to his branch managers an imposing array of releases for the months of November and December, the first of which will be known as R. S. Cole Month, in recognition of the leadership and high business principles of the head of R-C Pictures.

The list includes the following subjects: "The Swamp" with Sessue Hayakawa, in which the noted Japanese-American star proves again that he has few equals and no superiors on the motion picture screen. "The Swamp" is a story of life in New York; of life in the slums and the high places of society, in which Hayakawa portrays the role of a Chinese street merchant. The story was written by Hayakawa himself, with his own capabilities and limitations in mind, with the result that it gives him one of the most congenial roles in which he has ever appeared. Most striking of all the scenes is said to be those in which Hayakawa appears as a comedian and moves the audience to laughter instead of to tears. It has already been released.

"The Lure of Jade," also welcomed by screen critics in many of the leading cities, is another Pauline Frederick success, with the star in one of her biggest roles. The story was written by Marion Orth and has to do with the experiences of a young woman, the daughter of a rear admiral in the navy. She becomes the unwitting victim of a scandal and goes to the South Seas, virtually an outcast.

There she sets herself up as the keeper of a resort frequented by drifters from all parts of the world. Dramatic climaxes are frequent. Thomas Holding, Hardee Kirkland, Leon Bary, Arthur Rankin, L. C. Shumway, Clarissa Selwynne and others appear in the cast. Colin Campbell directed.

"Possession," scheduled for release November 20, is founded upon the widely read novel "Phroso," by Sir Anthony Hope. It was directed by Louis Mercanton, foremost picture producer of France and unfolds a clean-cut story of romance and adventure. The sweep of the action and the compelling drama of the climaxes commend it to all who like clean dramatic subjects. "Possession" is regarded as the bid of French producers for popular favor against German made productions in this country and it is said to bear comparison with the best of the foreign importations. Malvina Longfellow, an American actress, has the leading role in "Possession."

Two Gasnier specials, "A Wife's Awakening" and "Silent Years," also are included in the November-December list. "A Wife's Awakening," with Fritzi Brunette, William P. Carleton and Sam De Gras heading the cast, was based on an original story by Jack Cunningham. "Silent Years" was founded on the popular novel "Mam'selle Jo" from the pen of Miss Harriet Comstock. It has to do with a series of dramatic episodes among a group of rugged folk who live in the valley of the St. Lawrence River, in Canada. Pauline Starke, Rose Dione, Tully Marshall, George Seigmann and others of prominence are in the cast.

"The Duke of Chimney Butte" brings Fred Stone back to the screen in one of his most congenial roles. The story was adapted from the novel of the same name by George Washington Ogden and depicts the adventures of a rollicking cowboy who puts to rout a band of cattle thieves. Stone gives the role a delicious spirit of humor and there is none of the blood-and-thunder and mock heroics of the cheaper grade of Westerns. Frank Borzage, who made "Humoresque," also directed "The Duke of Chimney Butte." It is scheduled for release on December 5.

William Christy Cabanne's production of New York stage life, "Behind the Curtain," will be released on December 11. It was written by Mr. Cabanne himself, and is said to give a vivid picture of Broadway life. A splendid cast has been assembled for this subject. Billie Dove, Ziegfeld Follies beauty, will appear in the leading female role; Doris Eaton, another Follies dancer; Elizabeth North, blonde beauty of the Greenwich Village Follies; Willie Collier, Jr., Huntley Gordon and others of prominence take part.

For release on Christmas Day, December 25, Doris May will appear in "Eden and Return," her second R-C starring vehicle. It is a romantic comedy based upon the stage success of that name, and portrays Miss May as a debutante who rebels at her father's ideas of whom she shall marry.

"R. S. Cole Month" Drive Opens

Exhibitors Said to Be Responding Readily in Campaign

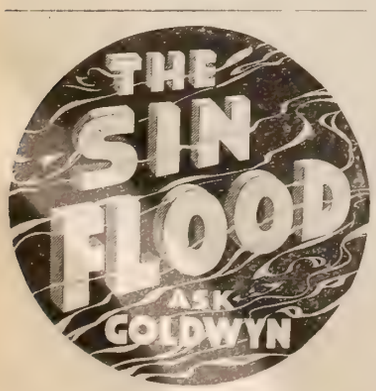
R. S. COLE MONTH—the month of November—dedicated to the president of R-C Pictures by that organization as a mark of its appreciation of his leadership, has started with a bang, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution.

With the names of Pauline Frederick, Doris May, Sessue Hayakawa, William Christy Cabanne and L. J. Gasnier shining in electric lights from hundreds of theatres throughout the country, the November drive has begun in auspicious fashion.

Exhibitors in the New York district are responding handsomely to the idea of R. S. Cole Month, says Mr. Rogers. "The Sting of the Lash," with Pauline Frederick has been booked widely in the metropolitan area, as have "The Foolish Age," in which Doris May made her debut as an R-C star, and "The Swamp," in which Sessue Hayakawa proves again that he has few equals and no superiors as a motion picture pantomimist.

Doris May, in "The Foolish Age," played all the Loew theatres in the New York district this week, and her first starring vehicle was received in flattering style, it is said. "The Swamp" held forth at all of the theatres operated by the Keith, Proctor and B. S. Moss interests, the engagement at the Broadway theatre, New York City, attracting much attention to R. S. Cole Month as well as to the star himself.

In Buffalo, R. S. Cole Month has created no end of interest among exhibitors. Always popular in that city, Pauline Frederick has scored again in "The Sting of the Lash" at Shea's beautiful Criterion theatre, where the picture played an engagement of a full week. In addition to this, R-C Pictures also concentrated on Buffalo a special advertising and publicity campaign. The city was literally plastered with one sheets and twenty-four sheet stands, heralding the Frederick production and the other R-C Pictures to come.



Other cities in New York State also have responded with the utmost enthusiasm.

Bookings for R. S. Cole Month include a formidable list of R-C subjects among them: Pauline Frederick in "The Sting of the Lash," conceded to be as fine a drama as the noted star has ever endowed with her talents; "The Swamp" and "Where Lights Are Low," in both of which Sessue Hayakawa appears in congenial roles; "Shams of Society," with an all-star cast headed by Barbara Castleton and Montagu Love: William Christy Cabanne's "The Barricade"; "The Foolish Age," starring Doris May for the first time under the auspices of R-C Pictures; "Possession," the French-made special produced by Louis Mercanton, who is being hailed as "the Griffith of Europe," and based upon the famous novel, "Phroso," by Sir Anthony Hope; the Gasnier specials, "A Wife's Awakening" and "Silent Years," the latter of which is scheduled for release on November 27.

Another important feature of R. S. Cole Month is the liberal offer of free accessories made to all exhibitors who show R-C Pictures during the November drive.

R-Pictures Plans Fan Magazine Campaign

R-C PICTURES CORPORATION is going to tell its story directly to the moving picture theatre patron. Its announcement of an advertising campaign directly to the public, beginning the first of the year is of personal interest to every moving picture exhibitor in the country.

Beginning in December, double page space will be used in the so-called "fan" magazines. It is estimated that nearly nine million people will read each month of the ambitious advance of this organization towards satisfying their demand for pictures of real worth.

The magazines that will carry these messages to the people who fill theatres are Photoplay Magazine, Shadowland, Picture Play Magazine, Motion Picture Classic, Film Fun, Movie Weekly, Motion Picture Magazine, Filmplay Journal, Motion Play Magazine and Moving Picture Stories. The Photo Drama Magazine also is included for special display.

A campaign that reaches so many real devotees of the moving picture as are included among the readers of these publications will be of untold value to the individual exhibitor, believes R-C Pictures Corporation.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Entire Kineto Series to Run on B'way

ALL of the series of "Great American Authors," Urban Popular Classics produced for the Kineto Company of America, by James A. Fitzpatrick, will play their pre-release engagements at the Strand theatre in New York. The first of the series with John Greenleaf Whittier as the subject, played there last week.

There will be twelve units in the series dealing only with names famous in American literature; such names as James Russell Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Nathaniel Hawthorne, William Cullen Bryant, Walt Whitman, James Fenimore Cooper, Edgar Allan Poe, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Washington Irving.

Thirteen Stars Seen in Screen Snapshots

Thirteen of the most important stars of filmdom will be "At Home" to film fans in the special Home Life issue of Screen Snapshots.

The stars are: Elsie Ferguson, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Richard Barthelmess, Wallace Reid and his wife Dorothy Davenport, Harry Carey, Bessie Love, Tsui Aoki, Lester Cuneo, J. Warren Kerrigan, Mary MacLaren, Baby Peggy, "Pal," famous canine actor.

Apfel Series Receiving Warm Welcome

According to reports received from the Producers Security Corporation, the new series of Apfel productions, is being received with great success. The first of the series is "The Trail of the Law," and the second is "The Man Who Paid," which is now in preparation.

Hines Feature Is 85% Sold

Michigan, New England and Baltimore Territories Alone Are Open

CHARLES C. BURR, President of the Affiliated Distributors, Inc., has expressed his great gratification with the condition of the independent market at the present time, in their promptness in acquiring the rights to "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" for over eighty-five per cent of the country.

It is less than two months since "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" was offered to the Independent market, and to date less than fifteen per cent of it is left unsold, with every indication that before November has seen its last day, this production will be sold one-hundred per cent.

The foreign rights are all gone, John Carlson & Company having purchased this production for the entire market, and their reports from the other side, especially their Parisian office, state that this comedy drama with Johnny Hines has been acclaimed the best production of its class ever offered the French Market in the last few years.

A. W. Klausner of the Mountain States Film Attractions, who owned the rights to the Denver territory, was so encouraged by the reception accorded this production in their territory that they acquired the adjoining territory, comprising the States of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Northern Idaho. Mr. Klausner stated that he would "road show" this picture.

Oscar D. Oldknow of the Southern States Film Exchange who owns the rights for Alabama, Florida, Tennessee, North and South Carolina and Georgia, reported that the picture is creating a sensation on its first showing.

The only territories still open on "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" at this writing are Michigan, the New England States and the Baltimore territory.

New Independent Producer

Franklin Backer to Distribute Product on State Right Market

THE formation of two organizations, one known as Amalgamated Producing Company, Inc., and the other as East Coast Productions, Inc., gives promise of renewed activity in the independent branch of the picture industry. All productions made by the Amalgamated will be produced under the personal supervision of G. M. Anderson.

The Amalgamated Producing Company, Inc., was organized for the purpose of producing features, with casts in which several of the members would be stars of such recognized standing in the theatrical world that they would have to be co-starred in threes and fours in the same picture. Franklyn E. Backer is the president and managing director of East Coast Productions, Inc., which was organized to handle the Amalgamated Productions through forming affiliations with Independent exchanges for that purpose.

The first contract between East Coast Productions, Inc., and Amalgamated Producing Co., Inc., calls for twelve productions co-starring more than three big stage and screen notables. These pictures are to be released by the producers at the rate of one a month beginning December 15th, this year.

Three pictures are now finished and delivered to East Coast Productions in the Times Building, New York City, where the New York office of Amalgamated is also located. The first is entitled "Ashes" and is presented by a cast including William Courtleigh, Myrtle Steadman, Stanton Heck, Carrie Clarke Ward, Wedgewood Nowell and Margaret Landis. The second, which heads its cast with Robert Edeson, William Courtleigh, Tully Marshall and Lysle Leslee, is entitled "Any Night." The third is "The Greater Duty." All of these features are now ready to be shown to exchange men.

"Tarzan" Serial a Hit in First Run Houses

As proof of the success with which "Adventures of Tarzan" is being presented in New York in theatres which have never before shown a serial, Louis Weiss, Secretary of Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation, is in receipt of a letter from the management of the Regun theatre, a house seating 3,000.

"I take pleasure in advising you that 'Adventures of Tarzan,' your serial starring Elmo Lincoln, has thus far proved a wonderful box office attraction at the Regun theatre. While our policy is against the showing of serials I feel that we have made a wise move in booking 'Adventures of Tarzan,'" writes the theatre management.

Warner Closes Foreign Deal on Feature

ONE of the biggest foreign deals that has thus far been made with the Warner Brothers' production, "Why Girls Leave Home," was recently consummated by Bobby North, general manager of the Apollo Trading Company, New York. The exclusive rights for Great Britain were purchased by Messrs. Tom Davies and Hy Winick, of the Pearl Film Co., Ltd., of London.

With the closing of the deal Messrs. Davies and Winick are said to have made immediate arrangements to show the picture for an indefinite run at the Terrace theatre, London, following the screening of "The Kid."

"Chic" Sale Popular on Vaudeville Stage

Few American players have received more enthusiastic receptions from the critics than those being showered on Charles (Chic) Sale during his present vaudeville tour of the middle west. "Chic" is being honored with the headline billing of every theatre at which he plays, and in addition to delighting his audiences, he is receiving the most careful but laudatory praise from the newspapers. Many of the critics speak of his absence from the Winter Garden shows, while others mention "His Nibs," the motion picture in which Chic Sale is starred by Exceptional Pictures, pointing out that the seven roles he plays in the motion picture are counterparts of his stage characterizations.

Charles Brabin Joins M. P. D. A

At a recent meeting of the Motion Picture Directors Association, Charles Brabin, well known director who made "While New York Sleeps" and many other Fox successes, became a member of the organization of stellar directors. His initiation was attended by a large number of members.

Jane Novak Completes First for Associated

Second National Production Plans

PRODUCTION plans of the Second National Pictures Corporation are now in their formative stage, and will come to life within the coming fortnight, according to a statement issued this week by Bernard Levey, Vice President and General Manager of Section National Pictures Corporation.

Plans are now being perfected for the production of a series of special five-reel feature attractions, the star of which is to be a well known actress who has appeared on the screen and stage with almost unparalleled success. Second National Pictures Corporation, according to Mr. Levey, also plans in association with a well-known director the production of a series of feature photoplays starring a celebrated boy actor.

Fox & McCormick Book Warner Bros. Feature

The recent announcement by Warner Brothers that their latest feature, "Why Girls Leave Home," was ready for booking in the first run theatres throughout the country once more reveals the true worth of the motion picture trade journals as advertising mediums. No end of queries have been received at the Warner offices from many of the first run theatres, and the latest negotiations to be closed for the presentation of the production were made with William Fox and S. Barrett McCormick.

Mr. Fox has signed to show "Why Girls Leave Home" in the Washington theatre, Detroit; Liberty, St. Louis, and Rialto, Denver; and Mr. McCormick will present the feature in his customary high-class manner at the Allen theatre, Cleveland. The fact that Messrs. Fox and McCormick have booked the feature for their respective theatres is considered by Warner Brothers, the producer, Harry Rapf, and director William Nigh, as a tribute to the production.

"The many responses we have received from first run theatres throughout the country," said A. Warner, "are directly attributable to the trade journals. And I firmly believe that money spent in trade journal advertising is money well spent."

"At Your Service" Ready for Federated

"At Your Service," the newest of the Hallroom Boys Comedies featuring Sid Smith, which Harry Cohn, the producer brought from the West Coast producing centre, was given final editing this week under the personal supervision of Mr. Cohn.

This picture was turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release, following a special showing for the Federated committee.

J. W. Film Announces Cast

Willard Mack Author of "For Your Daughter's Sake"; Has Big Cast

E. S. MANHEIMER has made public the author and cast of "For Your Daughter's Sake" another of the J. W. Film Corporation Society Drama Series sheduled for immediate release to independent exchanges. This picture is considered by many the strongest of the set.

As stated in the original announcement, "For Your Daughter's Sake" is a Burton King production with Grace Darling as the featured player but it now becomes known that the credit for the story goes to Willard Mack who is said to have originated a plot, not only most unusual in its workings, but with one of the delightful surprise climaxes for which he has become noted.

Miss Darling's supporting cast also promises to attract more than the usual notice. Rod La Rocque, who shared honors with Grace Darling in "The Discarded Woman," plays opposite her in "For Your Daughter's Sake." Turning from the stage to pictures, Mr. La Rocque has numbered among his achievements successes "Hidden Fires," "The Kaiser's Bride," "The Venus Model," "A Perfect 36," "Easy to Get" and "Greater than Love."

Another prominent figure in this cast is Anders Randolf who has starred successfully in many worthy productions. James Cooley, Stephen Gratton, Alice Gordon and Virginia Valli are also credited with excellent work in an exceptionally large cast.

Big Campaign on "His Nibs"

National Campaign to Start in Saturday Evening Post Wins Praise

THE announcement from Alexander Beyfuss, President of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation, that among other mediums the Saturday Evening Post would be used in the national publicity campaign to be carried on in connection with "His Nibs," the unusual feature production in which Charles (Chic) Sale is the star, was greeted with most emphatic approval by exhibitors and independent buyers throughout the country, announces Exceptional.

A striking and handsome page has been prepared for the Saturday Evening Post

This is said to be the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a feature production sold on the independent market has been advertised in the Saturday Evening Post. However, when L. L. Hiller, President of the "His Nibs Syndicate, Inc.," conferred with the Exceptional Pictures Corporation officials, they agreed that the "His Nibs," with Charles (Chic) Sale playing seven distinct character roles, was worthy of a tremendous publicity campaign. A full page in the Saturday Evening Post is but one link in a chain of publicity that will include the motion picture trade papers, the regional papers, fan magazines, newspapers and the national magazines. Further announcements will be made regarding this publicity, which will in time incorporate every important division of the publishing field.

Exceptional Pictures feels justified in its publicity plans, by which it will make Charles (Chic) Sale known and beloved by every motion picture fan in the country. Mr. Sale is at present playing a season in vaudeville, and the critical reports of his work show how great a favorite he is. Within the past few weeks he has played St. Louis, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Chicago, and in each instance he was given the headline billing, and the critics crowded to his dressing room to obtain special interviews. In practically every case when Mr. Sale has told the critics of his first motion picture, "His Nibs," they have mentioned it in their write-ups, and have added that an artist of Mr. Sale's quality was needed on the screen.

The campaign will start at once, so that the independent buyers will receive the benefits of this national publicity.

Associated Photo-Plays Have New Feature

Associated Photo-Plays, Inc. wish to announce to the trade that Jane Novak has completed her first production for them which has been titled "Soul of a Woman." This is the first of a series of five, directed by Chester Bennett, and portrays Jane Novak supported by Noah Beery and J. Frank Glendon in an Alaskan story along the lines in which she has been so successful.

Mr. Bennett has secured some wonderful lighting effects and shots that will delight any audience. Miss Novak plays a strenuous part, shipwrecked, rescued from a raft, protects herself from various villains and in the end, sponsored one of the most realistic fights ever pictured.

"Ashamed of Parents" New Warner Release

Warner Brothers announce "Ashamed of Parents" as their next release. This photodrama, following in the wake of "Parted Curtains," contains a cast of screen players who were especially selected to portray the various characterizations, it is said. The cast includes Jack Lionel Bohn, Charles Eldridge, Edith Stockton, Walter McEwan and W. J. Gross. The story was written by Charles K. Harris.

Giant Sets Built for New Jungle Serial

THE thirty-five acres of ground which the Selig Zoo property embraces, present a weird sight today, due to the filming of the new fifteen episode animal-jungle film the Colonel is making for the Export & Import Film Co., Inc.

In his determination to make this chapter-picture his serial masterpiece Col. Wm. N. Selig is building bigger sets for it than he has ever had constructed in his long picture experience. Three enormous exterior sets have already been built, used and torn down and others are taking their place as rapidly as the workmen can construct them.

A massive figure of a jungle god, towering two hundred feet in the air, was especially built as the background for several of the scenes in one of the early episodes of the picture which have been completed.

Jans Features Are Sold for Australia

A deal has just been concluded whereby Mr. Johnson, general manager of the Australasian Films, Ltd., has acquired for the dominion of Australia and the dominion of New Zealand, the rights to distribute "Man and Woman" and "The Amazing Lovers," two Jans pictures.

Hoxie Western Titled "Sparks of Flint"

Arrow Film Corporation announces that the title of the second Jack Hoxie Western Drama, produced by Ben Wilson, is "Sparks of Flint." The exteriors are being shot at Big Bear Lake.

Moore Books "Judgment!"

Tom Moore, owner of the Moore chain of theatres in Washington, D. C., has booked the World Film Corporation's drama, "Judgment!" for a week's run, beginning Sunday. Mr. Moore has obtained "Judgment!" through Flax Brothers, Liberty Film Exchange, which has bought territory to include the District of Columbia, Maryland and Delaware.

Clara Kimball Young

in her latest picture—"WHAT NO MAN KNOWS"—played Kunsky's Madison Theatre in Detroit to overflow crowds. In a special wire to the Moving Picture World published in the issue of Oct. 29th, the report read:—
"WHAT NO MAN KNOWS" presents novelty . . . with plenty of red-blooded action. In her past few pictures Miss Young played the role of beauteous social butterfly. . . . "WHAT NO MAN KNOWS" takes her entirely out of this sphere. . . . Miss Young showed that she can wear rags with the same grace that she wears elaborate gowns. . . . Some especially fine shots in plant of Los Angeles Examiner are used to build up the "press time" theme in picture. . . . Little Jeanne Carpenter (child wonder in Mary Pickford's "Through the Back Door") in sympathetic part does exceptional work. . . . Scenario well handled. . . . All Equity wishes to add to this wire report is just this—Get a copy of the Campaign book on "WHAT NO MAN KNOWS" and see the elaborate exploitation that has been specially prepared for this production. . . . Note how Equity backs up its pictures with constructive service, unique original, powerful in its capacity to get the money for exhibitors. Your nearest Equity franchise holder will furnish you with a copy of this new Campaign book, and after you have examined it, your Equity franchise holder will arrange your playing dates. If your Equity franchise holder cannot supply you at once with a copy of this book, communicate with EQUITY PICTURES, Inc., 33 W. 42nd Street, New York City. Study the book and you'll get a full appreciation of the box office power of the distinct and unusual title—

"What No Man Knows"

"School Days" to Be Released Christmas Week

GUS EDWARDS' classic, "School Days," starring Wesley Barry, will be given a special trade showing both in the East and in the Middle West, according to an announcement by Warner Brothers. The production, made by Harry Rapf and directed by William Nigh, will be released Christmas week, and it is declared that 100 prints will be available for screening in 100 key cities.

Broad and sweeping publicity and exploitation campaigns have been devised for the production, in addition to a number of "kid" novelties, and these will all be ready for distribution during Christmas week.

Antrim Short in N. Y.

Antrim Short, popular juvenile and leading man, leaving a successful career and numerous friends to mourn his temporary absence from Hollywood motion picture circles, has arrived in New York. His most recent work released is a prominent role in "The Son of Wallingford." Previously, Mr. Short played an important role in "Black Beauty," and will be remembered for his work with Constance Talmadge in "Romance and Arabella."

Arrow Announces Two New Comedy Stars

Arrow Film Corporation announces the signing of two stars to make a series of comedies to be known as the Mirth Quake Brand. These stars are Billy Franey and Ralph O'Connor.

This arrangement was made by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, during his recent visit to the coast. This series of Mirth Quake Comedies completes the schedule of the Arrow Comedy Franchise which will be fifty-two two-reel comedies to be released one a week. Others on the schedule are Arrow Speed Comedies, produced by Morris Schlank, Arrow Cruely Wed Comedies, produced by H. M. Herzig, and Arrow Broadway Comedies.

Grace Darling, starring in "For Your Daughter's Sake," offered by J. W. Film Corporation on the independent market

Strauss Heads Company

Producer is Made President of Associated International Pictures

MALCOLM STRAUSS has been elected president of the Associated International Pictures following a meeting held in the company's offices, 6 East 39th Street, New York City. Those who have been elected to serve on the Board of Directors with Mr. Strauss are Charles Presbery, Louis Meyer, Paul Meyer, Benjamin Kaye and George S. Hellman.

The titling and editing of "Tears of the Sea," its first attraction, is rapidly nearing completion under the personal supervision of Mr. Strauss. "Tears of the Sea" is an original story written by Sam Benelli, author of "The Jest," and features Isabelle Savery, a noted English beauty.

Those who are familiar with the story unfolded in "Tears of the Sea" say that it is a tale exotic in scope and finished in execution that it possesses a powerful force and underlying fidelity which fights its way to the surface through a series of interesting scenes. Its plot concerns itself with the escapades of a dissolute French nobleman who married for wealth and of an unhappy woman who sought to avenge herself on the daughter of the man who wronged her.

"There is no doubt," state the company, "that the merging of the definite elements of acting photography and settings—important factors in all motion pictures—has been so deftly accomplished in 'Tears of the Sea' with an originality which few photoplays can claim."

Start New Young Picture

Garson Confers with Equity on Plans for Forthcoming Feature

HARRY GARSON arrived in New York from the West Coast last week to complete arrangements with Equity for the big new Clara Kimball Young picture which will be started with the next ten days at the Garson Studios in Los Angeles.

The selection of the cast is now being made. "This is the first time in years that I ever made a special trip to New York to discuss and perfect details of any picture says Garson, so you may be sure this picture will measure up with the best in which Miss Young has ever starred."

Reports from the offices of Equity lend weight to Garson's enthusiasm over this new production which at this writing has only a temporary working title, and the main title of which will be announced in due time.

Drafts and working plans of the sets are now being made, in miniature and are being decorated and painted in full color to give a prevue of the stagings necessary for this new picture. The working staff of the Garson studios has been increased to speed up production with all possible haste.

In a later issue of this paper will be announced the permanent title of this new C. K. Y. production. Work has already begun in the studios in the building of sets requiring none of the miniature layouts as these will be confined to only the more ornate and elaborate settings.

"Bali the Unknown" Sold in Ill. and Ind.

Harold H. Horton reports the sale of the five reel feature travel story, "Bali the Unknown," in Prizma color, to Greiver Productions of Chicago, for the territories of Northern Illinois and Indiana.

Should the Independent Producer "Sell the Public"?

NORRIS KASHIN is one of the few independent distributors who believes in advertising his product direct to the consumer along the same lines that have been adopted for years in the merchandising of commercial prdoucts. And it is this plan that he intends to follow in the marketing of his new feature, "I Defy!"

The idea of reaching the fan direct, although it has been made use of by many of the larger companies, has as yet been limited to only one or two independent distributors. Mr. Kashin contemplates a campaign which is to include an appeal not only to the industry but directly to the theatre patron through the daily press. "After all," states Mr. Kashin, the public is the final judge of the merit of each production, and upon their approbation or disapproval depends success or failure. The producer's aim is to reach the distributor and exhibitor and in his advertising he forgets the public.

"Personally, I strongly believe that it is the distributors duty not only to sell the exchangeman, the state-righter or the franchise-holder, but also to help these various agencies in disposing of the product to the public. The most feasible way to sell the public a picture is to sell it to them directly by means of the press and through creating a desire for the product even before it has been sold to the exhibitor."

"Unconquered Woman" for Lee & Bradford

B. H. THROOP, president of the Pasha Film Corporation, who have recently completed their first Rubye de Remer picture entitled "The Unconquered Woman," announces that this feature will be offered on the state right market by Messrs. Lee & Bradford.

The negatives are now being cut and as soon as this is accomplished, Messrs. Lee & Bradford will start an advertising campaign. It will be remembered that Lee & Bradford recently acquired

"Fountain of Youth" Is Abramson Release

The first public screening of the "Fountain of Youth," an allegorical story based on "Faust," will be held this week. This is a six reel feature released by Ivan Abramson of the Graphic Film Corporation. Some ingenious exploitation ideas for "The Fountain of Youth" are being included in an elaborate press book prepared for Abramson by the Weshner-Davidson Agency.

"The Hypocrites," another Graphic Film production, is now being sold by Ivan Abramson for the territories of New York and New Jersey. Other productions being released and sold rapidly by Abramson are: "Mother Eternal," "A Bride's Confession," "The Wrong Woman," "A Child for Sale" and "The Echo of Youth."

"His Nibs" 30 Per Cent Sold in One Week

L. L. Hiller, President of "His Nibs" Syndicate, Inc., which is handling the distribution of unique feature production in which Charles (Chic) Sale is starred, has reported to Exceptional Pictures Corporation, the producer of this unusual production, that the advertising and highly laudatory reviews of the critics in the trade press have had an unprecedented effect, stimulating both the inquiries and actual sales.

Mr. Hiller's report carries the information that in the one week follow his corporation's announcement that it had acquired the rights to "His Nibs," thirty per cent of the territory had been disposed of, and taking the uncommonly large number of requests as a criterion, he feels confident that the seventy per cent balance will be closed before the Christmas holidays.

Vitagraph Announces Releases

Big List of Pictures Ready for Release Before New Year

VITAGRAPH has many productions for release before the new year. Included in the list are two comedies and two specials as well as feature pictures presenting nearly all its stars.

"Steelheart," with William Duncan and Edith Johnson as co-stars, is the first November release. This is a real Western picture, full of fire and fight from the very first shot and with no let-up in the excitement to the very close. Mr. Duncan never before has had a role which gave him such opportunities to display strenuous acting. Miss Johnson appears as a young society girl who is the cause of all the excitement.

Following this release will come Corinne Griffith in "The Single Track," which presents the star in what is for her an entirely different type of role. Miss Griffith is first seen as the ideal, pleasure loving rich girl of society, and then, in order to protect the property which gives her her income, a girl fighting for her own in the outskirts of civilization in Alaska. Webster Campbell directed the picture.

In "Rainbow," Alice Calhoun is seen as a little country girl transplanted to the city with wealth at her command and then as suddenly returned to her native and more loved surroundings, but with newly gained polish and grace. The fight to retain possession of a mine inherited from her father furnishes the plot of the story. The play is comedy drama and was directed by Edward Jose.

"A Guilty Conscience," the Antonio Moreno release, is a story of India. The basic idea of the plot is taken from the story of King David and the beautiful Bath-Sheba, wife of Uriah. David sent Uriah to the front ranks in a big battle that he might be slain. In "A Guilty Conscience" the officer in charge of the Civil Service in India sends one of his men to the worst fever-ridden post because he covets his beautiful wife. Betty Francisco plays opposite Mr. Moreno and the costumes and scenery are of India.

In "Lucky Carson" Earle Williams has a role that takes him into the underworld as well as the upper crust of society. Down and out in London an unintentional crime lands him in New York masquerading under the identity of another man. Here he gains an immense fortune but the unexpected appearance of the other man leads to many complications. Leading feminine roles are played by Betty Ross Clarke and Gertrude Astor. Wilfrid North directed the production.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson, as co-stars, are seen in "No Defense," a happy combination of the East and West. Beginning in social life in New York the action jumps to the gold fields of the West where Mr. Duncan is at his best.

At least two comedies, made by its famous stars, Larry Semon and Jimmy Aubrey, will be released by Vitagraph before the Christmas holidays. These are "The Sawmill," in which Larry Semon shows what funny things can happen in a lumber camp, and the other is "The Messenger," where in Jimmy Aubrey as the unwitting messenger sent for a quantity of high explosives, is funnier than ever.

"Flower of the North," the special made from the novel by James Oliver Curwood, will be released early next month. This big production, which has Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke in the leading roles, was directed by David Smith.

Arista Film to Release "Prejudice"

Announcement is made by the Arista Film Corporation of the immediate release of a seven reel photodrama entitled "Prejudice." The Arista Film Corporation is newly formed with Mr. I. Picker as president and Charles Penser as secretary and treasurer.

While they have the distributing rights of "Prejudice" for the United States and Canada, they have also acquired for distribution in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey "When Love is Young," starring Zeena Keefe.

To Start Soon on New Witwer Comedy

Two Witwer comedies have been completed to date by Fidelity Pictures Corporation, it was announced by "Bill" Smith this week. Work on the third two-reeler will be started immediately with Charles Delaney in the star role and Director Fleming as "master of ceremonies" on a location that will probably be near New York. Just what Witwer story will be selected for the third picture has not been decided but it is thought that "Once a Year," a Christmas story, will be picked for filming in view of the near approach of the holidays.

Built for Independent Market

"Shadows of Conscience" Especially Suitable for Indep.

"THE distinctive merits of 'Shadows of Conscience' make it an especially suitable subject for the independent market," said W. D. Russell in making the announcement recently that this production will be sold on the territorial-right basis. This decision follows a wide introductory campaign by which exhibitors on the Coast, in the Middle West and in the East have been familiarized with the picture which has had a number of successful trade showings.

By releasing "Shadows of Conscience" through the independent exchange, Mr. Russell has further expressed the confidence in the state-right buyer and the latter's facilities for exploitation, which was responsible for his success in handling a number of important productions in the past. The special attention which the independent buyer is able to give to extraordinary features, he believes will be a great asset in putting "Shadows of Conscience" on the exhibitor market.

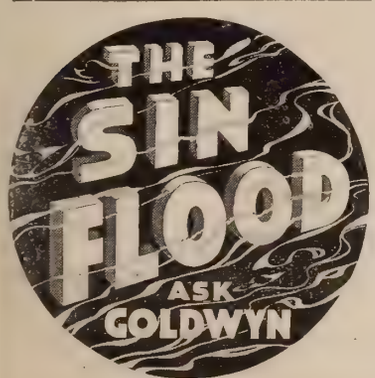
"Releasing 'Shadows of Conscience' on a national distributing plan would be like selling diamonds in a hardware store," said D. W. Russell. "The jewels are overlooked in the shuffle and the monkey wrench gets as much publicity as a two-carat stone. When a really successful picture such as this comes along, it belongs out of the category of the program attractions. It demands special salesmanship, special advertising and special exploitation. 'Shadows of Conscience' has proved its worthiness of this sort of marketing."

This latest Russell offering which is in seven reels has left a trail of enthusiastic reports wherever shown. Auspicious trade views have been achieved in Los Angeles, Chicago, and in New York and the reviews produced both in the trade and daily press have been, to use the mildest word, gratifying.

Although the background of this classic is Western "Shadows of Conscience" is a strict deviation from the so-called "Western." The story is broad enough and human enough to appeal to admirers of any type of screen drama.

Reviewers have been unanimous in at least one respect in commenting upon its many points of excellence. They have agreed that the photography is far above the ordinary. The whole film is defined in clear, sometimes brilliant tones and there are a number of exteriors that will be remembered especially for the effective lighting.

Foreign Rights Sold on "Martha Queed"



The foreign rights to "The Sin of Martha Queed," which was acquired for domestic distribution by the Associated Exhibitors Inc., last week, has been sold to Gus Schlesinger, well-known motion picture exporter, according to information disclosed by Mr. Schlesinger the latter part of the week.

"The Sin of Martha Queed" is an Alan Dwan production, produced by that well-known director with an all-star cast headed by Mary Thurman and Niles Welch.

Witwer Comedies Sold in Ill. and Ind.

Among the important sales made this week in the state right market is the deal whereby Greiver Productions bought the entire series of twelve Witwer comedies from Bill Smith of Fidelity Pictures for the territories of Illinois and Indiana. These comedies were bought on the strength of the successful screening of "Fools Rush Out," the first of the Witwer comedies to be released.

Production on "The Speaker Sex," the second of the Witwer comedies, has just been completed, with Charles Delaney, the original of Ed Harmon in Witwers' "From Baseball to Boches," in the feature role. Director Caryl S. Fleming is now preparing to begin work on the third two-reeler, a football story entitled "The Emancipation of Rodney."

A Wonderful Vision Awaiting Fulfilment

Possibilities in the Small Theatre Building

By F. S. Lawrence.

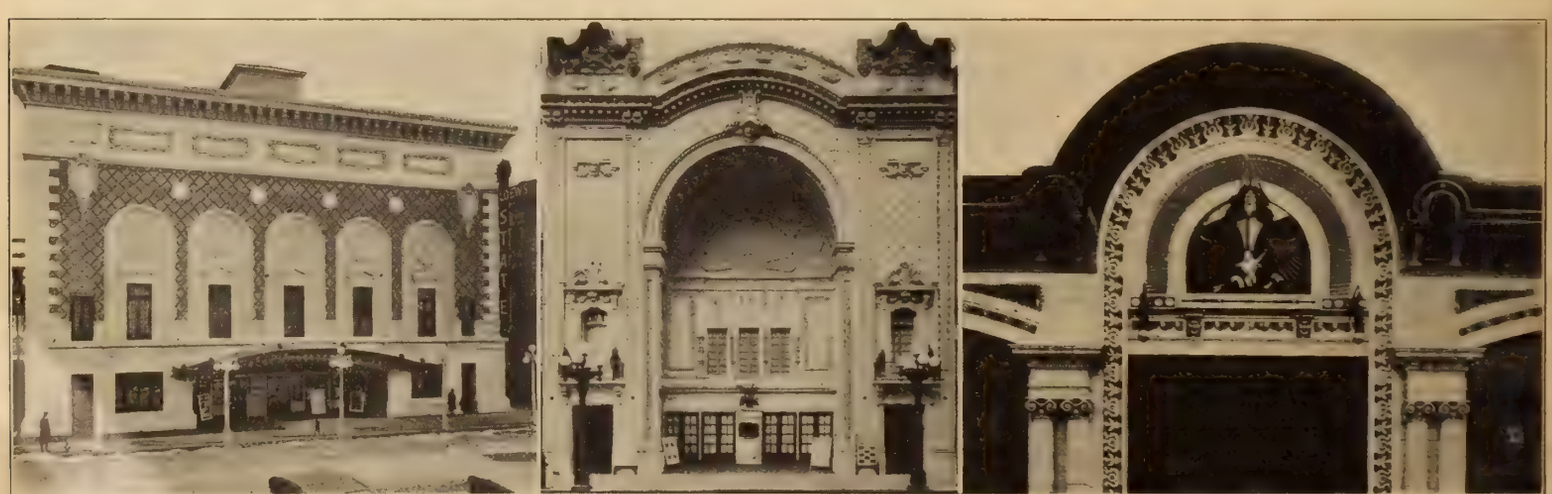
A few years ago the building material circles of New York City were considerably stirred by the appearance of a strange individual who burst on the local firmament, like a brand-new comet of inexplicable origin and eccentric orbit. He was a foreigner—it may be near enough to say of the Latin race, and of a coloration and personal appearance generally of the most startling nature. Within three or four weeks he had the leading architectural circles, manufacturers and dealers in all lines of building material and equipment buzzing with a feverish anticipation of great things which were to flow from the conceptions of an extraordinary genius. This man represeinted himself as controlling enormous capital, which was to embark in the moving picture enterprise with a chain of 100 palatial houses to be devoted to the moving picture drama on a scale of magnificence hitherto undreamed by any operator yet in the field. Leading firms of architects started enthusiastically on the preparation of plans, whose essential feature was to be the lavish use of polychromatic terra cotta and other ceramic materials, and manufacturers in these lines were busy for months preparing alternative colored drawings in collaboration with architects, interior decorators and workers in stained glass, while leading real estate operators were scurrying about for the selection of sites and the procuring of options on desirably located properties.

At last it seemed that the moving picture drama was to come into its own in a series of theatre buildings worthy of the great mission which the moving picture could fulfill in the life of the people. Not only were the buildings to be of the finest architectural design, but the character of production was to be of an order that would take its place with the noblest productions of the dramatic art of the "legitimate" stage. Organ and orchestral music of the highest order was to supplement the program, and the whole enterprise was to prove that the motion picture drama conducted on this plane would be not only an overwhelming popular success, but a financial venture of the soundest character. Facts and figures carefully compiled from months of inquiry into the experience of motion picture houses generally seemed to establish conclusively that the vision was possible, and that the genius had arrived who would dare it. It is not my purpose to pursue the history of this extraordinary vision and its attendant activities to its ultimate dissipation some months later into the mists of vanished dreams. Suffice it to say the conviction ultimately spread that all parties concerned had been duped through the operations of a mind capable of vizualizing the most magnificent conceptions, but "temperamentally impossible" and beyond all power of practical action in carrying these into effect. Indeed, it may be questioned whether the resources for doing so ever existed otherwise than in imagination, although tangible evidences existed, sufficient to lead the most conservative to take the chance in months of expensive effort.

The point is that with all the wonderful strides which the moving picture house has made since that time in architectural merit and distinctive elegance, nothing has yet appeared comparable to

Emery's Majestic theatre, Providence, R. I., a dignified example in polychrome terra cotta



Lobby of Grand theatre, Hartford, Conn. A rich and sumptuous interior wherein polychrome terra cotta in brilliant coloring has been used for the entire construction of walls and ceiling the gorgeous conceptions which emanated from this strange incomprehensible person whose activities are mentioned above, and this seems remarkable in view of the fact that the architectural treatment of the individual house was by no means beyond the scale of financial possibility under the costs of building as they then were, and the probable returns demonstrable from the gate receipts of many houses whose experience had been closely inquired into. In fact, it is reasonably sure that numerous instances exist where equal sums have been spent in moving picture theatre construction, and that the reason the results do not appear to the writer comparable with what was projected is solely that the ideas of design and use of material have not turned in the direction which these conceptions took.

It is the purpose of this article to point out that there yet exists the opportunity for the progressive motion picture theatre owner to realize economically something as distinctive and compelling in interest through the use of polychome tera cotta for the facade, and for the treatment of the entrace ways and lobby. The illustrations accompanying this article are of some of the best examples which have yet been erected, where this material of wonderful possibilities has been effectively used, but in very few so far has the enormous possibility in color been fully realized and employed. The average theatre, where not carried out in brick or stucco, has presented usually a solid white facade, relieved only by a few touches of coloration, and generally disfigured by electrical signs and hideous posters. Conceive a front glowing with color in brilliant harmonies of blue, green, yellow, purple and cream or white, combined with the master touch that is possible in harmonious relation of these to one another, and carried out with the gorgeous intricacy of detail that is to be found in examples of old Spanish and Moresque architecture, and retlize that any competent architect who has given study to the uses of color, in collaboration with the expert technicians of the terra cotta industry, can produce a design that, by regarding the economies of manufacture and construction native to the material, can be realized at a cost that is but very little greater than that now encountered for the inappropriate tasteless elaboration sometimes achieved in the effort to force a distinctive note. Those who have given any attention to the problem of the motion picture theatre know that there is a decided difference of opinion as to the value of architectural effect, and that some successful operators decry the use of anything tending to dignify or elevate the status of the moving picture house in this way. It is not

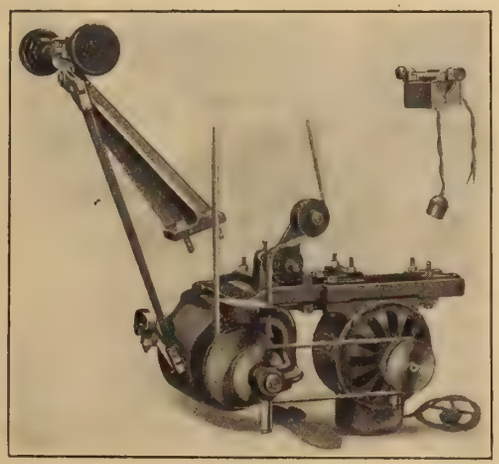
POWER'S ROLLER PIN INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT



Noiseless in Operation

Reduces Frictional Wear to a Minimum

THIS change does not alter the nature of the movement itself but makes for greater efficiency. The steel cross pins which engage with the cam have been equipped with tempered steel rollers which in action are retained on the pins of the cross by a thin steel flange that is attached to the actuating cam and locking ring by four set screws. Instead of the pins of the pin cross coming in contact with the cam by a sliding frictional motion, the rollers make possible a roller contact. The result is that the point of contact constantly changes; the movement operates with a minimum of friction and remains in accurate adjustment for a much greater period of time.

Frank H. Goulette, Pioneer of Industry in Far East, Studies Conditions Here

On his trip to the various moving picture centers of this country and Europe, Frank M. Goulette, pioneer in the development of the exhibition of films in the Philippines, is spending several weeks in New York.

Mr. Goulette is identified with several branches of the movie industry in Manila and in the Philippine provinces. He owns the Lyric and Savoy in Manila, and runs a supply service and the Lyric Film Exchange. He also has other theatrical interests in the islands and his activities in the amusement field reach as far as Hong Kong.

After serving in the Spanish-American War in Porto Rico with the 19th U. S. Infantry, Mr. Goulette settled in the Philippines. In 1916 he built the Lyric, which he claims is the best theatre in the town, and the only one in the islands in which feature films have been run with any success. The Philippine patron demands serials, and Mr. Goulette states that it is impossible to rent features in the provinces. If features are run, serials must also be shown to carry them. The Savoy was purchased by Mr. Goulette in 1917.

Besides moving picture, Mr. Goulette has been interested in other fields of amusements. He managed Bostock's Royal Italian Circus for one year, and at another time he managed the Russia Grand Opera Co., which was a company of eighty-five people.

Leaving Manila on June 17, he has since been visiting the film centers of the United States, spending some time in Los Angeles and visiting Michigan, his home state. Mr. Goulette was married while in this country. From New York he plans to go to Spain, where he intends to gather together an opera company to take back with him to the Philippines.

Vision Awaits Fulfillment

the writer's purpose to embark on any argument against this view. It is his conviction that there exist enough successful men, or men capable of success, now in the motion picture theatre field who disagree, to be confident that a strong movement for the betterment of moving picture theatre architecture will continue to manifest itself, and that to these the possibilities inherent in the use of terra cotta will have a strong appeal as these possibilities become better known and as visible evidences arise to illustrate them. No material has yet been developed which approaches the effectiveness of architectural terra cotta for the decorative problem of the motion picture theatre front. Apart from its plasticity as clay that can be moulded into almost any shape and permanently fixed by the application of intense heat in firing, it possesses the virtue of being cleanable at any time by the process of ordinary washing down with water, and thus resuming its pristine brilliance of appearance and newness.

As a material that has already been subjected to a heat greater than that of the average conflagration, its fire-resisting qualities make it of the first order as desirable construction for an edifice where risk of fire must be always reckoned with, not only as a fact but in the psychology of public view. It may be true that when people go to the motion pictures they do so to see the production and not the building, but there can be no doubt that casual interest figures largely in the promptings of strolling patronage. No better illustration of this fact exists than in the experience of a certain store building, known to the writer, where the distinctiveness and beauty of its polychrome front not only resulted in entirely renting the building during the course of construction by tenants attracted by passing in the street, but on the testimony of tenants afterwards, was found to materially augment patronage by new customers. To the extent that the experience of a small store and loft building on a side street may contain suggestion for the prospective builder of a motion picture theatre this instance is quoted for what significance it may have to those interested in housing the motion picture drama.

To those who may be interested in pursuing the development of better design in the small theatre building, and realizing something of the vision which yet awaits fulfilment in this field of architectural work, it may be added that the terra cotta industry maintains a bureau of information for the assistance of owners contemplating the erection of such buildings, which is known as the National Terra Cotta Society, whose offices are at No. 1 Madison Avenue, New York City. This society does not concern itself in any way with the sale of terra cotta, prices, or other negotiations pertaining to the use of material, but exists for the general assistance of the public in realizing better standards of architectural art in all classes of buildings through disseminating a knowledge of the possibilities which architectural terra cotta presents.

Four Western Theatres Simplexized

The Western Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle, Washington, distributors of the Simplex products for the northwestern part of the United States, report the opening of the Rivoli Theatre at Pendleton, Oregon.

This theatre, which has a seating capacity of over eight hundred and represents an approximate investment of $100,000, was completely equipped with opera chairs, draperies, carpets and Simplex projection equipment by the above company.

The projection room, which is thirteen feet in length and eight feet wide, is equipped with two late model Simplex Projectors which project a 16-foot picture through Simplex lenses upon a Gardiner Gold Fibre Screen at ninety feet.

They also report the installation of opera chairs, draperies, Simplex Projectors, Transverters, stage scenery and screens in the new Blue Mouse Theatre at Corvallis, Oregon, and the new Rialto Theatre, Hood River, Oregon. The new Neptune Theatre, Seattle, Wash., which will open shortly has also placed their order for Simplex Projectors and other projection room equipment with this concern.

Smith Joins Salt Lake Co.

Earl D. Smith, formerly branch manager of the Swanson Theatre Equipment Company, and afterwards branch manager for their successors, the Argus Enterprises, Inc., of this city, has severed his connections with the Argus Enterprises and has accepted the sales managership of the Salt Lake Theatre Supply Company of Salt Lake City.

Mr. Smith has been very popular among the exhibitors in this territory, well liked and credited for his knowledge of the supply business. The Salt Lake Theatre Supply Company deem it a very fortunate circumstance that they are able to have Mr. Smith connected with them.

Robert-Morton Organ in Pantages

The new Pantages Theatre, Kansas City, has a large Robert-Morton Orchestral Pipe Organ. This instrument was installed by the American Photo Player Company. It is needless to state that the new organ is one of the main attractions of this beautiful new temple of the silent drama.

Remodeled Lyric Opened

The remodeled Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, opened its doors Monday night, September 19. The house is operated by McMahan and Jackson.

The Lyric theatre has for years been one of the leading legitimate houses in the city, showing pictures only during the summer. The new policy will be that of combined vaudeville and motion pictures, with Pantage's vaudeville being featured. —ADAMS.

New Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia, a Moving Picture Temple of Great Beauty

Decorations and Lighting Effects Are Features of Latest Stanley House—Entire Fireproof

The new Karlton theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., which opened recently, is truly a gem. The handsome marble facade is resplendent and of immaculate beauty and the new interior of the theatre building is a revelation in decorative art. Masses of brick and steel that were upon the site were removed quickly once the builders entered actively upon their contract—and there arose with surprising celerity a structure that is sure to win unstinted praise and to rebound to the credit of Philadelphia.

The Karlton is to be a first run feature photoplay theatre under the direction of the Stanley Company of America and Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the company, gave the Hoffman-Henon Company, architects, carte blanche to make the theatre a thing of beauty. Its construction is of the latest type—fireproof from front to rear. It will be one of the safest buildings of any kind, the heat being furnished by the Land Title Building which adjoins the Karlton.

The style of the entire theatre is classic with Adam's influence. The main floor consists of an open lobby, closed vestibule, a large mirrored vestibule and foyer and finally a large auditorium. The front of the house from the lobby to the foyer is wainscoted with white Italian marble; the foyer is decorated above the marble work with gold leaf decorations and beautiful polychrome color effects. On each side of the foyer, there are beautiful marble fountains of Bottechino marble, over which are Mural paintings by George Harding. The main vestibule, besides being wainscoted with Italian marble, has beautiful violet Breche marble pilasters between French plate cut glass mirrors. The chandeliers in this vestibule are of Venetian crystals. The entire scheme of this vestibule will be of light, airy effect.

The ornamental plastered effect of the ceiling is worked out in very delicate reliefs. The main auditorium is decorated in an entirely different color scheme from the entrance and foyer. The ceilings are all of light plain colors, the ornaments being high lighted with gold and the background decorated with various colors. The side walls are beautifully panelled and the panels are hung with imported French tapestry. The color effects around the tapestries are all in keeping with these panels and are worked out in various colors and tones to harmonize. The wainscoting is of Spanish leather and Circassian walnut, beautifully panelled.

A novel lighting scheme is the feature of this auditorium and it has one of the most expensive lighting schemes of any auditorium of its size in the country. Three large circular grills panels are the features of the main ceiling with small rectangular lighting panels between the ceiling lighting group. Around the main cornices are concealed hundreds of lights. At the top of the wainscoting there is another series of lighting reflectors interrupted every thirty feet by a special lighting unit designed by the architects for this particular theatre, which has a very novel effect. This entire lighting system in the switchboard room on the both floors. Every possible shade in the rainbow may be secured by this further augment this lighting scheme.

There is an elaborate system of ventilators that ensures perfect air conditions. Large fans, blowers and air washers were concealed all about the theatre, insuring a warm and healthy atmosphere in winter and coolness in summer. The organ is concealed behind beautiful grille screens on both sides of the proscenium arch. It is one of the largest organs ever placed in a theatre of this size. New musical effects never before attempted in any other theatre will be obtained from this instrument.

The entire stage setting will be unique and out of the ordinary. The hangings and draperies are all of silk damask, trimmed with gold brocade and fringes. The carpets were all specially woven for this theatre. The main carpet is in Jasper stripes of black and gold. The ladies rest room is beautifully furnished and carpeted and the walls are hung with colored damask laid out in panels. French mirrors are built in the walls at both ends. The men's smoking room is finished in antique oak with furniture to match, all upholstered in Spanish leather. Of course the Karlton has been provided with the latest types of projection machines and with a screen of the most approved sort.

Views of the Thomas H. Ince Studios' Laboratories

Thomas H. Ince Utilizes Latest Inventions in His Film Laboratories

"Hail the Woman" Receives Special Care by Experts to Insure Photographic Perfection

That Thomas H. Ince has utilized the most intricate and efficient inventions of modern motion picture science to guarantee the photographic perfection of "Hail the Woman," his pulsating drama of American life, is convincingly indicated by a brief description of the Ince Studios Laboratories and a glance at the expert technicians in charge.

These laboratories, a unit of the studio plant, boast of as excellent equipment and as great a capacity for production as any in America or abroad. The men in charge include many of the darkroom's most proficient experts to whom the attainment of superior results and the production of consistently perfect prints is not a matter of guess work, but of scientific precision.

While all Thomas H. Ince productions receive the most painstaking attention in these laboratories, "Hail the Woman" was accorded that additional amount of care that was characteristic of its entire production.

The film for every one of the more than a hundred prints of "Hail the Woman" was perforated by the most accurate machines, new and superior improvements but recently installed in the Ince laboratories. The new machines are said to be a positive guarantee against torn sprocket holes, the constantly recurring fault of so many inferior prints. The precision with which the sprocket holes are cut is also an assurance of the utmost screen-steadiness and the elimination of jumpy projection.

Every foot of the hundreds of reels of "Hail the Woman" that will circulate to the nation's exhibitors was printed in ultra-modern machines but under the eyes of seasoned workers of years of experience who gauged the exposure of every scene, thereby eliminating the possibility of over-timed or under-timed prints. This unusual attention to detail assured faithful transference to the theatre screen of the splendid original photography.

Equal efforts to secure uniformity in the development and tinting of the prints were made in the darkrooms and the washing tanks. The prints of "Hail the Woman" have been delicately and artistically printed, with several innovational color effects an added feature.

Fully appreciating the annoyance of that chronic bugbear of the past, broken film, Thomas H. Ince some months ago installed in his laboratories a battery of the latest design automatic splicing machines and trained a staff of special workers to operate them. Hand splicing, and its unsatisfactory results, are a thing of the past with Ince films. The various lengths of the "Hail the Woman" prints are securely cemented together and exhaustive tests have demonstrated that defective splices have been entirely eliminated.

Polishing and inspection are the two remaining processes that are given the utmost attention in the Ince laboratories.

Every foot of print is inspected before it is permitted to leave the laboratories. This work is accomplished by specialists, who review each print, running at normal speed, on miniature screens. If a blemish is detected, or an imperfectly exposed length of film, it is immediately marked and new film substituted. Sprocket holes are also inspected and no print is sent out unless it bears these inspectors' O. K. of one hundred per cent perfection.

The final process, polishing, is completed on automatic machines, the film being washed with alcohol and polished by camel's fleece buffers.

Alfred Brant, one of the best-known authorities on photographic chemistry in the United States, who has been with the Ince Studios for more than a decade, is superintendent of the laboratories. His chief assistant is A. Schmid, also a noted chemist. More than eighty experts comprise the laboratory staff.

Dear Ed:

Here goes for a write up for our News and Discussions Column.

I think the column will fill a long-felt want and will be of value to every projectionist who wants to be up to date on all new ideas and suggestions.

Now to help Andrew Compton in his difficulty; I can't say that I have any suggestion that would help him unless he put his lights in the floor around the edge the same way that footlights are built in theatres.

I am going to send in a picture of my projection room and motor generator room soon. I also have a motor rewind that I designed myself which I will describe.

I am enclosing a membership application for my assistant. He is anxious to join the league.

Yours truly,
R. L.
Chief Projectionist,
Grand Theatre, I. A. T. SE Local No. 554
N. A. M. L. No. 1125.

Richmond Theatre, Alexandria, Va.

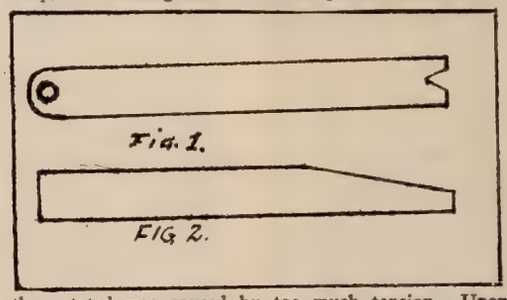
Dear Sir:

Please send a supply of film can labels and also a league button, as I have mislaid mine. My membership number is 1094. I have been a member for some time and have always worked hard to help my brother projectionists.

I have been chief projectionist at the Richmond theatre here for five years running Simplex machines. Am enclosing view of theatre and a photograph of myself; will send more news later.

Wishing all the members the best of luck, I am,

Very truly yours,
F. JONES, No. 1094.



F. Jones, and the Richmond theatre, Alexandria, Va., of which he is chief projectionist

Oatka Theatre, Warsaw, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I am strong for the N. A. M. L. and am enclosing a membership application which I have filled out. It was only today that I was accused by the Fox Films Corp. of returning film with torn sprocket holes which they stated was caused by too much tension. Upon close examination of the film I found that from the nature of the tear that it must have been torn from losing the lower loop, as undue tension would never have done it. The particular piece of film was from the 1922 series, and as we started it but three weeks ago, and in that time I have lost no loop, I am sure that I am not to blame. Then, too, as direct proof that my machines were in proper adjustment, today I ran a Goldwyn 1922, almost first run, and upon the completion of the show found that the film was in first class condition.

In my eight years as projectionist I have never returned film to any exchange with a poor splice or misframe . . .

I made a very satisfactory light for splicing by inserting a piece of ground glass 2x4 inches in my rewinding bench, and underneath placed a 40 watt lamp enclosed in a box. Near the edge of the bench I placed a snap switch. For a scraper for removing emulsion I took a piece of a hacksaw blade, ground the teeth off and the end square and in this end ground a V-shaped opening. (See Fig 1.) As a guide for a scraper I used a block of wood 3x1½ and ½ in. thick with a beveled end. (See Fig. 2.)

Trusting that this will be of some benefit to brother projectionists, I am,

Very truly yours,
FRANCIS E. BAKER, projectionist,

Box 193, Easley, S. C.

Dear Sir:

I am a member of the N. A. M. L. No. 949 and I am out of a job at present. Can you do anything to help me to get one. I have had six years experience as a projectionist and I certainly enjoy that kind of work. I can operate Powers, Simplex and Motiograph machines.

Will you send me a new membership card as I have mislaid mine. I sure am lost since I have quit taking the News. I am going to subscribe again when I get back on the job. Hoping that I hear that one of the members can help me soon, I am

Yours truly,
J. B. Barr.

Metropolitan Season Opens

Many Aspire to Caruso Roles; 31 Sopranos Engaged for New York Opera

THE Metropolitan's annual season of opera begins next week, with every prospect bright for another year of success.

The whole music world is especially interested in what promises to be a race among aspiring tenors who would sing the roles of the immortal Caruso. There are three of his countrymen, Crimi, Gigli and Martinelli, who will bid for public favor.

Two are Americans, Chamlee and Harrold. Further, George Meader, Aureliano Pertile and Manuel Salazar are new, and there may be "dark horses" yet among a field of fifteen.

Of thirty-one sopranos, eight are newcomers, and of fourteen contraltos, but one. Besides Galli-Curci and Jeritza, the added foreign prima donnas include Selma Kurz of Vienna, to be heard later, and Angeles Ottein, a Spaniard, who sang with the Scotti company on its recent tour to California. Five American girls win a Metropolitan debut. Yvonne d'Arle, born in France, has lived in this country since her second year; educated in Denver, she sang in light opera in "The Lilac Domino" and was "discovered" for grand opera while engaged on a New York roof garden cabaret. Suzanne Keener, a young colorature soprano from Pittsburgh, appeared with Sousa's Band and assisted during the war in Liberty Loan drives. Grace Anthony and Viola Philo are New Yorkers who coached for opera respectively with Giulio Setti, the opera chorusmaster, and a former tenor of the house, Carl Jorn. Last of the young Americans is Myrtle Schaaf, mezzo-soprano, another of those recruited for opera by Antonio Scotti.

In a list of fifteen baritones, the newcomers are Titta Ruffo, a star of magnitude, and Louis Rosza of Budapest. Among nine basses there is Fedor Chaliapin.

It has been hinted that Chaliapin will make a limited number of Metropolitan appearances in "Boris," acting possibly both the drunken monk, Varlaam, and the usurping Czar. Mr. Ruffo is announced with Rosa Ponselle in Verdi's "Ernani," to be revived in the season's fourth week, narrowly preceded by Massenet's "La Navarraise," with Farrar, and followed by "Die Walkure," with Matzenauer. Frances Alda returns late in December in the production of Lalo's "Le Roie d'Ys," Lucrezia Bori in January in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Snow Maiden," the later novelties being Catalani's "Loreley" in February, and in March a possibly first local production of Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte,"

"Chopin Suite" Brooklyn Mark Strand Specialty

THE "Chopin Suite" interpreted in rhythmic motion served as one of the most pleasing numbers on a recent Brooklyn Mark Strand bill.

The dance numbers for the Chopin suite were staged in a Grecian set with cut out pillars and a drop of the early century motif. The prelude, light airy music was interpreted by an appropriate quiet dance of the same type as the musical theme, the girls wearing Grecian robes and wreaths. Four girl dancers were in the next number "Valse" which was more spirited. In the third number "Nocturne," the dancing took on a lively playful spirit with the dancers using veils to good effect with colored lights playing on the filmy veils from the booth. During this dance number Jeno Sevely, concert master of the Mark Strand Symphony orchestra played the Chopin text in a solo number. The final dancing number of the suite was "Polonaise" with the dancers in drill formations and posings.

Folk Music Compilations Excellent for Theatre Use

THE death by accident of Mrs. Natalie Curtis Burlin recalls to memory the fact that this authoritative and ardent worker in the domain of folk music, especially the music of the American Indian and the negro, has contributed at least three musical compilations that should be in the library of every organist or conductor who is under the necessity of building scores for the motion picture.

Her publication of "The Indians' Book," in 1907, contained a collection of some 200 songs and chants of eighteen different Indian tribes, of her own collection. "Songs of Ancient America" presents Pueblo Indian corn-grinding songs. In 1918 she published a series of "Hampton Negro Folk-Songs" containing notations of "spirituals" and work and play songs for male quartet, harmonized as the negroes sing them without retouching. Her latest publication was a volume entitled "Songs and Tales from the Dark Continent," which appeared last year, in which Mrs. Burlin had recorded and studied the singing and sayings of two native-born Africans who were students of the Hampton Institute and who repeated for her songs and stories they had learned in their native land.

Symphony Recital Given at Grauman's Theatre, Los Angeles

MISCHA GUTERSON, a musical director at Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, recently accepted a challenge of the severest music critics and presented an "all-symphony program" at a Sunday concert, the quality of which could not be bettered in the schedule of any of the world's greatest orchestra's repertoire.

It was not, as Mr. Guterson explained through various mediums prior to his venture, a symphonic concert—that is, a concert merely partaking the nature of a symphony recital, but rather an authentic recital, the individual numbers of which were standard in the world of great music.

Beethoven's immortal Fifth Symphony was played in its gorgeous, appealing entirety. Every movement given characteristic interpretation. In superb contrast with the purities of Beethoven in his noblest moods was a presentation of Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" symphonic composition. This is the creation that the composer himself once asserted was his favorite of all his works. Laidow's piquant and humorous "Musical Snuff Box" was the other orchestral offering.

The soloist of the occasion was Alfred Kastner, harpist, who offered Saint-Saens' "Fantasie."

Buffalo Musician Conductor at New Loew House

Emmet G. Luedeke, well known Buffalo musician, formerly a member of orchestras in the Shea and other houses, has been appointed conductor of the new Loew State Theatre in the Queen City of the Lakes. Mr. Luedeke has a personnel of 15 in the State orchestra. A large Moeller organ is used by the State.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"The Dog and the Bone"

(Aesop Fables—Pathe)

IT'S like taking candy away from a baby and cream away from a cat to take a bone away from a dog. This is some comparison but it serves in pointing the very excellent moral of the latest animated fable brought up to date from the ancient Mr. Aesop. The venerable gentleman contended that "a bone in the mouth is worth two in the brook." Paul Terry the cartoonist shows a dog playing Narcissus with himself. He sees the reflection of the bone in his mouth and thinks it belongs to another. And straightway commits an error by dropping it. He then registers grief in losing his valuable meal ticket.

There is some good comic effort displayed in the antics of a miserly hound secreting the treasure plans in the safe. The safe is mapped out on a paper and attached to the wall, but a peg-leg pirate dog of the French poodle breed enters and burglarizes the safe and steals the precious plans and by putting two and two together or perhaps three and three, he locates the buried treasure. The strip is cleverly conceived and executed and the moral is well emphasized. — Length 1 reel. — LAURENCE REID.

"On Location"

(Snub Pollard—Roach Comedy—Pathe)

THEY are kidding picture production in this latest Snub Pollard comedy as its title would indicate. The author has thought up a really clever burlesque which may be said to be the comedian's best bet in many moons. The director has spared no one in his exaggerations. He puts the satiric touch to the picture conception of the man with the megaphone and includes them all—even the extras. The irrepressible Snub plays the part of a caretaker in a certain cozy home. Along comes a director and commandeers the house for picture purposes, with the big scene being a battle which is to be staged upon the front lawn.

Snub objects to this high-handed business, but becomes so interested in the proceedings that he is enlisted for a part. The comedy travels merrily along and it is compact with ridiculous fun. The old Union suits (no pun intended) are dragged out and some of the extras appear in them as Northern soldiers, while others put on the regalia of the Indians. Marie Mosquini lends the charming touches through a fragrant personality which is emphasized through a fetching crinoline costume. This is a capital filler anywhere.—Length 1 reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"Late Hours"

(Eddie Boland—Hal Roach Comedy—Pathe)

THE dream situation is used in this latest opus from the Hal Roach lots starring Eddie Boland and his "sidekick," lil' Sunshine Sammy. Eddie arrives home late in the wee sma' hours to discover that his wife and the ever-faithful mother-in-law are waiting up for him. He sneaks into the cellar to avoid them and stumbles over the cat and falls down a flight of stairs. When the bottom is reached he finds a trap door which leads into a cave (after the Arabian Nights idea) and his eyes feast upon a group of Oriental maidens.

And at this point the comedy enters and proceeds with plenty of snap and ginger. Eddie awakens from his dream with the shock that the girls are hastening upstairs to mother-in-law. The author and director have injected some rattling good incident, besides giving it a tone of novelty and a praiseworthy setting. Book it and watch your crowd swallow it hook, line and sinker.—Length 1 reel.—LAURENCE REID.

"Great American Authors"

(Kineto Reviews—Series of Single Reel Subjects)

KINETO is offering here a series which is sure to have a successful reception by schoolmen and educators. Each reel deals with a single author, and illustrates one or more of his poems, quoting them in the subtitles. No subject of botany or science could be so acceptable to the non-theatrical field, and at the same time the pictures have the elements of general entertainment which will make them acceptable in the higher class theatres.

The first three reels deal with Longfellow, Lowell, and Whittier. These reels (and presumably those to follow) are developed in the same manner. First comes a photograph of the author, then the scene of his birthplace and other landmarks, such as the college where he studied, followed by a view of his grave.

Longfellow's "The Village Blacksmith" is the poem selected for screen illustration. The poem is quoted in couplets, and the scenes are illustrated in pictures. "The Courtin'" is chosen from Lowell's "Bigelow Papers" and shown on the screen in the same burlesque fashion in which the poem was written. Two of Whittier's well-loved poems are quoted and illustrated. They are "The Barefoot Boy" and "Maud Muller." This reel, we believe, is superior to the other two viewed, largely because more interesting scenes can be made from these poems.

The "Great American Authors" series, judging from the three already seen, will fill a want in a truly satisfactory way. They should enjoy a hearty reception in the entire educational field, and in the better class theatres.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Adviser"

(Mermaid Comedy — Two Reels — Released Through Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

LLOYD HAMILTON enters the profession of law in this comedy, which is up to the usual standard of Mermaids and developed along the usual lines. The opening shot is unusual, showing Ham in conference with Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan, who are not caricutured in any way, but merely carefully impersonated. For the rest, there is a court room scene with Hamilton defending a criminal. Of course his defense is a joke and the man is convicted. To supply a chase finale, the criminal escapes, and there is some pummelling and hokum supplied by a Ford or two. But it isn't very funny when the oil tank empties itself on Ham's upturned face.—MAATHEW A. TAYLOR.

Advance Feature Review

"Red Hot Romance"

(Emerson—Loos)

AUDIENCES inclined to enjoy comedy in any form, combined with drama, dependent upon travesty, polite slap-stick or any kind of mirth provoking screen lore will be unanimous in three cheers for "Red Hot Romance," the very acme of comedy perfection. Laughs come one a minute in expeditious spontaneity without the introduction of any unclean or objectionable method, relying upon a snappy story, perfect continuity and scintillating subtitles, a production that could hold its own in a race with the heralded "specials" and stand a good chance to win. Action is swift, situations colorful, scenic value of superior merit.

First honors are due John Emerson and Anita Loos. They have created a veritable Rolls Royce screen offering, which will increase their already enviable reputation a hundred fold. It evidences their combined knowledge of audience psychology and screen technique in addition to the well known sense of humor of each contributor.

From a point of direction, Victor Fleming has scored heavily with the selection of a bullet proof cast, each an artist as well as a type. Basil Sidney, Mae Collins, Roy Atwill, Frank Lawlor, Tom Wilson, Frank Stockdale and Snitz Edwards and many others whose names deserve creditable mention, each give excellent proof of their worth, also a Miss Valerie, the "vamp." Camera work, credited Frederick Palmer and Oliver Marsh will put bright new feathers in both their caps.

Story hinges on son of deceased insurance magnate. Father leaves a most unkind will obviously with hope of inducing luxury living offspring to become acquainted with work. Financial position is embarassing, especially since he is in love with girl whose father believes in son-in-law with visible means of support. Girl's father, aspirant for political assignment for forty years, is detailed to "Bunkonia," where lawlessness reigns supreme, vicinity of islands in the Caribbean Sea. King and his court drink up everything but the acquatic surroundings.

Hero, forced by father's will to sell life insurance for one year, huge fortune depending upon success as salesman, follows to "Bunkonia." Plan is laid to ruin him by rival suitor, one of a group of plotters intent upon stirring up revolution, who learns of proviso in will. Villain then makes it possible for hero to sell policies to King and his attaches, just before revolution is to break, threatening the life of all hero's clients. If insurance company suffers loss account of boy's endeavors, entire fortune is scheduled to revert in favor of home for feeble minded. It is therefore up to the American's wit and energy to save the situation.

There are sequences absolutely new, novelty inserts heretofore overlooked that might have saved many failures. It is a picture first aid in treating the tired business man, the perpetual grouch, amusement searching youngsters—the public at large. One corking comedy that would get a broad smile from the Sphinx. Six reels.

"BUCKING THE LINE"
(Fox)

Lefty Flynn Makes Debut as Star in Lively Melodrama

FOX is uncovering new stars these days. Lately the screen public has been introduced to the Murphy-Walker combination, to be followed by Barbara Bedford, and now comes Maurice (Lefty) Flynn making his debut as a star after some seasons spent around as handy man to heroines in distress. The erstwhile Yale fullback has doubled in brass, has played the oily villain and the straightforward hero, thus giving him plenty of experience to cope with the duties of stellar rank.

"Bucking the Line" is simply made to order for him. The Flynn who crashed into the Harvard line crashes into this picture with plenty of abandon and enthusiasm. He has his work cut out for him, but receives the signals from the director and obeys them by scoring several dramatic touchdowns—most of which have to do with rescuing three individuals and a train load of young picnickers.

It is an adventurous melodrama, perhaps a trifle obvious and arbitrary, but the action is so lively that one has no time to hunt for flaws. Carl Harbaugh, the director, has paid special attention to the various elements. The note of humor is ever cropping out to give it a balance and this note is sharply emphasized by Norman Selby, otherwise known as Kid McCoy. The celebrated pugilist enacts the part of a tramp to the manner born, and it is exceedingly good fun to see him take life easy. The plot revolves around the extraordinarily simple theme of moulding character. Flynn is a small town social lion as the story begins and when his sweetheart upbraids him for his nine o'clock ideas, and a shady partner causes him to flee town through a trumped up charge of appropriating funds, the erstwhile Yale football player catches a side-door Pullman attired in evening dress and hits out for some unknown spot. He rescues the Kid from the rods beneath the car and they jump off at a place which is the scene of a railroad fight.

The plot at this point concerns certain railroad magnates who are fighting for a right of way. And Flynn enters the situation with unbounded enthusiasm. He beats up the section crew, rescues the daughter of the president from a mad ride on a gasoline hand-car, punishes a social pirate from his old-home town, pilots an engine in a mad race to reach the draw bridge in time to save the picnic train from leaping the tracks, and does divers and sundry other things which may be catalogued under the word "excitement." It goes with a bang from inception to conclusion. With succeeding pictures as clever as this Flynn will be popular in no time. It carries adventure, suspense and thrills in abundance.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Maurice (Lefty) Flynn, erstwhile Yale football star, has reached stardom in another direction. His work as leading man and character actor for various screen companies has been so uniformly good that Fox has made him into a stellar figure and he comes to the ———— theatre next ———— in his first feature, "Bucking the Line." The story is written by Francis Lynde, a popular author, and translated for this screen proves a stirring vehicle for the exploitation of Mr. Flynn's acting talent and athletic ability.

It revolves around the struggle for possession of a valuable railroad right of way, with a four-cornered love theme interwoven through the rapid and exciting action. The story begins with the hero contentedly performing the duties of a small town bank cashier. A false charge of appropriation of funds sends him away a fugitive, and plunges him into a series of adventures which are thoroughly adventurous. There are many exciting scenes which build fine suspense. The cast, including Molly Malone and Norman Selby (Kid McCoy), is excellent.

PROGRAM READER

Maurice Flynn, formerly a star of the gridiron, has become a star of the silver screen, with many adventures in between. The famous Yale fullback deserves stardom through his uniform good work as leading man and character actor for various companies. In "Bucking the Line" he has an ideal vehicle for the display of his talent and athletic ability. It is a stirring picture saturated with fast-moving action which is always exciting and interesting. The picture carries some sensational incident and is interwoven with a fine romance. Come and see this famous football player, adventurer, cattle-man, aviator, and social lion. You will like him and the picture, too. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is your opportunity to make the most of a new star. Maurice Flynn has become a well known figure on the screen through his good work as leading man and character actor. Now that he is a star the chance is yours to build up a popularity for him. The screen public is always eager to see new personalities. And they will flock to see Flynn, because being an exceptionally good actor and an athlete of ability, he will provide full entertainment. The picture is rich with action and adventure. Describe its thrills and fascinating points. Play up Flynn and describe something of his career.

"THE LURE OF JADE"
(R-C Pictures)

Pauline Frederick Has Emotional Opportunities in Unconvincing Story

THIS picture gives Pauline Frederick another opportunity to reveal her emotional capabilities, although the substance of the plot and the characterization do not appear convincing. The premise upon which the heroine flees civilization and takes up her abode in the South Sea Islands seems faulty and rather stupid inasmuch as the quarrel concerned defamation of character which a little explanation from either one of the two characters involved would probably satisfy the gossips. The scene is a naval base, with the star enacting the daughter of the commander.

Some years previously, according to the flashback, the young woman had carried on a liaison with a certain officer in a retreat of the South Seas. When he proffered his love, she calmly advised him to remain steadfast in his devotion to his promised fiancee. She forgets her own words and refuses to entertain his apologies after he had played the gentleman by defending his gossipy wife. She accuses him of causing the death of her father, and the next seen of her, she is presiding over a colorful "dive" in the South Seas. The story is quite involved but is easy to follow. But it never rings genuine. The star's dramatic opportunities arrive when she catches the gossipy wife in the identical situation in which she herself was caught, although the former's liaison is dishonorable.

Ten years or more have elapsed when the heroine is shown in her South Sea retreat, and Miss Frederick is careful enough actress to show the traces of time. However, the gossipy woman, an elderly looking figure in the first place, passes through the years lightly. It seems strange to see a villain lurking about making love to a woman with a grown son. The story is really one of unrequited love. The commander and the heroine never quite get over their erstwhile romance. The dramatic fireworks arrive when the crazed youth kills the villain, with the emotional priestess of the "dive" assuming the guilt to save his mother and father from worry and distress. The ending is truly tragic for the death wagon is taking the unhappy woman on her last journey, much after the fashion of Joan of Arc and Sidney Carton.

The picture carries good atmosphere, with the sets being uniformly good and the extras looking like genuine derelicts, Kanakas, and habitues of out-of-the-way places. Leon Bary makes a slippery villain, while Thomas Holding carries himself too stiffly, even for a naval officer. The best work of the assisting cast is contributed by Arthur Rankin. Miss Frederick dominates the picture throughout.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Pauline Frederick has an occasion to flash her extraordinary talent as an emotional actress in her latest feature entitled "The Lure of Jade," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The talented star plays a heroine of unrequited love, whose passion and devotion for her father cause her to leave civilization because of certain evil gossip. She returns to the South Sea Islands, a country where she had experienced her great romance. Utterly disillusioned over the turn of events, she is satisfied to lose her self-respect in a notorious sailor's dive.

And years later the naval officer who had wed the woman who started the evil gossip comes to the South Seas, bringing his wife and son, the latter a youth of some twenty years. It is the star's privilege to show a fine spirit of self-sacrifice for the sake of the youth's mother and father when the boy kills a man. The picture is filled with dramatic scenes and carries appropriate atmosphere. In the cast are Thomas Holding and Arthur Rankin.

PROGRAM READER

A fascinating romantic drama which travels over two hemispheres and which permits the emotional star, Pauline Frederick, an opportunity to reveal her talent at its highest development is "The Lure of Jade," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. This story of unrequited love, of hope destroyed, of gossipy tongues which wreck character, of atmosphere and dramatic events is said to be one of the best vehicles in which Miss Frederick has ever appeared. The spectator follows her adventures with the keenest attention, for it is a story which carries sufficient elements for popular appeal. So come next ———— and be royally entertained.

SUGGESTIONS

A Pauline Frederick picture is always one which is well equipped with good acting. Rest assured of that. So emphasize the fact that the emotional star has a vehicle which entitles her to the greatest praise. Tell your patrons that the star rises to emotional heights again in this fascinating romantic drama of the Occident and Orient. Play it up as a story of mystery, love, pathos, sentiment, honor, and self-sacrifice. Tell of the cast and mention the important players. Your house can be decorated in a green color scheme, and a prologue can present idol dancers with buddhas and incense providing the atmosphere. The figures can be garbed a la Oriental.

"HER FACE VALUE"
(Realart)

Enjoyable Romance in a Hollywood and Broadway Setting

WHEN Earl Derr Biggers' story, "The Girl Who Paid Dividends," appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, it did not take an astute mind to guess that the tale would soon find its way to the silver sheet. When a new phase of American life is offered in fiction, and a new type of character presented, it is doubly welcome. We have had countless stories of chorus girls and eventual theatrical fame—here is a story of a chorus girl who reaches motion picture stardom. There is a glimpse of the workings of Hollywood producers and a sequence showing the taking of a stunt picture. While only the professional side of the producing industry is shown, there is no revelation of the intimate producing secrets.

We consider the story and its development the best thing about this Wanda Hawley picture, and to the story should go the credit of providing a program feature which is an example of the highest class heart interest drama—wholesome, real and fascinating. Suspense is held. To many the final surprise will be a real surprise. There is romance—enough to satisfy them all—and a neat characterization in the person of "Jimmy Parsons," a carefree, light-hearted, loveable rogue of a press agent. And Wanda Hawley carries an interesting part with her usual charm.

"Peggy Malone" is a chorus girl with a grafting father and brother, and no job, when the story opens. "Jimmy" is the show's press agent, and in his characteristic impulsive manner decides to abandon the lure of Broadway, settle down, and marry. It is the in-laws who do most to disrupt the love nest. They always call at dinner hour and spread themselves over the most comfortable chairs. "Jimmy" drifts back to Broadway; "Peggy" returns to the footlights—her wealthy admirer once more applauds from out in front. Then comes the doctor's ultimatum to "Jimmy"—"Arizona—immediately." Shattered in health, he goes to a ranch alone and Peggy climbs to the top in the picture game. Father and brother continue to sponge. Then when the star is injured making a dangerous scene, she is forced to choose between her wealthy admirer or Jimmy, who has recovered and come to Los Angeles to fight for her. We leave Jimmy returning her the money which she has sent him during his illness. In his solitude he has written scenarios—and sold them. They plan their second honeymoon. Father and brother begin to look through the want ads.

While we dislike to be Pollyannaish, we would call "Her Face Value" delightful entertainment. It is well directed by Thomas Heffron—filled with clever character touches. T. Roy Barnes is the press agent, and excellent.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Wanda Hawley, the dainty Realart star, is said to have one of her finest portrayals in her newest feature, "Her Face Value," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. The story is essentially a tragedy of in-laws in the home, and proves conclusively that all young married people ought to be left alone to work out their own plans. Miss Hawley in her portrayal of the chorus-girl heroine who attempts matrimony without first dislodging the family leeches who have always fed off her generosity, is an appealing and delightful figure throughout.

The spectator sort of wishes she would show more firmness in handling her shiftless father and brother, who have always imposed on her good nature and continue to do so after she marries, until they have succeeded in wrecking her little dove cote. The conclusion of this little domestic tragedy is unusual but convincing. T. Roy Barnes plays the part of the press-agent and young husband, while the rest of the cast is up to standard. The picture is adequately staged and directed.

If you don't want to experience the same sensations that Peggy did when her show company suddenly failed without warning, don't miss Wanda Hawley, the charming Realart star in "Her Face Value," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a story which tells the thrilling events behind the scenes of a famous star's life. Her father was a motorman while she was Peggy Malone of the chorus. When she became famous the old man took life easy. And relatives and in-laws butted in to make things unpleasant for her. They couldn't leave her alone in domestic bliss. Come and see "Her Face Value." A human and humorous story.

SUGGESTIONS

A teaser campaign would be a good angle to exploit this feature. Hitting upon the idea that young married couples have a difficult time finding happiness through the interference of relatives should be made the basis of your argument. Advise your patrons that the chance is theirs to see a picture which serves a mighty effective lesson and at the same time entertains. Tell of the star's other attractions, most of which have been uniformly good. Describe it as a domestic drama which pulsates with life. Tell that it is unusually human. Tell that the author is the playwright of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Play up T. Roy Barnes who is in the cast.

"FALSE KISSES"
(Universal)

Contains Dramatic Material But Runs Excessively to Titles

AS material for Miss du Pont's second starring vehicle, Universal has selected a one act play by Wilbur Daniel Steele, published under the title of "Ropes." The play contains undenied dramatic material, but it is the drama of words and the situations of the stage, rather than action and incident that the sketch provides and in consequence "False Kisses," as the picture is titled, is more largely titled than any photoplay should be and more restricted in episodes than are most features which stick their head up above the average.

The action of the picture after an introductory prelude is confined entirely to a lighthouse and the little island on which it is located. Here three people, hero, heroine and villain, work out their particular domestic problem in which a wife is forced to accept the kisses of an erstwhile lover, in order to save her blind husband his job as keeper of the lighthouse. The husband's blindness is caused by a fall on the jagged rocks of the island and his sight is restored by another blow delivered when he runs into the winding stairway of the lighthouse in attempting to protect his wife from the advances of the villain.

Miss du Pont has been shorn of the clothes and luxurious surroundings of her first stellar vehicle and appears in calico, as the wife of the lighthouse keeper. Pat O'Mally is the husband and has what is really the leading role of the feature. Lloyd Whitlock is the villainous inspector of the lighthouse. All three give consistent performances and if the picture fails somewhat as entertainment the fault should not be placed at the door of either cast or director.

The photography and lightings are exceptional, and the few settings needed adequate for the story.—Length, 4,335 feet.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Jennie	Miss duPont
Paul	Pat O'Malley
Jim	Lloyd Whitlock
Pauline	Camille Clark
John Peters	Percy Challenger
Mrs. Simpson	Madge Hunt
Mrs. Glimp	Fay Winthrop
Mr. Glimp	Joe Hazelton
Mary	Mary Philbin

By Wilbur Daniel Steele.
Directed by Paul Scardon.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Miss duPont, the new Universal star, who created such a sensation in "The Rage of Paris," because of her extraordinary beauty and talent, comes to the ———— theatre next ———— in her latest feature entitled "False Kisses." This is from a play by Wilbur Daniel Steele which Paul Scardon directed. And the charming star has a part which enables her to flash her individual beauty and talent. The story revolves around the finding of expression in a lonely seacoast town. Jennie, the character played by the star, has come there to teach school. And being a new type to the village she is dsired by the eligible males.

Jennie marries Paul, and Jim goes away, only to return some years later. He discovers the little family in distress and offers them assistance. Paul is assigned the job of lighthouse keeper in an isolated place ten miles out at sea. The young wife is lonely except for the visits of Jim, who still proffers his love. The picture builds through dramatic scenes to a climax of undeniable power, the sweep of which invites the greatest suspense. The story is a rugged one and is laid in picturesque settings. Miss duPont is assisted by a clever cast that includes Pat O'Malley and Lloyd Whitlock.

PROGRAM READER

A story of a rugged coast village where the natives live primitive lives—a story of dramatic clashes and conflicts and passionate storms of love is "False Kisses" which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with the charming Miss duPont as the star. This talented actress and beauty has a part which calls for the utmost in dramatic feeling and the star rises to the occasion successfully. "False Kisses" will compel your closest attention. Its action is rugged, its characters dominant and forceful, and its elements of romance, pathos, heart interest, and sentiment and thrills are equally balanced, thus making a picture which is thoroughly compelling. In the cast are Mary Philbin, Pat O'Malley and Lloyd Whitlock.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have Miss duPont as the star of a picture. In her first stellar vehicle, "The Rage of Paris," she created a good impression through her talent and extraordinary good looks. And here she has a vehicle which again calls for the display of her talent. Make mention that she is one of the most beautiful actresses on the screen. Play up that it is a rugged drama which calls for the closest attention. Play up its rugged character, that it builds keen action and suspense. Make mention of Pat O'Malley and Lloyd Whitlock as appearing in the cast. Also Mary Philbin. These players are all well known. Play up the director, too. Bill the picture as a dramatic document which is thoroughly interesting.

CATCH LINES

See Miss duPont in "False Kisses." A picture of rugged characterization and powerful drama.

A picture of sea-faring men. A picture of the storm and stress of lighthouse life. See "False Kisses" with Miss duPont as the star. A fitting companion picture to "The Rage of Paris."

"THE WONDERFUL THING"
(First National)

Slender Story Made Entertaining by Good Production and Appealing Star

"THE WONDERFUL THING" originally was a whimsical little stage comedy in which Jeanne Eagles played a sort of French "Peg o' My Heart" character and provided most of the entertaining qualities of the show.

"The Wonderful Thing" in pictures tells the same story as the stage play, with a little more logical ending, but the whimsical part of the original is missing and therefore the photoplay becomes a rather ordinary vehicle in plot for Miss Talmadge and presents a very considerable number of the original lines of the stage production, as titles, in order to help the star get over the general idea of the role she is portraying.

The plot of "The Wonderful Thing" concerns a titled Englishman who marries a convent-bred French girl for her money, the necessity being a scrape a younger brother has gotten into. The girl finally finds out about the trick which has been played upon her and becomes estranged from her husband. A reconciliation is effected by the girl's father after both husband and wife have come to Iowa, U. S. A., where dad owns a big hog ranch.

A generally fine production in which no expense has been spared, the beauty and popularity of Miss Talmadge and the smooth, well developed continuity provided by Director Herbert Brenon and Clara Beranger give the picture a considerable audience value, in spite of the obvious and slender plot. The dialect titles probably will not register with the average fan, but the star and her supporting cast will. It is a perfectly safe, absolutely clean, piece of screen entertainment in which technical and acting skill make up for lack of action and incident or originality of plot.

In support of Miss Talmadge is a fine cast of types, among whom is Harrison Ford as the hero. The photography and lightings are unusually fine and the atmosphere of both the English and "hog" episodes of the story excellent. Miss Talmadge gives a performance quite unlike that of Miss Eagles in the stage version, but nevertheless appealing and artistic.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A wholesome study in romance and sentiment is "The Wonderful Thing," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Norma Talmadge as the star. This exceptionally clever picture is said to be ideal for the expression of the star's talent and personality since it permits her to portray a role which is widely different from any in which she has appeared before. The story carries a breath of humor which coupled with the romantic entanglement spells a heart interest drama which is bound to entertain the picture patron.

The heroine interpreted by Miss Talmadge is one that calls upon her resourcefulness. This heroine is much sought after by an impoverished Englishman and she marries him. His family immediately takes it upon themselves to make life unpleasant for her. There mercenary conduct is exasperating to such a point that she leaves her husband. In the end there is a reconciliation. The picture unfolds a pretty story and is well staged and acted. Herbert Brenon directed. In the cast are Harrison Ford, Howard Truesdale and Walter McEwen.

PROGRAM READER

Any announcement that Norma Talmadge is coming to the ———— theatre in a new picture is an occasion of much interest. This popular and talented actress has a sure hold upon the public through her gifts of expression and her wonderfully charming personality. Those who attend the ———— next ———— to see "The Wonderful Thing," will see this gifted star in a role which is widely different from anything she has heretofore portrayed. It will cause the spectator to remark over her versatility which seemingly knows no limitations. She has the role of a vivacious young French girl whose wealth causes her to be ardently courted by eligible and ineligible males. How she proves to be sincere and a worthy "catch" is brought out with plenty of sentiment and romance. The picture is finely acted and staged.

SUGGESTIONS

The combination of Norma Talmadge and Herbert Brenon is a good one to exploit for this feature. The first-mentioned is a wonderfully talented star, the other, one of the most gifted directors. So feature their names above any other line of argument. State also that the picture is widely different from any vehicle that the star has had. Mention that it scored a decided hit upon the speaking stage with Jeanne Eagles in the cast. Play up Julia Hoyt, who, as the wife of Lydig Hoyt, is a member of the elite of New York society, and that she makes her debut here. Play up the picture as one that stimulates attention because of its wholesome charm and romance. Bill it as a clever romantic drama and feature Harrison Ford.

CATCH LINES

What is the Wonderful Thing? Is it love, or self-sacrifice, or hope, or charity, or honor? See Norma Talmadge in her latest picture drama. See "The Wonderful Thing."

"THE IRON TRAIL"
(Whitman Bennett-United Artists)

Faithful Adaptation of Famous Beach Novel

"THE IRON TRAIL" in picture form is a faithful adaptation of the popular novel by Rex Beach, relating how "Murray O'Neil," an Irish-American civil engineer, against uncompromising elements and crooked rivals, built an Alaskan railway and won a newspaper woman employed on a sheet owned by his enemy as his bride.

The picture is melodrama of the sort that the Beach stories have made famous, with an occasional bit of comedy relief. The building of the railroad is an important part of the story, and when rival gangs clash in an attempt to get a right of way through a certain pass, the picture provides the sort of action that certain audiences eat up and which have characterized most of the Beach productions.

The development of the story concerns itself principally with the part of the plot relating to the building of the railroad, with the romance treated as incidental.

The principals of a large cast are excellent types and adequate for their respective roles, except Wyndham Standing, who fails to look or enact the part of the energetic, indomitable young engineer, so vividly described by Mr. Beach in his novel.

The best acting of the feature is contributed by Thurston Hall as "Curtiss Gordon" and Harlan Knight as "Tom Slater." Both present characterizations of unqualified strength and originality. Alma Tell is a pretty heroine, but is provided with little to do except wait for the end of the picture.

A number of scenic shots of the Alaskan country are interesting and all the exteriors selected are in keeping with the story. The picture was directed by R. William Neil and produced by the Whitman Bennett Pictures Corporation.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Rex Beach's famous story of Alaskan life and especially of the perils and thrills of building an Alaskan railroad, "The Iron Trail" has been transferred to the silver sheet and will be the attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The cast engaged for the various roles of the "Iron Trail" is all star and such players as Wyndham Standing, Betty Carpenter, Alma Tell are in the roster.

"Iron Trail" is a picture of red blooded action typical of the Beach stories and is a worthy successor of such features as "The Girl From Outside," "The Silver Horde" and "The Spoilers."

The feature was directed by R. Richard Neil under the supervision of Whitman Bennett. It screens in seven reels.

SUGGESTIONS

"The Iron Trail," one of the best known and most popular of the Rex Beach stories, has been transferred to the screen and will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' showing beginning ————.

The picture tells the story of the trials and thrills attendant on the building of an Alaskan railroad and the love story of "Murray O'Neil," the big Irish engineer who succeeds against such great odds as uncompromising elements and a crooked railway king attempting to construct a rival road.

In the cast, a long one, are such well known players as Wyndham Standing, Thurston Hall, Betty Carpenter and Alma Tell. Action and thrills are the outstanding features of "The Iron Trail." There are fights that will bring the spectator to his feet and some wonderful shots of ice breaking up in the Alaskan rivers.

The feature was directed by R. Richard Neil and was produced in the Whitman Bennett studios. United Artists Corporation, the firm releasing the productions of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin, is presenting the feature.

SUGGESTIONS

Bill as a Rex Beach story, following the lines of the other pictures by the author. For lobby display, if you play the feature during the winter, stick to ideas that will not stress the "snow" part of the story. Prologues in which the "anvil chorus" idea is carried out with your music alleged to be made by striking the rails of the road under construction would be novel and effective. The picture is one for 24-sheet stands and book store tie-ups.

CATCH LINES

Another of Rex Beach's red-blooded stories of the last American frontier transferred to the screen in all its grandeur and with all its thrills. A great picture of a great story. As fine a photoplay as "The Girl From Outside," or "The Barrier." The tale of a big red blooded Irish engineer who built a railroad in Alaska in spite of the uncompromising elements and a gang of crooked rivals.

MEN AND EVENTS IN THE FILM CENTRES

With "News" Correspondents

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

CLEVELAND

Metro film men held a district convention here this week. Among those present were District Manager W. C. Bachmeyer, General Sales Manager E. M. Saunders, Managers Kahn, of Buffalo; Townsend, of Detroit; Atkinson, of Pittsburgh; Roland, of Cincinnati; and C. E. Almy, of Cleveland.

For the first time in the history of the organization a photoplay was shown as a feature of a Teachers' Convention, Last Friday the Ohio State Teachers' Convention was held at the State theatre. During the session the Charles Chaplin film, "The Idle Class," was shown on the screen during a break in the regular proceedings.

The musicians' strike in Akron came to a close this week when the musicians agreed to accept a ten per cent wage cut. They went out on strike some weeks ago as a protest to the proposed fifteen per cent strike.

Mrs. Barnes, one of the members of the Ohio Board of Review, was so taken by "The Old Oaken Bucket," an F. B. Warren production, that she notified local Warren manager C. E. Holah to send the film down to Columbus again for a second viewing. Mrs. Barnes said that she had looked it over too cursorily the first time. She wanted an opportunity to see it unprofessionally because she liked it so well.

"The Blot" opened the Marvin theatre, Findlay, Ohio, last week. The Marvin theatre, recently taken over by Mr. C. D. Bellinger, has been made all new inside and out, and will play only high class first run attractions.

The Knickerbocker theatre is closed. The Knickerbocker has been one of the leading high class neighborhood motion picture theatres for almost ten years. It has always maintained a high moral tone under the management of Emery Downs. Now, after all these years, it finds itself sandwiched in between the million dollar houses at Euclid and East 105th street and the big downtown theatres. So, in the march of progress the Knickerbocker passes out.

UTAH

Ogden Theatre Corporation has taken over the Utah theatre of this city, according to the announcement of H. W. Perry, general manager of the Ogden theatre corporation which controls the Ogden theatre and the new White City dance hall. Mr. Perry states that the entire holdings of Joseph S. Campbell and family were acquired.

Mr. Perry announced the Utah theatre would not be closed, but would continue during the period of redecorating and renovating.

Joseph F. Goss, manager of the Orpheum theatre, a franchise holder of the First National Exhibitors, attended the conference of franchise holders in Chicago. He was one of three delegates to represent Utah, Idaho, Colorado and Wyoming.

Motion picture men of Ogden and the state generally are much elated over the election of H. E. Skinner, manager of the Alhambra theatre of Ogden, as president of the Utah Motion Picture Theatre Owners. President Skinner is one of the live wires of the industry in the state.

CANADA

T. A. D. Bevington of Winnipeg, superintendent of amusements for the Manitoba Provincial Government, has announced that the Manitoba Government has received approximately $300,000 under the Amusement Tax Act during the past twelve months, this statement appearing in a report just issued.

The statistics of Mr. Bevington indicate that the people of Manitoba spent $3,300,000 for theatre amusement during the year, as compared with $3,763,380, during the previous twelve months. The slight falling off was due to economic tendencies on the part of the people because of depressed financial conditions.

The Family theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, was re-opened permanently on Saturday, October 29, after being on the dark list for about four months. The theatre, which is owned by Harry Brouse of Ottawa, one of the best known exhibitors in Eastern Canada, is again under the management of Mr. MacDonald.

E. C. Stueler of New York, special representative of the Selznick Corporation, visited Ottawa, Ontario, on October 24 and 25 to negotiate with Raymond S. Peck, director of the Exhibits and Publicity Bureau of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the distribution rights for Canadian Government scenic and industrial one-reel releases for Australia and New Zealand. Announcement was made that negotiations had been successful.

The Selznick Corporation has now asked for the distribution rights for the United States of all Canadian Government releases known as the "Seeing Canada" series, it has been announced.

KANSAS CITY

Samuel Harding, of Kansas City, president of the Associated Exhibitors and owner of the Liberty and Doric theatres in Kansas City, returned from a trip to New York last week.

L. C. Montgomery, formerly a Vitagraph representative at Dallas, Tex., is now representing that company in the Kansas City territory.

Among the changes in management of theatres in Kansas City district in the last week are:

Reel theatre, Oswego, Kan., purchased by N. W. Huston, of Columbus, Kan., from H. H. Daniel; Highland theatre, Kansas City, purchased by S. K. Williams; Eureca theatre, Weston, Mo., leased by C. R. Rugg; Belmont theatre, Eldorado, Kan., purchased by H. G. Ramsey; Rigney theatre, Albany, Mo., purchased by I. W. Maple from H. Flader; Princess theatre, Stanbury, Mo., purchased by H. Flader.

The sale of the First National two-reel comedy features has been placed in charge of J. F. King in western Missouri and Kansas territory, according to E. C. Rhoden, manager of the Kansas City First National branch.

A lively interest is being displayed in the Robertson-Cole Pictures Corporation's "26-picture contract," according to R. E. Churchill, Kansas City branch manager.

W. P. Bernfield, formerly assistant manager of the Kansas City Select office, is now sales manager of the Crescent Film Company of Kansas City and is planning a "big drive."

D. J. McGowan, Associated First National auditor, was in Kansas City last week examining records.

R. H. Fairchild, formerly a Vitagraph representative, is now Kansas City representative and booker for the Federated and Crescent film companies.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Morris Taitus, the shipping clerk who disappeared at the same time about 40 reels of films from the Buffalo United Artists', Educational and Nu-Art exchanges, has been arrested in Fort Worth, Texas. He will be brought to Buffalo for trial on two theft charges, one the stealing of "The Three Musketeers," and the other "Dream Street."

Buffalo police have traced the bandits who robbed the safes in the Victoria and Elmwood theatres, Buffalo, and the Strand, Syracuse, to New York City. The clue to the whereabouts of the men came through some clothing purchased in the Buffalo and New York George's stores. The men got over $1,700 in Buffalo and much more in Syracuse.

Walter Price, manager of the Buffalo Associated Producers' office before it was taken over by First National, and who has been handling the product at the F. N. office, has resigned to accept a position at the Select Exchange handling the Selznick special "A Man's Home."

The personnel of the new Hodkinson office staff in Buffalo is about complete. It will be as follows: Manager, Howard Boyle; office manager, J. L. Dale; Booker, Marion Gueth; salesman, Ed Hochstin. Other office assistants will be added soon. The location of the new exchange will be either in the R-C Pictures corporation or the old A. P. office, temporarily.

Clara Kimball Young appeared at Shea's Hippodrome all week in person. She was also the guest at many social events and spoke at several meetings of local clubs.

J. G. Fater has resigned as a First National salesman to accept a similar position with Paramount. H. L. Levy has won second prize in the F. N. Statewide sales contest. Malcolm Williams has taken charge of the F. N. short subject department.

E. J. Hayes has signed up the entire A. P. product at the new Loew theatre, Buffalo. The Hippodrome, Niagara Falls, has been added to the franchise list.

Franklyn Farnum is making a series of personal appearances throughout Western New York under the guidance of Bill Fickeisen, manager of the Buffalo Merit exchange. Mr. Fickeisen is now plugging on "The Bible," his newest feature.

MICHIGAN

The Tuxedo theatre, after a week's delay, opened to tremendous crowds on the first day. Wanda Hawley in "Her Face Value" was the picture used to open. The Tuxedo will change programs twice weekly.

Byron D. Bailey has resigned as manager of Butterfield's Regent theatre, Flint, to assume the management of the new million dollar theatre erected in Scranton, Pa., by Charles H. Miles, of Detroit.

Joseph R. Denniston, of Monroe; James C. Ritter, of Detroit; W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, and H. S. Gallup, of Marquette, delegates, have returned from the get-together of First National franchise holders at Chicago.

Harry Hobolth, of Imlay City, Mich., has taken over the Majestic theatre at Brown City, which was formerly operated by the Davenport brothers. Hobolth now has three houses, one at Imlay City and another at Marlette. All are within a radius of 25 miles and accessible by machine.

"The Three Musketeers" is now on its third week at Kunsky's Adams theatre, with the crowds still holding up good. "Way Down East" is playing its second week at the Fox Washington.

INDIANAPOLIS

Some downtown houses reported the week ending October 29 as one of the worst this season. The old bugaboo of the business depression, aided and abetted by the spectre of a rail strike, was responsible, some exhibitors said.

Police captured a burglar who broke into the North Star, neighborhood theatre, one night last week and recovered $240 and a revolver he had stolen.

Manager Ralph Lieber, of the Circle, came back from the New York and Chicago meetings of First National men last week with a bag full of new ideas which the folks are waiting for him to spring.

Tampa Business on the Mend after Storm

It is two weeks since the hurricane hit Tampa, Fla., on Tuesday, Oct. 25th, and the effects are being rapidly effaced. All theatres are now in operation again. None were damaged to any extent by the storm but were forced to close through the fact that they could get no electricity. The last one to receive juice was the Maceo, located at Scott street and Central avenue. They did not get lights until Saturday night, Oct. 29th, suffering a loss of four days' business.

The street car service was resumed to some extent on Thursday noon, and all lines are being rapidly extended so that the city lines are nearly normal again. The interurban line to Ballast Point and Port Tampa will hardly be in operation for two weeks at least, as the million dollar Bayshore Boulevard was badly damaged.

All of this has its effect upon the business of the theatres. People were too busy getting over the storm, fixing up their homes, their roofs, fences and trees to think of amusement.

MORALS

THE STAR—

Realart's "Wonder Girl" of whom the critics said:

"There is no limit to what may be expected of her", and who proves it in her role of the lovely harem girl.

A Turkish harem, with all its pretty women, strange costumes, lavish settings—

—A marriage bargain made in true Oriental fashion—

—The whipping of a harem girl who tries to escape—

—The plot of the two false friends which almost succeeds—

—The tremendously dramatic scene where the harem keeper comes to claim the girl—

—These, and many other scenes are what place MORALS in the SPECIAL class.

MORALS

THE STORY—

Adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers from William J. Locke's novel "The Morals of Marcus" which has thrilled millions of readers, and the play of the same name that was the sensation of a few years ago and brought stage stardom to Marie Doro.

OUT of the seclusion and security of a harem—

Out of the warmth and languor of the East, to be dropped suddenly into the chill of a London fog—

Into the bachelor household of a man she had never seen—

And so into his bewildered, lonely heart.

And there to dwell like some wild exotic flower until a friend's perfidy, another woman's jealous plotting, and a great danger brought the realization of love—almost too late.

That's the story of MORALS!

"MASS APPEAL"

"What Do Men Want?" Film of Powerful Mass Appeal

LYRIC THEATRE—"What Do Men Want?" A Lois Weber production, presented by Wid Gunning.

THE CAST:

Hallie (The Girl).....Claire Windsor
Frank (The Youth).....J. Frank Glendon
Arthur (His Brother).George Hackathorne
Yost (The Evil Influence)..Halam Cooley
Bertha (The Unfortunate)...Edith Kessler

By JOSEPH MULVANEY.

THERE isn't any use trying to guess the answer to the interrogative title of Lois Weber's latest film, and Humor flashes through it, here and there, and Miss Weber has drawn almost a score of types remarkably true to life. She has made her characters look and act like real people of their respective classes in a small town; they are not always pleasant to look at, but they ring true to the forms of humanity they are intended to represent.

Claire Windsor as the heroine is altogether appealing, with a dignified beauty that makes

There is the phrase that tells the whole big story for the exhibitor—"MASS APPEAL."

Never were the New York newspapers so unanimous in their praise as they were following the opening of Lois Weber's greatest production at the Lyric Theatre, Broadway and 42nd Street, Sunday, November 13th.

The New York Times declared: "Lois Weber's knack of making moving pictures with the spark of life in them is again evident in her latest production." The New York Tribune found it "charming." The Daily News said "Immensely interesting, I enjoyed every minute of it." The Evening Telegram, "Absorbing and admirably made." The New York Telegraph, "Very sincere and done with remarkable fidelity to detail."

Never before had the famous New York American given a two-column head to a motion picture review. And such a head! It shouts—"A Million Dollar Box Office."

THAT Next STORY

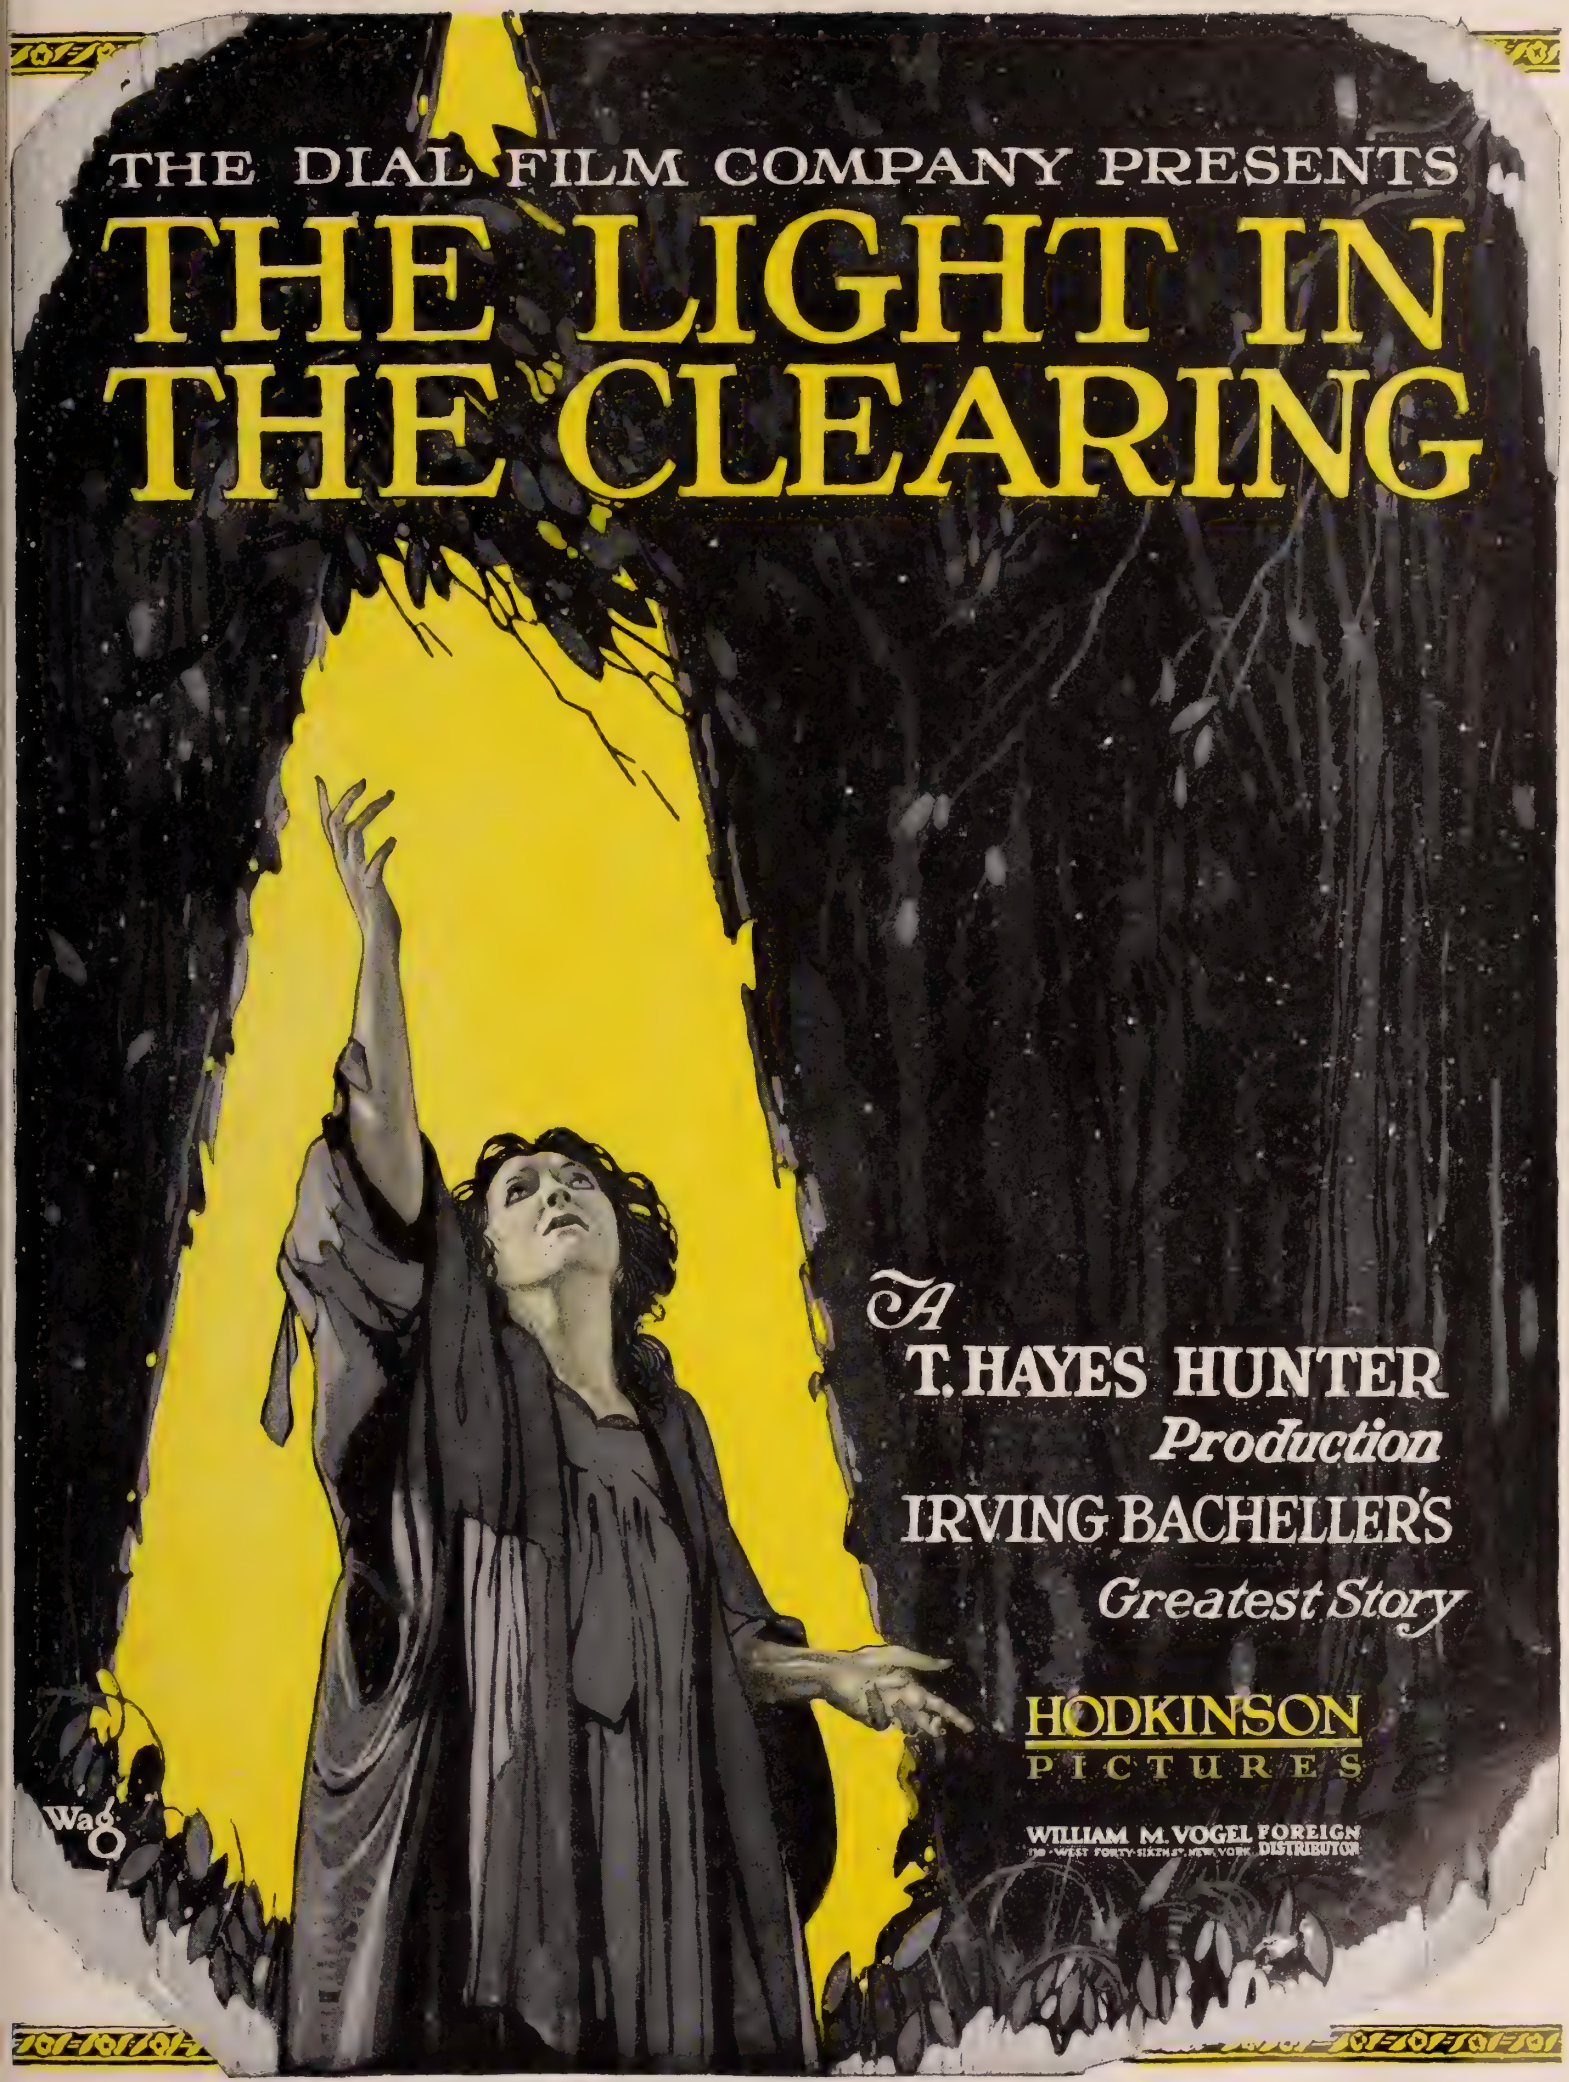
The new Palmer Story Service brings it to your studio door

EDITORS and DIRECTORS: The system, the plan of which you have dreamed, for which you have fondly wished but imagined too vague, Utopian, has been perfected by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation. Daily summarization of the entire literary market is possible. The Palmer Story Service has made it possible and offers it to you.

LONG recognized as the world's largest clearing house for photoplay material, the Palmer corporation has eclipsed all its former remarkable records. It has revolutionized literary market methods by inaugurating a story service of vast scope and effectiveness whose value to scenario editors, directors and reading staffs is inestimable.

SCREENABLE material, culled from all weekly and monthly magazines published in America; new novels and plays, are delivered daily to the studios in synopsis form along with all worthy originals handled by the Palmer Sales Department. Think of it! The entire market before you daily, ready to be scrutinized at a glance.

Centuries of Literature Covered



BESIDES synopsizing all current literature, a staff of 20 expert readers is synopsizing and commenting upon all the novels, short stories and plays written by recognized literary artists in the past several centuries. Another staff of 15 is engaged daily in typing, mimeographing and mailing the synopses.

Instantaneous service is made possible by the new plan. When a story especially suited to the needs of any particular studio is discovered, the studio editor is telephoned and the story rushed to him by special messenger.

THE WOMEN LOVE IT!

It is a treat to see the women pouring forth from the Lyric Theatre, New York, where "What Do Men Want?" is enjoying a sensational special engagement.

The women love Lois Weber's greatest picture, they talk about it, boost it—send their friends, and come again to see it with their men.

No need to tell any exhibitor what this appeal to women—the greatest direct appeal ever made by any motion picture production—means to the box office.

No need to tell any exhibitor what it means to start the women talking—as they talk, and talk, and talk about "What Do Men Want?"

From every angle—title, exploitation, quality of production, and word of mouth advertising, here is the year's million-dollar winner.

Phenomenal Service That Cost You Nothing Extra!

On Friday, Nov. 11th, on the third anniversary of the Armistice that brought peace after years of bloodshed, the Nation bowed in silence before the coffin that contained our cherished and Unknown Dead.

Foch, Beatty, Diaz, Jacques, Pershing, the great leaders of an Allied cause, united with the distinguished guests of many nations in reverent tribute to the soldier who lost not merely his life but his very name in his duty to his country.

Here was something in which every man, woman and child who claims Americanism shared, in spirit if not in presence.

Is it strange that the Pathe News, ever foremost in presenting events of interest, should have given phenomenal service without extra cost, thereby living up to its high traditions?

Was it not in keeping with the Pathe News quality that the pictures issued of this notable happening were wonderful, impressive, and complete?

PATHE

What Was Done
How It Was Done

The funeral procession left Washington for Arlington at 8.30 a. m. At 10 a. m. a special aeroplane was in the air, bound for the Pathe factory at Jersey City with complete negatives of the procession.

The impressive services at Arlington were finished at 1.30 p. m. At 1.45 p. m. another special aeroplane was in the air, also bound for Jersey City.

Special messengers in swift cars delivered the finished special editions to the leading Broadway and Brooklyn theatres so that they were being shown at 7.30 p. m. the same evening.

But Pathe News service is not for Broadway only. Special messengers went with prints by fast train to Boston, Pittsburgh, Albany, Buffalo, Washington, Philadelphia, New Haven and Newark at 10 o'clock the same night. Airplanes took prints to Cleveland, Chicago and points west. Fast mail took prints to Atlanta, Charlotte and New Orleans. To show the tremendous speed, prints were due in San Francisco on Monday the 14th, at 3 p. m.

This is SERVICE, gentlemen, the kind you have always had from Pathe News, the kind you will always get. And it costs you nothing extra.

"Collect all your 'Ohs!' your 'Ahs!' and your interjections of acute gaspology and prepare to utter them when you see "Theodora" at the Astor Theatre. It was a perpetual feast for the eye."

—Alan Dale in N. Y American

"Theodora" a wonder spectacle. To adequately describe it would tax even the vocabulary of a P. T. Barnum"

—DeFoe in the Morning World

"As a spectacle, this picture is truly magnificent. Most of the Hollywood products seem like small-town stuff besides this tremendous production from Italy."

—N. Y. Times

"The scenes open with an earthquake, rush madly on through a chaos of battle, murder and sudden death, and culminate in the most realistic arena scene that ever let very real and obviously starved lions loose on thousands of terrified Italian extras." —N. Y. Globe

"Outdoing for sheer magnificence, thrills and spectacular splendor any motion picture ever seen here, "Theodora" offers a new film sensation." —Evening Mail

"There is always room for one more, it seems, especially at the top. 'Theodora,' presented by Goldwyn last night, holds the altitude at the present writing." —Evening Sun

"It is through its stupendous settings, far excelling anything seen here before, that it is likely to become one of the sights of New York."

—N. Y. Herald

Cleveland

"Of almost unbelievable magnitude and surpassing beauty is "Theodora," the Italian film spectacle. Its settings are dream fabrics. Real, of course, but the astounding size of the structures and the countless throngs that are forever peopling the scenes are finally the stirring elements of the story."

—Cleveland Plain Dealer

"One cannot over-praise this film, in fact, cannot adequately describe or criticize it. It is beyond anything that I expected from producers of films for years to come. A triumph, and not only a triumph of cinematography, but an alluring, remarkable play that does not permit interest to flag during eleven reels.

Palaces, circus, spectacle, tumult of huge mobs of people, all are splendidly represented in a manner that will exhaust your adjectives of surprise and appreciation. It is believed that it will score the American record for receipts."

—Archie Bell, Cleveland News

Detroit

"Griffith is out-Griffithed. Hollywood is made to look like a child's paste-board town."

—Detroit Free Press

"And if it cost three million dollars to achieve the amazing succession of trip-hammer punches such as one sees in this production, all I can say is that it looks like a full moneys' worth." —Detroit Journal

"Nothing so dramatic has been seen in motion pictures, and almost alone this would be enough to stamp the Italian production as one of the most unusual that has ever been produced." —Detroit News

"In 'Theodora,' master photoplay, the screen comes into its own, if it ever will. The picture dwarfs the efforts of the biggest American film producers of the day."

—Detroit Evening Times

Pittsburg

"Gorgeous is a word frequently used by those who would describe dramatic scenes whose magnificence has pleased. The word is much too weak to adequately fit the settings of this production."

—Chronicle Telegraph

"Most stupendous scenes ever thrown upon the screen. Rita Jolivet is adorable."

—Pittsburgh Post

"It abounds with startling and vivid scenes that excel the thrilling visualization of gathering klansmen in the 'Birth Of A Nation.' It is more spectacular than 'Civilization' and its love theme more impressive than 'Broken Blossoms.' "

—Pittsburgh Sun

" 'Theodora' is the most satisfying screen spectacle and sets a mark of excellence."

—Gazette Times

A Few Trade Opinions

"Impossible to do justice to this stupendous picture. It seems incredible that the camera could have visualized all this grandeur, this tumultuous, whirling, riotous action. The silence was broken only by fervent outbursts of applause. The picture will net a fortune. The whole country should be given an opportunity to see it." —The Billboard

"'Theodora' has been selling out right along.

You leave the theatre bewildered, and it takes moments to compose yourself to picking out the "smash" of the production, and then you are embarassed by a confusion of choice, for there are so many big passages one can set down only a few." —Variety

"This massive spectacle dwarfs other achievements of its kind."

—Motion Picture News

" 'Theodora' is magnificient, an epic of the screen." —Moving Picture World

"As a money-maker for exhibitors it is sure to be as big an attraction—or bigger —than any of the spectacle productions yet offered to the American buyers."

Adventure and Romance!

This five reel feature has caught them both!

IMAGINE the action when the muttered threats of a fearless mountain clan takes form against a lone Government Ranger sent to patrol their lands, the mountain called Little Smoky.

Imagine the romance between Anne, wild-rose daughter of the clan, and the Ranger. A romance clouded by the coming of a strangely beautiful gypsy lass, and glorified by the sacrifices of the mountain maid when she discovers her lover's danger.

In brief, "Anne of Little Smoky" is a rousing and romantic out-door story of intense hates, strong loves, spectacular fights and suspenseful situations enacted against a magnificent background of rugged mountains.

Its cast includes Winifred Westover, exquisitely charming in the title role; Joe King as the two-fisted Government Man; Dolores Casinelli as the flaming gypsy beauty and Frank Sheridan as the hard-fighting mountaineer.

It is an admirable offering on any program.

Seeing It Through

AN exhibitor, speaking of the present tenseness of the business situation, refers to the "random-shooting" optimism of the trade papers.

He did not refer to this publication; he could not for the simple reason that we haven't shot at random because we haven't shot at all.

Our own feelings in the matter may be had from the following editorial, written several weeks ago and thus far crowded out of print:

"The New York Evening Post is publishing an interesting and valuable series of articles on the business situation outlook. The consensus of opinion from leading bankers and business heads is that we are emerging slowly but surely from the period of depression; that improvement from now on, while not pronounced this Fall, will be soundly upward. A few look for prosperous times next Spring; the majority say next Autumn. Some go so far as to say that the Fall season of 1922 will see complete return to normal times.

"The credit situation is fast approaching normal. The farmer is economizing in an effort to meet reduced prices of his commodities. The railroads are in better shape. The liquidation of labor will be difficult and slow but it is inevitable.

"The motion picture business, according to the latest government tax returns, reflects this general upturn. Admission taxes for August increased $103,846.08 and film rental taxes $34,860.91 over July. And September, of course, will show a much greater increase.

"We see nothing discouraging in the outlook, but only a lesson to practice economy, good sense, hard work—and showmanship!"

Of course, the above refers only to general business conditions, but it is pertinent to this field because the show business is always a sharp reflex of general business conditions.

We are fully aware that the motion picture trade situation is more or less acute. By that we mean particularly the exhibiting business, upon which the whole trade structure rests. But we say "more or less" advisedly. The situation is spotty. While we have a bad report from an agricultural section (and little wonder when it takes a bushel of wheat to buy one theatre admission) we have a good one from a coal mining region; and industrial centers that were hard hit at first are better off today and see still better times ahead. And so it goes. The situation at large is slowly on the mend. That is certain.

There is no question at all however but that the exhibitor today is, on the whole, considerably demoralized.

And naturally so.

The war situation is completely reversed. Where people formerly spent money regardlessly (some exhibitors must realize that it wasn't their showmanship that did it) they are now economizing and shopping. They haven't soured on pictures, they are not "bilious"; they will never turn from the picture entertainment so long as the admission is kept cheap. But they are no longer just drifting in through the doors. They are buying entertainment, making up their minds before they go in. And the big picture with the big advertising gets the money. So we hear, on all sides, that the big picture, even with a high rental price, is the only one that pays. The exhibitor, in his blind effort to make something pay, evidently overlooks the fact that a lot of other carefully chosen pictures would also pay if he put the same advertising force back of them.

In what we are about to say we are not criticizing the exhibitor. He has our sympathy, as has any business man these days; we'd appreciate some, ourselves. Nor are we overlooking the fact that some rental prices today are selfishly, blindly and outrageously high, and some exhibition values set on weak pictures are due solely to the other fellow's waste and war inflation and bad judgment generally.

But we do believe that the exhibitor today, many a one at least, is too slow to adjust himself to the new and evident order of things.

He is not looking the issue squarely and coolly in the face. He wants—naturally, of course—to cling to the days of an easy-spending public. He won't realize that this era is utterly gone, never to return; and that in its place there's the other extreme of the thin or the closed purse. He won't realize that today, as never before, two things are necessary, if he is to stay in business till the better days a year away; one is judicious economy, the other is extreme effort.

The writer recently asked a man high up in the New York commercial world what was mostly wrong with business today. He got the unexpected reply: "The trouble today is fundamentally with the retailer in all lines. He is stubbornly clinging to war conditions, war prices and volume and ease of trade. He will not deflate himself—get down to normal bedrock—put his shelves in order, and especially his own business mind, to fit the normal order of things. He won't go out and get it—get trade; he's still waiting for it to pour in."

The exhibitor is the motion picture retailer. Is he in this category?

We don't say he is.. And if he is—he is not alone to blame, by a long shot. But we suggest the thought—for the benefit of the exhibitor himself and therefore the trade at large. What is it that the exhibitor can do today to "see it through"—through the present stiff business condition and into the better times that are assuredly ahead?

Chicago Police Head Gives Permit for Fight Film

Chief of Police Fitzmorris, of Chicago, has directed the censor in charge of the Police Department Motion Picture Bureau, to approve an application for a permit for the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures, which have been barred in Chicago for more than ten years.

The chief's action followed the opinion rendered by the City Law Department, which held that he had no power to refuse a permit to exhibit the Dempsey-Carpentier films in Chicago.

The chief had assumed that no fight pictures could be shown in states where boxing is not permitted, the Illinois law governing pictures, for instance, barring the showing of films portraying unlawful acts.

The opinion of the Corporation Counsel, however, overruled this contention of Chief Fitzmorris, who then stated that he could not give a permit for the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures and withhold a permit for the Jeffries-Johnson pictures.

Censors Reject but Mayor and Minister Approves

Should a picture, approved by the chairman of a censorship board, the mayor of a city and one of the city's leading pastors, be rejected by a censorship board? Evidently Mrs. B. L. Short and Mrs. J. M. Miller of the Kansas State Board of Review think so. "The Sheik," a Paramount production, was rejected last week by the "majority" of the board, but approved by Dwight Thatcher Harris, chairman. Thereupon Mr. Harris invited Mayor Harry Burton of Kansas City, Kans., and Rev. Carl Nau of St. Paul's Episcopal church to view the picture, which was approved. Still the two women members of the board refused to change their decisions.

Chas. Ray Reaches Chicago, Due in New York Nov. 23

The big event, long looked forward to by Charles Ray and long anticipated by his admirers has taken place. The star for the first time in his life is headed for New York City and the East, having left Los Angeles on Tuesday, November 15th, together with Mrs. Ray, Richard Willis and Albert A. Kidder, Jr., executives of the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., and George Rizard, his chief camera man.

The party was met upon its arrival in Chicago by Arthur S. Kane, business associate of the star, who will initiate the distinguished visitor into the wonders of the East. Mr. Ray and his party are scheduled to arrive in New York City on Wednesday, November 23rd, when the star will take up his headquarters at the offices of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation.

A. Kirkpatrick Made Gen'l Manager of Exceptional

A. S. KIRKPATRICK, a familiar name in the industry wherever the really big executives are spoken of, has become associated with Exceptional Pictures Corporation, as vice-president and general manager.

A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corp.

This position was left open by the elevation of Alexander Beyfuss to the presidency of the Corporation a short time ago. The filling of the vacancy with a man of the capabilities of Mr. Kirkpatrick adds one of the keenest minds in motion pictures to the executive management of this newly-formed organization.

He will be an invaluable asset in the growth of the young company which since its inception less than three months ago, has unusual accomplishments to point to as the basis upon which it is building its future. The experience he has had in every branch of the business will serve well as a guide in overcoming the obstacles and in solving the problems which are certain to arise in the progress which Exceptional Pictures is making.

Mr. Kirkpatrick's record is too well known to require repeating, except to state that he has served as an executive in every department of motion pictures, from their initial production to their ultimate sale to the exhibitor, he having been in command of some of the industry's most important national distributing organizations.

In a wire to Motion Picture News, President Alexander Beyfuss declares: "Exceptional Pictures is happy in the association with it of one of the industry's keenest and able minds."

Improvements for Brunton Plant Under New Regime

A wire received during the week from Los Angeles conveys further details of the transaction whereby, as announced in last week's issue of the News, M. C. Levee takes over Robert Brunton's interests in the big Brunton plant on Melrose Avenue, Los Angeles. Mr. Levee arrived in Los Angeles on Wednesday, November 10th, from New York, where he had arranged with Joseph Schenck, Watterson Rothacker, Louis Selznick, Allen Holubar, Joseph Aller, Ben Goldberg, Gus Frank, Bennie Ziedman, and H. J. Havous of Chicago, for the purchase of the Brunton stock.

The name under which the studios will operate hereafter is the United Studios. Mr. Levee will serve as president and general-manager of the studio organization. It is planned to enlarge the plant and improve the facilities. Upon the arrival of Mr. Rothacker and Mr. Schenck in Los Angeles early this week it was planned to select new officers for the company and to formulate definite policies.

Robert Brunton, according to the telegram from the Coast, will devote all his time to production work.

British Theatre Managers Here to Study Theatres

F. E. Adams, managing director of the Provincial Cinematograph theatres of Great Britain, together with Robert Atkinson, architect, Hugh Turtle, contractor, and Stanley Ball, in charge of programs for the P. C. T. theatres, have arrived in this country to make an intimate study of American theatre construction and operation. They are at present in New York and will go West from here on a tour of the country. They will spend some time in Chicago looking over the Chicago and Tivoli theatres. It is also Mr. Adams' intention to make a close study of the picture market in New York City. The P. C. T. theatre at Brighton, England, is said to be on a par, from every standpoint with the latest and best American picture theatres. Illustrations and details of this theatre will appear in the forthcoming issue of Motion Picture News.

Missouri Exhibs Continue Fight on Blue Laws

Gradually but surely, Missouri exhibitors are triumphing over "blue law" factions of the state which oppose Sunday motion-picture shows. In Chillicothe, Mo., recently, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, with the aid of the M. P. T. O. A., won a signal victory and forever silenced self-appointed censors.

Important meetings, attended by high officials of the state and exhibitors, are being held in each of the Congressional districts of Missouri. The next district meeting, one which promises to be of vital importance, will be held at Kirksville, Mo., November 22. At present, Sunday motion picture shows are prohibited in that town. Nothing has been overlooked in the arrangements of the meeting, which is in charge of a committee composed of I. N. Wright, Bevier, Mo., chairman; D. J. Michael, Kirksville, Mo.; G. W. Summers, Unionville, Mo., and S. M. Kennedy, Kirksville, Mo. In addition to the personnel of the M. P. T. O. M., including Charles T. Sears, president; G. W. Summers, vice-president; Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary and counsel, and Jack Truitt, treasurer, several state officials will attend the meeting, among them being Senator David M. Proctor of Kansas City. And, to add color to the event, the mayor of Kirksville will preside at a luncheon to be given by the exhibitors.

No Referendum on Sunday Opening in Rome, N. Y.

The referendum on Sunday motion-picture shows, which was to have come before the residents of Rome, N. Y., at the general election held on November 8, failed to materialize. This was due to an injunction secured by a number of persons opposed to Sunday motion-picture shows, with the result that the question not submitted to the voters.

Stricter Censorship the Price of Evasion

"Evade Law and We'll Put Teeth in It," Says Levenson at Warner Bros. Luncheon

DECLARING that it was not purpose or intention of the New York State Board of Censors to inflict any injury on the motion-picture industry and that it stood ready to co-operate in the advancement of the screen especially as an education medium but warning at the same time that any effort to evade the censorship law would result in "putting teeth into it," Joseph Levenson, secretary of the censorship commission of the Empire State, delivered his first address before representatives of the trade at the Claridge Hotel, New York City, on Monday afternoon, November 14th.

A luncheon given the members of the trade-press by the Warner Bros. was the occasion of Mr. Levenson's appearance before the trade gathering. H. M. Warner acted as host and in a speech preceding that of the censorship commissioner told of the difficulties attendant upon the production of the latest Warner Bros. success, "Why Girls Leave Home." He outlined the history of the production and the repeated efforts to secure a screen story, based on the well-known play, which would emphasize the good found in the theme and make for an artistic as well as a commercial success. Mr. Warner also referred to the company's earlier success, "My Four Years in Germany," declaring that here again commercial considerations were subordinated to the paramount purpose of putting on the screen vividly and accurately the patriotic spirit of Ambassador Gerard's famous story. He pleaded for greater co-operation between the various factors of the industry, saying that it was this very motive that had prompted this "get-together" luncheon, and urged reviewers to adopt a more sympathetic attitude in passing upon productions submitted for their criticism.

Mr. Levenson was then introduced to the diners. The commissioner without delay launched into the work of the State Board of Censors and its relation to the industry. He said he had been more than once amused by the attitude of the trade press, which, he declared, had sometimes written of the New York censorship statute as though the measure was still pending. "The law is not pending," thundered the speaker. "It is now actually written on your statute books, and it is your part as good citizens to accept it as such and abide by its requirements." It was at this juncture that Mr. Levenson voiced his most forcible utterance. Emphasizing his point with vigorous waves of his forefinger directly at his auditors, he admonished, "I give warning, gentlemen, that any effort to evade the law will result only in our putting teeth into it."

He declared nothing was further from the intention of Governor Miller or the legislature in making the law than to do injury to the film industry and that the members of the commission in passing judgment on motion-pictures always bore in mind the immense financial investments entering into their production. He declared in proof of this that out of the 800 subjects already submitted for the examination of the board only four had been rejected in their entirety. The speaker further asserted that Governor Miller on entering office had been opposed to censorship and had at first declared against all efforts to effect legislation along this line. It was only after the Governor's attention had been called to certain pictures being exhibited and had seen certain subjects on the screen in different parts of the state that he was finally won over, declared Mr. Levenson.

The commissioner also took some pains to define the nature of the New York State law on the question. He affirmed that the law did not give the power to censor in the ordinary acceptance of the term but was purely "regu-

Suggests Adoption of English Censor Methods

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER, who has spent the last eight months in Europe in behalf of Famous Players-Lasky, returns with the suggestion that the system of censorship in vogue in England could well be copied. Mr. Whittaker deplores the futility of screen stories which will not offend the very young, and their utter lack of anything calculated to induce thought in mature minds. This condition, he states, is making the screen a synonym for silliness.

In England, two forms of certificates are used. A "U" or "Universal" certificate is given to those pictures which can safely be shown to audiences of any age without harming anybody's moral susceptibilities. An "A" or "Adult" certificate is given to those pictures, which, while not wholly improper, are unsuitable for youthful audiences. Only adults are allowed at their showing.

Louisiana and Mississippi Exhibitors Meet

To Convene Again on December 5th and 6th to Complete Re-Organization

AT a meeting of the Louisiana and Mississippi Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, held at Grunewald Hotel in New Orleans on Monday and Tuesday, November 14th and 15th, resolutions were passed disbanding the old association and re-organizing under the name of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Speeches were made by Mr. A. J. Bethancourt, president; J. Eugene Pearce, a prominent New Orleans exhibitor; and E. T. Peter, respresenting Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. All these speeches were to the effect that to accomplish the wonderfully constructive program outlined by the national president it was essential that the local association have a one-hundred per cent representation in the two states, irrespective of alignment.

The committee, appointed by President A. J. Bethancourt to formulate ways and means of organizing the new association, submitted the following report which was unanimously adopted by the meeting:

"We, your committee appointed for the purpose of formulating ways and means of re-organizing, recommend that a meeting of all the exhibitors of Louisiana and Mississippi be called to assemble at New Orleans on the fifth and sixth of December for the purpose of completing the organization to be known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Louisiana and Mississippi, to pass upon by-laws and rules, the election of officers and an executive board, and any other matters that may come before the meeting."

The resolution of the New Orleans meeting were the outcome of a growing sentiment among the theatre-owners of both states that a closer organization was highly imperative and concerted action on the part of the exhibitors of the two states greatly needed so as to offer effective resistance against any movement promoted by interests inimical to the industry. It has been the conviction for a long time of many exhibitors in both states that factional alignments should be discarded in order to combat the enemies of the screen as well as to promote the welfare of the independent theatre-owners of all sections in these sister states.

Pledges were received from exhibitors at the meeting, assuring that the new official Urban Movie Chats to be made for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in accordance with arrangements recently entered into by the national exhibitor organization and the Kineto Company of America, will be given a one-hundred per cent representation on the screens of both Louisiana and Mississippi.

"Friction in Trade but Not Opposition"

By J. S. Woody,
General Manager of Realart Corporation

FRICTION! Does it really exist in the motion picture industry?

Certainly it does; it exists in every other industry as well. There is no business existant that does not have dissensions between the various factors that compose them. From the beginning of time, where one man has had something to sell to another, there has been friction.

There is friction between the producer and the distributor, between the distributor and the exhibitor, and between the latter and his patrons; there is friction also between the departments that make up the various organizations. But it is not friction in the sense of opposition; the phenomenal growth and success of the film industry is a direct refutation of that.

Where is the main point of friction between the exhibitor and the distributor?

At what point in our organization should we place the oil cups that will make the machinery of the industry run more smoothly?

Much argument has been advanced of late, both by the trade press and various organized bodies, tending toward a closer harmony among the three main factors of the industry—the producers, the distributors and the exhibitors.

To my way of thinking the three integral parts of the industry should function much the same as departments of one organization, with one purpose in mind—serving the public. It is just as essential to the distributor, speaking as I am for Realart, that transactions with the exhibitors be carried on with the least amount of friction as it is for the departments of any mercantile establishment to cooperate with one another. The idea that exhibitors were fair game for any distributor has been relegated to the dead past along with a lot of other fallacies that were in vogue in the old days. Today there is a better understanding between the distributors and the exhibitors than ever existed before, due not to any manipulation of "the big stick" but to the thrashing out of their mutual problems in the light of a keener appreciation of what it means to the industry as a whole. Perhaps the fact that the industry itself has been the target for many outsiders is partly responsible for the closer integration.

The question of efficient representation is one of the most important factors to the distributor in his dealings with the exhibitors and on the type of men selected as branch managers much depends. Friction is caused by contact, and unless the engineers on the job realize the value of proper lubrication, there is bound to be trouble. The exchanges are the points of contact with the exhibitors and we must look to our branch managers, as engineers, to maintain the same high standards in their respective territories as are maintained in the home office. It is a duty we owe not only to Realart but to the exhibitors to install as managers the most practical and efficient men we can get, men in whom we repose the most absolute confidence. As a general rule these men are drafted from our own organization rather than another. The reasons for this are obvious.

And a man's opportunity to be promoted is not restricted to the possibility of something occurring to a man higher up in his own office, but, if his ability warrants it, he may be transferred to a better position in any one of the various branches. Thus the man who wants to get ahead will always be on his toes, knowing that he needs only to demonstrate his fitness in order to get recognition. For instance, the following examples will show how this has worked out in the past: David R. Blyth, who was our Kansas City manager before being transferred, was formerly an assistant at Detroit; our Omaha manager, Sherman T. O'Brien was a salesman in Philadelphia; Paul R. Aust, assistant at Seattle, became the manager; Louis Reichert, our Washington manager, was an assistant at Chicago; J. S. Hommel, Pittsburgh manager, was assistant at that office; and John R. MacMeekin, our Special Representative, was a manager at Kansas City.

At the present time there is a vacancy in the managership of our Kansas City office and it devolved upon me to appoint a man combining all the necessary qualifications, a man who we knew was not only a good salesman but one who must be able to win the full confidence of the exhibitors and keep things running smoothly in that territory. The names of five such men came up for consideration and it was difficult, nay impossible, to make a decision in the usual way. So the five men are going to decide the matter or themselves in a way which is not only unique but practicable. The superiors of these men were apprised of their selection and their cooperation urged.

The field selected to stage the test of these five men's qualifications was Chicago, and the contest is under the supervision of our manager in that city, Mr. Harry Willard, who is thoroughly familiar with all of the details of the contest. Chicago was the logical office from which to work, principally on account of being centrally situated. There are sufficient towns in the Chicago territory in which the five men can operate without their work conflicting, which is another point in its favor, at the same time presenting enough varying selling problems to thoroughly test their managerial ability. The men, under Mr. Willard's direction, will not work as a crew but individually have been assigned enough towns to keep them on the road several weeks before reporting back to the base. While they are en route, they must make daily reports by wire of their progress and these reports are in turn forwarded by Mr. Willard to the Home Office for my analysis and tabulation.

Aside from alloting the men their routine and giving them their general instructions, Mr. Willard has not advised them, nor will they receive any coaching from him. They are "on their own" and each man must depend solely upon his own ability and initiative in handling the many situations that are bound to develop. When once a man leaves a town, he will not be permitted to return under any circumstances; a competitor of his will be assigned to solve any problem which proved too difficult for the first man's solution. If the second man fails, another will take his place, so you will readily agree that none of them will give a competitor a chance to "show him up" without exhausting every possibility.

The contest is to be decided strictly on merit and I have pledged each man my most critical and unbiased review of his work. The manner in which they solve their problems, considering their sales work and the exercise of judgment, will

RICHARD BARTHELMESS was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Hotel Astor, Tuesday evening, November 15th by Associated First National Pictures. A large gathering was present composed of members of the executive committee now in session in New York together with a number of local subfranchise holders. Among those present were: Robert Lieber, J. D. Williams, Harry Schwalbe, Nathan Gordon, A. H. Blank, E. V. Richards, William Brandt, Louis Blumenthal, Harold Franklin.

"Tol'able David," Mr. Barthelmess' first picture for First National was shown to the guests. This picture will be reviewed later in MOTION PICTURE NEWS and we make no effort in that respect here. We offer, however, our sincere congratulations to Inspiration Pictures, Mr. Richard Barthelmess, Henry King, director, Henry Cronjager, photographer, and to all those who were engaged in the making of what in the writer's opinion, is one of the very best results of perfect coordination in picture making and one of the finest pieces of photographic realism ever put upon the screen. Banker Makes Masterly Analysis of Industry for Financiers

Sees Dawn of New Era for Industry in Bankers' Increased Interest

THE motion picture industry is on the threshold of a new era; boom days have passed and in their stead has come the dawning of a period of real business methods and business efficiency which is beginning to stabilize picture production and distribution and claim the serious interest and aid of bankers and financiers which will enable the industry to attain its maximum possibilities.

Such is the opinion of John E. Barber, of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, after a careful and thorough inquiry and review of present-day facts from a banker's standpoint. In an able analysis of the picture industry, its past, present and future, written for the Banker's Monthly, and appearing in the November issue of that periodical, Mr. Barber, under the caption "Financing Motion Pictures on Reasonable Terms," says unfamiliarity of bankers with the great and growing picture industry is one of the chief obstacles in the reduction of costs and needed readjustments.

Many facts and figures of production and distribution hitherto unknown to many persons in the industry are made public by Mr. Barber, who says that lack of reasonable financial credit has cost some producers from 30 to 60 per cent for the capital required to make their product.

"The chief obstacle today to the reduction in the cost of making pictures and the successful readjustment of this huge entertainment industry is the difficulty of obtaining financial accommodation on reasonable terms. This is due primarily to the unfamiliarity of our bankers with the needs of the industry and its method of operation. With the producer, under present conditions, forced to pay from 30 per cent to 60 per cent for the capital required to make his product—and 100 per cent, or more, is by no means unusual—it is easy to see why the cost of money is one of the chief items in motion picture production; also why the elimination of this condition must precede lower costs and consequently lower admission prices. In fact, the provision of an adequate financial structure under which the financial assistance to which this business is entitled may be obtained at a fair cost is essential to the establishment of the industry on a sound and competitive basis."

Mr. Barber says that the financing of pictures has usually been done in a haphazard, not to say irregular manner and that no real opportunity has ever been afforded the industry for developing a financial system suitable to its peculiar needs such as cotton, wheat or manufacturing industries have adopted by seasonal borrowings from banks. He says that until four or five years ago it was an exceptional production which cost more than $25,000, the average was much lower, and even the most effective distributing organizations at that time were unable to sell a picture for more than $75,000 to $100,000; that as competition grew the distributors began guaranteeing producers an advance of production cost up to a certain amount, agreeing to distribute on a percentage basis and divide profits after advances had been charged off. This system, says Mr. Barber, has frequently led to abuses and arbitrary exercise of power toward many producers who, in order to make pictures at all, have had to accept the conditions offered by the only source of their capital. In one extreme case the producer was left with less than 10 per cent of any possible profit which might accrue from his creation, according to Mr. Barber.

"Let us consider the motion picture industry from a banking standpoint, comparing it in size, stability and risk with other industries, such as the automobile, clothing, iron and steel.

"Size: Based on the records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the American people paid in at motion picture box offices last year $750,000,000, or over $2,000,000 a day. Preliminary figures of the 1919 census indicate a total investment of nearly $500,000,000 in the production of pictures—in real estate, studios, electrical equipment, wardrobes, etc. Approximately 20,000 people are steadily employed in the making of motion pictures alone. The producers' valuation of the cost of their output in 1920 was over $200,000,000. Of this sum $50,000,000 was paid out in salaries and wages alone, $25,000,000 representing cost of materials and supplies. The investment in theatres, distributing facilities, etc., is estimated at over $1,000,000. Exports of film were valued at more than $12,000,000 in 1920.

"Stability: The motion picture industry is firmly grounded on the broad demand of the public for entertainment at a moderate price. Motion pictures have reached their greatest development in the United States and are our most popular form of entertainment. Even under present conditions the gross receipts have fallen off only about 25 per cent, which compares most favorably with the situation in many other industries, like the automobile, cotton, wool, copper, etc.

"Market and Product: Motion picture films command not only a national but an international market; since American films are exported to practically every country on the globe. There are over 16,000 motion picture theatres in the United States and a like amount in the rest of the world. Theatres in this country have a seating capacity of more than 5,400,000, which on the average is filled several times daily.

"Risk and Profitableness: Experience during recent years has demonstrated a most important fact in any banking consideration of the motion picture industry, viz: that even the average motion picture made by any of our nationally known producers and distributed by a capable marketing organization, almost invariably returns its cost. The books of one of our pioneer producers, who has kept records covering over 150 of his productions, show that in only one instance did each picture fail to return its cost and a substantial profit, which on the average amounted to 100 per cent of the money originally invested in that picture. One of our most prominent distributors who has had personal supervision of the distribution of more than 700 pictures, states that less than 2 per cent failed to return their cost, plus a profit.

"Now assuming that the industry's size and importance entitle it to further study and examination, the banker will be interested to consider the elements which distinguish a good motion picture loan. The most important considerations are:

"1—The Producer. His experience and ability (both business and artistic) and his reputation at the box office. Is the studio where the picture will be made effective and economical? Under this head also come the director and his previous successes, his ability to adhere to cost estimates and the time schedule in order that release dates may be met.

"2—The story, whether timely, censorable and feasible of production. Who will write the scenario and continuity? The cast and its adaptability to the characters of the photoplay.

"3—'Release,' i. e., definite arrangements for the sale or distribution through some national organization. Such releasing contracts should provide for acceptance without conditions, as for example, 'subject to screen examination' and should specify release within some reasonable time after delivery."

Booking Guide

Future editions of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS BOOKING GUIDE will be of the greatest value when used in connection with back copies of the NEWS covering the period contained in the volume.

Volume I covers all pictures released by all distributors from September 1, 1920 through September 1, 1921.

Volume II, which will be issued in March, 1922, will cover the six months period beginning September 1, 1921 and running to February 1, 1922.

References in the BOOKING GUIDE are made to all exploitation on each individual picture, reviews of the picture, producer's advertising and all other material essential to properly exploiting each and every picture in your territory.

The BOOKING GUIDE is published in order to make it easy for theatre men to look back over the old releases and pick out good pictures which they have not had an opportunity of booking in the past.

All pictures are good in all territories where they have not been shown before.

Order Volume I now. Write today Motion Picture News, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

Laemmle Kills Rumor of "Foolish Wives" Sale

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, issued a statement this week in which he vigorously denied the rumor which was current in the trade recently that Universal was considering a gigantic cash offer for "Foolish Wives," its million dollar film that has already occupied more than a year in production.

Mr. Laemmle states that not only is he confident of the power and greatness of the production, but that he is equally confident of the ability of the Universal selling organization to handle it successfully and to get back its cost and profit. "I would not," stated Mr. Laemmle, "for any amount of money forfeit the chance to offer to exhibitors this wonderful box office attraction myself." Mr. Laemmle stated that several offers have been made for "Foolish Wives," but were given no consideration.

Suit Begun Against Variety Educational Announces

Announcement was made on Wednesday afternoon of this week from the home-office of Educational Films Corporation of America by E. W. Hammons, its president, that a libel suit for $100,000 was started by Harry Kosch, attorney for Educational, in the Supreme Court of New York County against a publication, known as Variety, published by Variety, Inc., Sime Silverman, President. This action is based on an article published in a recent issue of Variety, according to the statement from the Educational home-office.

When questioned over the phone by a News representative on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Silverman declared that he had not up to that time been served with any papers in connection with the reported suit.

HE TRIED ANOTHER PAPER!

March 11, 1921.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Kindly cancel my subscription to your "MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

I have decided to subscribe to the Exhibitor's Trade Review, as I think it is the only trade journal which is the real friend of the exhibitor. They have taken up our side of every fight and we should be the ones to encourage them by our subscriptions. I am of that opinion, however, hence my decision.

Very truly yours,

NICHOLAS F. POWER,
Strand Theatre,
Doylestown, Pa.

Mr. Power sincerely believed (on March 11, 1921) that another trade paper could satisfy his needs.

BUT

Eight months later he was frank enough to admit that MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS only, could supply his every need and want.

November 5, 1921

Mr. E. K. Gillett, Sec'y.
Motion Picture News, Inc.,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

On March 11th last I wrote you a cancellation on your magazine, "THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS." Since they have stopped coming I am beginning to realize just what I am missing. I would like to again become a subscriber to your valuable magazine, and would ask you to kindly send me back numbers from August 6, 1921 up to present date. If there are any back numbers that I haven't paid for, kindly bill me for same and I will gladly send you check to cover. In reference to new subscription I would like to subscribe for two years if the same price for two years is still in vogue. Kindly send back numbers as early as possible.

In closing allow me to again assure you that in my opinion "THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS" is one of the best trade journals I have ever read and I hope I may never be without it again.

Thanking you for past courtesies, I beg to remain.

Very truly yours,

NICHOLAS F. POWER,
Strand Theatre,
Doylestown, Pa.

P. S.—I will send check to cover payment immediately on receipt of bill.

What A Few of Many Think of THE BOOKING GUIDE

"Am herewith including check as payment for one year's renewal of subscription from May 1922 to May 1923 you will also find subscription blank attached to check properly filled. It is not the renewal of my subscription that I desire so much at present as my subscription does not expire until May 1922 but it is the Booking Guide that I desire which alone is worth the $2.00 to any small exhibitor and should you have another Guide of its nature for the Season of from Sept. 1919 to Sept. 1921 would gladly give you $2.00 for it alone if convenient. Please advise me if you can furnish me same. Have been a subscriber of the NEWS since it was first published and have practically all the numbers in the past on file. Business is slightly picking up but same has been awful light during the summer.

Respectfully,
BARNEY HATKE, Prop. & Mgr.,
Royal Theatre,
Sabetha, Kansas.

"A wonderful magazine Mr. Johnston, and you and associates should feel proud to be connected with such a high class paper. I do not see how any exhibitor can get along without it. Continued success."

Very truly yours,
JAS. V. CHEST,
Capitol Theatre,
Canajoharie, N. Y.

"Enclosed please find money order to cover my renewal for 1922 also a copy of the Booking Guide as per your offer. I could not be without the NEWS nor the GUIDE."

Yours truly,
I. C. WOOLSEY,
Bijou Theatre,
210 N. Main St.,
Xenia, Ohio.

"You can't send that GUIDE too soon either, for I think it will be a great help to me in many ways."

Very truly yours,
MR. E. C. McQUAY,
New Holland Theatre,
New Holland, Ohio.

"Your NEWS is invaluable and $2.00 is only a nominal amount to pay for such valuable information as your 'Exhibitor's Friend' imparts."

Very truly yours,
H. E. CANE,
West St., Theatre,
Coudersport, Pa.

"Please find enclosed check for your first edition of the Booking Guide. It's just what I have wanted!"

Very truly,
A. B. CARTER, Manager, Park Theatre,
Barre, Vt.

"Congratulations—Looks Good."

MR. L. W. McCUAN,
Kozy Theatre,
Dresden, Tenn.

"Am enclosing check covering one additional years subscription to MOTION PICTURE NEWS which will take me to June 1924 (you see I'm way ahead of the game and playing safe)—also for a Booking Guide (which is just the thing that I have been looking for). Both these amount to $2.00 but I would appreciate it if you will send me an additional Booking Guide which I need as I have two offices and want a copy of each in each office. You see the check is made out for 2 Guides and a years subscription. Thanking you for a speedy reply."

Truly,
V. J. VOTOLATO, Manager.
Myrtle Hall,
Thornton, R. I.

"Enclosed please find money order for 50c for one of your Booking Guides. My subscription is paid to May 1923 so do not care to pay further in advance at this time. But would not be without MOTION PICTURE NEWS. It is one of the finest books of its kind printed. Fair in every respect. That is the reason I am sending for the Booking Guide. Because you recommend it."

Truly,
WALTER KILMER, Manager,
Palace Theatre,
Verona, Ill.

"I have your favor of recent date and note contents. I will be very glad indeed to have one of your booking guides. I am sure it will be a valuable asset to the office. Thanking you for past favors and appreciating to the fullest your desire to assist the exhibitor whenever possible, I am,"

Very truly yours,
FRED G. NIXON-NIRDLINGER,
Nixon-Nirdlinger Bldg.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

"We are just in receipt of your esteemed communication of November 1st calling our attention to your new Booking Guide. This is certainly a mighty bright idea and we wish to congratulate you. Right now our subscription to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS is paid to March 11, 1923, and although it does not seem to be the proper thing to extend the subscription beyond this time, right now, we feel that we need the Booking Guide as soon as we can possibly get it and therefore we herewith enclose two hard earned bucks so send us all we have coming."

Yours with best wishes,
E. C. TRIEB, Managing Director,
Capitan Theatre,
Roswell, N. Mexico.

"Am enclosing two dollars to cover year subscription and copy of Booking Guide. Good idea—hope that returns will justify your continuing it each year."

Respectfully yours,
E. W. HOOVER, Manager,
Strand and Alhambra Theatres,
Knightstown, Ind.

latory." He discounted any notion that the board was empowered to impose personal and arbitrary opinions. "The law is very simple," declared Mr. Levenson. "We must not license any picture which is obscene, immoral, or indecent, or which would incite to violence." He said he had just witnessed a screen portrayal, tedious and grewsome, and one which he considered to be worthless as a medium of entertainment. Yet, declared the speaker, he could not condemn the picture officially, despite his personal aversion, for the reason that the picture did not fall within the restrictions of the statute.

In conclusion, he expressed it to be his wish to co-operate fully with the trade in the advancement of the screen and he pleaded especially for a product that would offset the radical tendencies of the day and make for better citizens. He professed it to be his belief that the industry as a whole had not yet realized the tremendous educational force in its hands or if realizing had not acted on its realization. To aid this sort of work, he pledged his fullest co-operation, his knowledge, and his influence.

After Mr. Levenson's speech, the diners adjourned taking away with them as souvenirs of the occasion silver fountain pens presented by Warner Bros.

M.P.T.O. in Successful Fight for Tax Appeal

According to advices from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the repeal of the five per cent film tax has been favorably reported on by the Conference Committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives at the national capital. Indications are, says the M. P. T. O. of A. statement, that this report will be adopted by both bodies and the Revenue Bill thus shaped will have the approval of President Harding. The M. P. T. O. of A. announcement continues as follows:

"Work looking to the repeal of this measure was started and carried forward by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Our representatives were present in Washington at every necessary period during the consideration of the Revenue Bill. National President Sydney S. Cohen, National Counsel James J. Walker, and others were on hand representing the Organization before the Ways and Means Committee and later in conference with members of the Senate Finance Committee.

Metro's Western Branch Managers Confer

E. M. Saunders, general sales manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, held a conference of the company's Western branch managers last week in Salt Lake City.

Among those who attended the conference were Harry Lustig, Western division manager; Karl Sterns, Seattle branch manager; G. N. Cloward, Salt Lake City manager; Ben F. Rosenberg, Los Angeles branch manager; Fred Voigt, San Francisco branch manager; and Fred P. Brown, Denver branch manager.

Sandusky Exhibitor Chosen for City Commissioner

George J. Schade, owner and manager of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, was elected to the five-man commission governing Sandusky under a charter, Nov. 8th. Schade espoused the cause of the "plain people," who carried him triumphantly to victory.

A few days before the election the opposition of Schade, through a friendly newspaper, asked the question: "What has Schade ever done for Sandusky?"

The answer came from Mrs. Charles E. Cropsey, president of the Sandusky Branch of the Child Conservation League.

"Mr. Schade has given Sandusky and the Sandusky locality one of the finest movie theatres in the country," said Mrs. Cropsey. "Furthermore he has given benefits from time to time for the Child Conservation League and other organizations that meant much to their welfare. When our soldier boys went to the Mexican border five years ago they took with them more than $300, the proceeds of a benefit given by Schade. When they left for Camp Sherman later on, they took close to $1,000 of benefit money. And when, still later, they sailed for the other side, they took still more."

Mrs. Cropsey enumerated numerous other instances of how Schade had "helped Sandusky," citing among these the "free shows" he gives at frequent intervals for the little inmates of the Erie Children's Home.

Temporary Head for Realart Kansas City Office

The Realart Kansas City office has been taken over temporarily by John N. MacMeekin, special representative, owing to the transfer of David R. Blyth, to the helm of another office.

J. S. Woody

As soon as the managership of the Kansas City office is determined by General Manager J. S. Woody, Mr. MacMeekin will take over the Philadelphia office, using that city as his permanent headquarters as he will also act as special representative in the East.

Mr. John W. Thornton, assistant manager, is now in temporary charge of the territory.

The Kansas City offices have just been moved to 1710 Wyandotte street.

J. C. Stille Heads Theatre System on the Coast

J. C. Stille for 12 years prominent in motion picture circles of Portland, Ore., on November 1 began his duties as directing manager of all theatres on the Pacific coast operated by the Universal Film company. His offices are in Denver.

Tie-Up with Kineto Hailed as One of Great Forward Movements of M.P.T.O. of A.

IN connection with the announcement in last week's issue of the News of the arrangements made between the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Kineto Company of America, whereby Kineto will produce for the M. P. T. O. a weekly release to be known under the title of "Official Urban Movie Chats," both heads of the respective organizations issued supplementary statements during the week. Sydney S. Cohen, president of the M. P. T. O. of A. declares:

"One of the great forward movements of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, is the presentation of 'Official Urban Movie Chats.'

"It affords the great opportunity we have always sought to make the motion picture theatre of the highest constructive value to all communities in carrying forward progressive public programs of all kinds. It is truly the visualized press, which we intend to make in as complete a sense as possible, the servant of the people in every American community.

"Service will be the keynote of 'Official Urban Movie Chats.' Every theatre owner in the United States will be a contributing editor. Through the theatre every person in the country will be brought in close contact with this service. We invite helpful suggestions of every character, as it is through such cooperation that this new screen press can completely fulfill its mission."

The following statement was issued by Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America:

"I appreciate very fully the meaning and responsibility of our new association with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Looking forward to my new responsibility, it is a source of satisfaction to be among those chosen. I am in perfect accord with the high aims of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. With the combined aid of the officers and members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Advisory Board to be created, 'The Official Urban Movie Chats of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America' will be the finest single-reel motion-picture ever produced. The Arts, the Sciences, the Industries, and the finest things in the lives of all nations will be depicted therein."

"Advertise and Gain—Don't and Lose"

By Sidney R. Kent, General-Manager of Distribution, Famous Players-Lasky

CLOSE observers of the picture business are pretty thoroughly agreed that this season the public is "shopping for pictures." In other words, the day has gone when the public just "goes to the movies," without giving thought to the nature of the picture it is going to see.

How to meet this condition of affairs seems to be causing some people considerable concern and bewilderment. Why they should be dismayed at the new turn of affairs is difficult to say, because the solution is obvious. In fact, the whole problem lies in the one word, "Advertising."

By "advertising" I mean all the various forms of bringing the merits of a picture to the public's attention — billboard space, exploitation, lobby displays, publicity in the newspapers and straight advertising—either by the exhibitor or the producer. Remember that last — "either by the exhibitor or the producer."

Of course, any discussion of advertising must be based on the supposition that the product advertised has merit. All the advertising in the world will not make a poor picture successful, and the exhibitor who books weak pictures now in the hope of putting them over by advertising is courting disaster. He not only is flying in the face of all advertising principles but he is deliberately defying the present attitude of the public to shop for pictures. It is of good pictures I am talking, and how they must be handled by the business men of the industry to get from them the maximum of revenue.

Examination of this problem of catching the "picture shoppers" leads us back to first principles. In the first place, we must realize thoroughly the extent of this present disposition of the public to look before it spends its money. That it is nation-wide is being shown daily by the complaints of exhibitors that the little known and weak pictures not only are failing, but are disastrous in the extent of their failure. Everywhere the report is the same: the public flocks in the same old way to the good pictures it knows about, but the weak and unknown pictures are dismal failures.

The only reason the public flocks to the opening of pictures is that the public has heard of those pictures. Not by word-of-mouth advertising, because these pictures are known to the public even before they are shown in a first-run house.

Therefore it is apparent that the picture which is going to be the biggest success to the exhibitor is the picture that has been advertised in advance. This means not only advertising by the exhibitor, but also advertising by the producer. The day has passed when it is sufficient for the producer to make a picture turn it over to an exhibitor and let the theatre do all the work of selling it to the public. The producer owes it to the exhibitor as much as to himself to see that his productions are sold to the public before and also after they are sold to the exhibitor.

If pictures are advertised as extensively as "The Affairs of Anatol" and "The Sheik," on each of which we carried double-truck displays in the Saturday Evening Post, it goes without saying that a tremendous number of people have heard of them long before they are shown in any given town. Therefore when those pictures do get their first-run showings their success is already assured among the "picture-shoppers."

Considerable comment has been caused by our method of advertising pictures before their release. But after all, despite the tremendous success which this advertising has had, it was merely getting back to first principles, and the benefit of it has been as much the exhibitor's as has ours. I want to emphasize, however, that the exhibitor cannot get the full benefit of this advertising unless he takes the principle to heart and applies it to his own theatre.

By that I mean this: Wonderful as it may be to create the initial demand for pictures by turning the attention of the public to them, the producer and exhibitor must continue to work together to get the maximum of results.

By widespread newspaper advertising, by intensive exploitation at the hands of trained exploitation men, the exhibitor should let the people of his city know that it is at his theatre that the "picture shopping public" can see the big production which they have seen advertised in magazines and newspapers.

It would seem to an outsider that the benefits of producer-exhibitor exploitation and advertising would be obvious to all as advertising and exploitation is the very life-blood of the show business. But the panic which some people have shown over the public's new attitude toward pictures indicates that there are still some who have not yet learned this basic principle of successful showmanship.

Those who are not appreciating this fact are the ones who are crying bad times; they who have kept this fact in mind are the ones who have solved the problem of "shopping for pictures."

Paramount District Managers Meet in N. Y.

WITH thirty-four attending, the annual meeting of the paramount district and branch managers opened Monday for a week's session in the home office under the direction of S. R. Kent, general manager of the department of distribution.

The program for the week's session called for two sessions daily, at which plans plans for selling Paramount pictures during the coming months were discussed. A dinner at the end of the week also was on the program.

Those attending the conference were as follows: Adolph Zukor, Mr. Kent, Eugene Zukor, E. E. Shauer, Herbert Elder, Gerald Akers, Jerome Beatty, Claud Saunders, Harry G. Ballance, Frank V. Chamberlin, Henry Salsbury, Mel Shauer, Paul Morgan, Oscar Morgan, G. B. J. Frawley, from the home office; H. H. Buxbaum, New York district manager; J. D. Clark, Philadelphia; C. C. Wallace, Washington; W. E. Smith, Philadelphia district manager; Harry Danto and Harry Swift, New York exchange; H. A. Ross, Detroit district manager; M. W. Kempner, Albany exchange; Allan S. Moritz, Buffalo exchange; F. F. Creswell, Indianapolis district manager; H. W. Given, Chicago exchange; Philip Reisman, Minneapolis district manager; R. C. Lei-Beau, Kansas City district manager; Louis Marcus, district manager, Salt Lake City; George W. Weeks, general manager, Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., Toronto; Herman Wobber, district manager, San Francisco; George J. Schaefer, Boston district manager; L. L. Dent, Atlanta district manager.

Friction But Not Dissention

decide the issue. Mistakes naturally are bound to occur with all of them but those also will be given due consideration.

Were I asked today to make a choice from among those five men, I should confess my inability to do so impartially, and from the character of the replies which you have seen, I think that you will agree that I will have to make a very close decision on December tenth. No matter whom I choose, I feel that the already high standards of Realart distribution will go up another peg and the industry as a whole will benefit by his services. Four of them unfortunately must lose, but there is more than the managership of the Kansas City exchange at stake, and I have other plans for them. We could not afford to relegate these men, after such an intensive campaign, to unimportant routine. It is in the development of such sales specialists that we hope to benefit not only ourselves but the exhibitors as well for I have not the least doubt that it will prove of mutual service.

It is in the selecting, training and placing of these business engineers that we are striving to lessen whatever friction may exist.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 910 S. MICHIGAN AVE.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Chicago have notified the Motion Picture Operators' Union that they are ready to enter a conference with the representatives of the union in regard to making a new agreement on wages and working conditions in place of the present one, which expires early in January. No word as to any proposed changes in either scale or conditions will be given out until the representatives of the two bodies get together. Alderman Cermak has informed the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Chicago that they will be notified as to the date of the City Council's proposed hearings on the Daylight Savings Ordinance, and that he will be pleased to have them represented at that hearing. The Theatre Owners have taken a strong stand in opposition to the Daylight Savings Ordinance and will put up a strong fight to have it either abrogated or materially modified.

Fitzpatrick & McElroy have taken over another Chicago Heights house, the Illinois, which had been operated by George Gregory. Fitzpatrick & McElroy already were operating the Lincoln-Dixie theatre of that city.

F. L. Drum has arrived from the home office of Hodkinson in New York to assume his new position as office manager of Hodkinson's Chicago exchange. H. E. Boswell and Jack Gavin, both well known film salesmen in this territory, have joined the staff of Hodkinson. Mr. Boswell will cover the northside and Mr. Gavin will work the Illinois territory.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois have appointed a grievance committee, consisting of M. M. Rubens, W. D. Burford and J. B. Dibelka, to meet with a similar committee from the Chicago Film Board of Trade, from time to time for the purpose of adjusting differences and grievances which may arise between exhibitors and exchanges. This action was taken in response to a request received from the Film Board of Trade a few days ago. The M. P. T. O. state convention, which was planned to take place during November, has been postponed until some time in December, the date to be named later, in order to enable President Sidney M. Cohen and General Counsel James Walker, of the national organization, to be present. The convention city will be Peoria.

Phil Dunas is now connected with Celebrated as special representative and will cover the key cities in Illinois and Indiana territory in the interests of "Why Girls Leave Home" and "The Black Panther's Cub," two of Celebrated's important releases. "Why Girls Leave Home" has been held over for a second week at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum and will probably remain for a third week on account of the large business it is doing. "The Black Panther's Cub" has been booked into the Ziegfeld for a December run.

E. S. Barbour, formerly connected with Select and other Chicago exchanges as a salesman, is now covering the Chicago territory for Unity. President Frank Zambrino is greatly pleased over the record made by his feature release, "Love, Hate and Woman," starring Grace Davidson, at Barbees, as it is reported that this picture did the best business of any feature showing at Barbees in the last eleven weeks.

District Manager Givens, of Paramount, is in New York attending the conference of Paramount's district managers and will not return to Chicago for ten days or two weeks.

Harry Weiss expects to leave for New York the latter part of this week where he goes in search of big features for release through his exchange. Mr. Weiss believes that this is a season when super pictures are in demand and is determined to be in a position to supply the wants of theatres in this territory along this line.

W. D. Burford has left for New York to attend the proposed conference between the committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, of which he is a member, and First National, at which it will be endeavored to arrive at a better understanding between the theatre owners and the distributing organization.

Ben Beadell, who with W. A. Aschman is releasing the official Dempsey-Carpentier pictures in Illinois, reports the pictures opened at Carl Miller's Spencer Square theatre in Rock Island, Sunday, at one dollar and fifty cents top, and played to a splendid business. The pictures also have been booked into Dee Robinson's house at Peoria, opening on November 20th, for an indefinite run. At Barbees in Chicago the pictures are playing at one dollar, plus war tax, and this house has been doing a tremendous business ever since opening day, November 11th.

Ray Alexander, short products manager of Universal Film Exchanges, presided over his first exhibitors' showing on Tuesday in Universal's projection room. The early release of the new Eddie Polo "Cyclone Smith" series were shown and received much favorable comment from exhibitors present.

C. H. Miller, one of the most widely known and successful salesmen in Chicago territory, is again connected with Universal and will specialize on the sale of feature pictures in the city territory.

Moving pictures and other forms of theatre entertainment on Sunday will be prohibited at Mattoon, Illinois, as a result of the municipal election held last week, which decided against the question, Shall Moving Pictures, Theatrical or Musical Entertainment Be Permitted On Sunday? The majority against Sunday opening was thirteen hundred votes. There are four motion picture theatre houses in Mattoon.

Charles Ray is scheduled to arrive in Chicago Friday morning from the West Coast. This is his first visit to Chicago since his early youth and during his two days' stay he will be the guest of Balaban & Katz, who have arranged several social affairs in his honor.

Several of Goldwyn's representatives from the home office are in Chicago in connection with the showing of "Theodora," at the La Salle Theatre, including Director of Publicity Will A. Page; General Booking Manager J. M. Welch; Business Manager Albert Strassman and Musical Director Leon M. Polacheck. Count Ignazio Thaon Di Revel, representing the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, also is making his headquarters here for the present.

Manager W. C. Brimmer, of Vitagraph's Chicago Exchange, chaperoned Tom Gallery, popular Vitagraph star, whose picture, "The Son of Wallingford," will soon be released in Chicago, on a visit to Milwaukee this week. Tom was given a rousing reception by Milwaukee newspaper men and picture fans.

George Walsh, who has just signed up to appear in pictures for Universal, and who is making personal appearances at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's theatres in Chicago at present, visited Universal's headquarters this week to get acquainted with Manager Lesserman and the sales staff of the local exchange. The boys promised Mr. Walsh that they will put his pictures over big in this territory.

This is super picture week in the Chicago loop and probably never before in the history of the city has there been as many great pictures on exhibition.

The belief of many of the leading exhibitors and exchange men in this territory that this is a year of big pictures and that the public will support productions of unusual beauty, interest and dramatic suspense is being borne out by the crowds which have attended the various downtown theatres.

Among the big features being shown in the loop are "Theodora," Goldwyn's colossal screen spectacle, which opened at the La Salle Theatre on November 11; "The Queen of Sheba," Fox's splendid spectacle, which opened at the Woods Theatre on November 10th; Paramount's powerful story of desert love, "The Sheik," which opened at the Roosevelt, Saturday; Poli Negri in "One Arabian Night," a romance of the harem, which has been playing at the Ziegfeld for three weeks; Mabel Normand in "Molly O" at the Chicago; "Why Girls Leave Home," which is running for a second week at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum; and the official Dempsey-Carpentier fight pictures, which are drawing big crowds at Barbee's Loop Theatre, having opened on November 11th for an indefinite run.

Alexander Making Good with Universal

L. W. Alexander, who recently was promoted to sales manager of short products, Universal's Chicago office, is making a splendid record and has succeeded in keeping the figures nose and nose with last year's banner record.

Before entering the service of Universal, Mr. Alexander was connected with Marshall Field & Company for three years as their south Michigan representative.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Dangerous Lies—
English picture and on this account lacked drawing power. Business not very good. (East.)

An average program production which was received with little enthusiasm. (East.)

A fine picture. Did good business on this one. (West.)

Under the Lash—
Played to good business all week. Strong picture and star was decided hit. (Middle West.)

Good stuff. Star draws well for me. Business pretty good. (South.)

The Great Impersonation—
One of the best features I've played in months. Excellent business thruout week. (South.)

Footlights—
Picture and business both good. (West.)

The Golem—
Scored a hit and ended two week's run. Receipts pleasing. (East.)

The Affairs of Anatol—
Filled houses nicely at popular prices. (East.)

The Bronze Bell—
Business not good although picture judged good. Star not well known. (Middle West.)

Life—
No star. Business punk. (Middle West.)

Ladies Must Live—
An average production. Business about same. (East.)

Experience—
I consider this a very fine production, although we had very poor business with it. (West.)

After the Show—
A picture which just suited the taste of many patrons and played to a good attendance all week. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Two Minutes to Go—
Fine football picture. Did good business. (Middle West.)

The average Ray picture, which will please Ray fans. Fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Charles Ray made hit with our patrons in this comedy with a slam bang football finish. Played to excellent business. (Middle West.)

Mediocre picture. Did not draw well. (Middle West.)

One Arabian Night—
Picture drew because of star's former work but received some complaints because of sensuality of picture. Critics found fault with this feature. (Middle West.)

Picture and business both excellent. (East.)

Woman's Place—
But little better than her average productions. Receipts fair. (East.)

Though this is but one of her usual pictures, we had dandy box office receipts on it. (East.)

The Golden Snare—
Played in conjunction with Harold Lloyd in "Over the Fence," and the program drew good crowds for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Bits of Life—
A novelty which ranks among the greatest pictures of the year. Most of the acting is superb. Better than average box office value. (Middle West.)

The Playhouse—
Funniest ever. Got all the laughs in the house. (Middle West.)

The Wonderful Thing—
Excellent attraction. Norma Talmadge surrounded by splendid cast, everyone given opportunity to display talents. Business about average. (Middle West.)

The Ten Dollar Raise—
A production that holds the interest throughout and sends them away talking. Capacity business. (East.)

Gypsy Blood—
Third week of run continued good. (West.)

Serenade—
Business punk, picture not good enough to build up any business. Harold Lloyd's "Never Weaken," drew most of the business. (Middle West.)

Blind Hearts—
Fair picture with the usual business. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Sure Fire—
Thrilling from start to finish. Fine downtown picture for house catering to transient trade. Business better than it has been for weeks. (Middle West.)

The Rage of Paris—
Fairly good production. Business fair. (West.)

Nobody's Fool—
This went over wonderfully well and made a great hit at my house. A great picture. (West.)

Luring Lips—
Good picture, good business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

For Those We Love—
Too much sad stuff. Chaplin comedy saved the situation. (East.)

Beating the Game—
Not greatly different from other recent Tom Moore pictures. Only an average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Poverty of Riches—
Average production which played to fair business. (Middle West.)

Snowblind—
Beautiful picture but drawing power only fair. (East.)

All's Fair In Love—
Fair attraction. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Ever Since Eve—
Fine picture and one which has big audience pull. Did so well that we put it into our other house which usually presents only first-runs. Fine business all week. (Middle West.)

The Old Nest—
Business good for second run. Great picture. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Way Down East—
Return engagement went over good. (West.)

Wonderful audience attraction. Had 'em standing out half a block on the last day. (Middle West.)

The Three Musketeers—
Ended two week's run. Went big. (East.)

Fairbank's best. Good for two week's run. (Middle West.)

FOX

Over the Hill—
A box office knockout. Played to capacity houses the first week and still going good on the second week. (Middle West.)

Still drawing big at the end of its third week. The kind of picture the public wants to see. (Middle West.)

Perjury—
Good picture but business only fair. Those who attended seemed to like Farnum. (Middle West.)

The Last Trail—
Just like others of its kind. Healthy entertainment that did average business for the week. (Middle West.)

The Rough Diamond—
One of Mix's best. Did a knockout business. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Clay Dollars—
A good picture with a star who is gaining strength with my people. Business good. (South.)

Poorest drawing card in many weeks. This star does not take well at this theatre which caters to aristocratic neighborhood. (Middle West.)

The Girl From Nowhere—
A good picture but business bad. Weather partly to blame. (East.)

Is Life Worth Living?
Mediocre picture and business not very good. (East.)

REALART

Hush Money—
Found this to be a very poor box office attraction. (East.)

The Speed Girl—
A very strong box office attraction. Splendid picture. (Middle West.)

METRO

Camille—
Business poor. Nazimova fans not yet rallied from "Peacock." Rudolph Valentino drew well, for this picture was played the week following "The Four Horsemen," and I featured his name in billing. (South.)

Liked very well. Good receipts. (East.)

Two weeks run to good business and pleased patrons. (West.)

Life's Darn Funny—
Star very popular. Did good business. Comedies popular. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Never Weaken—
A real comedy thriller. Full of pep from start to finish. High class comedy. (Middle West.)

Sure did go over strong. A great comedy. (West.)

Big Houses Say

EQUITY

Charge It—
Only fair. Women were more interested in it than men. Business better than average. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Son of Wallingford—
Fair picture. Ordinary business. (Middle West.)

WARREN

Girl From God's Country—
Not judged altogether the fault of the picture, which seemed to give general satisfaction, but business was punk. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

A Certain Rich Man—
The fact that a local author wrote the theme of this picture had much to do with the box office figures. Good crowds all week. (Middle West.)

R-C PICTURES

Where Lights Are Low—
Sessue Hayakawa has many admirers here and the picture drew a good attendance for a week's run. (Middle West.)

ARROW

God's Country and the Law—
Good picture and good business. (West.)

Love, Hate and a Woman—
Feature which appealed to our audiences and went over big. Did excellent business. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Cinderella of the Hills—
Pretty good for that type of picture. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Madonnas and Men—
Patrons liked this picture, business fair. (East.)

Out of the Dust—
Splendid picture but only fair business. (East.)

This ad on "The Midnight Bell" suggests action and incident. It is sponsored by the America theatre, Denver

Imperial Theatre, Augusta, Ga., Puts Over Clever Idea for "Three Musketeers"

MANAGER FRANK MILLER, of the Imperial theatre, Augusta, went the "teaser-line stuff" a bit better when he played "The Three Musketeers."

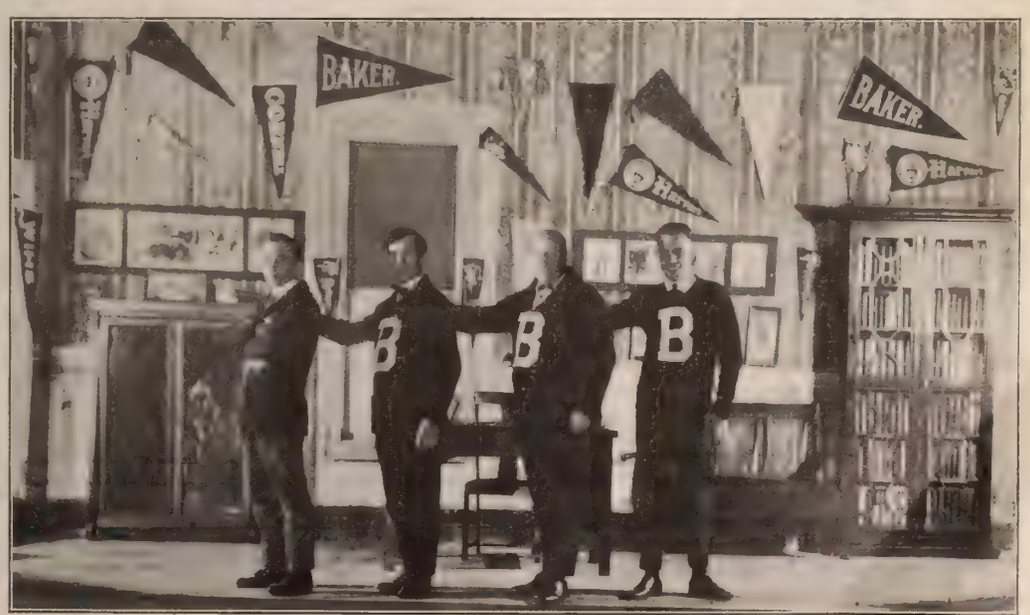
One week before he had planned to open his compaign, a local bank went broke, the vice-president shot himself and there was much scandal, gossip and talk of financial difficulties. Capitalizing this local disaster, Manager Miller put up his cards a week earlier than he had intended. These cards were about twelve by fourteen, on a smooth white background, the lettering and borders being done in crimson. These cards read: "One for All — All for One." Beneath, in smaller letters, ran another caption: "It is the hour for the fearless," or "The foe is both crafty and unscrupulous," or "The honor of a Queen is at stake," and so on.

These cards literally covered the town, going up within a couple of hours after the bank failure had become the sole topic of conversation. People began to connect the cards in some vague way with the bank failure, and they awaited each issue of the daily papers with excitement. In these papers the small one-column teaser ads, reading the same as the cards, and twelve to each issue, appeared.

One week after the bank failure, and a week before the picture was to open, these spaces were enlarged and were occupied by small thumbnail cuts, of black-and-white sketches of Fairbanks as "D'Artagnan." These cuts were not labelled at all, and as many as three or four would appear in one issue of the paper. A number of them were just silhouettes, some with wide black borders to capture attention. On the last two days larger cuts of Fairbanks, in his own person, were used, and on the Sunday preceding the opening of the picture a big ad appeared in the Sunday papers, headed "One for All — All for One. It is an hour for the fearless," followed by the name of the picture, the star, the theatre and the play date.

It was one of the most consistently planned and executed advertising campaigns as yet put over by any Augusta theatre, and that it was a success was attested by the box office receipts.

A simple stage setting represented a church in France in the period of the picture—1625. This was a small stone church in, apparently, a tiny village. The stage was dimly lit, as if by moonlight, and a man costumed as "D'Artagnan" sang to a girl in a long hooded cloak. The song was D'Hardelot's famous impromptu, "Because."



Thus Manager Miller proves that brains and ingenuity will count more in box office receipts than a lot of money spent promiscuously on exploitation.

Provo City Old Folks See "Over the Hill"

The special showing for inmates of homes, used frequently as a means of getting attenion for a picture, was carried out recently by J. B. Ashton, manager of the Columbia theatre, Provo City, Utah, in connection with his run of "Over the Hill."

Provo City is the site of the Provo Infirmary for Invalids and the Aged, whose inmates number about 200. A private showing at the Columbia theatre was arranged to permit all the inmates of the institution to see "Over the Hill." Of course, it was necessary to provide means of transportation to the theatre for the occasion. The response was manifold. Then, by tying up with local florists and candy dealers, both flowers and candies were obtained for the visitors.

The stunt was something to which Provo City was unaccustomed, and the two daily newspapers used several columns of news on the affair. The subsequent box office returns were equally astonishing.

Irwin Designs Special Lobby for "Hush Money"

For the showing of "Hush Money," Manager Irwin, of the Forsyth theatre, Atlanta, planned a very simple but very effective special ornament for his lobby, which certainly attracted business.

A huge cut-out had been made and painted silver to represent a silver dollar. It was complete, even to the tiny stars in a circle around it—but in place of the well-known motto "E Pluribus Unum" was "Alice Brady in Hush Money," in small but perfectly legible wording.

Instead of "the Liberty Lady" whose profile usually adorns the silver dollar, an excellent profile of Miss Brady had been cut from a stock one-sheet and pasted in the center of the "dollar." But across the mouth of the profile was a gag—signifying "Hush Money."

For all its simplicity—perhaps because of it—the "dollar" attracted considerable attention, and Manager Irwin is being congratulated on his cleverness and ingenuity.

Novel Stunts for "Hurricane Hutch" at Atlanta

To introduce the serial, "Hurricane Hutch," Manager Darley, of the New Alpha theatre, Atlanta, made the most of the motorcycle incidents in the picture. A motorcycle rider rode through town, with signs on his back, advertising the picture. In crowded places, he would speed up, make his motor back-fire, and so on, to attract attention.

In addition to this, a motorcycle with a sealed speedometer was placed in the lobby, and the person guessing the nearest correct number each week receives five dollars in gold. On the fifteenth Monday, when the last episode will be shown, thirty dollars in gold will be awarded in a grand prize.

The exploitation has attracted considerable attention and the first episode opened to a packed house.

Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, Celebrates Birthday

TO properly celebrate the second birthday of the beautiful Missouri theatre in St. Louis, Manager William Goldman secured the Mexican National Band to appear at all performances. And this, added to the splendid program which Manager Goldman had prepared, was a big feature.

The lobby of the theatre was decorated with flowers and one of the novelties of the program was "The Great Train Robbery," the first picture with which most fans are familiar.

Scenes showing the employees of the Missouri at work and at play were also presented.

Boasberg Ties Up With Toledo Jeweler

Photographs of fifty Paramount stars were displayed in Basch's Jewelry Store window, Toledo, in connection with a sale of picture-frames. The stars were not named, but there was a number on each frame. Persons identifying all the stars on blanks supplied by Basch received free admission as passes.

This unusual tieup was made by Albert Boasberg, Paramount exploiteer, and Edward A. Zorn, manager of the Temple theatre, which offered a season ticket as first prize. After the hook-up was effected The Princess and Loew's Valentine theatres wanted to come in and gave the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth prizes.

"Old Collar" Show Latest Exploitation Stunt

An old, frayed linen collar is as worthless as a horseshoe, tin-can or mealy potato, and a white collar matinee, such as was staged by the Majestic theatre, Battle Creek, was long overdue.

The Boggett and Bowne house offered a free admission to any child bringing an old collar to the door. These were later collected and run through a press, and the following copy printed on the back:

"If you want to laff, Necks Weak, go see Paramount's, 'King Queen Joker,' Majestic theatre."

The collars were then taken to the laundries in the bundles. It was a riot. Albert J. Boasberg, Paramount exploiteer from the Detroit exchange originated the stunt and wrote the poetry.

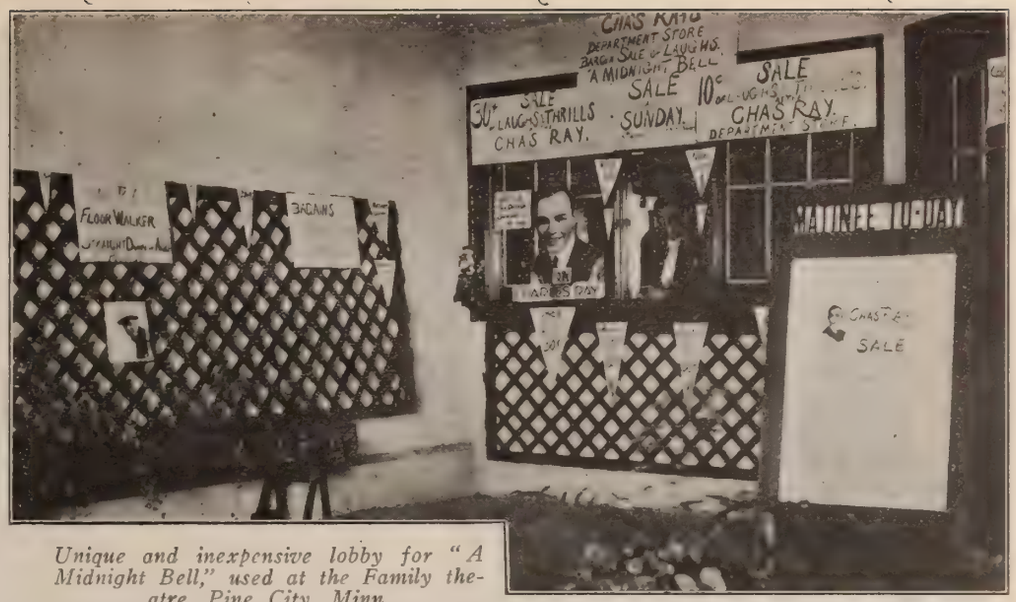
Pittsburgh Theatre Handsomely Dressed for "Three Musketeers"



Ray C. Brown, manager of the Duquesne theatre, Pittsburgh, set a high standard in theatre dressing during the run there of "The Three Musketeers."

Above the coping extending out over the sidewalk he placed a huge full-length sign announcing the attraction, with a big poster in the center, and cut-outs of musketeers standing on either side of a large head of Fairbanks as D'Artagnan, the musketeers holding upraised swords, the points of which extend into a big shield, atop of which is a crown. Back of this head of D'Artagnan is a long, lightly constructed sign, covered with fleur-de-lis, with a shield on either side of the head. The whole front of the building is decorated with draped flags.

On the sidewalk are one sheet posters of various scenes, with smaller panels on the columns upholding the sidewalk covering. The while makes a most attractive house front.

O'Leary Provides Parking Place for Patrons Cars

When a new gasoline service station opened a short distance from the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, Manager O'Leary of the theatre made arrangements whereby patrons of the house would enjoy free parking privileges at the station, as an extra service to the patrons. In return for the arrangement, the service station secured advertising on the screen of the Imperial through the use of a slide announcing the parking feature.

Helena Mothers Guest of Atlers Theatre

BESIDES an extensive newspaper campaign in which local merchants tied up on a double truck, C. B. Hartwig, manager of the Antlers theatre, Helena, Mont., also succeeded in getting the co-operation of the Helena Independent for a "Mother's Guest" matinee.

Mr. Hartwig contributed 200 tickets to the Independent which invited all mothers in Helena past fifty years of age to attend the first matinee performance of "The Old Nest" as its guests. It used front page readers on the showing, gratis, for a week preceding the opening.

The theatre presented each mother who attended the showing as a guest of the Independent with a chrysanthemum.

Borrows Lobby Display for "Her Winning Way"

Manager George Schmidt, of the Vaudette theatre, Atlanta, recently put one over on the "H. C. of Exploitation" when he transferred a whole lobby from an uptown first-run theatre to a down-town second-run house.

The picture in question was "Her Winning Way," and Manager Schmidt figured that those on the down-town side of town who had not seen the picture would like the exploitation just as much as the uptown folks, so he borrowed it.

The lobby consisted merely of half a dozen clever little hand-drawn cards and a "teaser box."

The box was a big square one, with a hole in the top. Inside it was an electric light, which drew attention. On the outside of the box was a sign which read "Beware! Love Germs, extracted from the human heart, and captured by 'Her Winning Way.'" When the curious came up to investigate, and peep through the little hole, they saw a quantity of bugs—little celluloid fish, ducks, and all manner of queer little artificial bugs.

The cards were after this fashion: "Catherine di Medici captured Europe through 'Her Winning Way'." "Cleopatra made a Marc of Antony through 'Her Winning Way'," and so on. Both picture and exploitation took just as well down town as up town, and the fact that the picture was a second run meant nothing—save that the theatre made more money.

Cut-out Lobby Display Arranged Over Marquee

When "The Affairs of Anatol" played at the Colonial theatre, Winona, Wis., Manager L. G. Rosener placed cut-outs of all the stars on the marquee. Leon J. Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer, used the idea originally for the Rivoli theatre, La Crosse. Rosener admits he got the suggestion from trade papers, and in reporting on the stunt to Bamberger he says: "It seems to have worked as well in Winona as in La Crosse."

This lobby display on "Dream Street" was used by the Strand theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Old Idea Adapted to Put Over "Anatol"

The Opera House, East Weymouth, Mass., gave a free ticket to any one who could spell his name from the copy of any of the advertisements appearing in the double-truck tie-up for "The Affairs of Anatol" in the Weymouth Gazette.

It was not permissible to use a letter more than once. Since everybody knows everybody else in East Weymouth, it wasn't possible to change your name to get a ticket. Manager Arthur L. McCrory of the Opera House and John P. McConville, Paramount exploiteer, put this one over.

Horater Host to Clergymen at Toledo

HARVEY C. HORATER, managing director of the Alhambra theatre, Toledo, Ohio, crowded his house to capacity during each performance of the "Over the Hill" run as the result of a clever exploitation idea executed a few days prior to the opening of the picture.

Invitations were sent by Horater to every clergyman, lawyer, teacher and a number of leading society people in the city requesting their presence at a private showing of the production. More than two hundred responded to the invitation, with the result that a large proportion of these leaders in Toledo wrote letters of commendation to the management. Extracts from these letters were used in newspaper and herald advertising and made excellent copy.

In addition to the special showing stunt, Horater plastered the city with posters, windows cards, and general displays. Among the various papers utilized were: 81-24 sheets, 100-16 sheets, 2,000-1 sheets, 500 window cards, 10,000 heralds and 3 window displays.

Card Board Hangers Advertise "Shame" at Newark

An inexpensive but exceedingly effectice stunt was recently executed by the manager of the Terminal theatre in Newark, N. J., in connection with the run of "Shame." Small cards were printed (green cardboard), one side of which bore the following exhortation:

Shame!——if you miss
"Shame."
S—hame drove him from
H—ome and loved wife,
A—laska his goal.
M—omentous events
E—nd in great joy.

And on the other side was the word "Shame."

Several thousand of these cards were printed, and by means of attached strings were hung on the door-knobs of homes throughout the city. The attention the cards demanded was usually great because of the necessity of removing them from their position around the door-knob.

Seattle Blondes Admitted Free at Clemmer Theatre

During the recent engagement of "The Rage of Paris" at the Clemmer theatre in Seattle, Manager William Cutts extensively advertised the fact that Miss DuPont, the star of the production, was judged to be "the most beautiful blonde in America."

In connection with this feature, advertisements were carried in all the Seattle papers to the effect that every blonde lady between the ages of nine and ninety would be admitted to the Clemmer theatre free between the hours of 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. on Tuesday, November 8.

The free show attracted a large number of blonde patrons, and succeeded in establishing Miss DuPont as a Seattle favorite.

Children Compete for Prizes at Cleveland Theatre

C. L. Taylor of the Doan theatre in Cleveland has employed a novel stunt that has proved very successful in increasing his business—a singing contest for children under 12 years of age.

The contest has been pulled betwen the first and second evening shows. Any child under 12 years is eligible and Mr. Taylor says that his greatest difficulty has been to take care of all the kids that want to sing.

They must sing some popular song and are given an accompaniment on the piano. They can bring their own accompanist if they wish.

So far Mr. Taylor has been able to work in about 10 of the youthful soloists each evening.

The prizes which consist of boxes of candy are awarded to the winners who are determined by the amount of applause that each receives.

In addition to the above prizes each contestant is given a small box of Crane's candy. In this way all of the kiddies are made happy and of course the old folks appreciate it.

The only advertising that Mr. Taylor used on this stunt was to circulate handbills announcing the contest, announcing it on the screen and a card board placard bearing the announcement which was placed in front of the theatre.

Managan Originates Prelude

Presentation Number at Allen Theatre, Montreal "Over the Hill" Supplemented by Elaborate

An elaborate and quite remarkable prologue and interlude which were used in connection with the presentation of "Over the Hill" and which attracted city-wide attention was recently staged by Manager Francis A. Managan of the Allen theatre, in Montreal. The arrangements were the most pretentious ever attempted by Managan and evoked considerable enthusiastic comment.

The staging of this feature required a large cast of soloists, dancers, vocalists and a ballet corps. The prologue symbolizes the early youth of a pair of lovers who start on life's most important journey together. The interlude begins after a lapse of twenty years and reveals the same couple in later life, bowed down with the burdens of time. Even the young sapling which marked their early tryst is now the dead trunk of a full grown oak. It is in the interlude that the male of the lovers recites to his mate the famous lines from Carleton's poems upon which "Over the Hill" is based.

The prologue is done in Crinoline with a ballet corps and ensemble. The curtain rises on a Reconciliation Polka, which is followed by a Southern negro dance led by an old-fashioned colored mammy. "Jump Jim Crow" succeeds the dance, and is executed by a soloist and a chorus of males. A mixed duet then follows, with the song "Sweetheart" from "Maytime." The final chorus is joined by the ensemble, who slowly make their exit as the lights are gradually dimmed with the ending of the song. On the stage are left only the two lovers, who are seen seated at the base of a sapling in a flowery garden. On the gold gauze curtain behind the prologue stage is flashed the first title of the picture. The gauze is slowly drawn aside and the picture is on the screen proper.

Existing costumes and conventions characterize the interlude, the scene of which is set in the same garden twenty years afterwards. It is no longer Spring time, but late Autumn, and the same pair of lovers are now seated by the dead trunk of the same tree. The man begins to relate to the woman the lines of Carleton's poem "Over the Hill," during which time an off-stage chorus sings very softly the strains of "Sweetheart." As the man completes his recital the same golden gauze fades the interlude into the second part of the picture.

The transition from stage to picture and picture to stage in each event was so artistically accomplished at the Allen theatre that no break resulted.

Bottom cut shows the first scene of the prelude for "Over the Hill" originated by Manager Mangan of the Allen theatre, Montreal, as explained by the accompanying story. Top cut illustrates the interlude

Grand Rapids Theatre Builds "Old Nest" Lobby

Cut-out pasteboard stars were used by the manager of the Rivoli theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich., as part of his lobby decorations for the showing of "The Old Nest." Printed across each of the six stars which were used were the words "All-Star Cast."

The two largest stars, about fifteen inches from tip to tip, were placed on the upper corners of the frame of enlarged photographs in front of the box-office. Three colored ribbons ran from each of these two stars up to the banner, across the entire lobby front, carrying the title of the photoplay.

Under the title banner were two other banner signs, the one at the left reading, "With an all star cast," and the other, "Story by Rupert Hughes."

Four smaller stars were hung on the banner relating to the all-star cast, each one being connected with a single ribbon to the title banner above it. Half a dozen frames of stills and enlargements were used. The lobby of the Rivoli is small and did not permit of a large display, but it was attractively arranged and aroused much interest.

Weld Tries Out the "Lobby Artist" Idea

Pola Negri, star in "One Arabian Night," received a great deal of publicity during the engagement of her picture at the Waterloo, Iowa, Strand. The manager, Arthur E. Weld, obtained the service of a local artist, H. D. Fairall, who established a studio in front of the theatre and painted an eight-foot portrait of the actress in oil. Upon completion it was placed in a huge shadowbox and displayed to advantage. The management considered the money well invested because the business came and it was stimulated in a classy manner.

McCormick Makes Capital of Local Football Game

G. F. McCORMICK, manager of Saenger's Greenwood theatre, Greenwood, Miss., booked "Two Minutes to Go" for the date of the annual football match between the University of Mississippi and A. and M. C. College, played this year at Greenwood and then proceeded to originate his exploitation to tie up with the event.

The lobby of the house was decorated in the college colors of the two institutions and then Mr. McCormick placed a cut-out of Ray in football togs, clasping a real football in his arms, in a conspicuous position.

A special train brought the visiting team to Greenwood, so McCormick arranged to distribute tags printed in the college colors on the train before it arrived. The same idea was carried out in the interests of the home club. The members of both teams and the coaches received passes for the show by special delivery and these tickets were universally used.

The result of the whole campaign was entirely satisfactory in spite of the fact that the visitors left town at 8 P. M.

A cut accompanying shows some of Mr. McCormick's exploitation.

Kaliska Turns Lobby Into Stage

For a week's run of "Footlights," at the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, Manager Jack Kaliska turned his lobby into a stage, with lights, flowers and everything.

The stage, made of cardboard and compo-board, occupied the space between the box-office and the doorman's domain. It was furnished with eight little "footlights" burning brightly, and shaded so that the light was thrown back on six cut-outs of the star, Elsie Ferguson, in six different costumes, placed so that it seemed six lovely ladies parading the boards.

In the center of the stage was a tiny fountain, playing real water, falling back into a small ivory-colored bowl. A tall floor-lamp, shaded in rose and blue silk stood almost against the box-office, and the light from this fell directly on the little stage.

The "footlights" were shaded in different colors, so that they threw vari-colored lights on the little fountain.

The whole effect was unique as well as beautiful, and not too expensive.

Western Union Aids San Francisco House on "Old Nest"

Recently Roth and Partington of San Francisco played "The Old Nest" at the Imperial theatre and as one of the exploitation aids employed in putting the picture over, tied-up with the Western Union in several different ways.

On leaving the theatre patrons found a special Western Union office in the lobby at which specially prepared messages (reading as follows "Just Saw Picture of Old Nest. Longing for you Mother Dear") were provided if patrons desired them, and facilities for transmitting the telegram.

The tie up was completed by a splendid old nest window at the Western Union Company's main office, which by its prominent location attracted large numbers of people.

Taxi on Beaver Board Masks Strand Lobby

Splendid business was registered on "The Girl in the Taxi" by Arch Bamberger, manager of the Strand Amusement Company's interests, at the Empress theatre, Owensboro, on a two-day engagement, by use of a very attractive lobby mask over the storm front.

A local scenic artist painted a huge taxi on beaver board, with driver in front and girl inside. This mask was put up on Monday before the showing on Wednesday and Thursday. In the morning when the theatre was closed, the doors were closed, showing the advertisement. In the afternoons and nights the doors were opened, letting the crowds through the side of the taxi. It created quite a bit of interest and gave the impression that something better than usual was on inside of the theatre.

Rogers Is Artist as Well as Exploiteer

E. R. Rogers, managing director of the Tivoli and Rialto theatres, Chattànooga, Tenn., besides being a wonder at originating new exploitaion ideas, especially lobby displays, has also qualified as an artist with the paint brush.

The accompanying cut shows a reproduction of a pastel poster for "The Foolish Age" of Mr. Rogers' own making.

The drawing was 54x72 inches and is being used as a "teaser." A contest in which a ten-dollar gold prize is offered for the best answer to the question, "What Is the Foolish Age?" is a feature of the campaign.

The stunt is taking like wildfire and Mr. Rogers expects great results in the way of business for the coming engagement.

Inexpensive Lobby Display Helps Put Over "Little Clown"

Manager Griffin, of the Strand theatre, Carrolton, Ga., built the accompanying circus tent lobby on the "Little Clown." The tent, in two colors, square effect, extended over the sidewalk like a marquee. And he got a lot of extra business by a ballyhoo trailer full of eight clowns, properly dolled up. They did not look like Mary Miles Minter but they made plenty of noise and got the attention.

Stores Deliver "Anatol" Heralds at Glenwood Minn.

More than 1,000 heralds for "The Affairs of Anatol" were delivered by various stores of Glenwood, Minn. These tie-ups were arranged by Manager J. B. McCauley, McCauley Opera House, and Leon J. Bamberger, Paramount exploiteer.

McCauley also gave fifty tickets to be used as prizes for persons selected to have their names buried in a double truck of co-operative ads.

Manager Cutts Features Cut-out in Lobby Display

Manager William Cutts, of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, was responsible for a unique lobby display used during the engagement of "Moonlight Follies."

The focal point of the entire theatre front was a miniature cut-out of Marie Prevost, the star. The figure, enclosed in semi-transparent draperies, with Miss Prevost's measurements attached, was placed directly in front of the box office. Day and night, a concealed spotlight threw a white shaft of light upon the little figure, making it particularly striking against the more somber backgrounds of soft blues and purples that surrounded it.

Cut-outs of owls and scenes from the photoplay were also used to good advantage, as well as written matter emphasizing particularly striking sub-titles.

Kalamazoo Introduced to "Golem" Watch Charms

Small "Golems" that can daggle conveniently from the watch-chain were cast in Kalmazoo, Mich., for "The Golem," playing at the Majestic Gardens. Manager, W. Griffith Mitchell asked Albert Boasberg, Paramount Exploiteer, to duplicate the stunt of Fred Greene's in New York.

Elaborate Ribbon Dressing of Lobbies for "Over the Hill"

Decorations of the double lobby of Gift's theatre, the McMahon and Jackson house of Cincinnati, offered a singular cynosure for picture-going eyes during the recent run of "Over the Hill." The display was part of a publicity campaign and attracted more than its quota of popular comment.

The double lobby is necessitated by the fact that the theatre is featured by two entrances, on different streets—the house being located at a corner. By embellishing both lobbies the attention of the entire neighborhood was facilitated.

From the ceilings were hung a canopy of ribbons. These were of various shapes and colors, and the shades were so arranged as to permit the hues to mingle harmoniously. The transition from one color to another was made beautiful by intermediatory shades.

Hugging the walls and also suspended from the ceilings were hundreds of similar ribbons whose width was greater than that of those in the canopy. These streamers fell almost to the floor, where they were taken up by artificial palms. The palms ranged from two to five feet in height and were stationed close to each other around both lobbies.

Under the marquis of each lobby was placed a large and artistically painted banner announcing the picturization of Will Carleton's poems.

The festive appearance of the two entrances added atmosphere and played a great part in drawing in those who might otherwise have passed by.

Atlanta Scores Tie-up with Howard Theatre

Effective window display tie-ups were secured at Atlanta recently as one of the many exploitation mediums to aid in attracting the fans to the Howard theatre to see "The Three Musketeers."

One consisted of a tie-up with one of the biggest drug stores in Atlanta which put on a sale of the Dumas book, "The Three Musketeers," and the other was with a book store which gave freely of window space, also tying up with the Dumas book as its own attraction. In each case the windows were dressed from floor to ceiling—red, white and blue streamers being festooned from the top. The sides and back of the window space were hung with handsomely hand-colored window cards, while at the bottom "Musketeers" display cards were placed among the book displays of the store.

Another attention attractor used to exploit "The Three Musketeers" consisted of three men in musketeer uniform who paraded the city in the wake of a D'Artagnan who rode through the city astride a dun-colored horse, behind two stalwart negroes who carried a "Three Musketeers" banner.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Frisco Theatre Opens with "Enchantment"

SAN FRANCISCO'S new two-million dollar motion picture palace—the Granada—opened November 17 with "Enchantment," starring Marion Davies as its feature attraction. J. A. Partington, manager of the Granada, telegraphed Cosmopolitan Productions that its subject was chosen in competition with five other super-features. The picture, he said, will run ten days, an exception to his rule of seven-day showings only.

The Sheridan theatre, Seventh and Greenwich avenues, New York City, began a run of "Enchantment" on Sunday, November 13. All the Keith, Moss and Proctor houses in New York have also played this picture.

R-C Pictures to Offer Fred Stone Comedies

Two cowboy comedies of feature length directed by Frank Borzage and starring Fred Stone, the musical comedy comedian, have been acquired by R-C Pictures and scheduled for early release. Mr. Borzage recently leaped into prominence as a screen director by supervising the production of "Humoresque."

The Borzage-Stone subjects which have been acquired by R-C Pictures are "The Duke of Chimney Butte," based on the novel of the same title written by George Washington Ogden, and "Billy Jim," founded on a Western comedy by Jackson Gregory, the author. Both of the pictures reveal the skill of Mr. Borzage, who also played a minor part in "The Duke of Chimney Butte."

Report Booking Rush on "Fightin' Mad"

Metro exchanges throughout the country report that following the first announcements of their distributing the outdoor super-special, "Fightin' Mad," exhibitors have not only sought priority in booking dates, but have arranged for extra supplies of billboard paper and other advertising accessories for the proper exploitation of the feature.

"Fightin' Mad" is a William Desmond production, directed by Joseph J. Franz, under the personal supervision of Robert Brunton. It was photographed by Harry Gersted. The cast includes William Desmond, Rosemary Theby, Virginia Browne Faire, William Lawrence, Joseph J. Dowling and Doris Pawn.

Fox to Abandon Campaign

No Mid-Winter Drive as 90% of Fox Exhibitors Are Now Signed

THE Fox Midwinter Drive has been abandoned for the year 1922, owing to the fact that 90 per cent. of the corporation's exhibitors have already signed contracts for the entire season.

Interesting as is the bare fact, however, the explanation is even more interesting—coming as it does in a year that was approached with much misgiving throughout the picture world because of the "hard times" cry.

In a word, the "hard times" prediction caused the salesmen at every Fox branch office to "get up on their toes" and push business with a vim and energy that have brought results in advance of Thanksgiving Day. The customary March drive, therefore, is rendered unnecessary.

A point worthy of note in this connection is that Fox, instead of reducing output to meet a menacing situation, not only has made and is making and marketing the usual number of photoplays, but has established a new record in special super-productions—an undertaking certainly demanding courage and self-confidence in view of the expenditure involved. Also, the list of Fox stars exceeds in number that of any previous year in the history of the corporation—which runs back to 1913.

The super-productions for the present year already number nine, and those released to date have been received with enthusiastic endorsement by reviewers and public alike. This fact probably has had its effect in creating the extraordinarily advanced status of the Fox general business for the current year.

"Over the Hill," first of the super-productions on the list, was released after a solid year's run at six Broadway theatres. "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," next set the country applauding. "Queen of Sheba," when shown on Broadway, was hailed as the most stupendous spectacle drama ever presented in pictures. Others in this feast of Fox super-productions are "A Virgin Paradise," "Shame," William Farnum in "Perjury," "Thunderclap" (the big racing drama), "Footfalls" and "The Last Trail."

Special Arouses Interest

"Flower of the North" in Big Demand, Reports Vitagraph Exchanges

WITH its release still some time in the future, "Flower of the North" the final Vitagraph special of 1921, gives every indication of being the biggest James Oliver Curwood success ever put out by Vitagraph, announces that company.

The combination of the name of this noted author, whose stories film so well; a capable director, David Smith, who has such masterpieces as "Black Beauty" and "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," another Curwood story, to his credit, and a special cast headed by Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke has convinced exhibitors, it seems, that this is a picture they must have. It is reported that there have been more inquiries on this special than any other put out by the Vitagraph company.

"Flower of the North" has an appeal for exhibitors in all sizes of cities and with all sizes of houses. The final prints were received at every Vitagraph branch last week. The prints were shipped over a period of several weeks, as there were just three less than double the number of prints on this special than on the previous record number. Complete plan books on this special production were mailed to branches a number of days ago as well as all of the extensive exploitation material on it.

"Flower of the North," presents a novelty for a Curwood story in that it does not introduce any Northwest Mounted Police, wild animals or snow and ice scenes. It is romance and melodrama combined in a most delightful manner, with typical Northwest backgrounds of beautiful rivers and mountains. It is mostly an outdoor picture with just enough interiors, especially in Fort o'God, the home of the heroine, to lend additional enchantment.

"The Old Nest" Used for Children's Matinee

George Foster, manager of the Marion theatre at Marion, Ohio, is, it is believed, the first exhibitor who has given a showing of Goldwyn's Rupert Hughes photoplay, "The Old Nest," exclusively for children.

The matinee was given principally as an exploitation stunt for the first showing in Marion of "The Old Nest" but it served to demonstrate the value of this photoplay for children's performanes.

Offer Awards for Best Exploitation Ideas

An opportunity for the enterprising exhibitor to win a monetary reward for his exploitation ideas is offered in an announcement made by Al Lichtman, general manager of Associated Producers, this week. He offers three prizes for the best advertising ideas used in connection with the showing of "The Silent Call," an Associated First National attraction, produced by H. O. Davis.

The first prize will be $150; the second, $100; and the third, $50. The amounts will be paid personally by Mr. Lichtman. He will be one of the three judges who will pass on the ideas, the other two to be appointed within a short time.

November 23 has been selected as national trade show day for "The Silent Call." On that day the production will be given trade showings in every exchange center of the United States and Canada. In case of a tie, each candidate so tied will receive the full award.

Ince Acts as Host to Picture Notables

Thomas H. Ince was host at an invitational preview of his forthcoming special production for release by Associated First National Pictures, "Hail the Woman," at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Los Angeles, last week.

A feature of the presentation was the orchestration by Mischa Guterson, musical director of the Grauman theatre, Los Angeles, who personally led the orchestra of twenty pieces. The guests were enthusiastic in their praise of the picture. The guests included:

Kiesling Heads Realart Coast Publicity

Barrett C. Kiesling, who has been writing publicity for Realart, at the West Coast studios for the past two years, has been appointed head of that branch of the work with T. S. Engler as his assistant, both working under the supervision of L. F. Guimond, director of advertising.

Davison Film Given First Showing

The first Philadelphia showing of "Love, Hate and a Woman," Grace Davison's latest feature, was given Wednesday night, November 16, at the Progress Club. Prior to the screening Miss Davison was hostess to visiting Pennsylvania executives, representatives of trade magazines, and other film men from New York.

"A Paste Board Crown" Being Assembled

Travers Vale has completed "A Paste Board Crown," the final scenes, exteriors having been filmed. He is now busily engaged in cutting and assembling the production, for which he has spared no expense since the beginning. He is now providing the best finishing touches that money can buy, hand lettered sub-titles in addition to descriptive art titles.

It was Thomas Fallon among the best known and cleverest of scenarists, as well as successful playwright, who made the adaptation from Clara Morris' original novel. He states that he had great confidence in the story from the beginning and like the producing executive, Travers Vale, kept it in mind for many years as especially well fitted for the screen.

"Soon after completing the adaptation," said Mr. Fallon, "I called Travers Vale on the telephone. I was eager to know what Messrs. Nathan & Semerad, the managing producers, thought of it. I was content with the praise and the fact that he said everybody vitally concerned was completely satisfied. The greatest compliment he paid my work, however, was the selection of such a splendid cast, which surely will put 'A Paste Board Crown' across as one of the season's best pictures."

Distributing arrangements are under way.

Press Entertained at R-C Studio

About fifty magazines, trade paper and newspaper writers were entertained Friday night by R-C Pictures at the studio, 3 West Sixty-first street, where William Christy Cabanne is making a picture, "At the Stage Door." The guests were invited to witness an actual scene in the making. The set was an interior showing an afternoon society crowd at a big charity bazaar. A number of extras had been employed. The guests saw several scenes shot.

The cast of "At the Stage Door" includes: Billy Dove, Miriam Battista, Elizabeth North, William Collier, Jr., C. Elliott Griffin, Huntley Gordon, Doris Eaton, Frances Hess, Margaret Foster, Myrtle Maughan, Charles Craig, Viva Ogden, Billy Quirk.

Ince Planning Big Drive

"Hail the Woman" Publicity Campaign Will Be Put Under Way

"HAIL the Woman" will be proclaimed in every city and hamlet of the world through the most far-reaching campaign of publicity and exploitation ever undertaken by the publicity staff of the Thomas H. Ince studios, announces the Ince forces. The campaign will be conducted "direct from the studio" through various departments and has been mapped out to arouse the most widespread public interest in the production. The campaign will be supplemented with a broadside from the publicity offices of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., through which the forthcoming Thomas H. Ince special will be distributed.

Built as it is on a theme of American life and dealing with the progress of American womanhood, "Hail the Woman" is certain to create widespread public interest and comment. It has been predicted by Mr. Ince that no picture released in the last year will cause more word-of-mouth advertising than "Hail the Woman," and the problems that it attacks will stir wide comment by the public press.

There is little jazz in the campaign as outlined and under way. The picture's deep human problems and stirring dramatic situations lend themselves to a different sort of campaign. Every phase of the campaign has been built to cause constructive interest in the picture among all classes of people and create a desire to see the production itself.

One phase of the campaign is designed to create editorial comment by big newspapers, another is sure to get space in the women's pages of the press, another appeals to the editors of magazines and magazine editors of newspapers.

In addition to the various angles of newspaper publicity which the picture will receive, the Ince studios will conduct a campaign aimed directly to interest the leading club women, educators and civic leaders in every community of the country in the forthcoming release.

Goldwyn Offers "Sin Flood"

Gripping Drama, Former Stage Success, to Be Completed Soon

ONE of the greatest productions among Goldwyn's coming releases is "The Sin Flood," adapted by J. G. Hawks from "Syndafloden," a story of a Mississippi River flood by the Swedish dramatist Henning Berger. This play has won its way on its merits as one of the big dramatic successes of the now century. It created a sensation in all of the countries of Europe. An adaptation of this play was produced in New York by Arthur Hopkins in 1917 under the name of "The Deluge."

"Syndafloden" lent itself admirably to screen treatment and Goldwyn is convinced that it has in this photoplay, which is in the final stages of titling and editing, one of the greatest pictures it has ever made both from an artistic and from a human interest story point of view. It is said to be gripping drama told in terms of human nature—to turn a powerful spotlight on the naked souls of men in the presence of what they believe is certain death.

Frank Lloyd directed "The Sin Flood" and has made of it a picture surpassing in power and human insight "Madame X," which last year scored for Goldwyn one of the biggest artistic and financial successes of the year.

Goldwyn has assembled to interpret the different roles in "The Sin Flood" a cast that surpasses in even excellence the very remarkable cast which interpreted its other master picture, "The Old Nest."

Helene Chadwick is cast for the part of a chorus girl, in love with Billy Bear, broker's clerk who has deserted her for the daughter of the cotton broker who took him into partnership. Richard Dix is a broker's clerk. Ralph Lewis and John Steppling are enemies on the cotton exchange. James Kirkwood is a street preacher, a victim of a taste for alcohol, driven out of his pulpit and robbed of his wife by a crooked lawyer, attorney for the construction company which erected a faulty levee.

Others in the cast are Howard Davies, Will Walling, William Orlamond, Darwin Karr, Otto Hoffman and L. H. King.

Cosmopolitan Has New Fannie Hurst Story

Following closely upon the award of the "Photoplay" Gold Medal to Cosmopolitan Productions for "Humoresque," adjudged the best photoplay of 1920, the company will release through Paramount another East Side story from the pen of Fannie Hurst. This is "Just Around the Corner," which will have a Broadway run in a few weeks.

"Just Around the Corner" was directed by Frances Marion, who also wrote the scenario. Miss Marion likewise wrote the scenario of "Humoresque," which was directed by Frank Borzage. The story originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title of "Superman." With several other of Miss Hurst's earlier stories it was included in her first book of short stories, the collection bearing the name "Just Around the Corner."

In the cast are Margaret Seddon, Lewis Sargent, Sigrid Holmquist, Fred C. Thomson, and Edward Phillips.

Maurice (Lefty) Flynn, new Fox star, in his initial picture for the Fox program, "Bucking the Line"

Motion Pictures Boost "Children's Book Week"

Theatre-owners of Los Angeles are planning to make "Children's Book Week" from November 13 to 19, a great success. Schools, libraries and book stores all over Southern California will cooperate with Los Angeles film exchanges and theatres in providing in film form for the children of the Sunny Southland the stories they have read in books.

Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has prepared a list of pictures for theatres to pick from our Children's Week—pictures for children from 9 to 90. The grown-ups will like the pictures as well as the kiddies. The following are a few pictures for the children: "The Idle Class," "The Kid," "Peck's Bad Boy," "Daddy Long-Legs," "The Hoodlum," "The Playhouse," The Old Swimming Hole," "Peaceful Valley," "The Jack-Knife Man," "Bill Apperson's Boy," "Dinty," "Bob Hampton of Placer" and "The Sky Pilot."

"Breaking Through" is Nearing Completion

Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald, co-stars in the Vitagraph serial, "Breaking Through," have almost completed their work before the camera on this serial. Robert Ensminger, the director, is now on the home stretch, and has saved two of the biggest melodramatic "punches" for the very last.

This, in fact, is characteristic of the entire serial. The opening episodes planted a logical story, but the thrills and throbs have been served in crescendo until the serial's middle episodes have reached intense crashing climaxes. Many exhibitors have written the Vitagraph Company commending it for handling a serial so deftly in times such as these, injecting red blood and life into it and yet not adding to its vigor so much as to make it leap over censorable bounds.

"Breaking Through," it is reported, is attracting a following frequently not given to serials, as its co-star, Carmel Myers and Wallace MacDonald have appeared prominently in feature productions.

Wid Gunning Enlarges Sales Forces

WITH the return of John C. Rohlfs, Assistant Treasurer of the Wid Gunning organization, from a trip around the exchange circle, there comes news of considerable activity and enlargement of the sales force at that company.

Joseph L. Steiner, home office representative, has been sent to Detroit. William M. Meyers, an exploitation and sales representative, is another addition to the Detroit office. Manager Whitmoyer, of the Minneapolis office, is now in Chicago conferring with Division Manager, Sidney J. Goldman, and elaborate plans are being caried out for increased activity and enlarged sales force in the Minneapolis territory.

W. J. Naismith, well-known in the Pittsburgh territory through his former connection with Real Art is now in charge of the Wid Gunning branch in that city. In the Buffalo territory plans are also under way for redoubled activity. It is expected that within the next three days Harold Beecroft, now associated with the Home Office Exploitation Organization, will be located in Buffalo.

Neal Hart Company on Location

Neal Hart heads a company of players which is spending several weeks on location at Gloversville, New York. Many scenes are being taken in and around Canada Lake, one of the beauty spots of the Adirondacks, the setting being peculiarly adapted to the demands of the script Hart is making. The story is of rugged, out of door theme of the sort the star has become noted for. Violet Palmer plays opposite Hart.

Kansas City Winner in R-C Sales Drive

TO Roy Churchill, manager of R-C Pictures' Kansas City Branch, goes first prize in the competition recently inaugurated by Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution, for the largest amount of film earnings during the months of September and October.

Mr. Churchill and his sales force covered the Kansas City territory with the most gratifying results, according to Mr. Rogers, and R-C Pictures had a splendid representation in many of the most important first run theatres.

The Boston office ran second in the contest and San Francisco third with the other branches showing very encouraging records. E. L. M'Evoy is manager of the Boston exchange and C. D. Beale is in charge at San Francisco.

Pathe News Does Speedy Work

OF all the many remarkable feats accomplished by the Pathe News during recent years, none equals the speed with which its pictorial story of the burial of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, Va., was sent broadcast throughout the country. Weeks of preparation were behind the blanketing of the nation in record breaking time with the Pathe News special issued first in New York at 7:20 o'clock on the night of the inspiring tribute of America to its dead heroes Nov. 11th. This was virtually two hours faster than the time Pathe News recorded in scooping the field on President Harding's inaugural.

As a matter of fact, theatres in Jersey City had the special before seven o'clock, for they had messengers waiting for the first prints "off the press."

Little more than five hours after taps had blown over the Unknown's grave at Arlington at 1:30 P. M. Pathe service had its news special on the way to every first run house on Broadway. All of them showed it that night. Leading Brooklyn houses had it by 8:00 o'clock.

Within twenty-four hours after the services, special messengers had the pictures in Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Boston—in fact all through New England, Albany, Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore.

At nine o'clock Saturday morning, three mail aeroplanes leaving Hazelhurst Field, L. I., carried five hundred pounds of Pathe News film—more than 150 prints—for Cleveland, Chicago, and points as far West as San Francisco.

It was planned to have the pictures in Cleveland at 1 o'clock that afternoon and at four o'clock in Chicago. This would have brought them to San Francisco about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon—just three days after the burial.

Shortly after passing Philadelphia, all three planes encountered a severe snow storm, were driven far off their course, and finally were forced to land at Harrisburgh. This upset the plans somewhat but the sacks were transferred to a fast train, for Cleveland and Chicago and arrived there in time for Sunday's opening performances.

Armistice Day Views Reach Big Cities in Fast Time

Deliveries should have been made in San Francisco Tuesday afternoon.

The elements divided their fortunes with Pathe News. They gave Editor Emanuel Cohen and his staff a very good break on Armistice Day. The two Curtis aeroplanes engaged by Mr. Cohen to carry negatives from Washington and Arlington to the Jersey City laboratory of Pathe News, were enabled to beat their time schedule because of favorable weather and wind conditions. As every minute counted, this brought the Pathe film to Broadway even earlier than anticipated.

Mr. Cohen sent his first machine away from Bolling Field, Washington, at ten o'clock on Armistice Day morning following the parade through the Capitol streets. His second machine was sent from Arlington at 1:45 P. M., exactly fifteen minutes after taps signalized that the Unknown hero had been laid to rest. A full hour was gained in this way, for by sending a machine from Arlington, the traffic jam on the return route to Washington was avoided.

Current Paramount Issues

"The Bonnie Brier Bush" and "The Sheik" Scheduled for November 20

THE two pictures scheduled for release my Paramount November 20 are as radically different in type as could be imagined. They are Donald Crisp's production of the quaint Scotch romance, "The Bonnie Brier Bush," and Georgs Melford's production of Edith M. Hull's novel of love mid the sands of the Sahara, "The Sheik."

The Donald Crisp picturization, which was made in the London studio and at the original locations of the story in Scotland, is an adaptation based upon both the McArthur and the Thomas plays. Margaret Turnbull wrote the scenario and Donald Crisp not only directed the production but plays the leading role.

Mary Glynne plays the part of Flora and Alec Fraser that of Lord Hay. There is an abundance of quaint Scotch types, and the highland scenery forms an the exquisite background.

"The Sheik," which George Melford produced in California with Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino in the featured roles, is said to be probably the most colorful production that Paramount ever released. Wonderful shots representing the desert of Sahara are declared to be so realistic that spectators can scarcely believe that they were not made in Northern Africa.

Rudolph Valentino plays the part of the Sheik, the caveman hero, while Miss Ayres is seen in the role of Diana Mayo, who is abducted by this tribal leader and grows to love him. There is a desert sand storm said to be teeming with realism and beautiful shots depicting the city of Biskra, the Monte Carlo of the desert.

Adolph Menjou, Lucien Littlefield, George Wagner, Ruth Miller, F. R. Butler, Margaret Loomis and Fontaine LaRue complete the cast. Monte M. Katterjohn was responsible for the scenario, and William Marshall was the cameraman.

Two scenes from the fifth episode of "White Eagle," the Pathe serial in which Ruth Roland is starred

Columbus, O., Audience Greet "Fauntleroy"

Capacity audiences at the James theatre, Columbus, Ohio, are greeting Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," her latest United Artists release, at every showing of this picture. Columbus newspaper critics were enthusiastic in their praise of the production.

"It is one of the most perfect photoplays ever produced," said the reviewer for the Columbus Dispatch. "The summit of achievement is reached, both in our Mary's art, and in the details of photography and interior scenes."

"The scenes were all impressive and effective," says the critic for the Ohio State Journal. "You enjoy the picture because you enjoy Mary Pickford and like her for her own ways, mannerisms—her beauty and her sweetness."

Mermaid Comedy Titled "The Bally-Ho"

"The Bally-ho" is announced as the working title of the latest all-star Mermaid Comedy which Jack White is making for Educational. The picture, which is built around a circus, is in the final stages of production at Hollywood.

Lige Conley is featured, with many other popular comedians in the cast.

A scene from the picturization of Rupert Hughes' story, "From the Ground Up," in which Tom Moore is starred. It is a Goldwyn release

"Cameron of the Mounted" Scheduled for Release by Hodkinson

ONE of the outstanding features of the production "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," which is scheduled for release by W. W. Hodkinson late in December, is what is claimed to be the first authentic appearance in any motion picture of members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. In various previous productions of the Canadian Northwest, in which the mounted police have been featured, the parts have invariably been filled by members of the producing companies and extras who have been engaged on location.

When work was started on the filming of "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" in the Fort MacLeod district of Northwestern Canada, Ralph Connor, the author, and Henry MacRae, the director, exerted their influence with the authorities of Fort MacLeod with the result that for the first time in the history of the organization, members of the Royal Mounted were given official permission to accept parts in the story.

As a result of the waiving of restrictions on the personnel of the Mounted Police, audiences will behold for the first time in a feature picture the work of these fearless, scarlet-coated riders of the North. The Commissioner of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police at Fort MacLeod, who is seen leading his men in the stirring fight scenes between the Indians and the Mounted Police, has been in this branch of the service since the early days of the Louis Riel rebellion. During those trying times the Commissioner and a small body of men held in check the threatened uprising of the Blackfeet, Stony and Cree Indians.

George Walsh in Serial

To Co-Star With Eileen Sedgwick in Forthcoming Universal Serial

GEORGE WALSH, famous athletic star, has been specially engaged by Carl Laemmle to co-star with Eileen Sedgwick in "With Stanley in Africa," a new Universal serial which is just starting at Universal City.

So successful has "Winners of the West" been that Universal has planned several more serials of a like semi-historical adventure character. The latest to be put into production at Universal City is "With Stanley in Africa." This continued feature will be in eighteen episodes and will of course, deal with the remarkable and desperate expedition headed by Henry M. Stanley sent into Africa by James Gordon Bennett to find Dr. Livingstone.

Universal has been quietly preparing for several months by research work and the reconstruction of the appliances and accoutrements of this bygone day to put the story on the screen, with all the authority that is possible. Like "Winners of the West," the film characters will enact a story within a story. All the actual characters will be introduced but liberties cannot be taken with these characters or with their actions. The close up story will have to do with characters whose action the author of the serial can manipulate to conform to the requirements of serial usage as set by "Winners of the West." This story won a tremendous reputation by not being a serial at all. It has set a new standard by which Universal serials of the future will be cut and measured.

Exploitation Parley Held

"U" Experts Confer With U. B. O. on Presentation of "Conflict"

AN innovation in the presentation of super-pictures through exhibitor chains was worked out last week by representatives of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and the United Booking Offices, following the booking of "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel, over the U. B. O. circuit.

Upon the signing of the contract, which calls for 120 days run of the Dean picture, B. S. Moss, high official of the U. B. O. and Harry M. Berman, general sales manager for Universal, planned ways and means to assure every U. B. O. house manager complete instructions and cooperation in putting over "Conflict."

Accordingly, a general conference was called at U. B. O. headquarters, last Thursday, which was attended by each of the half-a-hundred managers of the U. B. O. circuit. This circuit includes the B. S. Moss and the B. F. Keith and the F. F. Proctor house in and around New York City.

Every possible angle in the presentation of the picture was taken up and discussed. Samples of all posters, lobby displays, heralds, throwaways, window cards, and press material were exhibited and their usage diagnosed.

Mr. Moss explained to the assembled exhibitor-managers that, hereafter, when the U. B. O. books a big picture for a long run, a similar conference will be held in connection with the producers and distributors, such as was then inaugurated with "Conflict." He promised a bonus of $700 to the U. B. O. manager who gets the best results with the Dean picture. This manager will be selected for his cleverness in exploiting the film, as much as for his box office figures.

"Conflict" will be shown in the U. B. O. houses beginning the last week in November. It is expected that it will be held in the Central theatre, where it is having an unusually successful run, until a few days prior to its appearance in the Moss, Keith and Proctor houses.

"Penrod" to be Ready Soon

Wesley Barry, With Neilan Directing, Is Nearing Completion

MARSHALL NEILAN'S picturization of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" with Wesley Barry in the titular role is now nearing completion at the Hollywood studios and will be delivered to Associated First National Pictures for distribution within the next month.

Backed by seven years of popularity with the American public, this subject is the most prominently known story ever screened by Mr. Neilan. Because of the national popularity of the story plus that of Marshall Neilan, Wesley Barry and others connected with the production of the picture, it is readily apparent that "Penrod" should prove the biggest box-office attraction yet offered by the Neilan organization.

Booth Tarkington in 1914, assigned the publication of his book to Doubleday Page Company. Being a typical American story of typical American boyhood, the story took hold of the public immediately with the result that it enjoyed a remarkable sale. Before very long the circulation of the book passed the half million copy mark.

In 1917, the newspaper syndicate rights were awarded to the Wheeler Syndicate who published the story in weekly installments in twenty-one cities throughout the country. These newspapers were big-city publications with circulation in all the nearby communities, thus reaching readers in practically every town in the country.

The sensational success of the book was duplicated with the stage presentation and after a record run at two Broadway theatres, the play was taken on tour. Over 347 performances were accorded the play in 31 cities throughout the country, including every "key city" in the motion picture business.

New Fannie Ward Picture

Joan Film Sales to Release "The Hardest Way" Within Thirty Days

WORD comes from the offices of the Joan Film Sales Corporation of the early release of the second Fannie Ward picture, "The Hardest Way," a five-reel production that constitutes one of the last cinema dramas in which this star has appeared.

The story, a gripping problem play, comes from the pen of the French author and dramatist Henry Kistemaecker and is heralded as one of the best he has written in a period covering many years.

A cast of capable players enact this drama in a virile and convincing manner. The cast includes several well known Continental stars among whom are M. Signoret, while others in the cast are M. Regnard, Howard Stanton, Rex McDougal and others.

The picture was shown some time ago in a private exhibition and those who saw it were loud in their praise of Miss Ward's remarkable emotional acting said to be by far the best work of her long and varied stage and screen career. No exhibitor in America can forget Miss Fannie Ward in her big success "Common Clay," also in such other box office sensations as "The Yellow Ticket," "Innocence," "The Cheat," and "She Played and Paid," the latter being the first of the Joan releases.

Julius Stern 2nd Vice-President of "U"

Julius Stern, president of Century Film Corp., recently appointed second vice-president of Universal

ANNOUNCEMENT is made from the offices of Century Comedies that Julius Stern, who has just been made second vice-president of Universal Film, is now working on a series of comedies especially adaptable for juvenile showings.

Some of these featuring Baby Peggy have already been shown at first-run houses.

The announcement of the new series comes simultaneously with that of Mr. Stern's appointment to the second vice-presidency of Universal Film. In addition to this office, Mr. Stern serves as president of Century Film Corporation, of Pacific Film Co., and of the Great Western. Mr. Stern was also responsible for the organization of the LKO comedies which he conducted for a couple of years until becoming the head of Century Film Corporation.

New Mermaids Praised by Coast Exhibitors

Unanimous praise has been given by well known exhibitors of the West Coast for the first two of the new Mermaid Comedies released by Educational, "Robinson Crusoe Ltd." and "The Vagrant," in which Lloyd "Ham" Hamilton is featured, announces that company.

Among the coast showmen who have issued statements commending these two pictures are Sol Lesser of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., Los Angeles; Leslie J. Swope, manager of the Hollywood theatre, Hollywood; Manager Newberry of the Alhambra, Los Angeles; Manager Young of the Apollo, Hollywood, and many others.

Hy Mayer Subject in Capitol Theatre

Hy Mayer, whose "Travelaugh," "Mon Petit Paris," is presented by S. L. Rothafel as a feature of the Armistice Week program at the Capitol theatre, New York, has the record of thirty years of travel without the aid of a Baedaker. Mr. Mayer recently returned to America after his twenty-fourth trip abroad.

"What Do Men Want" Starts Run

Gunning Organization Exploits Feature in New York

AFTER the spectacular opening at the Lyric theatre on Sunday of "What Do Men Want," the Wid Gunning organization reports that both exhibitors and fans are in agreement on the fact that Lois Weber had added another clean-up picture to her long list of successes. "What Do Men Want" now takes rank with such well-remembered box office wonders as "The Price of a Good Time," "Hypocrites," "Shoes," "Where are My Children," "Jewel."

Following "The Three Musketeers," at the Lyric theatre, the Wid Gunning special opened to record breaking houses at the Lyric Sunday afternoon and the impetus of Lois Weber's name and the unusual title carried the feature forward into packed houses on Monday despite a drizzling rain that fell throughout the day.

The unusual advantages of the title "What Do Men Want" were taken full advantage of in the advertising campaign preceding the big opening and the majority of material used is of the sort that can be adapted to any community in the country. Tasty window cards in various sizes selling the title of the picture resulted in unusual displays along Broadway, the hardest thoroughfare in the world to use for advertising purposes. Close to 100 haberdashers and stores of allied interest had cards concerning "What Do Men Want" displayed prominently in their windows while several right in the neighborhood of 42nd street and Broadway, the center of the world, created entire window displays built around the title "What Do Men Want." The small window card which formed the center of these displays will be available at all Wid Gunning offices and it is expected that they will prove among the most popular exhibitor's ads ever provided for a big special. An attractive two color window sticker selling the title "What Do Men Want" is Lois Weber's picture together with an invitation "Walk in, We Have It" found a place in the doors of hundreds of stores throughout the city. The stickers are enthusiastically taken by the storekeepers because of their direct advertising value.

Another advertising ad that did valuable service in connection with the window cards and window stickers was a counter cut-out also selling "What Do Men Want," which made a neat appearance on the various counters and display cases in men's stores.

The Wid Gunning organization, which is already becoming known as one that does not do things "the way the other fellow does it," established a precedent in opening "What Do Men Want" by opening the doors to the general public at the very outset. Instead of the usual invitation performance in the evening, the Wid Gunning staff decided that their production needed no "stage" send-off and played it just as any first run theatre would have to. The doors were scheduled to open at 2:00 o'clock but long before that time the crowd that had gathered in the lobby made it necessary to start things going and the capacity business that continued throughout the day was all cash business.

The reviewers of the New York dailies were quick to grasp the message of Lois Weber's latest special and its appeal to the women who make up the bulk of motion picture patrons.

Exhibitors Welcome "Disraeli"

Sweeping Success Indicated by Recent Letters Received

FROM all sections comes praise from the exhibitor for George Arliss' film production, "Disraeli," a United Artists release. Henry M. Hobart, president of Distinctive Productions, Inc., producers of the George Arliss photoplays, announces the receipt of many letters from exhibitors which clearly indicate that the sweeping success of "Disraeli" in the big first run houses is being duplicated in the smaller theatres. Some of the letters follow:

"I consider 'Disraeli,' as produced by you, with George Arliss in the role he made so famous on the stage, to be one of the superlative achievements in the art of motion picture production. I do not believe Mr. Arliss' acting before the camera has been equalled in fineness or power by any actor, and the beauty of the production splendidly supports his masterful portrayal of the Prime Minister. The patrons were delighted with the picture, and it was a keen pleasure to stand in the lobby and hear them praise the picture as they left."—Irwin Wheeler, the Auditorium, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

"Comments received on the 'Disraeli' production were more complimentary than on any one play that I have presented in the last year."—T. L. Little, proprietor and manager, Majestic Theatre, Camden, So. Car.

"'Disraeli' is in a class by itself. Shown here last month, under unfavorable conditions on account of the closing of the summer season, this picture and star drew many persons who ordinarily never attend the theatre. The praise by those, and my many regular patrons, of the wonderful acting by George Arliss, and the beauty of this most gorgeous production, was most gratifying. I can only repeat that 'Disraeli' is in a class by itself."—Sam E. Bleyer, Garden Theatre, Southampton, L. Is.

"We presented 'Disraeli' at the Plaza Theatre, and it is a pleasure to say that the production gave complete satisfaction from every angle. It is a production that reflects credit on the producer as well as the theatre presenting it!"—Leo Brecher, Plaza theatre, Madison avenue and 59th street, New York City.

"'Disraeli' was very well received here and enjoyed by all with whom I came in contact, or from whom I heard indirectly."—D. J. Shepherd, managing director, Paramount Theatre, Newark, N. J.

"I consider 'Disraeli' a most delightful picture, and wonderfully well done, with Mr. Arliss at his best. Played it three days to very satisfactory business. The comments from my patrons were very flattering. Since my showing have recommended it to several other exhibitors."—W. W. Young, Ridgewood Playhouse Company, Ridgewood, N. J.

"The George Arliss production 'Disraeli' is certainly a fine production and drew a crowded house. It was the best picture for acting we have shown for a long time. Several who saw the picture said it went far beyond their expectations."—F. W. Marshall, York Village Fire Department, York Village, Maine.

"The staging of 'Disraeli' is very good; the acting is superb; the story is good; and it is an all around good feature."—H. B. Lepkowitz, Fox's Folly theatre, Debevoise street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Of all the big productions played at this theatre no picture received so much praise as 'Disraeli.' Everyone voiced the same opinion—that it was the best picture ever witnessed both from the point of acting, which was remarkable, and for the story, which was perfectly directed. More pictures like 'Disraeli' would be of great benefit to the industry."—Benjamin Apple, American theatre, Troy, N. Y.

"The Sheik" Plays to Record Attendance

A TOTAL of 112,625 people saw George Melford's production, "The Sheik," at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres last week when the picture had its premiere simultaneously at those two houses, according to a statement from the Paramount office.

This beats the paid attendance for both houses for a single production, held by Cecil B. DeMille's "The Affairs of Anatol," by 14,912. The record for a single week at the Rivoli is held by "Deception"—54,254. The paid attendance at the Rivoli for "The Sheik" was 52,721. "The Affairs of Anatol" held the record for the Rialto—53,829. "The Sheik" broke that record by more than six thousand, playing to 59,904.

Lloyd Has Five Weeks' Run

All Short Subject Program in Los Angeles Registers Big Success

HARDLY more than six months ago, an exhibitor in a big town building his program of nothing but short subjects would have been considered committing box office suicide. Then Samuel L. Rothafel of the Capitol Theatre, New York City, staged a bill composed entirely of short features with a Harold Lloyd comedy headlining.

Soon other exhibitors tried the experiment and found it profitable. Now it's a matter of fact policy among big exhibitors to show short subjects programs.

But from Los Angeles comes a story of the remarkable drawing power of these one, two and three reel subjects never before dreamed of by the industry. The Symphony Theatre, five weeks ago, started playing Harold Lloyd in "Never Weaken" and a program completed by Pathe short subjects.

On November 6th, the Symphony started its fifth big week with "Never Weaken" still headlining, and with Pathe short subjects completing the remainder of the entertainment. On the bill appeared the Pathe Review, Aesop's Fables, "The Mountain Lion," one of the "Bill and Bob" series; and the Holman Day two reeler, "Brother to the Bear."

This program stopped being an experiment the first night it was shown five weeks ago. The Symphony has never done the business with any feature that has been brought to the box office by its short subjects program, state Pathe.

Only the regular advertising appropriation was used by the Symphony in promoting this bill, which in itself is a strong indication of box office.

Ingram Picture Goes Big

37 Loew Houses Do Record Business with "Conquering Power"

THE thirty-seven Loew motion picture theatres in Greater New York did, in the aggregate, the biggest business in their history last week by the simultaneous showing of "The Conquering Power," the Rex Ingram production for Metro that succeeded "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," announces Metro.

"The success of the picture in the big test of its box office power at the Loew theatres bears out Rex Ingram's contention that the public has been educated in motion pictures far beyond photoplays that are simply sensational," claims Metro. "The story, adapted by June Mathis from the Balzac masterpiece, 'Eugenic Grandet,' is essentially different from that of the average run of pictures. It does not rely for its effect upon trick situations and manufactured thrills, but strikes a deep human note of universal appeal. The quick-action power of the intensely dramatic tale has proved as effective as The Four Horsemen in drawing the crowds.

"The general release of "The Conquering Power" was apparently awaited by motion picture goers with intense eagerness since its fame began to spread after the two weeks of the pre-release showing in the summer. At that time, two of the hottest weeks of the year, it drew crowded houses at every performance. It was then withdrawn for general release in the cool weather."

The cast, all of whom were praised by the press critics includes Alice Terry, Rudolph Valentino, Charles Brandet, and Ralph Lewis.

Lauds "Our Mutual Friend"

Los Angeles Press Praises Faithful Adaption of Dickens' Novel

WHAT is considered by the Wid Gunning organization one of the most unusual appreciations ever given a motion picture adaptation from a novel appeared in a recent issue of the Los Angeles Times. Frederic North Shorey, feature writer for this paper, in writing about the forthcoming Wid Gunning special, "Our Mutual Friend," devoted nearly a column of space to the subject. The picture played a special engagement at Clunes Broadway and the regular reviews which have already appeared in print are also uniformly enthusiastic.

Mr. Shorey, in his special article, declared:

"Silas Wegg and his 'weal and hammers,' Noddy Boffin, the Golden Dustman with his suddenly acquired fortune, and beautiful and capricious Bella Wilfer are living again at Clune's Broadway this week. Those lovers of Dickens who have not seen Mary Carter, one of the most beautiful of blondes in motion pictures, in her portrayal of the daughter of patient "Rumty" Wilfer, have missed a treat and a rare one, for seldom is it possible to see a literary classic so faithfully reproduced on the screen as is done in 'Our Mutual Friend,' Dickens' last completed novel.

"It was with some misgivings that I ventured forth to see what had been done with 'Our Mutual Friend.' Expecting the worst, in that Dickens' works seems less adapted to scenario writer's art than the works of any other author, and particularly this selection, I viewed with inexpressible surprise and delight the opening scene when the rough and uncouth Gaffer Hexam in his dingy boat, is seen moving along the Thames, rowed by his handsome daughter, with its grewsome 'luck' in tow.

"From the opening picture depicting the finding of the body of the supposed John Harmon, to the finale, when Bella Wilfer awakens to the fact that she has married the heir to the Harmon Millions, the scenes are those of Dickens, the atmosphere is Dickens, the plot is that of the greatest fiction writer of the last century.

"Whoever adapted it to the screen did a complete job; whoever selected the players succeeded in imparting to them the inspiration of the creator of the quaint characters, villains, heroines, heroes and lay figures of the book."

May McAvoy Completes Another for Realart

The fourth Realart-McAvoy picture of the current season has been completed under the direction of William D. Taylor. There is a surprise in store for the many devotees of this newest star, Realart announces, for instead of her own brown tresses, Miss McAvoy dons a very blonde wig.

Cosmopolitan Film in Demand

Extra "Wallingford" Prints Made to Meet Call

A STATEMENT from the headquarters of Cosmopolitan Productions declares that unusual interest has been roused by its preliminary announcements concerning its new production, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and that in anticipation of the heavy demand for this subject, as indicated in the streams of inquiries being received relative to bookings, a large number of prints of this picture have been prepared and sent to the exchanges of Famous Players-Lasky. "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is considered by Cosmopolitan Productions and Famous Players such an important release that the production will be handled by the distributing organization much as "The Affairs of Anatol" was handled.

"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" is built upon success, declares Cosmopolitan. It is based on some of the famous Wallingford stories and the popular stage play by George M. Cohan. Adapted to the screen by Luther Reed, the picture was directed by Frank Borzage who directed that great success "Humoresque." Borzage, won through "Humoresque," a reputation for a keen insight into human nature, a sympathetic understanding of the heart and a fine grasp of genuine sentiment. All these qualities are revealed vividly in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," it is said, which aside from its humor, its tender love story and its drama, is a revelation of what can be done on the screen in the way of interpreting character.

The unique settings in this production were built under the direction of Joseph Urban, one of the world's greatest artists. Mr. Urban came to this country from Europe, already equipped with an international reputation. When he was twenty-three years old he decorated and furnished the Abdin Palace in Cairo for the Khedive of Egypt. He designed castles and villas for many European noblemen and won medals for bridges, buildings and other architectural work. From 1904 to 1912 he created stage settings in Europe and then he came to America to direct the artistic work of the Boston Opera House. Mr. Urban has also designed many settings for the Ziegfeld "Follies" and for the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

Chester Lyons is responsible for the fine camera work in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." He is one of the pioneer cinematographers, having been associated with Reliance, Eclair, Ince and Charles Ray.

Sam Hardy, well known on the musical stage, was engaged to play "J. Rufus Wallingford." He imparts to that character all of the breeziness, glibness and persuasiveness for which Wallingford stands. Norman Kerry proves an ideal partner for Wallingford. Suave, well-groomed, the pink of propriety, is his "Blackie" Daw. Mr. Kerry has appeared in many pictures, his latest before "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" being "Buried Treasure."

For the role of Fannie Jasper, Wallingford's sweetheart, the appealing and winsome Doris Kenyon was engaged. Billie Dove, a lovely brunette, is seen as Dorothy Wells to whom "Blackie" Daw loses his heart. Miss Dove, a New York girl, is a former Ziegfeld "Follies" belle. Diana Allen, blonde daughter of the snows, was selected for the part of Gertrude Dempsey.

Others in the large cast include William T. Hays, Horace James, John Woodford, Mac M. Barnes, William Robyns, Eugene Keith and William Carr.

Cabanne Special Titled "At the Stage Door"

Director William Christie Cabanne is rushing work on the final scenes of his next Robertson-Cole release at the West Sixty-First street studio. The story, which was written as well as directed by Mr. Cabanne, was originally called "Women of Conquest" as a working title, but has now been finally named "At The Stage Door"

To create the picture, several big sets were used at the studio, and to get the real theatre effect the entire company moved over to the Park theatre for a few days and nights, where several important scenes were "shot," including one scene with 600 "extras" as the audience. At least three scenes were staged outside the stage door, and Lillian (Billie) Dove, of "Sally" and Ziegfeld Follies fame, has the role of the dancer, who plays the leading role.

Only a few more important scenes remain to be "shot" before the film is turned over to the cutting and titling room.

Abel Gance to Produce Six Pictures

Abel Gance announces that he will produce six pictures, all of which will receive international distribution. They are "Christopher Colombus," "The Hunchback of Paris," "Paul Feval," "Ecce Homo," "The End of the World," and "The Eiffel Tower."

Just at present Mr. Gance is devoting all his time to the cutting and titling of a picture tentatively titled "The Wheel," which he intends bringing to America sometime in December.

"Topics" Presents "The Cycle of the Dollar"

"The Cycle of the Dollar," an animated cartoon presented by "Topics of the Day" Films, is considered by its producers as one of the strongest stimuli yet given to the solution of the unemployment problem. As the dollar is the basic element of exchange which facilities the operation of our daily living, as well as our business, it is a well chosen vehicle to personify in this timely cartoon film. In the "Topics of the Day" Films offering the cause of this present stagnation of trade and consequent unemployment is attributed to the inactivity of the dollar.

Fox News Claims Beat on Armistice Pictures

THAT Fox News again lived up to its slogan, "Mightiest of all" by securing a sensational scoop against its competitors, is the claim of the Fox organization. It is stated that New York theatre audiences were enabled to view the ceremonies in honor of the Unknown Soldier, at Arlington Cemetery, Va., less than six hours after the services actually were held. The Fox News reel containing scenes at Washington preceding the burial of the Unknown soldier hero at Arlington Cemetery was delivered to the Rialto theatre in New York at 9:20 P. M., and at the Capitol theatre just two minutes later.

Two directors and eight cameramen, under the direction of S. H. McKean, an assistant to Don Hancock, editor-in-chief of the Fox News, were on hand in and about Washington. Two speedy airplanes, including the Fox plane, and a battery of automobiles were instrumental in transporting the film from Washington to the developing laboratory in New York.

Third Talmadge Revival Ready at Select

The third of the Constance Talmadge revivals by the Select Pictures Corporation is scheduled for release November 20. The production is "A Pair of Silk Stockings," which will be recalled as having created a mild furore when originally screened some time ago. The picture is Selznick's version of the famous Cyril Harcourt stage success scenarioized by Edith M. Kennedy. At the time of its translation to the silver sheet what was then a record price was paid for the photoplay rights.

Eugene O'Brien to Make Northwest Story

The next Eugene O'Brien picture "Channing, of the Northwest," is about to go into production. Vice-President Myron Selznick has assigned Ralph Ince to direct it and is busily engaged in completing production plans in order that the first shots may be made within the next ten days and the picture finished without loss of time after it has been put in work.

It is from an original story written by John Willard. The screen version is by Edward J. Montagne. The subject matter has been especially adapted to Eugene O'Brien's most effective style of screen acting and the finished product will be a genuine surprise—a story dealing with the most efficient body of field police in the world told with emphasis on ingenuity and cleverness rather than upon the bizarre and swashbuckling methods which are the rule.

All-Star Playgoers Release

"Anne of Little Smoky" Is Offered Through Associated Exhibitors

AN all-star cast is to be seen in "Anne of Little Smoky," which is Playgoers' current feature offering, released through Associated Exhibitors during the coming week. It is a tale of mountain tops and trails, with the hardy folk who people them, in which love is put to the test before hatred and a deep-seated spirit of revenge, nurtured to the killing point. Brevard Connor is the author, and the picture is a Wistaria Production.

The action centers in Little Smoky, a region of wonderful beauty, affording an extraordinary opportunity for picturesque settings.

Brockton Village, ruled by the Fighting Brocktons, adjoins a government forest and game preserve, repeated depredations on which stir the government to action. Law enters the community in the person of Robert Hayne, a handsome young ranger, who promptly loses his heart to Anne, the wild rose daughter of "The" Brockton. The threat of the head clansman and his son, Big Ed, to hunt and cut timber wherever they please, the ranger notwithstanding, causes complications which for a time threaten a tragedy.

Following "The's" arrest, Big Ed is reported killed and suspicion points to Hayne. When the hounds are put upon the scent Anne, garbed in the ranger's uniform, leads them astray, and there comes the revelation that the ranger, far from having killed the clansman's son, had carried him, wounded, to shelter, at the risk of his own life. The romance of Cita, a gypsy girl, and the youngest of the Brockton boys, a shell-shocked remnant of the war, who finally pierces the fog of his weakened memory, is unfolded in the course of the action.

Winifred Westover is an appealing "Anne," and Joe King is well cast in the role of a ranger. Dolores Casinelli, with her brunette beauty, is a gypsy girl to the life, and Frank Sheridan, whose admirable work in "The Rider of the King Log" is well remembered, is at home as a virile mountaineer. Ralph Falkner convincingly plays the difficult role of an unfortunate ex-soldier, Alice Chapin is excellent as the mother, and Edward Rosemon gives a strong characterization of a treacherous half-civilized Indian, while Frank Hagney, Margaret Morris, Florence Ashbrook and Little Harold Callahan handle the other parts well. The picture rises to lofty dramatic heights and is destined to thrill every audience, is the claim.

S. B. Griever, head of Griever Productions of Chicago, made a special trip to New York last week for the purpose of securing territorial rights to the George H. Davis-Joe Brandt special feature "The Heart of the North."

Vignola Is Hailed as Foremost Director

Analyzing the growth and achievements of the motion picture in the past year, Frederick James Smith, noted critic and author, in an article entitled "The Screen Year In Review" in a recent issue of Motion Picture Classic, picks Robert G. Vignola as the outstanding director of the year. Giving praise where praise is due and frank criticism where it is deserving, the critic points to Mr. Vignola as a director whose efforts of the year have been interesting, who will bear close watching, and who has made the most directorial progress.

In picking Mr. Vignola upon whom to place the laurel wreath of honor, Mr. Smith analyzes the situation carefully after having gone over the entire year's output of screen productions with a fine critical eye. Not only has he carefully sifted through the entire list of American made pictures but he has included the German productions and the rest of the world as well in his summary.

Reginald Barker Will Direct "The Storm"

THE transfer of a dramatic stage production to the screen is one that requires genius and experience in both the legitimate and motion picture arts. Realizing this, and being resolved to overlook nothing that would make for the success of "The Storm," the Langdon McCormick-George Broadhurst stage success, Mr. Laemmle has engaged Reginald Barker to direct it.

Mr. Barker is considered by Universal officials to be of all directors the one most eminently fitted to get the utmost of both the stage and the screen out of "The Storm." He has had a brilliant career as a motion picture director and he came to the screen in 1913 with a unique reputation as a stage director.

Work will be started as soon as the continuity is completed. By that time Harry Carey, who will star in "The Storm," will have completed work on "Man to Man," his current production for Universal.

Board of Education to Use "U" Serial

The Board of Education of the City of New York has made arrangements with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to use "Winners of the West," the new style "thrills-from-history serial," as an aid to students in the various American history classes of the 550 city schools, according to advices from Universal Film.

Beginning this Saturday, Ernest L. Crandall, Director of Lectures and Visual Instruction of the New York Board of Education, will hold morning showings of "Winners of the West" in the Central theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh street, for specially selected pupils. The showings will be at ten and eleven o'clock respectively and will consist of two episodes of the serial each week, for nine consecutive weeks. Three thousand pupils will see the showing every Saturday, it is declared.

Multiple-Star Plan a Success

Paramount Specials Making Big Hit, Says S. R. Kent

PARAMOUNT'S decision to put, from time to time, two or more of its foremost stars in the same production has proved the biggest kind of a success, according to the opinion expressed by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of distribution. Already three of these productions have been shown to the public, Cecil B. DeMille's "The Affairs of Anatol" has been released to first-run houses and George Melford's production, "The Sheik," with Agnes Ayres and Rudolph Valentino, has played several pre-release engagements in the larger cities. The third, George Fitzmaurice's production, "Forever," is now being presented in New York at the Criterion theatre under its original title, "Peter Ibbetson," while a fourth, Sam Wood's production, "Don't Tell Everything!" is scheduled for release in December.

"Cecil B. DeMille's 'The Affairs of Anatol,' with its twelve stars, has already made good our most extravagant predictions," said Mr. Kent. "The picture fortunately was released at a time when exhibitors for weeks had been starved for a bang-up, big box-office attraction. The resources of several producing units had been combined in this one big production, it was heavily advertised nationally and when the picture was delivered it was found to measure up to every expectation. Shown simultaneously during the week of initial release in more than two hundred theatres, it set up a record in the box-offices of those theatres never before equalled. It is still smashing records for receipts wherever it is being shown.

"The Melford production of Edith M. Hull's novel, 'The Sheik,' has played a week simultaneously in the New York Rivoli and Rialto to a gross attendance exceeded only by 'Anatol' at the same houses, and is being held for a second week at the Rialto. In Los Angeles it has settled down for a long run at Grauman's Rialto. In fact, Sid Grauman wires that he expects a longer run to greater patronage than has been enjoyed by any other picture he ever had there, and that he looks for it to make new box-office records all over the country.

"'Forever' must be judged for the time being on its record at the New York Criterion, where it is showing daily receipts far in excess of any other picture ever played there—this in spite of the fact that there are only two performances a day, with seats reserved at prices exceeding those ever before charged at a theatre devoted exclusively to motion pictures in New York City.

"In December comes 'Don't Tell Everything!" This has Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter and Dorothy Cumming in the leading roles. Both Mr. Reid and Miss Swanson are among the biggest individual drawing cards on the screen. Combine their drawing powers and add those of Mr. Dexter and Miss Cumming, and the pulling power of this picture at the box-office can be imagined. Sam Wood, the director, has done a remarkably fine piece of work, and when exhibitors advertise to their patrons that he was the man who directed Gloria Swanson in 'The Great Moment,' they can readily add a comfortable percentage to their receipts."

Selznick Special Opens House

Texas Theatre Selects "A Man's Home" for Initial Program

THE opening, on November 13th, of the Rialto theatre at Fort Worth, Texas, proved a victorious occasion for the Selznick organization, for the feature attraction selected for the initial program was "A Man's Home," the Ralph Ince production on the Selznick release schedule. And the victory was accentuated, according to advices from the Selznick headquarters, because the picture had been chosen after J. S. Phillips, manager of the new Rialto, and a committee of representative citizens of Fort Worth had seen and passed upon the merits of all the Dallas, Texas, exchanges had to offer in the way of feature attractions suitable for the opening of a new big picture house.

The opening of the Rialto is also considered of unusual importance as it marks the crowning event in the career of a picturesque Texas showman, J. S. Phillips, known all over the state. For sixteen years Mr. Phillips has been a picture showman in Texas—managing exchanges, conducting theatres and generally developing the screen as a public amusement in the Lone Star State. On Sunday, November 13, he crowned his career with the opening of the Rialto theatre, Fort Worth, after 48 days of actual construction work on $200,000 structure declared to be in every way modern, commodious and inviting, and rated among the handsomest theatres in Texas.

His service to pictures in Texas has included the management of branch exchanges, the construction and management of theatres and the active management of many photoplay campaigns, for road attractions. Thus practically every film showman in the state was "rooting" for Phillips during the strenuous 48 days he was rushing the Forth Worth Rialto to completion.

When construction was far enough advanced and an opening date was set the selection of an opening attraction became the immediate problem. Dallas, the film center of Texas, was intensely interested as practically every producing company maintains a distributing branch in that city and everybody with a big feature, either of current or pre-release prospect, were immediately in active competition for the honor of opening the new theatre.

Manager Phillips decided upon a competition and screened every feature that approached the caliber of an attraction suited to the event. Sitting in with four of his associates in the construction of the Rialto, Mr. Phillips also called upon committeemen outside of show business to complete the board of judges. He invited into these conferences the editors, managers and advertising managers of three of Fort Worth's dailies and selected a number of prominent citizens to contribute their judgement.

After seeing all the Dallas exchanges had to offer, and the process of elimination had proceeded to a definite choice, Selznick's "A Man's Home" was contracted for at a sum declared by the Selznick home office to be the largest ever paid for a feature rental in Fort Worth. The arrangement was closed just one week ahead of the opening date and then Manager Phillips began his advertising. Branch Manager R. I. Brown, of Select's Dallas office unearthed everything in the line of exploitation that his firm could supply and Fort Worth witnessed a smashing J. S. Phillips campaign along the best style the veteran picture showman could devise.

"Never Weaken" Captivates New York

Newspaper reviewers in New York City have been several times unanimous concerning the merits of Broadway film offerings, but perhaps never before was their unanimity expressed in such lavish terms as greeted the initial metropolitan presentation of Harold Lloyd's Associated Exhibitor comedy, "Never Weaken" at the Capitol theatre last week. The response of picturegoers to the enthusiastic promises of the press that "Never Weaken" was one hundred per cent hilarity resulted in record business for S. L. Rothafel's short reel program in spite of the fact that the Capitol faced unusually strong opposition.

The criticism of the New York press gives adequate notion of how the big city welcomed the antics of Harold Lloyd. Among these reports are the following: The New York Journal says: "Harold Lloyd in 'Never Weaken' has one of the cleverest farces of his career through which to disport himself."

Speaking of Mr. Rothafel's program the New York Herald says: "The offering that has the most telling effect on the bill is Harold Lloyd's latest three-reel comedy; and that leaves the beholder at the beginning flattened out between laughter and gasps from thrills that set one's teeth on edge as one chortles."

Torchy Comedies Popular in Panama

The Torchy Comedies released by Educational are making a hit in Panama. James Lippincott, former football star, world war veteran and actor, who is in Panama, has written to C. C. Burr, producer of the Torchy Comedies, to say that he has seen several of them shown in theatres there, and that every one has won highest approval from the audience.

Lippincott plays the part of a dyed-in-the-wool gum shoe detective in "Torchy's Frame-Up," the next Torchy picture to be released by Educational.

Sixth "Theodora" Company to Open

GOLDWYN'S Italian spectacle, "Theodora," now in its fifth capacity week at the Astor theatre, New York, is showing also at the La Salle theatre, Chicago, the Michigan theatre, Detroit, the Pitt theatre in Pittsburgh and the Colonial theatre in Cleveland. On next Monday, Nov. 21, a sixth company will open at the Shubert theatre in Boston. These companies are all showing at $2 top prices, the same as at the Astor theatre, New York.

The Chicago showing opened on Friday, November 11, and the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Detroit bookings on Monday, November 7. Jack Welsh, general manager for Selwyn & Co., is laying out the booking routes for "Theodora" for Goldwyn.

The reviews that "Theodoro" obtained in Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit rival the enthusiasm expressed in all of the New York criticisms.

Mayo to Appear in Two Published Novels

Following Frank Mayo's latest Universal Special Attraction, "Dr. Jim" by Stuart Paton, will come two new pictures from published stories.

"Slipper Tongue," a Saturday Evening Post story, by William J. Neidig, is almost completed at the Coast under the direction of William Worthington who directed "Dr. Jim."

The other published story as a matter of fact has not as yet been published but will start in the January number of the Red Book. It is Clarence Budington Kelland's "Mischief," which is completed at Universal City under the title, "Wards of the North." This title is also subject to change. The picture was directed by Jack Conway.

"The Century Limited" Makes Its Debut

And now comes The Century Limited upon the field of organizational publications. The first number is a modest six-page mimeograph compilation, but David Bader, the editor, assures that The Century Limited will shortly be initiated into the thirty-second degree of printer's ink and assume the full regalia of a sure-fire house organ. The Century Limited will be published monthly by Century Comedies for the sole purpose, as announced in its introductory article, of "personal touch and cooperative interest."

After rambling awhile on each of the "Limited's" six pages, we'll agree The Century Limited is a chatty, interesting sort of document, enlivened with newsy items and spiced here and there with humorous touches. Printer's ink and a few stills scattered through its pages are about all that's necessary to have The Century Limited register real speed.

$1.50 Top, Seats Sold Out, in 2,200 Town

Seats at a dollar and a half and standing room at seventy-five cents in a five-hundred-seat theatre in a town of twenty-two hundred, with half the capacity of the house turned away nightly—such was the reception of the Rex Ingram production for Metro of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Wayne theatre, Wayne, Pa., during the three days from October 24 to 26, announces Metro.

It is stated that between 200 and 300 were turned away daily.

Frank Packard Story a Wm. Fox Release

Under the title "Smiles Are Trumps," Frank L. Packard's story "Tempered Steel" will soon be produced by William Fox with Maurice Flynn as the star. Ora Carewe will be the leading lady and Myles McCarthy is to have a character part.

"My Boy" Will Open at Mark Strand in N. Y.

JACKIE COOGAN'S new "My Boy" feature will have its New York showing at the Mark Strand theatre. Arrangements for the initial exhibition were consummated this week between Sol Lesser and Moe Mark. No figures were given out on the deal but it was intimated that the arrangements were in the form of a guarantee and percentage. The guarantee was one of the biggest ever given on a production.

The Coogan feature was originally scheduled to open late this month, but Mr. Mark, cognizant of "My Boy" appealing to children as well as adults, persuaded Mr. Lesser to hold the initial opening over until Christmas week. The picture will open at the Strand Christmas day and close New Year's eve.

Immediately after the Strand showing, the film will be released nationally. Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand, is going to give "My Boy" an excellent surrounding show and exploitation.

Owen Moore Comedy Is Near Completion

The forthcoming Owen Moore production, with Henry Lehrman and David Kirkland directing, is being completed at the newly occupied Selznick studios on East Forty-eighth street, New York City. It is an interesting fact that, despite the magnitude of the task of moving the Selznick equipment from Fort Lee to the new quarters in Manhattan, there has been practically no let-up in the organization's production program. The Moore company worked in Fort Lee right up to the last day and when they were ready to make their next studio shots a stage and the necessary sets were ready for them.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Normand-Moore Picture for State Rights

THE first release of the newly formed Photocraft Productions, Inc., of which Nathan Hirsh is president, is a five-reel comedy, entitled "Oh, Mabel Behave!" starring Mabel Normand, Owen Moore, Mack Sennett and Ford Sterling. Great interest is manifested in this comedy and inquiries have been received from state right exchanges from all sections of the country. Mr. Hirsh emphatically affirms that "Oh, Mabel Behave!" is not a reissue nor have any scenes therein ever been shown before.

Foresees Success for "The Polish Dancer"

Jesse A. Levinson, who is distributing Pola Negri, in "The Polish Dancer," throughout the State Right market, finds an improving, healthy condition in the buying power of the Independent Exchange Men throughout the country.

"There seems to have been a feeling among State Right Buyers," said Mr. Levinson, "that in the past what was often offered them were mediocre productions, with stars that had no large drawing power; pictures that had no exploitation possibilities.

"The fact that I am fortunately in a position to offer the nationally acclaimed Pola Negri, in a production such as 'The Polish Dancer,' has been particularly gratifying. Judging from the amount of territories closed, within three weeks, and the numerous negotiations, I have now pending throughout the country, makes me feel that the State Right Buyers are in a receptive mood for real 'box-office' product, at the right price."

'Peac ockAlley" Preview in New York

The prevue showing of "Peacock Alley" at the Commodore Hotel in New York, on November 9th culminated in a royal ovation to Mae Murray. The star who was overwhelmed by the enthusiasm, was called by the cheering crowd again and again to the front of her box to acknowledge the applause.

An audience which numbered between two thousand and twenty-five hundred filled every seat and available inch of floor space of the huge grand ball room of the Commodore Hotel.

Weiss Offers Bible Films

Tremendous Effects to Be Seen in Series of Old Testament Pictures

THE claim is advanced by Louis Weiss, President of Artclass Pictures Corporation, which organization is preparing for release an elaborate visualization of the Old Testament, that this production contains effects in point of size and grandeur never before attempted on the silver sheet.

Beginning with Creation, this film, at present in thirty three reel length, depicts the various episodes and incidents of the Old Testament with a realism and magnitude which promises to astonish even the present day movie goer accustomed to the large scale on which modern movies are made. The flooding of the earth, with the escape of Noah and the animals, has been majestically conceived and photographed. The Ark has been faithfully reproduced, the actual construction of this odd boat forming several interesting and elaborate scenes.

Among the hundred and one high lights of the film version of the bible, the spectator will be tremendously impressed by those scenes depicting the destruction of the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. According to the Bible a terrible rain of brim-stone and fire rained down upon the doomed populace and buildings and as these scenes appear in the film version, they stand as a tribute to the art of the cinematographer and the technical staff responsible for the effects. Flaming tongues of fire and brim-stone fill the entire screen during these scenes, in which more than five thousand supernumeraries take part.

Scenes of splendor and gorgeous appeal are those presenting the court of King Solomon. The palace and its surrounding buildings form a picture of massiveness and beauty, while hundreds of players appear throughout this entire episode.

It is stated that the sets used during the filming of the King Solomon episode were in course of construction more than six months and are faithful in every detail.

Shallenberger Optimistic

President of Arrow Returns from Coast Trip: Sees a Bright Future

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, returned last Friday from a trip to the coast and intermediate points. Efforts to reach Dr. Shallenberger to secure a statement were unavailing until the present writing.

When interviewed recently, Dr. Shallenberger expressed himself as being very well pleased with conditions in general. He stated that he found the Independent Exchanges recovering from the depression of the past summer a great deal more rapidly than could have been expected. He believes that the Independent Exchanges in the various cities are rapidly assuming a position of leadership and that it is only a question of a comparatively short time until they will be the leading exchanges in their respective territories. They are building solidly on a firm foundation and are properly financing themselves in order to take care of the volume of business which they are so rapidly securing.

On the coast Dr. Shallenberger found the producers willing, and in fact anxious, to turn to the Independent market for the distribution of their product as soon as the word was given; with the exception, of course, with the producers who maintain a distributing organization. Other producers who are producing independently expressed themselves as preferring a State Right Market to any other medium of distribution for the reason that there is a quick turn over and although their profits may be a little smaller, producers at the Coast indicate their willingness to take a smaller profit in view of quick and sure returns.

Aside from his stay at the Coast where he conferred with a number of producers whose product is being released through the Arrow Film Corporation, as well as other producers, Dr. Shallenberger stopped off at several cities.

Edward Thompson Joins Warner Brothers

The continuous policy of expansion being followed by Warner Bros. is reflected in the most recent addition to the publicity staff of that live distributing organization. Edward Thompson, who has for the past two years been engaged as editor of a New York trade paper, joined the Warner organization on November 14 to look after the publicity interests of Warner's New York Exchange.

Selig Serial is Titled "The Jungle Goddess"

THE new animal-jungle serial which Col. Wm. N. Selig is making for the Export & Import Film Company, Inc., and of which the first three episodes are already completed, has been given its name at last, according to a statement of the aforementioned company.

"The Jungle Goddess" has been selected as a fitting name for this fifteen episode wild animal film after careful thought had been given to a score of titles suggested by Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnston, authors of the scenario, and those submitted by the leading exchangemen of the country.

The cast chosen to support Elinor Field and Truman Van Dyke, who are being co-starred in "The Jungle Goddess," includes Marie Pavis, Olin Francis, William Platt, H. G. Wells and George Reed.

Western Classic Film to Make Two Reelers

The Western Classic Film Company making a series of two reel Westerns is shortly to begin the production of a series of six five-reel subjects at their studios in Hollywood. At the same time the producers are working on another project, announcement of which will be made shortly.

Wm. Fairbanks Subject Ready for Exchanges

Independent Exchanges are this week receiving release prints of the third of the series of five reel Western dramas made by Western Feature Productions, Inc., featuring William (Bill) Fairbanks which subject is titled "A Western Demon." At the same time the producing company is beginning work on the sixth and last of the series titled "The Dare Devil of the Range. Editing of the fourth release titled "Hell's Border" and the fifth to be known as "Fighting Hearts" is being conducted at their studios in Hollywood.

"A Western Demon" was written and directed by Robert B. McKenzie and in addition to Fairbanks the cast includes Marilyn Mills and Monty Montague.

Elk Buys Magnet Film

The Elk Photoplays have bought out the Magnet Film Exchange and have also taken over their space at 729 7th Ave., N. Y., as well as their latest product.

Wesley Barry in the Warner Brothers production, "School Days," which is offered on the independent market. The boy star was used in this production by special arrangements with Marshall Neilan

Highlights in "School Days"

Warner Brothers Picture Has Three Outstanding Features

"SCHOOL DAYS," starring Wesley Barry in the Gus Edwards classic to be distributed by Warner Brothers, will grace the screens of over 100 key city theatres during the Christmas holidays, it is announced. A pre-view presentation of the production will be given in both New York and Chicago. The New York showing will be held at the Hotel Astor on December 1st, while the Chicago showing will be held in the Tiger Room, Sherman Hotel, on November 27th. All seats to both showings will be by reservation only.

Three outstanding features, it is said, are connected with the production made by Harry Rapf and directed by William Nigh, both of whom brought forth "Why Girls Leave Home." From a financial standpoint the production of "School Days" is said to have cost a fortune, in that it was the aim at the outset to spare neither expense nor time in the making. The second feature concerns the unusual amount of advertising and publicity material that has been devised to aid the exhibitor in making it one of the biggest atractions of the season. These aids will all be made known, it is said, as soon as the last exploitation link has been completed.

The third and perhaps the most significant feature is that Wesley Barry will be seen in a role that he has long essayed to play on the screen. It is said that he plays the part of a small town boy who, through the efforts of a rich uncle, is given a taste of private tutoring in a big city, interweaving in the fabric of the story what is said to be one of the best "kid" romances that has yet been seen.

Russell Prepares Campaign

"Shadows of Conscience" Will Be Exploited in Effective Fashion

THE wide possibilities suggested by the title as well as the character of "Shadows of Conscience" have enabled Russell Productions to prepare a unique exploitation and advertising campaign. An acute perception of the most favorable angles for advertising and a generous outlay of time, effort and expense in executing these ideas is evident in the elaborate accessories which this company has planned for the benefit of State-Right buyers to whom, as was recently announced, the Russell classic is now purchasable.

In selecting the main exploitation theme, Mr. Russell was confronted by a difficulty which he surmounted in effective style. The title "Shadows of Conscience" is of such a nature that the opportunities for appealing to the public's imagination are almost limitless. It savors strongly of the weird, the fantastic. But in order not to lose sight of the important consideration that the story of this picture is intensely human throughout, and not so "extreme" in any way that certain classes of patrons will reject it, the exploitation material has been devised so that the public and the trade alike will get the proper impression that the subject is adapted from a simple, clean and understandable story. There is nothing in it to frighten the feminine instinct nor those averse to anything fantastically mysterious. In the preparation of the lithographs, it is evident that close proximity to the action of the play has been adhered to reproduced from the actual scenes, they reflect the tone of the picture; the spirited action of the play, with the exception of one style, a one-sheet, which lends a little atmosphere to the "Conscience Stricken" apparition. The complete line of "paper" consists of one 24-sheet, one 6, two styles of 3's and two styles of one-sheets in five and six colors.

The scene stills are of a large and varied assortment. From these, colored lobby cards have been prepared in three different sizes. They will be sold to the trade at actual cost. To assist the exhibitor in giving the picture the advertising and exploitation it deserves, an elaborate and comprehensive press book, the cover of which when open, will be a broad-side 24 x 36 inches, is now being compiled.

"Nan of North" Sold

Kansas City's prominent Independent exchange man, Joe Fox, of the Phoenix Film Corporation, was a New York visitor this past week, and made his headquarters in the "Arrow" offices.

Mr. Fox reports that he did an enormous business with the "Arrow" serial "The Blue Fox"; and he purchased the new Ann Little "Nan of the North" with which he is confident he will break all his previous records.

Hal Stephens Starts New Comedy Series

Hal Stephens and his own company of funmakers launched work on a new series of comedies that will be released through the Producers' Security Corporation. Each of the new Stephens pictures will be two-reeled, with the first shortly to be released.

Morris Kashin to Show "I Defy" to Trade

In the next two weeks the trade will have an opportunity to view Morris Kashin's "I Defy," which is being rapidly whipped into shape for early release. This photodrama has been shown privately to some of the biggest exchangemen and exhibitors in order that it might receive the benefit of their criticisms before being placed on the state-right market. As a result, a few of the titles have been changed and a prologue and epilogue added.

Several Sales Pending on "Parted Curtains"

Several big territorial deals are in the process of consummation, following the announcement of the release on a state right basis of the Warner Brothers production, "Parted Curtains," featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, it is announced this week. The negotiations now pending are said to be due to the favorable reviews accorded the production by the trade press.

Screen Snapshot Excerp Amuses B'way

Scenes made exclusively for Screen Snapshots, having been posed especially by Charlie Murray for this "fan news reel," were selected for use last week on the program of the Rivoli theatre, New York, recently. These scenes of this comedian are highly amusing, Screen Snapshots cameraman having caught Charlie just when he was having a quiet game of solitaire —at least, while he was trying to keep it "on the quiet." The comedian tries to beat his own game,— and audiences throughout the week at the Rivoli showed their enjoyment by loud laughter the entire time the Screen Snapshots scenes were on the screen.

The Charlie Murray scenes are a feature of issue No. 12 of Screen Snapshots on the Federate Film Exchanges of America, Inc., program.

Equity Salesman Leaves on Secret Mission

Louis Baum, salesman of Equity Pictures, left recently for a country wide tour of the film exchanges. He will visit Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, and Pittsburgh. The object of his mission is kept secret by Equity, but it is said that a surprising innovation will result from it.

NOW READY

Independents Respond to Warner Release

The announcement by Warner Brothers of the immediate release and distribution on a state right basis of their latest production, "Parted Curtains," featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, has elicited many replies from state-right exchanges throughout the country, it is announced.

These responses followed the reviews of the trade-paper critics, all of whom unanimously agreed that the story afforded Mr. Walthall the opportunity to reveal his ability as an emotional actor, and that the many headlights of the production particularly the snow scene of the Bowery Mission which was filmed in sunny California—serve to round out a dramatic story full of real entertainment, it is said.

"A Bride's Confession" Ready for Release

Ivan Abramson, president of the Graphic Film Corporation announces that production on "A Bride's Confession" is completed and ready for distribution in the state-right market. Rita Jolivet, the Continental star who has the stellar role in Goldwyn's "Theodora" is featured in this latest Abramson drama.

Besides this picture, Abramson will be ready within the next week to release "The Fountain of Youth," dramatized from the story of "Faust." Mr. Abramson has spent the past few months in the direction of this release and he believes it to be among the most pretentious productions he has directed in the past few years.

"Slippy McGee" Pictured in Quaint Atmosphere

When "Slippy McGee," the latest Oliver Morosco Productions' feature for Associated First National release, soon reaches the exhibitors' screens, it is expected that a new and refreshing phase will be introduced into pictures. The story is an adaptation of Marie Conway Oemler's widely read book now in its tenth edition and has been screened with fidelity to the strong simplicity, quaint atmosphere and romance that made it so popular in printed form.

Motion picture conventionalities in character drawing and situations are wholly absent. Filmed in the beautiful, picturesque settings of the South amid proud old mansions and in ante-bellum gardens where the motion picture camera never has invaded before, "Slippy McGee" will bring to the screen a story of human salvage told with a baffling stranger among home-folk in a new revealment of the land of tradition and romance.

"Right Way" Sold for New York-New Jersey

Arrangements have just been made whereby the Producers Security Corporation grants the booking franchise for the State of New York and Northern New Jersey of the Thomas Mott Osborne production of "The Right Way" to the Model Fim Corporation of New York.

Possibilities of "His Nibs"

State Righters to Take Advantage of Exploitation Possibilities

"LEGITIMATE exploitation possibilities, available to the degree that they are in Charles (Chic) Sale in 'His Nibs,' are certain to elicit the co-operation which is already being extended to this Exceptional Picture by the State Rights exchanges which have secured it," state the distributors.

"It is an accepted fact that more intensive exploiting of any individual feature may be expected from the independent field, a truth which is logically borne out by the consideration that the independent exchange lays stress upon the selling of a single product until it has been put over to its fullest extent. It is not called upon to handle a separate picture every week or every two weeks but is prepared to exploit a production to the limit of its possibilities.

"It follows then, that when a picture, presenting the opportunities furnished by 'His Nibs,' is secured, an individual campaign in each territory may be expected, which when taken collectively will represent stupendous national exploitation. Each exchangeman will instill into the work his own individuality so that the multitude of angles will receive so many separate treatments. The result is obvious."

"The Four Seasons" Tie-up

Educational Cooperation Assured; Release Method to Be Known Soon

A RECENT announcement from the Kineto Company stated that arrangements were being made for the national cooperation of educators in all communities in advance of the release of "The Four Seasons," the Urban-Ditmars nature feature.

These arrangements are almost completed and information as to the method of release for this photoplay of the Seasons is expected within the next week or two.

Advices from Kineto speak enthusiastically of the interest educators display in the picture and as an example of this interest cite a letter received from Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, Director of Lectures and Visual Education of the New York Board of Education. Dr. Crandall recently expressed similar high regard for Kineto's "Great American Authors Series."

Writing to Mr. Urban about "The Four Seasons," Dr. Crandall discusses its remarkable success at the Rialto theatre in New York where it played its pre-release engagement and then goes on to say:

"Who would have believed a few years since that a picture which is crammed full of scientific interest, and scientific information could be 'featured'? Nor would this have been possible except for a producer of rare vision and a manager uncommonly able to gauge the taste of a public endowed with more intelligence than is usually ascribed to it.

"I am sure this remarkable picture will find further welcome in theatrical circles in all enlightened communities. I am also sure that we both want and need this material in our schools, whenever it may be released for educational purposes."

New State Right Feature

Lee and Bradford Expect All Territory to Be Sold in 6 Weeks

B. H. Throop, president of the Pasha Film Corporation who have recently completed their first Rubye de Remar picture entitled "The Unconquered Woman," who announced last week that the feature will be offered on the state right market by Messrs. Lee & Bradford, believes that there will be no necessity of any sales talk to sell this production. He claims that it will only be necessary to screen and sign contracts.

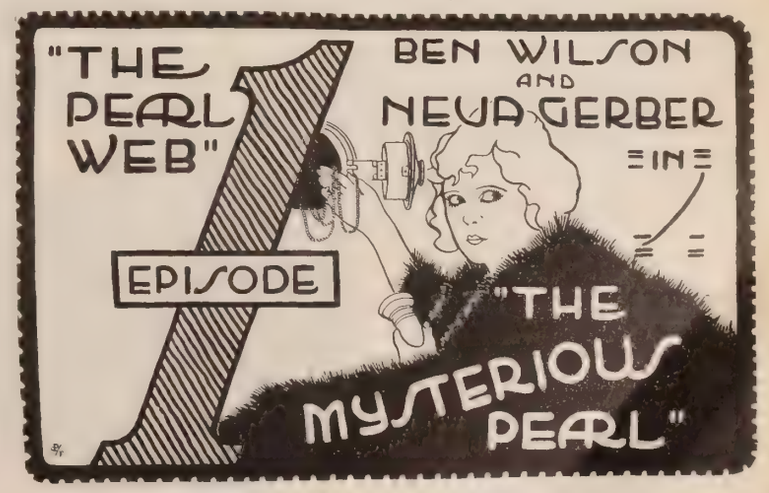
This production is laid in the Frozen North. The negatives are now being cut out and as soon as this is finished Messrs. Lee & Bradford will start an advertising campaign and feel confident that all territories will be closed inside of six weeks.

It will be remembered that Lee & Bradford recently acquired the world's rights to "Determination" and "The Atheist" and it was inferred that they were going to devote their entire efforts to release these two productions. Therefore, the above comes as somewhat of a surprise. But, Mr. Lee advises that it is their intentions to release at least six productions during the present season.

Ringling Circus Tigers in New Selig Serial

THE famous tiger act, consisting of nineteen trained tigers, which has been a featured part of Ringling Bros. Circus on all its tours, will not go into winter quarters with the rest of the company at Richmond, Va., but will be shipped back to Los Angeles immediately.

Colonel Selig, who owns the animals, will use them in the filming of the new fifteen episode jungle serial feature he is making for the Export & Import Film Company, according to coast advices. He is also recalling several other animal acts he has on tour, for the same purpose.



Burton George Pictures for National Exchanges

News of an affiliation between producer and distributor comes with the announcement of National Exchanges, Inc., that an agreement has been entered into with Burton George, well-known feature director whereby Mr. George will produce four features for distribution by National Exchanges, Inc.

Mr. George has been connected with such producing firms as Famous Players-Lasky, Fox, Selznick, American Film Company, Universal, Lubin and Edison. In all, Mr. George has made more than eighty-nine features. During the past two years, he has directed only all-star productions. Among the most successful productions directed by Mr. George are: "Come Through," "Wilderness Fear," "Isle of Life," "The Valley of Doubt," and "Eve in Exile."

Buys Lee Kids Comedies

Max Herring of the Exhibitors Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased the Lee Kid Comedies from the Rialto Productions, Inc. In less than one week Mr. Herring states that nearly all the key towns in Western Pennsylvania and Western Virginia have been sold. The Lee Kids are now playing the Big Time on Keith Circuit and appeared in Pittsburgh recently.

Lester Scott Returns After Selling Trip

Having visited Detroit, Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Dallas and other cities in the middle west and south, Lester Scott, Jr., sales manager for Affiliated Distributors, Inc., has returned to New York happy and elated over the manner in which "Burn 'em Up Barnes" is being received in every territory it has been his pleasure to re-new acquaintances. Mr. Scott states that while business in certain parts of the country are not over brisk, motion picture lovers will attend such photo-plays that call for clever acting, is exciting and carry a clean and logical story. "Burn 'em Up Barnes" had proven this and Johnny Hines was becoming one of the biggest favorites among the screen stars. Mr. Scott then went on to state that the Burr feature had so far proven 100 per cent a success; it was a real audience picture.

"Parted Curtains" to Have Many Aids

The latest Warner Brothers release, "Parted Curtains," featuring Henry B. Walthall and Mary Alden, is offered to exhibitors and state right buyers with many aids for publicity and exploitation purposes, it is said. The suggestions offered are said to be practical and inexpensive and productive of considerable interest among motion picture "fans."

The routine use of lobby displays, screen slides and paper has been fully provided for, but there are additional helps in the method of presentation. For instance, the title suggest curtains and these can be effectively used for both the lobby and department store tie-ups. The fact that the story deals with the self-sacrifice of a man who was once a member of society is said to afford the exhibitor a good newspaper campaign.

Sacred Films Closes English Deal

Prior to sailing on the Aquitania recently, Raymond Wells of the Sacred Films Inc., of Burbank, Calif., closed a contract with Hy Winnick and Tom Davies of the Pearl Films Ltd., London for the distribution of the Bible Narratives in England. This privilege covers a period of five years.

The advance payments over this period will exceed $400,000, it is said, and is reputed to be one of the largest short subject deals negotiated in recent years. The Pearl Films Ltd., are one of the most prominent distributors in London and are at present releasing Chaplin's late subjects.

Eleven of "American Authors" Series Ready

Eleven of the "Great American Authors" series which James A. Fitzpatrick is filming for the Kineto Company of America are now completed. The series will include twelve altogether, though in time it may be extended.

The choice of subject for the twelfth is still in doubt. It has narrowed down to two names, Walt Whitman and James Whitcomb Riley.

New State Right Serial

Wilson-Gerber Serial, "Mysterious Pearl" for Independents

THROUGH the enterprise of E. S. Manheimer as general manager of the Photoplay Serials Corporation, the independent exchanges will have the handling of the New Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber serial entitled "The Mysterious Pearl." According to Mr. Manheimer, who through his many other affiliations has been keeping in close touch with the state rights situation, the time is particularly opportune for the launching of a serial of the type and importance of this latest Ben Wilson offering, and it will be made available immediately.

"The Mysterious Pearl" is from the pens of J. Grubb Alexander and Harvey Gates, whose reputations as writers of chaptered photoplays with problem plots and suspense-building episodes have long been well established. They announce their latest effort as a psychological photo-melodrama in fifteen chapters, and from the standpoint of unsolvable mystery and gripping situations it is said to even surpass their previous writings.

Neva Gerber is given exceptional opportunities for strong work because of the fact that she plays a dual role in which she appears both as the beautiful refined girl with whom Ben Wilson falls in love, in the drama, and also the part of "The Pearl" around whom the rapid action of the melodramatic scenes revolves. Ben Wilson is also said to make the most of unusual chances to display his cleverness as a serial star, given him by such weird dramatic elements as a "man with a brass face" and also a mysterious and terrifying arm cleverly worked into the story.

Mr. Manheimer is authority for the statement that all fifteen of the episodes of "The Mysterious Pearl" are now completed, and that the serial can be seen upon the screen from start to finish; an inovation in serial history worthy of note.

F. E. Backer Outlines Policy

Producer and Distributor Unite to Solve Independents Problems

THAT the Amalgamated Producing Company, Inc., of which G. M. Anderson is the supervising director, and East Coast Productions, Inc., of which Franklyn E. Backer is the active head, united their efforts because they had worked out a method of production and distribution between them which will strengthen the position of independent exchanges, is the statement of Mr. Backer in announcing the policy of the new combination. "All interested in both companies happen to be practical motion picture executives of many years experience. All of us knew from long experience that the two things most necessary to the successful making and marketing of pictures is good pictures with real stars and efficient exchanges, run by men financially interested in their own exchanges, and run by men who are square shooters and realize that the producers must get results from the booking of their productions if they are to continue to deliver worth while box office attractions."

With these two main points in mind we laid out our policy and the method we would pursue in following it to the letter. First of all we produced three really big features with several stars in each which would not need to be introduced to the exhibitor. That we succeeded is evident from the independent exchange men who have already seen our first pictures on the screen. This brought us to our second stage, which with three pictures to show, thus proving that we are not operating on conversation and thus giving those interested a chance to judge whether or not we can make the high grade of productions we talk about, seems to be working out to perfection, and it is our second stage that we are now entering with this stage comes the necessity of making a most careful selection of the exchange in each territory with which we are to trust the fate of our product.

"It is the problem of making the best selection that we are now working out and we fully expect to have every territory in the United States covered within thirty days with all prints and advertising matter of our first three pictures ready and waiting for them at regular monthly intervals."

Isadore Bernstein, head of the West Coast Films Corporation, and Draga, who is to play the leading feminine role in the new Monroe Salisbury production, "The Great Alone," produced by that company

"Ashamed of Parents" Has Appealing Theme

What is declared to be one of the most appealing productions of the year, from the standpoint of exploitation and "fan" popularity, is the Warner Brothers latest attraction "Ashamed of Parents," written by Charles K. Harris. The feature is said to be of universal interest in that it presents one of the most vital problems that digs into the domestic firmament.

While the attraction does not boast of a star, or an all star aggregation of cinema lights, it is said that each player was selected primarily from the standpoint of being suited to their respective parts. As a consequence, Jack Lionel Bohn was engaged to play the role of the son, Charles Eldridge as the father, Edith Stockton as the society girl, and Walter McEvan and W. J. Gross, as the two faithful old cronies.

Hines Begins Work on New Torchy Comedy

Johnny Hines, the young American screen star, under whose management Charles C. Burr, president of the Affiliated Distributors, Inc., has made one of the most popular comedians now before the public, last week began working on a new Sewell Ford comedy, under the title of "Torchy's Luck." While the Torchy series has brought both fame and popularity to Mr. Hines it is doubtful if he will be seen in many more "two-reelers." His first big feature "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" has proven such a big success in all parts of the country and Canada, it is the purpose of Mr. Burr to produce feature pictures for Mr. Hines.

Aywon to Offer Series of Animal Dramas

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, is having made a series of four five-reel jungle pictures. The largest and finest collection of trained wild animals in the world are featured in these productions and about these always fascinating creatures, plots of romantic and interest-sustaining stories are woven.

These pictures are not a serial, each being a five-reel feature complete in itself. The first of this series entitled "A Master of Beasts" is now being offered to the state right market and the second, the working title of which is "A Night of Terror in the Menagerie" is nearing completion.

Rialto to Distribute Griffith Features

Lou Rogers, president of the Rialto Productions, Inc., who cover the States of Virginia, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine has consummated a deal with the D. W. Griffith Offices for the distribution of the "Fall of Babylon" and "Mother and the Law."

Seven comedy companies are now producing. They are: Chester Conklin in "The False Alarm," under the direction of Earl Kenton; Jimmy Savo in "Pardon Me," under the direction of Slim Sommerville; Clyde Cook in "The Chauffeur," under the direction of Jack Blystone; Al St. John in "Straight from the Farm," under the direction of Gilbert Prarr; Harry Depp in "Go and Get It," under the direction of Al Herman; Charles Dougherty in "Please Be Careful," under the direction of Mr. Buckingham; and "Old Clothes" under the direction of Delmar Dellord.

UNIVERSAL

Tod Browning is returning to Universal as a director and will first make "Kind Deeds," a story by William Slaven McNutt, starring Gladys Walton. David Butler has been engaged to play the lead.

The Rawlinson subject "Malloy Compador" has been retitled "Blarney." Gertrude Olmsted is opposite the star, and Hobart Henley is directing.

The concluding scenes for "Wild Honey," Priscilla Dean's next subject are being made this week by Wesley Ruggles at Palm Springs, where locations closely resemble the South African Veldt country.

William Worthington is directing Frank Mayo in "Slipper Tongue" by William Neidig. Virginia Valli is opposite the star.

Harry Carey had completed "Man to Man" under the direction of Stuart Paton. Lillian Rich is the lead. Carey will next make "The Land of the Lost," by Courtenay Riley Cooper. Lucian Hubbard is now adapting the story.

Robert Dillon and William Lord Wright are preparing a serial scenario titled "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," to be the next subject for Art Accord, to be directed by Edward Laemmle, who has just finished "Winners of the West."

Owensmouth, California, is being used as a setting for "Human Hearts," featuring House Peters with an all-star cast.

Nearing completion are "Headin' West," starring Hoot Gibson, under the direction of William Craft; "Cupid Incog," starring Marie Prevost, under the direction of Clarence G. Badger.

A. P. Younger is writing the continuity for "Second Hand Rose," to star Gladys Walton.

Arthur Stratter has been added to the Universal scenario staff.

GOLDWYN

J. G. Hawks has been engaged to write the continuity for "Under the Skin," a Carrie Wilson South Sea novel.

"The Happiest Night of Her Life" is the title of the first Katherine Norris original screen story, put into production this week. The continuity is by Julien Josephson, and William Beaudine is now casting.

James Rennie has been engaged to play the lead in "The Dust Flower," a Basil King story. Rowland Lee is directing.

Nearing completion are "Sent for Out," by Rupert Hughes, starring Colleen Moore under the direction of Alfred Green; "Hungry Hearts," starring Helen Ferguson and Bryant Washburn, under the direction of Mason Hopper, and "The Octave of Claudius," starring Lon Chaney under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

METRO

Maxwell Karger is beginning a heavy drama of revenge titled "Hate," starring Alice Lake. The story is by Wadsworth Camp and the continuity by June Mathis.

The Lytell subject from the story "Tommy Carteret," by Justus Miles Forman, under the direction of Bayard Veiller, is being completed under the release title "The Phantom Bride."

In production are "The Prisoner of Zenda," a Rex Ingram production, "The Five-Dollar Baby," starring Viola Dana, under the direction of Harry Beaumont, and "Stay Home," starring Gareth Hughes, with George Baker directing.

HAL ROACH

The Pollard comedies "Call the Witness" and "Blow 'em Up," have been shipped to Pathe.

The Paul Parrott comedies "Loose Change" and "Years to Come" are now being edited by H. M. Walker and "Pay the Cashier" is completed.

Harold Lloyd, who goes to New York upon completion of "White Feather," may continue his vacation in Europe in company with Jean Havez.

LASKY

"Tharon of Lost Valley" by Vingie Rowe is to be the next vehicle for Dorothy Dalton.

George Melford is making the last scenes for "Moran of the Lady Letty," starring Dorothy Dalton with Rudolph Valentino in the male lead.

James Cruze is scheduled to begin filming "Is Matrimony a Failure" on Nov. 21st. The cast includes Walter Hiers, Lila Lee, Zazu Pitts, Adolph Menjou, Charles Ogle.

Olga Printzlau is writing continuity for "The Proxy Daddy," by Edward Peple, to be the next vehicle for Tom Meighan. Production will be started when the star returns from New York.

"The Parson of Panamint has been retitled "While Satan Sleeps." Jack Holt is starred, with Joseph Henaberry directing.

DeMille leaves for Europe on November 23rd.

FIRST NATIONAL

John McCormick is home from the Chicago meeting.

Norma Talmadge, Jos. Schenck and "Mother" Talmadge were greeted by hundreds of the film colony and Mayor Cryer and Sylvester Weever at the Salt Lake Station this week upon their arrival from New York. Norma will first work in "The Duchess of Langeais," a Balzac romance.

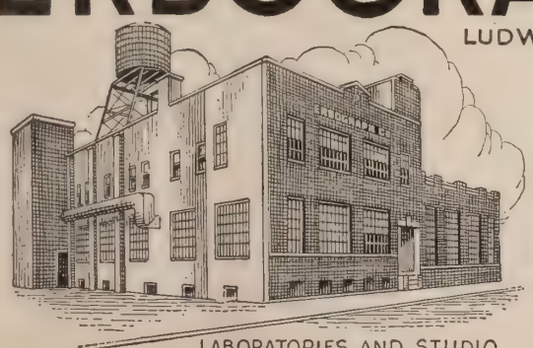
Louis B. Mayer has purchased a novel "One Clear Call" by Frances Nimme Green. John Stehl will produce it.

Allan Holubar is beginning production at United Studios of an original story titled "The Soul Seeker."

Katherine MacDonald has finished "The Infidel" and begins this week on a new production under the direction of Chester Withey.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray, Richard Willis, and Attorney Albert Kidder leave this week for New York. Ray, it is reported, will probably make a new contract.

HERE AND THERE



Herman Raymaker is finishing "The Matinee Idol," a Hallroom Boy comedy featuring Sid Smith. Jack Cohn, of the Hallroom Company, is to remain on the Coast six weeks.

Ben Wilson has sent the Jack Hoxie company to Big Bear Lake for exteriors for "Under Orders."

Eddie Lyons has just finished his fifth comedy for Arrow Film, titled "Brass Buttons."

"Chicago Theatre"

"Movieland's Wonderhouse"

Impressive exterior of "The Chicago"

New Chicago Theatre Surpasses All in Grandeur

Represents Close to Four Million Dollars

Awe inspiring through its size, magnificent in its architecture, and of surpassing luxury in its furnishings and decorations, Balaban & Katz's new theatre, The Chicago, stands a monument to the vision, courage and enterprise of these master showmen.

In Chicago it already is known as "the Wonder Theatre of the World" and motion picture notables gathered for the brilliant opening, gave it the palm for grandeur and splendor over all motion picture palaces hitherto erected.

The Chicago, as it stands today, represents an investment of close to four million dollars and incorporated within its walls is every known device to promote comfort and pleasure of its patrons and to insure the best in projection and presentation.

Unlike many other down town theatre properties, the Chicago Building is exclusively for theatre purposes and the box office alone must be looked to for revenue.

The seating capacity of the theatre is five thousand, twenty-six hundred on the main floor, five hundred in the mezzanine and nineteen hundred in the balcony. This capacity could be increased to fifty-five hundred under New York ordinances, thereby surpassing the capacity of any theatre in that city or in the country.

The auditorium proper covers a greater ground area than any theatre in the country, being a half block in width and one hundred and sixty feet in length. The exterior on State street, which contains the principal entrance, is a monumental design carried to a height equivalent to a seven-story building, in granite and polychrome terra cotta, with a frontage of sixty feet.

The State Street property is used exclusively for a lobby and runs east ninety-six feet to the auditorium proper, which runs north and south for one hundred and seventy feet, with its north end on Lake street.

Messrs. C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, who are the architects responsible for this splendid building, have followed the French style of architecture of the Louis fourteenth period throughout the interior and have made the exterior what is declared by Henry Wacker, chairman of the Chicago Plan Commission, as the handsomest building in Chicago.

The Chicago is another triumph for C. W. & Geo. L. Rapp, as well as for Messrs. Balaban & Katz, for whom they previously had built the Central Park Theatre, The Riveria and the magnificent Tivoli Theatre. They are known from coast to coast as the architects of splendid theatres in many cities and their work extending over a number of years has been the result of both having had extensive study and travel in Europe and the Orient. Their efforts have been to embody the finest in European examples which are regarded as monuments of the ages in American theatres and from these examples The Chicago and the other houses built by Rapp and Rapp have taken on greater lines and proportions, surpassing the European examples and with modern improvements meeting American demands. As in all the work, the interior of The Chicago is carried out in a definite style and period of architecture and they also include the scheme of decoration, lighting fixtures and all interior equipment, so that these lines are in perfect harmony and color.

Entering from State street, the visitor to the Chicago is ushered into a lobby treated in extremely elaborate design with a huge marble colonnade supporting a rich vaulted ceiling, which towers over him at an unobstructed height of sixty-five feet. This area is devoted entirely to the public as a promenade and entrance to the theatre. At the end of this lobby is a grand marble stairway, eighteen feet in width, which extends up to the mezzanine floor, continuing to the upper mezzanine promenade, intermediate balcony promenade, upper balcony promenade and the top floor of the balcony. Patrons using this stairway are at all times in view of the main floor of the grand lobby, thereby avoiding the usual narrow entrances and passageways to this portion of the theatre.

In the grand lobby there also is a grand promenade at the mezzanine floor level extending around all sides with a width of fifteen feet. This promenade is richly furnished with divans, heavily carpeted and with splendid oil paintings on the walls. The promenade is again repeated at the upper balcony level, giving the patrons of the balcony the same conveniences.

On the orchestra floor at right angles to the grand lobby and extending the full width of the auditorium is the grand promenade, which has a width of twenty feet and extends to a height of thirty-seven feet on the main axis of the theatre.

The seating arrangement on the orchestra floor proper is laid out on a European horse shoe plan, in which the minor promenade extends around all sides, terminating at the proscenium boxes. This contour or shape of the main floor gives a series of arches which are

A Double Achievement
The New Chicago and The New Major Switchboard

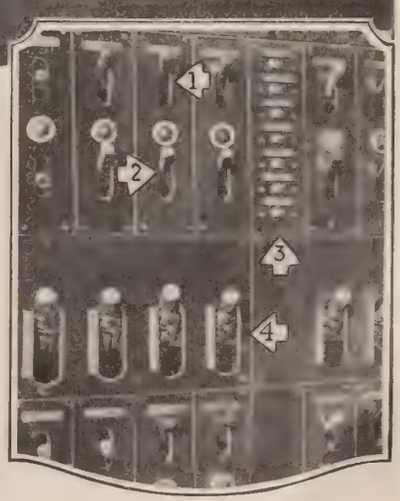
Here is a switchboard that is as much a marvel among switchboards as the magnificent New Chicago Theatre is among theatres.



Lighting effects of surpassing beauty on the facets and cornices of the elaborate auditorium embellishments are easily accomplished. Unsurpassed flexibility that places in the hands of the electrician the minute control of the smallest circuits of lights both for brilliance and blending.

This has been true of all Major Switchboards. The new design that lifts this Major Combination Pilot and Dimmer Board above the others is the placing each dimmer lever directly below the pilot switch for the lights they dim. Added to all of the other Major features—unequaled for theatre lighting control—is this new and revolutionary feature of absolute compactness.

Major Pre-Selective Remote Control Switchboards are being installed in the newest palaces of the theatre world as well as making modern the obsolete lighting of many of the fine long established ones.

THE MAJOR SYSTEM

Pre-Selective Remote Control

Another Great Stride in Theatre Lighting Control

New Major Combination Switchboard a Real Improvement

In building the huge and magnificent Chicago Theatre, Balaban and Katz impressed the world with a dazzling achievement. Quite as impressive, particularly to those interested, are the mechanics that made such a brilliant accomplishment possible. The lighting control is one of the outstanding features of these "behind the scenes" mechanics.

To understand fully the vast improvement obtained and the skillful engineering necessary to accomplish the one man control of such a huge electrical equipment, some comparison must be made to older methods and existing conditions. Under the open-knife switchboard plan a switchboard fully forty-five feet long would have been necessary to control the great number of circuits. In addition to this knife switchboard control the dimmer bank or group would have had to extend almost an equal distance beyond this or be placed over it on a "second story" level. This old type of switchboard, which is used today in many old theatres, would have taken four or five men to control the lights of the Chicago Theatre, during the performance. As all of the equipment would have been in the stage, it would have occupied a great deal of valuable stage space. The fire hazard would have been materially increased, and flexibility would be a nearly minus quality.

It should be remembered the most highly successful theatre swithboard is not the largest but the smallest that can be built to do the work. The Major Pre-Selective Remote Control Switchboard installed in the huge 5,000-seat Chicago Theatre is only twenty feet long! It seems impossible to believe the statement that the switchboard itself takes absolutely no additional stage space other than that required for the dimmer bank alone, but that is literally the truth. The major board is built to fit into the spaces left around the dimmer handles. This at once cuts the space required down to that needed for dimmers alone. When you realize in addition it can be "set up" for three scenes in advance and that changes can be made from one position. by one man, the equipment is really marvelous.

It is a new design of Major board. It contains all of the proven points of excellence the other Major Switchboards have and is built on the basically right principle of Pre-Selective Remote Control, the great improvement is one of combining the pilot switches with the dimmer controls on the same board and each contiguous to the other.

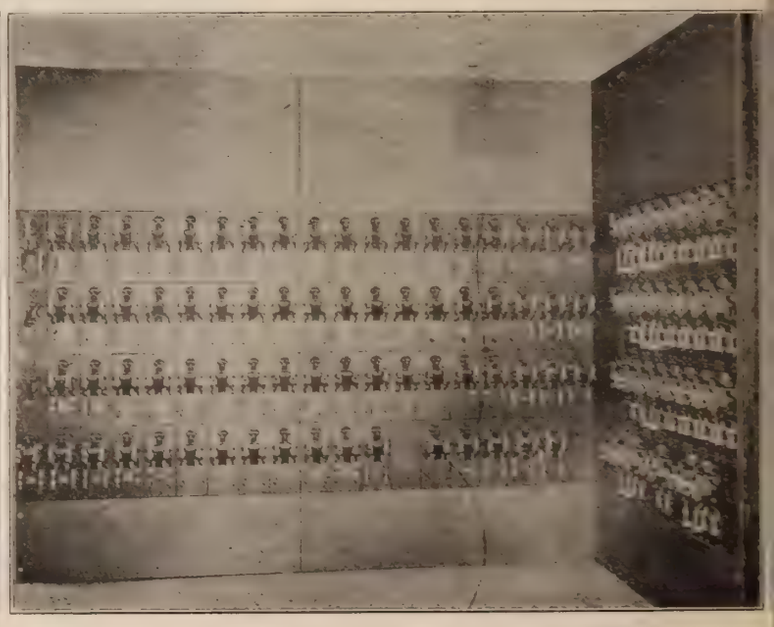
To make this clear we will take one unit switch. In the upper part of the unit is the "on" position lever, four inches below this is the "off" position lever, both of which are also pre-selective levers. Between these two is the pilot light that shows the condition of the circuit controlled (whether the lamps are lighted or not). Just below the lower lever is the handle of the dimmer plate that dims that particular circuit. There is a scale marked along the slot through which this dimmer handle protrudes that shows by position how much the lights are dimmed.

This entire unit is repeated again and again for as many circuits as need be controlled. Further division of circuits is made with tumbler snap switches in several panels, one panel along side of each set of pilot switches. By all of this you can see that the board is marvelously flexible as well as unusually compact.

The main control switches, the main dimmer levers and the big slow wheel drive dimmer control are all located at the center of the board within reach of one man. From this point the electrician makes all of his light changes. Between changes he goes to other parts of the board to "pre-select" his successive scenes.

Figures are usually dry affairs, but the following high spots should be interesting. There is a total current load on the stage switchboard of 390,220 watts. Of this the stage uses 202,800 and the Auditorium 187,420. This is divided into a total of 384 circuits and is controlled by 103 pilot switches. The circuits are further subdivided by 153 Tumbler switche Practically every circuit in the theatre is c dimmers and approximately 147 dimmer plat were required. These are constructed in bank, six high, directly behind the pilot boar Dimmers handle in the top row is within eas reach. The entire stage pilot board and dim mers occupy a floor space of only 4 ft. 7 in. b 20 ft. This is exactly the space the dimmer alone would occupy.

In the foregoing we have taken for grante that it was clearly understood that the Majo System is a Pre-Selective Pilot Board wit Remote Control. The heavy current is broke on a large remote magnetic switchboard in a enclosed room in out-of-the-way space in th basement. This remote board is in itself wel worth pages of description.



The switches are manufactured specially fo the Major system by the Cutler-Hammer Mfg Co., and all board connections are made wit bus bars, no wiring used. Of greater valu than the saving of stage space and the flex ibility and ease of control is the elimination o fire hazard. Only 7/10 of one ampere i broken on the stage and that behind steel plat and slate. No one can possibly damage th stage board by "shorting" and the entire ap paratus can be locked against unauthorize meddlers. Should any one "tamper" with th switches no harm can be done, as there is bu one path for current to travel at any one time

Another factor that makes for the safety o the audience is the extended remote control o house lights. With the Major System hous lights can be turned on from any desired poin or points in the house by a simple snap switch in a glass enclosed case.

The master MUSIC

incorporated in the new CHICAGO theatre

Balaban & Katz appreciate the fact that their high type of picture presentation needs the highest class music.

The successful transposition, from the head to the heart, of the ideas projected on the screen, can only come through the music of an organ built to reach the hearts of its hearers and not the discount demands of its purchasers.

Equipment of Chicago Theatre on Par With House

Nothing Left Undone to Obtain Perfection

While the splendid architectural and lighting effects, beauty of hangings, heavy carpeting and general air of luxury which distinguishes the Chicago, brings forth admiration from everyone entering the theatre, quite as impressive, particularly to theatre men, are the mechanics that make such a brilliant accomplishment possible.

The electrical system throughout the Chicago was installed by the Hub Electric Company, of Chicago, many of the instruments and devices used being manufactured specially for this theatre by that company. The magnitude of the electrical equipment may be realized from the fact that more than ten thousand electric lights are used to illuminate the interior of the house, and thousands of lights in addition are used on the exterior. The cove lighting throughout the house is of the three color system, amber, red and blue, with the colors independently controlled by dimmers. There is a perfect blend of one color into another every twenty minutes with the diffusion so gradual that it is hardly perceptible. Electric drive pumps, blowers, and a heating system in which electricity plays an important part, are also part of the Hub Electrical Company's contribution to this great theatre.

An interesting feature of the installation is the thermostat method of temperature regulation. In a closet adjacent to the manager's office is a control board which indicates the temperatures in various parts of the Chicago Theatre and enables the manager to set the various thermostats, distributed about the house, at proper degree of heat. From this board, also, is operated the opening and closing of dampers and ducts, that is the fresh air damper may be set half open and the return air half open. Also foul air exhaust dampers may be regulated. It also provides for the regulation of the coils and the heating system. Other indicators show the velocity at which the various fans are running and there are controls for regulating their motors. There is a complete inter-communicating system of house telephones and an electric flash system of reporting vacant seats to the chief usher, who has a board before him whereby he can determine the location of vacant seats in any part of the house.

The lighting control is one of the outstanding features of the "behind the scenes mechanics" and is accomplished through the use of the Major Pre-Selective Remote Control Switchboard.

The projection room in the Chicago is equipped with a battery of three Simplex Machines, Stereopticons, etc. The installation of the Peerless Automatic Arc Controls in the projection room, was accomplished through arrangements with the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company, Chicago, who also manufactured the controls in use at the Senate, Rivera, Tivoli and The Roosevelt, which play such an important part in the perfect projection of pictures at these houses, eliminating as they do the annoying colored lights, the semi-dark screen, and other undesirable conditions practically unavoidable with hand fed arcs.

A Raven "Haftone" screen manufactured by the Raven Screen Corp., New York City, is an important part of the Chicago's equipment.

On one of the upper floors over the lobby of the Chicago, is provided a full sized stage with complete system of stage lighting, etc., for use of the presentation department, which here prepares elaborate prologues and other scenic effects used on the Chicago stage. The musical director also is provided with a room where he can view the pictures and arrange the musical settings for them before they are seen on the screen of the Chicago.

The large general offices of Balaban & Katz also occupy one of the floors over the lobby and are considered one of the handsomest suites of offices in the city.

The wrecking of the buildings which stood on the present site of the Chicago was completed in record time by the W. J. Newman Company of Chicago, who also made quick time with the monster excavation for the foundation and basement structures of the theatre.

Col. Fred Levy to Erect $250,000 House

There is no gloom or fear of the future in certain of the Kentucky motion picture circles. Close on the heels of the opening of the new "Kentucky" in Louisville Col. Fred Levy, original Associated First National franchise holder for Kentucky and Tennessee, has completed negotiations for the erection in Lexington, Ky. of a new theatre, to seat 1,500 and to cost approximately $250,000.

The name of the new house has not been determined, but it is to be one of the finest theatrical structures in the state and the management will seek to obtain patronage of the highest class. Construction is to start in November, and the house will be opened next April, it is expected. It will be the home of Associated First National attraction in Lexington. It is stated that every comfort of the modern theatre will be provided and a pipe organ will furnish the music. The main floor will seat 1,200.

Show Movies in Church

The Jamestown, N. Y., Baptist Church has installed a $2,000 equipment for the showing of motion pictures. The pastor is now giving movie sermons every Sunday night.—TAYLOR.

Latest of Foy Theatres Has Modern Equipment

The Parkway, Dallas, Texas, latest of the Foy Neighborhood Theatres, and erected at a cost of $60,000, is said to be one of the most pretentious theatres of its kind in the entire Southwest.

Ed. Foy, Sr., of Dallas, who is credited with originating the neighborhood theatre in the Southwest, has partly realized a dream of his to build a chain of 10 neighborhood theatres.

The Columbia, opened in 1917, was the first venture. Being an instant success, Foy added the Colonial in 1919; the Rialto in 1920 and the Bluebird in 1921. With the opening of the Parkway, the list expands to six.

The Parkway is of a modernized Colonial type of architecture. F. J. Woerner & Co., Dallas, were the architects and W. H. King, contractor. With its large square pillars, the exterior resembles a wide Southern veranda. An atmosphere of simplicity and refinement prevails. The construction is of brick furnished by the Acme Brick & Supply Co., Southwestern Life Bldg. The foundation consists of reinforced waterproof concrete walls of brick interior finished with "Acme" cement plaster. Plastering contractor was G. E. Lake.

Sheet metal used in the ceiling and ventilators and fire proof doors found in the projection room are furnished by Texas Sheet Metal Works. Beams, railing, brass work, push bars are of iron and steel purchased from the Mosher Mfg. Co. The marble and tile work is from J. C. Bruggen, marble and tile contractor. Plate glass is from Federal Glass & Paint Co. "Build Up" roofing of asphalt and felt is from the Southwest Brick, Tile & Roofing Co., all the above firms being located in Dallas.

Seating capacity is 826 mahogany chairs outlined in gold designs, and are comfortably placed on a slope from three-quarters inch to a foot, with plenty of room left between seats.

The interior is finished in light grey with walls bordered in imitation of Caenstone Mado, decorated with semi-conventional designs. William T. Peaco is the decorator. Graceful wreaths and flowers in tans, blues and rose lend a pretty color note as do the drapes in deep rose velour and silken cushion puff Austrian shades of fine pongee. Rose velvet hides the organ pit from view, while rose velour curtains are hung across the last row of seats at the rear of the house to protect the eyes of patrons from the light entering the doors. All drapes are from W. A. Green Co., Dallas.

On the right, a stairway leads to the ladies' parlor and retiring room. Here is found a distinct feature, for the mothers can rest comfortably in wicker chairs and see the picture at the same time through a large square opening cut for that purpose.

A lounging and smoking room for the men is on the left side, leading into an unusually large projection room, 15 feet square, on its right.

To increase quietness and eliminate vibration a motor generator set was installed downstairs in a specially constructed generator room.

The projection room equipped at approximately $5,000 is said to be the most modern in Dallas, and not to be excelled by any theatre in the Southwest. Two of the Power's 6-B Machines equipped with Type "E" Lamphouses, New Mechanical Governor speed controls, Snap-Lite Lenses, together with a 50-50 ampere General Electric Motor Generator constitutes a portion of this equipment, furnished by the Southern Theatre Equipment Company. H. A. Vinyard, for three years with the Colonial is chief projectionist.

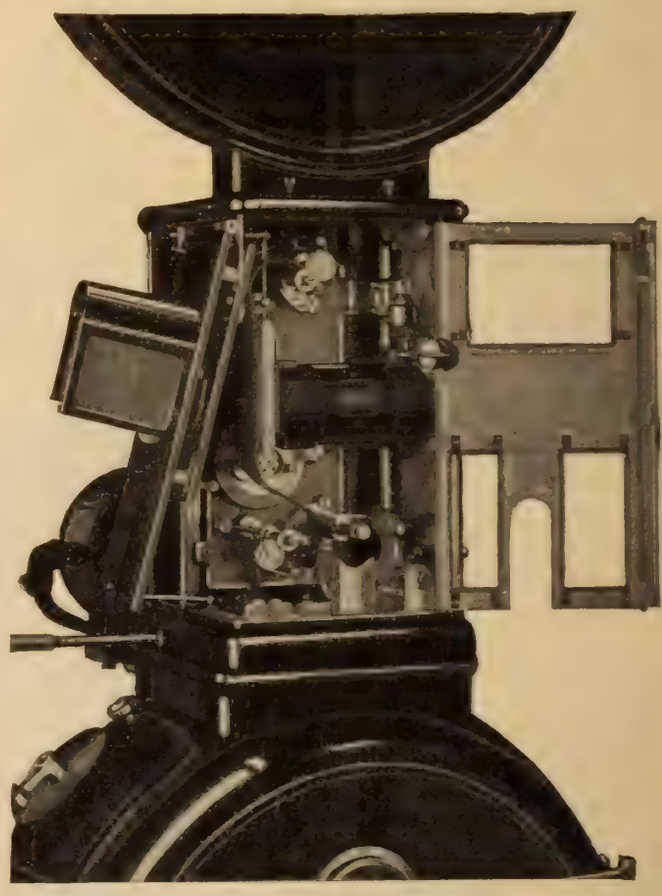
Facts and Fiction

We were First to regard the intrusion of dust,
And the First the Wheels to Enclose,
The First to avoid Soft Metal Castings,
And thus not on the user impose.

We were the First to make them of Steel,
And the First to Harden the Gears,
The First to make use of the Pedestal,
And this by a number of years.

But as in some of these claims we're not alone,
We'll be First to offer the Proof,
So if you'll consult the Patent Records,
You'll be sure to Learn the Truth.

And while the Records you have at hand,
Take a Further Look at the same,
And you'll find the "Shutter Adjustment"
Wasn't first by the one by whom claimed.



After one that precedes and blazes the way,
Another may follow with different form,
But that isn't the work of the Pioneer,
It only makes way for Blowing the Horn.

But what does it matter tho it be ours,
A fading honor, to have had first place,
It's the one who's alert and continues to Lead,
That'll hold at the Head of the Race.

It's the Machine that'll Project the Picture Best,
That'll bring the Most Dollars in,
And that requires the Least in the way of Upkeep,
That'll help the Boys in the booth To Win.

So while Honors are Heaping broad and high,
We'll work to Keep in the Lead,
We'll strive to give the Best Service to all,
And users will be Motiograph Boosters indeed.

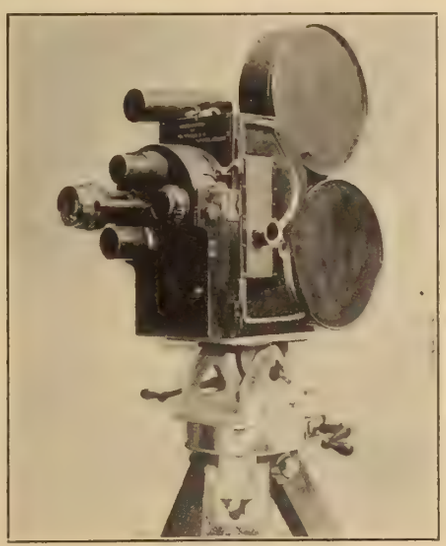
Many New Camera Improvements Have Appeared Recently

A Paper Delivered Before S. M. P. E. by Carl Louis Gregory, F. R. P. S.



THE ever widening fields to which the motion picture is being adapted has induced manufacturers and inventors to bring forth many new camera designs and to make many improvements in the old standard designs.

It is the purpose of this paper to list briefly the more important developments in camera design which have appeared recently. It would be impossible, of course, in a paper of this kind to list every improvement and invention directly related to motion picture cameras—the list would be too long and voluminous; therefore the writer has endeavored merely to present a brief synopsis leaving to the manufacturers and inventors the task of supplying to those more intimately interested a more minute description of the particular virtues of their products.

Probably no camera, since the making of motion pictures became a business, has shown so many departures from established design as the Akeley Camera, invented by Carl E. Akeley, explorer, sculptor, taxidermist, inventor of the cement gun and Curator of African Animals at the American Museum of Natural History.

Mr. Akeley, while doing extensive scientific work in the jungles of Africa, found the usual type of motion picture camera inadequate and unreliable for the various uses of field work and thereupon, knowing the demands of the photographer, conceived the principal of the present Akeley Camera.

The Akeley is the shape of an enlarged round pill box set on edge atop of the tripod. The cover of this box carries a telescopic looking view finder, the turning crank and a footage meter; on one side of the edge of this pill box is a lens hood and on the other a long wooden handle like a policeman's stick; while at the top edge is a carrying handle; on the bottom of the box a supporting arm extends from the base to the center.

This base and arm are the panoramic and tilting devices containing trains of gears with a small flywheel to insure steady movement. Both pan and tilt can be worked simultaneously with the left hand by means of the long wooden handle to follow any object moving obliquely, such as a rising airplane. Both have quick shifts or releases which may be released at will or held at release.

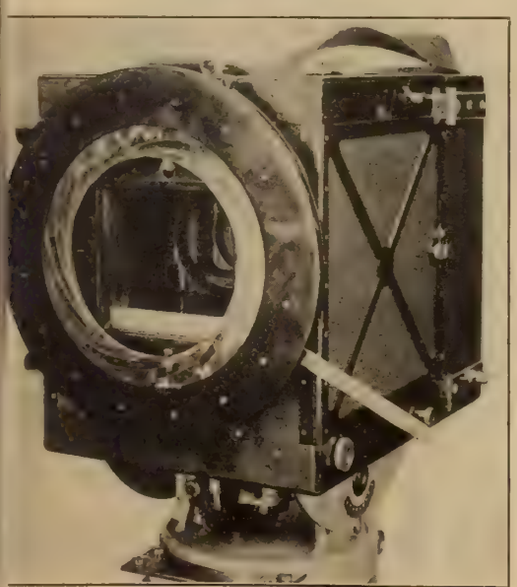
The tripod is constructed on the principle of a truss bridge enabling it to be made light but strong and the truss which gives the rigidity can be released by a catch and the length of the legs changed as readily as pushing a slide trombone.

The tripod head which releases by three quick turn screws carries the camera and panning and tilting devices on a ball and socket joint which can be locked level almost instantaneously irrespective of whether the tripod is placed level or not. Thus the camera can be removed from the tripod for setting on a stump or a rock and still have the advantage of the ball and socket quick-levelling head and the panoram and vertical tilt.

The finder is jointed at the axis of the tilting mechanism and by means of an erecting prism not only keeps the image right side up but also keeps the eyepiece floating at the height of the eye no matter in what direction the camera may be tilted.

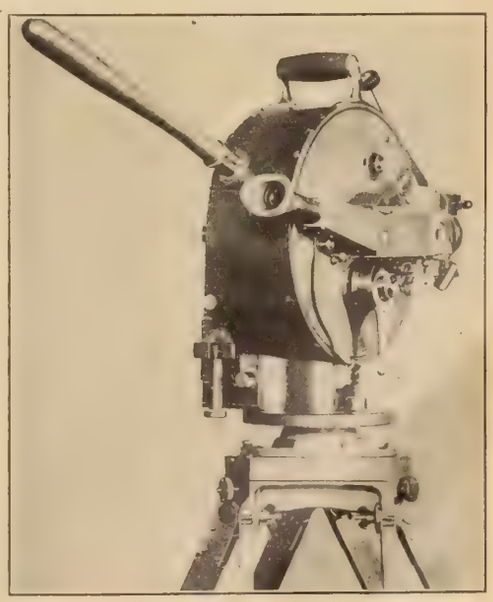
Matched twin lenses permit of watching the picture on a ground glass and the focus followed on the ground glass or by a dial which indicates the distance at which the lens is set and changed by a knurled wheel while operating the camera. A slide plate carrying the lenses may be quickly replaced by another plate carrying lenses of any focal length.

The inside magazines hold the standard 200 foot rolls of film and which after exposure it returns to the same box. Replacing magazine and threading takes from 10 to 20 seconds which offsets the necessity of a larger magazine.



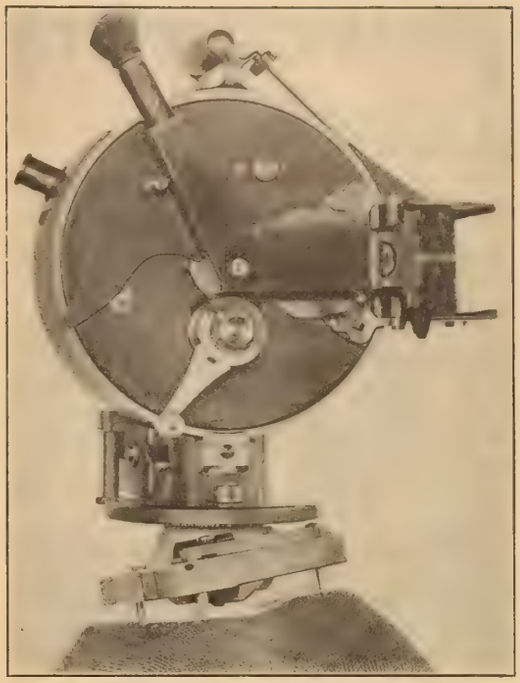
The film movement of the single finger type is of positive action, both forward and back. Removal of one screw permits taking this entire unit from camera. Moves the film 120 degrees of the circle, making possible a shutter of 240 degrees opening.

The shutter is of the barrel type and is actually focal plane in character as it encircles the entire camera mechanism just inside the exterior shell and cuts across the focal plane just in front of the film. Its efficiency is much greater than any disk shutter of usuable dimensions could possibly be.



The main outstanding features of this camera which are equalled by no other are: facility with which moving objects may be followed, efficiency of the shutter, ability to work without tripod, lightness and rigidity of tripod, quickness of loading, and extreme range of tilt and pan.

The next most radical departure from conventional camera design is probably the Russell Camera.



The radical feature of the Russell Camera is the relative arrangement of the lens and film magazines. They are so disposed that the lens is mounted in a deep recess within the camera casing. The appearance of the camera when closed is that of a rectangular box with an oblong opening in one end in which the lens is set, the position of the magazines on either side of this recess forming a natural sunshade for the lens. Although the lens is placed far back from the front of the camera, the recess in which it is located is of such size that vignetting does not occur.

Rear view of Akeley Camera

Akeley Camera in use without tripod

Vignetting and double exposure devices are placed directly on the front of the camera and do not interfere with the lens carriage, which may be instantly drawn forward, making the lens accessible for cleaning or removal.

The film magazines take Eastman film, 400-foot rolls, direct from the can without removing the wooden spool. Light traps are provided which open automatically one-half inch when the camera is closed, thus eliminating all danger of scratches. All sprockets and rollers and the aperature plates are recessed so that the film surface touches nowhere throughout its course except on the sprocket holes.

The dissolving shutter dissolves out and in automatically in three different selective speeds. This shutter can also be operated by hand and can be set for any angle from 170 degrees to 0.

Focusing is accomplished by an ocular at the back of the camera which shows the image right side up. By operating a lever at the top of the camera the film, without being removed from the aperture plate, may be swung to one side as the ground glass automatically takes its place. As this operation is accomplished in three seconds and without opening the camera or losing an inch of film by exposure to the light, it is truly a great time and film saver. In focusing, the lens carriage is moved by means of a knurled button on the left of the camera and is so geared as to give a micrometer movement. It can, however, be released instantly for drawing the carriage forward to permit of a change of lens.

A very accurate focusing scale is fitted on the back of the machine and is scaled to feet for those who prefer that method of focusing. This is also an advantage in following the focus while operating the machine.

The take-up is a multiple disc clutch which will take up 400 feet forward or backward with the slightest effort.

Forward and back cranking can be done instantaneously without shifting of belts. Simply reversing the crank automatically releases the forward take-up spool and the back spool takes hold. In going forward, the feed spool likewise is free, which prevents hard cranking when on the roll is larger on one side than the other.

All lenses, from 40 millimeter to 6-inch focus, mounted in similar lens tubes which can be changed in a few seconds, may be used without protruding beyond the front of the camera.

The movement is a new design, doing away with all such wearing parts as cams, guides, slots, springs, etc.

The crank handle is located at the lowest center of gravity, which prevents any torque movement. It is permanently attached to the camera and can be folded out of the way when the camera is not in use.

The Russell Camera is 9 inches high, 7¾ inches wide and 10¾ inches long. It weighs about 20 pounds including a 400 foot roll of film. It is very compact and easily handled.

R. W. Pittman, maker of the Pittman and Photo Cines Cameras, well-known as low priced cameras for topical and semi-professional work, has ready for the market a machine of higher class resembling the Bell and Howell type of all metal camera with multiple lens turret carrying four lenses.

Focusing is accomplished by movement of the lens turret instead of individual focusing mounts and the image is viewed at the aperture by an eyepiece on the side of the camera.

Magazines are separate circular boxes of heavy gauge metal with automatic opening light traps.

A veeder footage counter is built into the machine as well as an automatic and hand shutter dissolve, punch, mask slide, etc.

The turret is on a hinged front housing which swings back giving easy access to the shutter and movement mechanism which is easily removable for inspection or repair. The shutter meshes in correct position only, so there is no chance of replacing it out of time with the movement.

Mr. Pittman is also constructing a small camera of 75 foot capacity to be operated by spring motor which may be carried about like a kodak, likewise a vest-pocket camera for taking snapshots on motion picture film.

The Société Francaise Sept, 85 Avenue Kleber, Paris, have lately put out a camera made by the well known Debrie establishment which holds five meters of film, driven by clock work. It may be loaded in daylight and takes either motion scenes up to twenty feet in length or 300 individual snapshots as may be desired. The lens has an aperture of f3.5 and is set in an accurate focusing mount.

The new model of the professional Debrie Camera appears outwardly much the same as formerly, but is now equipped with automatic shutter dissolve and a number of minor refinements in construction and design.

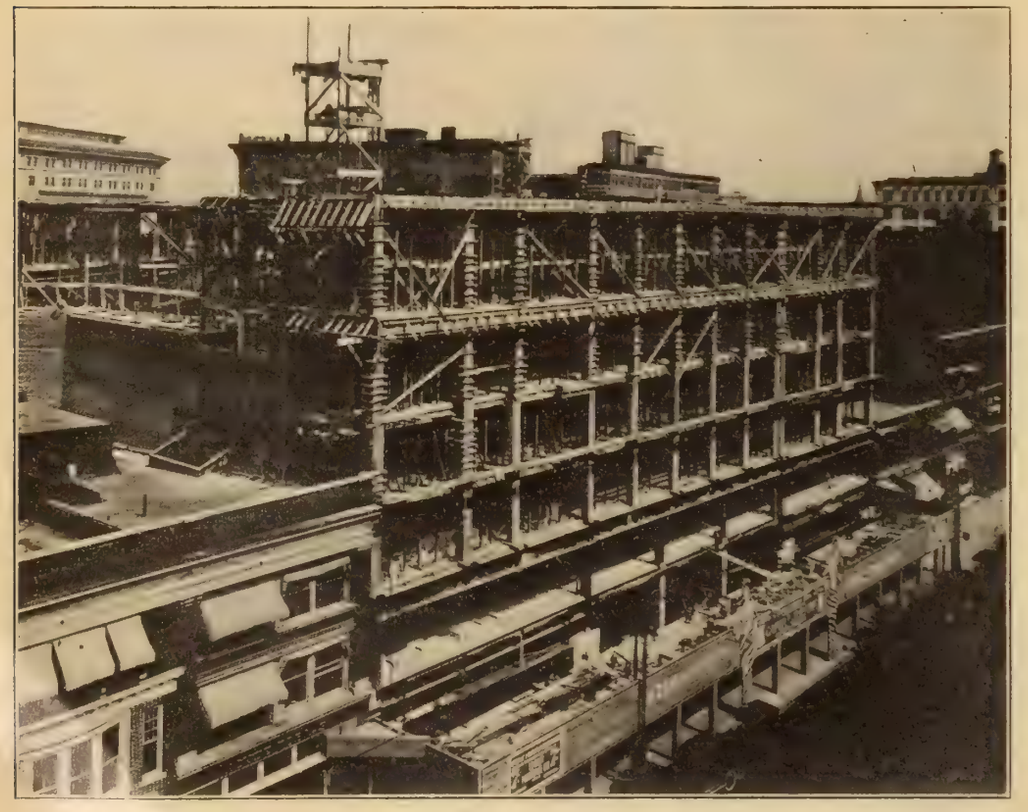
Fog Handicap Is at Last Overcome at London Studio by Ingenious Device

Atmospheric Problem Which Caused Loss of Thousands at Paramount Has Been Solved

The atmospheric problem which has seriously handicapped production ever since the opening of the Islington studio of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., has at last been solved, according to a statement from the New York office of the Paramount organization. A system of air purification, designed by one of the foremost English engineering companies and now in successful use at the studio, has brought the desired relief and is expected to pay for itself through the saving of time on a single production.

It was just a year ago during the filming of Donald Crisp's production, "Appearances," that the studio management first realized fully what havoc London climate could play in the making of a motion picture. At that time there was a long period of foggy weather. The fog permeated the studio to such an extent that production was held up for days at a time and the loss which it entailed was conservatively estimated at more than $50,000.



Since then, the Carrier Engineering Co., Ltd., has been at work on a device to eliminate the trouble. By an elaborate system of air-washing and subsequent heating under pressure, the air within the studio is now kept perfectly clear and not a day has passed when conditions have not been ideal for interior photography. The air is drawn from the outside under at the rate of three and a half million gallons per hour. This air is admitted through a series of baffle plates which break it up completely. It then passes successively through two banks of sprays fed by a large intake pipe from the street main. The water is chilled to a very low temperature, which produces a condensation of the dampness in the air fed through. Thus thoroughly washed the air passes over a series of heating banks and reaches the studio at the temperature called for by the thermostats.

At all times the air pressure inside the studio is kept at a point slightly higher than that outside, making it impossible for the outside or unwashed air to get in, although the pressure is quite unnoticed by the workers in the building.

The invention is regarded as the salvation of the motion picture producing industry in England, especially in London and vicinity where the fogs are particularly heavy and frequent at certain protracted periods of the year.

Erect Fergus Falls Theatre

A theatre is being erected at Fergus Falls, Minn., by John Lautitzen & Co. It will cost about $50,000.

Detroit's skyline shifts daily as Kunsky's wonder theatre, the new Capitol, assumes its complete proportions. The erecting of the Capitol heads an unprecedented building era in Michigan motion picture history. It will open December 15 and be the first run First National franchise theatre in the motor city

Important P. S. Commission Ruling

The following letter from D. H. Finke, managing director of the Bellevue Theatre Corporation, Niagara Falls, N. Y., tells of a most important ruling in that state on electric current rates.

Wm. A. Johnston, Esq., Editor,
Motion Picture News,
729 Seventh Ave.,
New York City.
Dear Sir:

By virtue of a decision in the form of a ruling from the Public Service Commission just received we will henceforth receive electric current used in our projection room on a power instead of a lighting rate.

Particular emphasis should be laid to the importance of this decision because it effects a saving to exhibitors in every part of the state of thousands of dollars each year. This is easily figured because exhibitors have always paid eight times the amount under the lighting rate as they will now have to pay under the power rating.

This victory was won by us singularly without any co-operation from other exhibitors or exhibitors associations.

We know this information will prove very valuable to you.

Very truly yours,
BELLEVUE THEATRE CORPN.,
D. H. Finke,
Managing Director.

Faller Contracts for Motiographs

Sig Faller, owner of the Bijou Dream Theatre, State street, Chicago, has contracted for the installation of three Motiograph De Luxe Projectors in his house.

These machines are of the new type just put on the market by the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, and which are said by experts to mark a great advance in projectors.

Projection is one of Mr. Faller's hobbies and he selected the battery of Motiographs for his theatre after making a thorough study of the various machines on the market and visiting the Enterprise Optical Company's plant and observing how the De Luxe projector is built.

Install Mammoth Organ

Unusual festivities at Los Angeles attended the opening of the Kinema theatre with its mammoth five manual, $75,000 Robert Morton orchestral organ. Recently the factory superintendent of the Van Nuys, California, Robert Morton shops, made his first installation inspection of the new organ. On the following day the thirty-two foot Bombards organ pipes were installed. These mammoth pipes comprise the most important part of the specification, because the Kinema theatre stage had to be reconstructed in order to properly house them. The organ is now being sounded so that the various tone combinations will be perfectly voiced.

Who Can Solve This?

Gentlemen:

We note your recent description of an automatic curtain machine.

This is beyond us as we only run one show per day but what would interest us would be a plan or system of pulleys that would move the curtain by hand.

Do you know any such system?

Yours very truly,
C. A. S.

Let us hear from some of the N. A. M. L. members on this.

The model projection room of James theatre, Columbus, O., contains three type "S" model Simplex machines and a Simplex dissolving stereopticon and Simplex spot lamp.

Argus Makes One of This Year's Most Complete Projection Installations

New James Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, Has Excellent Equipment

The projection room shown in the accompanying photo adds another feather in the cap of the Argus Enterprises, Inc., northern Ohio distributors for Simplex projectors. The layout here pictured has been given the "once over" by some of the leading projection engineers of this country and their expressed opinions concerning its completeness and excellence may be verified at a glance.

The projection machines are of the latest Type "S" model, finished in battleship gray with nickeled mechanisms. There are three of these machines and all are equipped with half size Snaplite lenses. The mechanisms, speed controls, etc., embody every feature as yet manufactured by the Precision Machine Co.

To the left is a special Simplex dissolving stereopticon also finished in gray to correspond to the projectors with all movable metal parts nickeled. This is the second machine of this type to be installed in this country.

A Special Simplex spot lamp equipped with both an iris and mica dissolve occupies the other end of the room.

The rheostats, placed on a concrete slab above the projectors, are of 125 ampere capacity. They are controlled by the Robins remote control method and the control boards on which are mounted the ammeter and voltmeter together with the speed indicators are recessed in the front wall of the projection room to the right of each machine.

An iris shutter is mounted over each machine port opening. These shutters are connected by one master cord and are used in place of the dowser shutters for the dissolving and changeover of reels.

The fire door system is a distinct departure from the usual method of control as the photograph shows, there being but one master cord. Each door is hung independently of the other and all are suspended from the arm mounted under the rheostat shelf. A weight on one end of the arm supplies the necessary power to turn the arm should the links melt, thereby releasing the chains supporting the doors instantly. The fire door tracks are padded with felt at the base making it practically impossible to hear them fall.

The lighting and ventilating systems are as near perfection as could be desired, there being one twenty-four inch exhaust fan to remove the foul air from the room through the vents over each machine and behind each rheostat. The fresh air is supplied from a duct leading to the roof of the theatre structure.

Another admirable and distinctly noticeable feature of this installation is the complete absence of conduit and wiring from view, all conduit running under the concrete floor and the only exposed wiring being that from the machine pedestals to the switch and lamp.

The walls are decorated with a blending of dark flat green shades of paint thereby reducing eye strain to a minimum. The floor is covered with a battleship linoleum of the wall shade.

Fireproof enclosed rewinds and film cabinets, enclosed switch boards all of which are decorated to conform with the general decorating scheme, complete the equipment. The entire room presents a decidedly restful effect to the eye.

The projectionist is enabled to get a sharp focus on the screen at all times by the aid of high powered binoculars, a pair of which is permanently mounted over each port opening. Communication with other parts of the house is established by means of an elaborate dictaphone and signal lighting system.

This entire installation was personally supervised and directed by S. A. Westall of Columbus, Ohio, the engineer in that city for the Argus Enterprises, Inc., and was made for W. M. James, who operates the James theatre of Columbus. The house itself cost over one million dollars, seats three thousand people and was designed by C. Howard Crane, Detroit architect. Joseph Urban, it is more than interesting to note, is responsible for the gorgeous stage setting which is without a doubt one of the most beautiful in Ohio. Baumgarten furnished and hung the draperies.

Projectionists Carl E. Neal and George W. Halliday are in charge of this most excellent installation of projection equipment and are getting wonderful screen results.

Mr. Westall is at present designing and making arrangements for the installation of similar equipment in two other large theatres in central Ohio.

All of his installations show the results of careful and intelligent planning. He, as well as the entire Argus organization, are firm believers in their slogan that "Perfect Projection Pays," and to this end they are to be commended.

The Parkway a Comfortable House

lar requirements of the Parkway Theatre, has been installed to bring out the more minute details of the picture and reduce eye strain to the very minimum. A specially constructed motor driven rewinder and film cabinet affords safety and convenience for handling and rewinding films.

The lobby of the Parkway was given much consideration as an elaborate array of specially constructed lobby display frames grace the corners and the interior of the lobby. The color blends in perfect harmony with that of the lobby as the frames are finished in mottled blue and gold.

The box office includes latest equipment including ticket selling machine and change register. A sanitary drinking fountain with iced water just on the inside administers to the comfort of patrons.

The lighting system is indirect thruout, with not an exposed globe. Three circuits of different colors harmonizing with the main color scheme give a soft note from lights placed at the tops of five pilasters on either side of the auditorium.

The ventilation system is simple, and original with Foy. A multiple blade fan, purchased from the American Blower Co., with capacity sufficient to give a complete air change every two minutes, is installed behind the stage, making a plenum chamber entirely under the stage, 17 x 24 and 4½ feet high.

The air is distributed clear across the whole face of the stage, which gives it distribution across the auditorium, 50 feet wide and 135 in length. This dispenses with air pockets. The fan has a full velocity of 75,000 cubic feet per minute.

Heating is by 8 gas steam radiators, each having a thermostat which keeps the house at the same temperature at all times. As the people come in and the air gets warmer the heat is automatically cut off until the house becomes 70 degrees. The Southwest Heating Company furnished the heating equipment.

A $15,000 Hilgreen-Lane organ furnished by Will A. Watkin Co., equipped with two manuals and pedals, including xylophone, harp, orchestra, bells from harp and chimes in four notes, has been installed. There are 19 speaking stops, 9 couplers, 6 pistons, combinations adjustable, 7 accessories 3 pedal movements, 2 sections, and detachable console. Carl Weisemann, state president of Nat'l Ass'n who gave a concert at the opening of the Parkway, pronounces the tonal quality rich and beautiful. Mrs. Cleve Hilderbrand, for three years with the Columbia, is organist.

Since the building of the first theatre, the Columbia, Foy's record has been a theatre a year, "but," says Mr. Foy, "we expect to exceed that in the future."

As soon as the contract is signed, work will begin on the next $60,000 theatre, this time to be substituted for the Bluebird in Oak Cliff. The exact location, which will be on Jefferson street, has not yet been definitely chosen.

The Columbia Theatre will also be substituted for a modern fireproof theatre building next fall. The seating capacity will be increased from 500 to 1500. In addition to the motion picture house, three stories will be utilized as apartments.

Os Long, for several years manager of the Colonial, and which under his direction has become a success, has been appointd manager of the new house.

Camera Improvements Appear

The French Pathé Camera remains practically the same as before the war but the American Pathé which is the name frequently applied to the Wilart Camera, has forged ahead so consistently that the old simile no longer applies.

Even the old familiar form of the studio model with overhead exterior magazines will soon become a thing of the past for the new model of the Wilart Camera which will appear shortly has lines distinctively its own and the magazines will be placed inside the camera so that it can be taken from its case threaded ready for operation.

Some of the advantages of the present Wilart model over the Pathé are as follows: all metal construction, automatic shutter dissolve, all metal film race, automatic opening light traps, focusing view finder, improved focusing mechanism, ball bearings, Veeder counter, interior masks, etc.

The Wilart Instrument Company is about to put on the market a small motion picture camera using half width film for home use which they expect will have many commercial applications as well. This camera, called the Arcograph, looks like a miniature model of the Bell & Howell and is made with the same care and precision as a professional camera. The pictures made by this little instrument are one-quarter the standard size and the projector of portable type with a reel of film ready threaded is about the size of a lunch box or a bag for a man's bathing suit.

The Universal Camera sold by Burke & James now has an automatic shutter dissolve built into the camera and a turret attachment for carrying extra lenses is now available.

The American Motion Picture Machine Company have recently brought out a turret for four lenses which they attach to the Pathé professional camera.

The Bell & Howell Camera Company announce two outstanding new features which may be attached to any of the Bell & Howell Cameras. These features are the Cinemotor or electric drive and the Ultraspeed attachment.

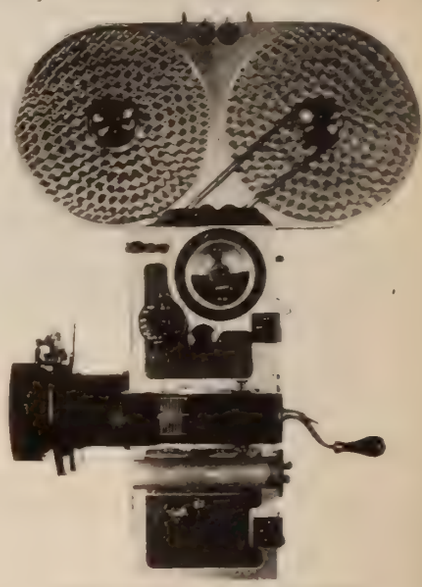
The Ultraspeed attachment requires some changes in the camera which make it necessary to send the camera to the factory so that this appliance may be fitted. This is a new shuttle and a step up gear for the crank by the use of which the speed of taking may be increased eight times or more. After being once installed the new Ultraspeed device is interchangeable with the old pilot pin shuttle and either ordinary speed pictures or ultraspeed can be made with the same camera.

The Cinemotor or electric camera driving device consists of a compact aluminum housing enclosing a reversible electric motor and controlling device.

It is equipped with a combination switch making possible the use of either alternating or direct current of 110 volts for operation, which also controls the direction of rotation and for stopping and starting. Positive variable speeds are obtained by the manipulation of a control knob carrying a pointer which traverses a calibrated dial indicating pictures exposed per second, ranging from 1 to 32 and upward. Limit stops provide quick adjustment or shifting to predetermined working speeds, while camera is in motion. A clutch is provided for moving the motor shaft into or out of engagement with the camera shutter shaft without necessitating the stopping of the motor.

A centrifugal governor of extreme sensitiveness insures uniform operation compensating for fluctuations in the supply voltage and at the same time responding instantly to the change of speed as desired from 24 pictures per second to 4 pictures per second or vice versa may be made instantaneously. The new hand dissolve attachment carries a graduated dial and limit stops which permits the shifting of the degree of opening of the shutter contemporaneously with the variation of the speed of the camera, thus allowing for an even and uniform density of negative.

The operation of the Cinemotor is absolutely free of all vibration and eliminates the unsteadiness of turning, which is a large factor when operating by hand. In this connection it dispenses entirely with the human element and its accompanying variations and completes the chain of mechanically operated apparatus for photographing which further insures the quality of the output.



The unlimited possibilities offered by the Cinemotor along the lines of remote control of the camera is very apparent as the distance at which it can be operated is dependent only on the length of the extension cord supplying the current. By utilizing this advantage the camera man or director can start or stop the camera at any psychological moment or when "turning" on hazardous scenes where distant control is desirable.

Among the English cameras the Prestwich, Darling, Wrench, Ensign and Moy have altered very little in design.

The Williamson model now has a le turret carrying three lenses.

Two motor-driven English models a offered, ostensibly to do away with the u of a tripod; one is the electro Gyrospi which, as its name implies, depends fc stability on the action of a Gyroscope, driven by a small electric motor. A messy storage batteries must be carried does not present much promise. The othe model of the same type, but driven b compressed air, is the Aeroscope. It ca be charged with compressed carbon dio ide on the A Sparklet A principle.

The "Vinten" camera is unique in tha instead of being screwed to the tripo head in the normal way, the rotating an tilting mechanism are integral with th camera. It is all metal, has a four len turret, automatic shutter dissolve, autc matic light traps, a movement with on claw only, and the image can be inspecte on the film while taking without dange of fogging.

Side elevation of Wilart Camera

Probably the highest class of Englis camera is the Sinclair "US" Kinem Camera No. 3. It is an all-metal rectang ular box, compact and strong. It has au tomatic reverse, automatic shutter rade automatic light traps, interchangeable len mounts, accurate counter, and all control are at the back.

Several other camera models are nearl ready for the market, but for various rea sons their sponsors are not as yet read to make any announcement concernin them.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Lyceum Theatre, Meadville, Pa.
National Anti-Misframe League.

Dear Secretary — Am enclosing filled out membership application for membership in "The League."

For a starter, can any of the brothers give me any information about the Proctor Automatic Projector.

By all means set some space aside in the NEWS for this purpose. I want to ask a lot of questions but would hate to do it all at once.

I have some surplus "steam" to let off in regards to small town film service, but will wait until later, as it will require several sheets for same.

As to the fellows "waiting" to send in questions and answers, I would remind them not to hesitate as no one man knows it all. Let's go!

Awaiting an early action on this application, I beg to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. NEUROH,
Lyceum Theatre.

You have the right idea. Acting on your suggestion steps have been taken to give you the information you want concerning the new U. T. E.-Proctor Projector.—Ed.

Champaign, Ill.,
Nov. 8, 1921.

Dear Sir:

Having read many of the letters appearing in the N. A. L. M. section and also the fact that I have not written to the News for some time, I have been prompted to write a few suggestions for the betterment of projection and projectionists.

As a great deal of my experience has been on Simplexes, my theories and methods are based on that machine, nevertheless they are applicable to other machines. My first subject will be the film, its abuse and a number of preventatives of its abuse. Scratching and leakage of oil on film seem to be the greatest detriment to the industry today. Scratching, the greater evil of the two, I will take up first. A projectionist, one who really takes an interest in his work, will have new parts when needed and therefore will eliminate the scratching of film. The small rollers of a machine SHOULD BE changed and new ones installed at least once a year, while the larger rollers will last about two years. This holding good for a seven hour day, seven day week. Machines run more than this should have new rollers oftener. Machines should be adjusted with a CORRECT AMOUNT OF TENSION to insure film running on raised portions of rollers and not let edge of film touch the lower portions and only the sprocket holes should run on raised portions. The shoes of the film trap should be watched very closely and renewed frequently, especially those on back plate next to aperture as there is but little space between film and aperture. A wearing of four or five months and then these should be turned. The film guide holder and the film guide itself should also be replaced when worn. The film guide holder should not be left in, until completely worn down, but changed when worn about half way down. The intermittent film guide which probably wears the least should be changed when inside portions have about twice the thickness of film between these portions and film. My reason for not letting parts wear entirely out is because of grit and dirt on film which will have a clearance between parts and film and will therefore not scratch film.

Sprocket teeth on sprocket wheels should also not be allowed to wear and undercut as they damage film to a great extent.

The abolishment of the small hub wheel will also be a benefit to the industry, though it may never come as a great expense would be caused by the adoption of a larger hub reel. For it is very evident that the small hub has much to do with the scratching of film at the first and end of film.

Now for the oil on film. Keep the intermittent case full of oil. Sprocket shafts require ONE DROP OF OIL (after a machine has been broken in) more oil than this will leak out on film. Experiments have shown that one drop is plenty in every three hours, on each oil hole for sprocket shafts, other bearings need more oil. The lower shaft has a felt washer at end of bearing next to sprocket wheel that keeps the oil from seeping out. If this is worn out it should be replaced. Simplex also supplies a felt washer for the intermittent sprocket wheel shaft that keeps the oil off the intermittent sprocket wheel. Now by wiping sprocket wheels, aperture and shoes, one keeps off practically all oil and dirt. The conscientious projectionist will do this and aid in the prevention of oil on film.

The F. B. Warren Co. had a novel idea in their production, "Our Mutual Friend." At the end of the reels and at the first of the succeeding reel the same title appeared, and by this a good change could be made, and it might possibly cause some of the "punch-artists" to lay aside their "weapon."

A good plan in rewinding film to ship, is to be sure the film is at one side of reel and when reels are put in case, jammed in usually, there are no edges of film to become damaged.

The out-of-focus effect written of in the November 12th issue is probably due to a weak spring or gib on lens holder slide or even due to a loose combination or both combinations of the lens being loose. The trouble is probably due to the former cause.

I would like to ask a question as to whether the new G. E. High Intensity Lamp's springs will not lose their temper due to the high heat generated?

Very truly yours,
P. A. Wills, Projectionist,
The Park Theatre,
Member N. A. M. L. No. 1105,
I. A. T. S. E. No. 482.

Dear Sir:

I sure think that the Anti-Misframe League is a wonderful organization and I think that every projectionist should belong to it. I have been operating for the past fifteen years and of late I have received films inspected by some of the league members and they were in excellent condition. I am very anxious to become a member and I shall do all I can to further better projection.

Yours very truly,
A. T. Hill.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Dear Sir:

Although not working steadily at present I am sending in my application to become a member of the N. A. M. L. Last night I was working at a place and certainly had a fine time with the film. I am enclosing a few of the mis-frames that I took out, there were more of them which I gave to the manager.

Hoping to hear from you shortly, I remain,
Yours sincerely,
Joseph B. Poisson, Jr.

The samples of misframes enclosed certainly told the story of how some projectionist "butchered" a film. Some of the patching was inexcusable even made by a rank beginner.—Ed.

Dear Sir:

I have read with interest statements in the News about films coming to projectionists in bad condition, and wish to say that I wish members of the league had inspected some of the film that passed through my hands. I would have been saved much trouble.

That new style change-over described in the News is a good idea—I have been using a device similar to that myself.

Yours very truly,
M. D. Morehouse,
Watertown, N. Y.

Marion Theatre, Clarksdale, Miss.

Dear Ed.:

First I wish to apologize for not being able to address you by your name. Of course I am a regular follower of projection items in the News, and tonight during a few moments I had to spare I picked up the latest issue and noticed the space being given to the N. A. M. L.—hence this letter. I am an old member, having joined three or four years ago; I don't remember the date. Would you look up the records and let me know what my number is?

In past years I have been in and out of the projection room and so have not kept up with the doings of the league. But watch me from now on. And it would not harm some of the boys down here in New Orleans territory, which covers three or four States, to join. I do not refer to the city operators for their projection is nearly perfect. I am sure they don't let bad patches or misframes get by them.

I am sorry to say that I receive quite a number of films with mis-frames and they look as though they have been there since the film left the printers.

Depend on me to be a regular contributor to the better projection discussions—the Anti Misframe League. Let's go!

HARRY M.

Dear Sir:

I have been a member of the N. A. M. L. for about two years but for the past year have not been paying much attention to the league. . . . I am starting in again in earnest to work for the league, and will do all I can to help other members. . . .

Very truly yours,
H. J. Phillips, Projectionist.
The Vamp Theatre,
Barnwell, S. C.

The Liberty Theatre, Heavener, Okla.

Dear Sir:

Some time ago I ran a film in the Liberty that kept me busy during the entire program trying to keep it on the screen—there was a mis-frame every two or three feet apart. It took me two hours after the matinee taking out mis-frames and stripped sprocket holes to make the film presentable for the night's show.

During my three years as a projectionist I have received some films in very bad condition. I would like to become a member of the league and am enclosing application blank.

Yours truly.
Earl Boyer.

Lyceum Theatre, Findlay, Ohio.

Dear Editor:

Kindly enroll me in your league as I have been very conscientious in the past in removing misframes and punch holes from all films handled in my house. . . . I will soon send photos of our projection room which has been declared by many to be one of the finest in a 1,300 seat house south of New York.

I have on file back numbers of the News for the past year and wish to state that my projection room contains many devices adopted from descriptions printed in your book.

Yours respectfully,
Reginald Freeman, Chief Projectionist,
Republic Theatre,
Washington, D. C.

The Strand, Provo, Utah.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed find my membership application blank. . . . We, the operators in small towns of this state, are in great need of an organization of this kind. I am very anxious to join and will do all I can to get others interested also.

Yours very truly,
Lloyd Engle.

Completing Erie House

Work on the interior of the new Perry theatre is fast nearing completion in Erie, Pa. Painters last week began putting the finishing touches on the decorations and the work of placing the huge electric sign in front of the theatre is being rushed. Marble setters will soon start work in the lobby. Special pains have been taken by Rowland and Clark to make the lobby of the Perry attractive. Jerome Casper, general manager for the company, will soon announce the opening date.—Taylor.

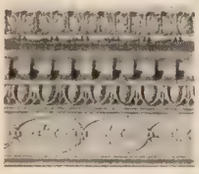
richly draped, and extending out from these arches on each side of the auditorium are commodious loges. Between the orchestra floor and the balcony there is the mezzanine floor, the contour of which is the same as that of the first floor, and the seating arrangement is in boxes only, there being twenty-five in number.

On this mezzanine floor are women's rest rooms, retiring rooms, etc., which are elaborate treated, but on a somewhat smaller scale than the main floor.

In the balcony ceiling directly above the mezzanine boxes in the rear, are three elaborate oval shape domes forty-eight feet in length and twenty-five feet in width. These are brilliantly illuminated in the diffused color lighting, which benefits the main orchestra floor as well as the mezzanine.

The main balcony is constructed on a very slight incline, giving excellent view of the entire grand orchestra on the main floor, as well as the stage. This balcony is again treated on similar lines to the main floor and mezzanine, by a series of arches which extend on the side walls, the entire rear giving the promenade. On the auditorium side of these arches are twenty-six loges which are stepped down with the contour of the balcony, giving in turn a perfect side wall as well as a rich architectural effect.

The proscenium opening is flanked on either side by a treatment in marble and plaster columns.



By the proscenium boxes is a fountain of marble and statuary which extends to a height from the stage level of twenty feet. To the rear of this statuary above the mezzanine level is the organ loft, which contains the largest organ installed in Chicago, a Hope Jones, built by the Wurlitzer Company

The stage is of great size, being large enough to accommodate grand opera.

Capitol Overture Artistic

Color and Lightings Add Much to Orchestral Number

IN the evolution of motion picture presentation the use of color and lighting has become an integral part of the musical entertainment. The development of this phase of the performance as well as the musical is in no small measure due to the inventive genius of S. L. Rothafel, managing director of various Broadway motion picture theatres and for the past two years in charge of presentation at the Capitol theatre.

The overture at the Capitol last week, Tchaikovsky's "1812" was one of the most pleasing orchestral numbers ever presented at the world's largest theatre, and the success of its appeal was due in a measure to the psychological application of lighting. This "1812" overture is by far the most widely known of the Russian composer's music. Three easily recognized themes form the principal material of the overture, the first being taken from the Russian hymn "God Preserve Thy People," the second the French "Marseillaise" and the third the Russian National Anthem.

At the slow and solemn introduction played by the violas and the cellos in solemn harmony, the stage is illumined by a soft pastel light, blue predominating. Then comes the gradual approach of the French and the ominous sound of drums beating in the distance and the first notes of "Marseillaise" are played by the horns. At the first beat of the drum a faint red light begins to pulsate on the stage, in the footlights, the house lights and in the prescenium arch. As the martial notes grow louder and nearer, the red lights pulsate stronger and stronger; and when at last the apparent victory of the French is announced by the full sounds of the "Marseillaise" rising high and clear everything is overwhelmed in a mighty blaze of red. Then the original themes emerge again and the brilliant red subsides for a time slowly pulsating. And when the Russian National Anthem is introduced in the bass, growing up to the crashing finale with the bells of Moscow loudly ringing out their announcement of victory, the red fades into a brilliant amber, pulsating greater and greater each moment, closing the overture with an overwhelming flood of gold coming from every direction, electrifying the atmosphere and thrilling the spectator. This is truly painting the overture in color.

Russian Basso Is Soviet Recruit

FEODOR CHALIAPIN, the great Russian basso and this year a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has been sovietized by the Russian government, according to Helen Bullitt Lowry of the New York Times.

Chaliapin is one of the few great artists of Russia who have allied themselves with the Soviet. He has been the artistic head of the nationalized theatres, which include the opera, the imperial ballet and the drama—the whole organization being a subcommittee of the Department of Schools for the People. Chaliapin has drawn his salary from the government—a salary which was fixed by the trade union. As far as official connection goes, he is in Bolshevism up to the neck.

But the way he puts it is, "It has been my great privilege to have saved the art of Russia throughout these years of revolution—to have saved this art for Russia and for the world."

"Jazz Opera" Production Is Predicted

IRVING BERLIN'S idea of a "jazz" grand opera, at which most musicians have laughed, seems to be not as far fetched as it did when Mr. Berlin advanced the suggestion a number of years ago.

"Jazzed Blues" are gaining in popularity instead of losing prestige as was predicted for this latest degree of Orientalism when it was first submitted for public consumption. At least this is the theory advanced by those who have watched the continued success of "Shuffle Along," the New York Colored show which has been holding forth on Broadway these many months.

William Thorner, vocal scientist and an authority on many musical subjects, declares after seeing "Shuffle Along" that "If a distinctively and original American opera ever is to be written it will come by way of these negro tunes, rhythms and harmonic colorings." Even the most intolerant lover of educated music must admit the haunting harmonic lure and inescapable rhythmic urge of some of the current "blues," however distasteful the "blues" may be to the educated ear.

Operatic Music Popular in Mexico City

THE Zimmer Quartet of Brussels, returning home by way of New York from an engagement at Mexico City, reports that the interest in classical music in Mexico is surprisingly large, and that the Chamber of Music of Mexico City, at whose invitation the Zimmer players crossed the Atlantic, is an influential organization composed of many cultivated musical amateurs, founded more than a score of years ago by a Russian Secretary of Legation there, who later represented his country at Washington.

The society, while originating among the diplomatic corps, was not limited to Mexico's foreign colony, but included also the leading native families of the capital whose sons and daughters had been educated in New York, Madrid or Paris. The Zimmer Quartet paid its first visit this year, following another Belgian organization, called the Brussels Quartet.

In Mexico, the players said, they had found audiences keenly interested in the highest and most intimate forms of art. Their twenty-five programs in less than a month had covered the widest range of chamber music literature and had been received with appreciation throughout.

Cincinnati Conductor Makes Business Change

Theodore Hahn, Jr., one of Cincinnati's foremost musicians, has been appointed musical director of Archer's Capitol Theatre. Although still a young man, Mr. Hahn has held many positions of importance in Cincinnati theatres. Some seasons ago he was musical director of the Orpheum Theatre, and for the past few years conducted the orchestra at the Lyric Theatre. When the new Shubert Theatre was opened recently, Mr. Hahn assumed charge of the orchestra there, a position which he now resigns to accept the offer of Ascher Brothers to head the Capitol unit orchestra, one of the largest theatre musical organizations in the city.

(Selznick)

A GOOD program picture. It may not create any stir of unanimous approval, but is a safe bet, in that it will not disappoint followers of motion pictures in general, and will delight Conway Tearle's admirers. In it, given opportunity to do some very fine acting, he takes full advantage, his work convincing, artistic in the extreme and of decided merit.

Direction by George Archainbaud, is much above the average. Indeed, he has drawn some splendid work from his rather weak cast.

Not a great deal can be said in favor of the story. It is too much like many that have gone before. However, it is about a sterling young English officer, detailed in an English Province, and who returns to London at the end of his assignment to marry a young noblewoman, to whom he has become engaged before his departure to the Orient. She is "Lady Mary," for which the selection of Martha Mansfield was a bold mistake. She neither looks like a woman of noble English birth, nor acts like one. She is typically American, and her clothes, of splendid local style from a point of selection, would taboo her only too quickly from the "set" in London of which she is supposed to be a part. Ladies of the nobility do not indulge in evening gowns without any visible shoulder coverings, nor would one be permitted, if so unnaturally inclined, to go trailing into the wilds of Africa seeking to regain the love of a man she had previously jilted, consequently almost ruined. It has interest value, granted, but is not at all logical. Nevertheless, a splendid vehicle for the star.

The production evidences curtailment, there being opportunity for many spectacular effects that are missing. Interiors, necessitating sets of massive and elegant proportions and appointments, are splendid. The photography, throughout, very good.

Betty Howe, cast as a waif of the Arabian desert, is convincing, the rest, aside from the star, having unimportant roles. Five reels.—LILLIAN R. GALE.

"Fresh From the Farm"
(Christie Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

THIS, little "hick" comedy carries enough good-natured hokum and enough reasonably clever high lights to succeed. The Christie people may be depended upon to add the realistic touches and their barn and other details look like the genuine thing. They have lugged out the antiquated auto which has served before, and it fits into the plot like the single cylinder fits into the engine. Bobby Vernon, who can play the rural yokel as well as anybody, employs it in the opening shot much after the fashion of the Ford owners who live down on the farm. Attaching a belt to the rear wheels he has contrived some invention which resembles one of Rube Goldberg's cartoons.

With this scene out of the way, the plot takes up the foiling of the city slicker who has driven down in his sporty roadster. The girl likes the yokel in spite of his "one lunger," but when the chap from the white lights steals the gasolene she steps into his car. Then Bobby comes along and employs the same trick. The finish presents a barn dance and the outwitting of the girl's father. It is a likely offering, not especially funny, but carrying enough atmosphere and hokum to succeed.—LAURENCE REID.

"A Perfect Villain"
(Sunshine Comedy-Fox—Two Reels)

THE dream situation bobs up again to serve as the "props" behind the latest Sunshine comedy, "A Perfect Villain," featuring Chester Conklin. But since like all good dreams in not being exposed until the finish, the spectator is left in the dark and accepts it all as worth while fun. The old wheeze, "unlucky in love, lucky at cards," is employed to introduce the plot. The hero saves the girl and tries to put over an impression, but a rival sneaks in ahead of him. Out of revenge the disappointed Romeo turns villain.

To put over the blackest kind of villainy he presents a watch to his rival—a watch filled with TNT. A poker game comprises a scene and the hero wins everything including the fatal watch. He cannot dispose of it satisfactorily which calls for some amusing comedy, and finally wins a house in a raffle. When he comes to claim his property he remembers that he has left the watch inside. And the structure is blown to pieces. Then Chester awakens from a deep sleep. "A Perfect Villain" is up to the average Sunshine and contains a kick or three in its contents.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Ropin' Fool"
(Will Rogers Productions—Two Reels)

THE Will Rogers of the legitimate stage—the Will Rogers who climbed to fame through expert use of the lariat—is seen in this entertaining comedy-drama. He almost seems like an unfamiliar Will Rogers if you remember the type of production with which he has been associated on the screen. There are a lot of people who are not acquainted with his skill at lariat-throwing and Rogers has come through with a story which places him in a different light. This two-reeler is filled almost exclusively with lariat tricks.

The slow motion camera is employed to give the spectator a sample of his skill at roping. And the erstwhile cowboy uses several ropes to display his talent. And he never misses a trick. From all angles and all sides the twisting, jumping rope performs dazzling feats as executed by the nimble arms and hands of the incomparable Will. He ropes individuals and a mass of individuals and as you watch him and read the quaint captions which emphasize every scene you realize that here is a picture clever, interesting and stimulating.

Rogers has utilized a romantic touch to help the plot along. A heroine and a rival come into the picture and the title finds its meaning because the star is called "The Ropin' Fool" on account of always using his lariat. The other fellow is reported murdered with a rope around his neck. Being the rival of Rogers, the latter is suspected of the crime and dragged away by the angry villagers. But explanations ensue which clear the star who says that they are makin' a motion picture. The offering is keen with humor and novelty and is as bright a little filler as has come along in many a moon.—LAURENCE REID.

Advance Feature Review

"Peacock Alley"
(Tiffany Productions, Inc.)

A WISE merchant establishes a trade mark by marketing surprising values, encouraging customers to "come again."

Robert Z. Leonard has become a merchant-producer-director. His initial Tiffany production evidences his sense of foresight, although he has set a precedent that will keep him alert, to live up to.

Unquestionably "Peacock Alley" is a good bet for the exhibitor. It will pass the severest test known for a picture—that of getting the money. It will gratify patrons who came to see the Mae Murray they already admired—surprised to find a new Mae Murray, developed into a full-fledged actress. She has not depended upon her reputation nor ability as a dancer to score, and were the thoroughly enjoyable episodes in which she dances eliminated, her interpretation of "Cleo, of Paris" would carry her, the same, right to the hearts of spectators not bereft of sentiment.

Miss Murray's work, generally conceded as the best she has ever done, is accentuated in that she gives her leading man, Monte Blue, a chance. Against weaker odds, he would have dominated. William Tooker and Edmund Lowe, with little to do, are not to be forgotten for the quality of their work, the entire cast being high above the average.

Story is not big. Nor is it new. It is well told. Sequences might be eliminated and never missed with view to "snapping up" the action, but it provides the anticipated elements of a Leonard-Murray combination, embodying lavish sets, gorgeous interiors, delightful exteriors and artistic effects galore. It offers a glimpse of alluring Paris, of quaint, picturesque Arcady and surely a realistic replica of a New York dansant, called "Peacock Alley."

Edmund Goulding, credited with the photoplay based upon a story by Ouida Begere, conquered a difficult task by incorporating enough material for two pictures into a story which fits the star like a Parisian glove.

It is about Cleo, a Parisian dancer, and a young American sent to Paris to secure contract upon which depends the welfare of population of the factory town from whence he hails. His infatuation for the luxury surrounded Parisienne causes him to neglect his errand. He is cabled to return. Cleo knows the man who can turn the contract the American's way. There is a quarrel on account of the American's determination that she give up her gay life. Cleo returns to her old home in quiet, peaceful Arcady. He follows.

Returned to America, his bride an unwelcome intruder, the couple go to New York. All goes well until bank roll stripped, young husband "borrows" from his Uncle's more enduring one, by forgery. After arrest, "Cleo, of Paris" accepts offer of American producer to appear, thereby breaking faith with husband, for whose sake she consents to the engagement. Violent misunderstanding follows. Several years later, having realized extent of his wife's noble sacrifice and undying devotion, estranged husband finds her again, in Arcady. Advocates of happy endings, smile through your tears!—LILLIAN R. GALE.

"COURAGE"

(Sidney Franklin-First National)

Intermittently, It Offers Real Under-the-Skin Pathos

SIDNEY A. FRANKLIN, producing independently, offers in "Courage" a strongly dramatic subject, whose only fault is an excess of plot matter which tends, as the picture nears its close, to make the story heavier than is needed for entertainment. "Courage" contains, intermittently, some highly dramatic sequences which will undoubtably get under the skin and tug, and tug vigorously at the heartstrings of any audience. That the emotional pitch falls is due to new complications which arise late in the continuity and have a dragging effect. But Mr. Franklin need no greater proof of his ability than many of his prison scenes contain. It is tense, convincing pathos. In addition the production is excellently acted, perfect in detail and direction.

The story is laid in Scotland, in an industrial center. A young engineer, cheated out of his rights, starts his own factory, and seeks to obtain the money due him from his former employer. Arriving at night to see him, he finds the man's dead body. He is naturally accused of the murder. There are a few arbitrary touches here, such as the evidence which would clear him blowing into the fire. This development is easily foreseen from the beginning. The engineer begins a life sentence, and there is a suggestion of a "Peter Ibbetson" idea in the sequence which follows. It is good incident and when his wife is kept from visiting him there is real pathos. He is not even allowed any communication with the outside world. Scottish prisons seem to have very severe rules.

The man's wife goes to England and, communicating with him secretly, builds up an immense factory. Eighteen years pass. The war breaks out, but the convict is not freed with his fellows to fight because, it is stated "murderers cannot go to war." It is this and other vicissitudes of the hero which lengthen the picture and overburden it. Perhaps also the method by which the prisoner guides the destiny of his factory from behind prison bars may not seem plausible. After eighteen years the real murderer confesses and the ending is in sight.

To the cast should go the greatest credit. Naomi Childers is the wife, giving an equally fine performance both as the young wife and the matured business woman. Sam de Grasse is on a par as the husband, and Lionel Belmore is perfect in his role as the Scottish industrial chief, while Alec B. Francis is capable in the dramatic moments, and sufficiently agile to execute a Highland fling. There is a second romance supplied by Ray Howard and Gloria Hope. Mr. Franklin has established the atmosphere perfectly.—Length, 6,244 feet.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A Sidney Franklin production, "Courage," will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. "Courage" has been cited by the critics of many cities as an example of high class dramatic photoplay which presents a powerful theme in a most attractive manner.

"Courage" is the story of a man whose life is wrecked by circumstances. Sentenced to life imprisonment for a crime he never committed, it is love that keeps the spark of courage burning, dim at times, but never dead. Although separated physically from his wife and family, he is still near them in spirit. Confidence and mutual love sustain them both. And when justice is wrought and imprisonment is at an end, happiness awaits them both.

The story is laid in Scotland at a time just preceding the World War. It is enacted by an all-star cast that lives up to its name. In it are included Naomi Childers, Sam De Grasse, Lionel Belmore, Adolph Menjou, Floyd Whitlock and Alec B. Francis. Mr. Franklin, one of the foremost directors in the country, has given the story a most elaborate production, and it is expected to be voted by the patrons of the ———— as one of the most gripping pictures of the year.

PROGRAM READER

Can courage endure through all of the vicissitudes of life? Can the spark still burn even through eighteen years of prison life—suffering endured for another's crime? "Courage," the dramatic photoplay offering which will be the attraction on ———— at the ———— theatre will answer these questions for you. It is a story of heroic souls—a husband and wife whose courage is only sustained by mutual love through the torture of a long separation executed in the name of justice.

"Courage" is a Sidney Franklin production, made under the personal supervision of this accomplished director. In the cast are such well known and capable players as Naomi Childers, Sam De Grasse, Lionel Belmore, Alec B. Francis, Adolph Menjou and Floyd Whitlock.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture with a theme. It is not a preachment, but an issue can be taken from it—"is life imprisonment advisable," or "should a man be convicted on circumstantial evidence." Sidney Franklin's name is, of course, a power to reckon with at the box office, and in the cast is Naomi Childers, Sam De Grasse, Alec B. Francis and Lionel Belmore are names which will all be well enough known. A special matinee for ministers might induce some of the clergy to adopt a "courage" sermon.

"A PRINCE THERE WAS"

(Paramount)

Attractive Little Picture on a Cinderella Theme

GEORGE M. COHAN'S popular stage success, "A Prince There Was," makes a compelling little picture which is certain to be appreciated everywhere for its generous amount of sentiment and heart interest, although the demands of the story are such that it reveals a sticky quality occasionally. It seems rather odd to discover Thomas Meighan playing the part of a good samaritan if you remember his adaptability for crook parts. That he is able to interpret the role with a good show of spirit and a vein of good-natured nonchalance is indication that he is not an actor of one character portrayals.

The idea behind this story is quite human and this quality will discount the fact that it has served the screen faithfully for many seasons. Place a wealthy young idler in the role of a "fairy prince"—allow him to find himself by rescuing sweet and simple maidens in distress, and you have a story which is bound to compel interest and invite sympathy for the protagonist. Place the characters in a boarding house for a time and the picture takes on an appeal because a boarding house has served as a pivot and never been found wanting. It is not a picture which will stimulate the spectator with dramatic suspense. Really it is too simple for that. What it will do is to draw a sentimental sigh that all is quite well with the world when an impressionable girl is thrown into communion with an equally impressionable youth, and the latter responds with a chivalry which we all like to believe is a trifle positive in the most negative of the masculine sex.

Tom Forman, the director, has fashioned the story in such a way that its little details of atmosphere and realities are ever dominant. He has not allowed theatricalities to intrude beyond a given point. He will show his contrasts and be done with them. His boarding house keeper is a woman of the genuine theatrical school. She would not be half so attractive if presented in any other way. Sylvia Ashton makes this woman conspicuous through a perfect characterization. Taking up the heroine—what type can engender greater sympathy than the unrewarded author of a story? The idler poses as a magazine editor, buys the script and publishes it. Then the fatal secret is discovered. Meanwhile there is some complication developed from the real editor. A bit of conflict and the identity of the hero is established. And he looks like a million dollars to the girl and the audience is extravagant in its sympathy for his welfare. Mildred Harris makes a pleasing heroine and Charlotte (Peaches) Jackson is an appealing youngster who provides the juvenile interest. The picture is adequately staged and certainly should be a winner around Christmas time. It carries a sort of yuletide message all it own.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

George M. Cohan, the celebrated author-playwright-actor-manager, is author of the popular stage success, "A Prince There Was," which has been adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young and which comes to the ———— theatre next ————with Thomas Meighan as the star. It is said to be a good, big, clean story with plenty of human interest and heart appeal. The star, who has had any number of popular successes to his credit, plays the part of a rich, young idler. His leading woman is Mildred Harris, who portrays a young writer, who formerly lived in luxury, but with her father's ruin and suicide is forced to write to earn a meagre living.

Her plight is discovered by the rich idler and he immediately falls in love with her, and then poses as an assistant magazine editor in order to buy her stories. He buys a controlling interest in a metropolitan magazine so that he may publish the girl's story which the magazine had previously refused. The story builds some complications which are all cleared up in happy fashion. A fine cast assists the star which includes Nigel Barrie, Sylvia Ashton and others.

PROGRAM READER

A pleasure loving rich man, who had never known a struggle in his life. A wonderful girl and a child, who had never known anything else. New York seething, surging, pulling them together into its swirl. The girl had wanted to write. She believed that she possessed talent. But the magazine turned down her story. Then came th "prince" who posed as an editor so that he might buy her story and publish it. See this human interest and heart appealing story which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Thomas Meighan as the star. Mildred Harris is the leading woman. It is a picture which tugs at the heart and is clean and wholesome. See "A Prince There Was." Based upon the play by George M. Cohan, and as big a success.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a popular stage success to feature in your advertising campaign. Tell them that the original was written by the talented George M. Cohan and scored a big hit upon the stage. Tell them that it makes a clever picture. Feature its heart interest and heart appeal. And bring forth that it is big, clean and wholesome and thoroughly entertaining. Mention that Mildred Harris supports the star. And play him up, telling of his past successes. Use catch lines and teaser ads. Mention that Tom Forman directed. Emphasize that it is a human document which will tug at the heart.

"WHAT DO MEN WANT?"
(Lois Weber-F. B. Warren Corp.)

A Title and a Picture That Will Draw Audiences

IN this particular instance "What Do Men Want," main title of a splendid motion picture, is really what women want to see on the screen. At least, the fair sex will enjoy every foot of it. Regardless, it will hold the interest of both sexes. The women will find plenty of places to indulge in tears and it cannot but penetrate under the skins of some men, unconsciously living about the same thing as the character study, true to form, on which this drama of life is centered. One thing is certain "What Do Men Want" is interest-compelling entertainment, skilfully directed, wonderfully staged, well acted and, without being "preachy" delivers a sermon from the screen that might do honor to any pulpit.
